In this the court but paraphrased the language used by Sir William Scott in 1801 in the case of the Stert (4 Rob., 65), Holland being blockaded, goods were sent from Edam, near Amsterdam, by inland transportation to Emden in Hanover, a neighboring State, with which England was at peace, and were captured on the sea en route to London. He released the goods though it was advanced that if such trade were permitted it would defeat, partially at least, the object of the blockade, namely, to cripple the trade of Holland; but he observed—

"If that is the consequence, all that can be said is that it is an unavoidable consequence. It must be imputed to the nature of the thing which will not admit a remedy of this species. The court can not on that ground take upon itself to say that a legal blockade exists where no actual blockade can be applied."

Sir William Scott, afterwards Lord Stowell, before whom most of the prize cases originating during the earlier Napoleonic wars were heard, is justly esteemed at home and abroad as one of the greatest expositors of the law of prize of any age or nation.

He applied the principle to the case of goods going overland from Amsterdam to Rotterdam when, for reasons satisfactory to its Government, his country had blockaded the former port but had not proclaimed a blockade of the latter. These were cases of goods proceeding from a blockaded port to a neutral port for transshipment. He enforced the same principle in the case of goods proceeding from a neutral port to a neutral port for transport by land to the enemy country. In that case the goods were shipped from London to Emden for transshipment to Amsterdam when Holland was under blockade.

Sir Robert Phillimore, who attained a high reputation as a practitioner in prize cases in England and afterwards became a judge of the High Court of Admiralty and a member of the privy council, in his Commentaries upon International Law, expresses the rule of these cases in this brief sentence:

"Trade of a neutral to or from a blockaded country by inland navigation or transportation is lawful."

He supports this statement by reference to the Peterhoff case, "in which," he says, "the law is well summed up."

Two principles, concerning which none ventured to cavil even before this war began, may be thus stated:

First. Neutral ports can not be blockaded, from which it follows that goods issuing from them, whatever their character, not destined directly or indirectly to the enemy country can not be interfered with by a belligerent.

Second. Noncontraband goods may freely enter neutral ports though destined for the enemy country by inland transportation, notwithstanding a blockade.

PRINCIPLE OF FREE SHIPS, FREE GOODS VIOLATED BY MARCH ORDER IN COUNCIL.

On March 1, 1915, the British ambassador communicated to the Department of State the purpose of his Government and that of France to "take into port ships carrying goods of presumed enemy destination, ownership, or origin."

It was, accordingly, proposed that any goods proceeding from this country to Germany or Austria, including noncontraband goods, should be seized though routed by a port of Holland by rail to their ultimate destination, in disregard of principle 2.

It was proposed that goods of German origin reaching Amsterdam, for instance, by land transportation and on the sea en route for America for consumption there should be seized in disregard of principle 1.

It was proposed that goods owned by a German or Austrian, wherever they were found on the high seas and in neutral vessels, and wherever they were bound, should be seized. This was in flagrant violation of the principle that "free ships make free goods," to which, after a long and historic struggle, Great Britain acceded by the treaty of Paris, in 1856.

This feature was met by an immediate telegraphic protest from our Government. It would be pleasing to be able to note that in one particular Great Britain had been recalled to an observance of the rules of maritime warfare intended to limit the burdens to which infuriated belligerents might be disposed to subject neutral commerce. For a brief space it appeared that she had been.

In a note dated March 15, 1915, the British foreign office advised our ambassador that the allies "restrict their claim to the stopping of cargoes destined to or coming from the enemy's territory," which, it will be observed, was a disclaimer of a purpose to seize goods simply because they were enemy owned. But this hope was dispelled by the order itself, which bore date March 11, 1915, under which such goods were plainly subjected to the risk of seizure, as will appear from paragraphs 3 and 4 thereof, as follows:

"3. Every merchant vessel (a Dutch vessel, for instance) which sailed from her port of departure (New York, for instance) after the 1st of March, 1915, on her way to a port other than a German port (Rotterdam, for instance), carrying goods with an enemy destination, or with enemy property, may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Any goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court, and, unless they are contraband of war, shall, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, be restored by order of the court upon such terms as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just to the person entitled thereto.

"4. Every merchant vessel (a Dutch vessel, for instance) which sailed from a port other than a German port (Rotterdam, for instance, to New York) after the 1st of March, 1915, having on board goods which are of enemy origin or are enemy property may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court, and if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty shall be detained or sold under the direction of the prize court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into court and dealt with in such manner as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just: Provided, That no proceeds of sale of such goods shall be paid out of court until the conclusion of peace, except on the application of the proper officer of the Crown unless it be shown that the goods had become neutral property before the issue of this order: Provided also, That nothing herein shall prevent the release of neutral property of enemy origin on the application of the proper officer of the Crown."

For convenience of reference, Mr. President, I send to the desk a copy of the order in full, and ask that it may be printed as an appendix to my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOLLIS in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WALSH. Earl Grey, moved perhaps by the insensate demand to "put the admiralty in charge" and to "let the foreign office stick to its proper business of explaining the sailor's business to neutral States in soothing and dignified terms," in his note of July 24, 1915, explained this obvious inconsistency between the language of the order and that of his letter transmitting it by saying that enemy ownership would be regarded as evidence of enemy origin or destination, and he indicated that it was a concession that goods in neutral ships owned by enemies of Great Britain were allowed to pass when "enemy ownership would afford no evidence of such origin or destination." The implied threat of seizure of such goods when in the opinion of a zealous naval officer the conclusion of enemy origin or destination is a proper one from the fact of enemy ownership, no doubt operates effectively to keep such goods off the water, so that the principle of "free ships—free goods" has, in principle as well as for practical purposes, gone likewise into the scrap heap.

Just what is to be gained by a formal proclamation of blockade, recently threatened and to be enforced, as has been the Order in Council, against neutral ports as to all goods of "enemy origin or destination," is not clear, unless it be that the prospect of confiscation is looked to further to deter shipments of such goods. It is scarcely to be conceived that an actual blockade of neutral ports is contemplated, since such a course would be tantamount to a declaration of war against all Europe not now in arms.

Commerce has been carried on with neutral countries ever since the order of March 11 was promulgated under the restrictions which would obtain in the case of a blockade of the German ports, with the added burdens referred to, though the penalty of confiscation was not in all cases to be visited upon the offending American citizens who should, in accordance with his indisputable rights under the laws of nations, attempt to bring his goods out of Germany or send thither noncontraband articles through a neutral port. He might or might not, in the discretion of the prize court, when it should in its own good time get around to his case, award him compensation on the basis of the English market.

It needs no elucidation that ordinary trade could not be carried on under such conditions. Some individuals might care to take the chances with respect to goods of limited quantity which, for special reasons, they might desire inordinately to get through. Others who would not scruple to engage in contraband trade might be tempted to try it on no small scale, but the aggregate volume of business that would be or that has been carried on is small compared with the volume that would have been developed had a way been found to give to international law more than an academic character. Even before the promulgation of the Order in Council of March 11, when commerce with Germany in everything not contraband was theoretically free, it was found possible to paralyze it. How this was accomplished in the case of cotton, without even declaring it contraband, has been told you. Copper was not declared conditional contraband until September 21, 1914, or absolute contraband until October 29, 1914, all but three months after the war began, but no copper had meanwhile gone to Germany.

No particularization is necessary to impress upon the mind the seriousness of the denial of our right to import freely through neutral ports goods originating in Germany or Austria. The textile manufacturer has made himself heard in consequence of interferences with shipments of dyestuffs; the cotton farmer appreciates, if no one else does, what it is to be without potash fertilizer; the sugar-beet grower will scarcely be convinced of the superior excellence of Montana beet seed until time shall have demonstrated it. The seriousness of the interruptions in our export trade, for which justification is claimed under the March Order in Council, has had less consideration, very likely, because so few articles of consequence were nominally free to pass to Germany even before it was promulgated. Phosphate rock, however, is a commodity that was overlooked in the preparation of the allies' lists of contraband. It is an important commercial product of the States of Florida, Tennessee, and South Carolina. Deposits of very great extent and value are known to exist in several of the Rocky Mountain States, but only a relatively small quantity from those fields has yet gone into the channels of commerce. We exported this product to the value of $9,996,558 in 1913. Seventy-eight per cent of the total production comes from the State of Florida and a little more than the yield of that State normally goes abroad, Germany being our best customer. At least one-half of all we have been accustomed to ship across the sea was absorbed by that country, finding its way either through its ports or those of adjacent countries.

During the first 10 months of 1915 we contrived to get $7,450 worth into Germany, or rather so much left our ports for Germany, as against $2,701,105 worth for a like period during 1913, while the shipments to the Netherlands fell more than 50 per cent and Belgium took nothing, though her normal importation annually amounts to nearly a million dollars.

On June 8, 1915, the American steamship F. J. Lisman, New York to Rotterdam, was brought into the port of London and 1,000 barrels of phosphate removed from her for disposition by the prize court. It will be borne in mind that phosphate is not contraband, either absolute or conditional. The seizure must find whatever justification it can have in the Order of March 11, it being claimed, doubtless, that the ultimate destination of this portion of the cargo was Germany, to which it was to go by inland transportation from Rotterdam. There is here no disputed question of fact unless it be asserted by the shippers that this particular consignment was for consumption in the Netherlands. If so, inquiry into that phase may be waived and it may be assumed that it was in fact going to Germany.

There is no question, either nebulous or substantial, as to whether phosphate rock is justifiably classed as contraband. It has, as stated, no place in the contraband lists. The case presents squarely the rule of law for which the great name of Lord Stowell stands in England and Chief Justice Chase in this country, from which there has hitherto been "no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

Why can it not be made serviceable to determine whether principles so sanctioned are any longer to exercise any restraining influence upon those nations that appeal to arms? Is it to be believed that no voice will be raised in England for the preservation of the proudest monuments that nation has builded? And which can surpass in symmetry or grandeur those reared by her great judges, the rules by which even the King and the Council were required to render justice to friendly nations and their people? Let us force, if we can, an expression on a concrete case. Our progress will be imperceptible while we debate en masse a multitude of principles, many of which permit of prolonged discussion or an aggregation of cases over the facts of many of which there is opportunity for parleying.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. WALSH. With pleasure.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not know whether the Senator stated the registry of the vessel carrying the cargo of phosphate. Was it a British vessel?

Mr. WALSH. It was the F. J. Lisman. She is a Danish vessel, I think.

Mr. FLETCHER. A Danish vessel? So long as she was of a neutral registry, there could not be any change in the principle announced?

Mr. WALSH. Not at all.

Mr. FLETCHER. I was not certain but that it was a vessel of British registry.

Mr. WALSH. It is a straight question as to whether that principle of international law is gone.

UNLAWFUL SEIZURE OF MAILS.

No difficulty will be encountered in selecting a characteristic case to test the right of the allies to arrest merchandise coming from Germany to this country through a neutral port to which it was carried overland or, for the matter of that, by sea, but not through a blockaded port. It is understood that there is no pretense that the German ports on the Baltic are in a state of blockade. The recent seizure of the mails from Denmark to the United States will very well serve the purpose.

At the outset Great Britain assumed the right to open and censor the mails landed at any of her ports, but with a continental destination. This caused the Post Office Department to route such mails, whenever possible, by ships not required to touch at British ports. Recently neutral vessels, carrying the mails both ways, respectively have been haled into some English harbor, the sacks rifled, letters opened and censored, and parcels containing goods of "enemy origin or destination" confiscated. Among the treaties which were the product of the second Hague convention, held in 1907, was one dealing with postal correspondence. It was ratified by the Senate March 12, 1908, and proclaimed February 28, 1910. Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy were all signatories. It is introduced by the two following articles:

ARTICLE I.

"The postal correspondence of neutrals or belligerents, whatever its official or private character may be, found on the high seas on board a neutral or enemy ship is inviolable. If the ship is detained, the correspondence is forwarded by the captor with the least possible delay.

"The provisions of the preceding paragraph do not apply, in case of violation of blockade, to correspondence destined for or proceeding from a blockaded port.

ARTICLE II.

"The inviolability of postal correspondence does not exempt a neutral mail ship from the laws and customs of maritime war as to neutral merchant ships in general. The ship, however, may not be searched, except when absolutely necessary, and then only with as much consideration and expedition as possible."

As indicative of the delicate nature of the task which Earl Grey is heroically endeavoring to discharge of "explaining the sailor's business to neutral States in soothing and dignified terms," it is offered in justification of these particular acts of violence that the second paragraph of article 1, recited, permits the interception of mail from a blockaded port. Munich is not a blockaded port, nor is it a port at all. It is offered, too, that the parcel post does not fall within the protection of the treaties, but is to be regarded so far as treaty rights are concerned, as ordinary freight. There seems to be much reason in this contention, and few could find fault with the seizure of rubber or other contraband going to Sweden by mail. Shipment of such a commodity by mail would carry a presumption that it was intended for transshipment to and consumption in enemy territory.

But, having in mind the last sentence of article 2, "The ship, however, must not be searched except when absolutely necessary, and then only with as much consideration and expedition as possible," let it be remembered that on the 13th day of December, 1915, the Danish ship United States, bound from Copenhagen to this country, was stopped east of the Shetland Islands and taken into Greenock for examination, held five days, and relieved of 930 parcel-post packages and 1,961 small parcels of mail. If it be conceded that immunity can not be claimed for parcels other than first class, the question will remain as to the right to stop matter sent to this country, by mail or otherwise, simply because it came from Germany.

As to first-class matter, the justification must rest upon the flimsy pretext that all mail matter from Germany comes from a blockaded port. This contention and others like it are not puerile; they are fraudulent.

Included in a confidential circular of instructions issued to the British censors, the whole of which is interesting reading, is the following:

"11. Statistics. (1) Particulars are to be exacted from appropriate correspondence and submitted on index cards of all direct shipments to Europe (i. e., shipments from neutral to neutral, including shipments on through bills of lading), whether actual or pending, of the following commodities, viz: Cocoa, cotton, cotton yarn, waste, and thread; fuel oils and lubricating oils; hides, skins, and leather; maize; metals and ores of all kinds; nitrates; oil cakes, including poonac; packers' products (meat, bacon, lard, jus, oleo, or any edible animal fats); rosin; tanning extracts; wool, and such other articles as may be added from time to time."

It is not difficult to understand that the letters of any American house doing business with a Scandinavian firm which falls under the suspicion of the English authorities are not likely to reach their destination, and neither are the letters started in the other direction between the negotiators. The result is that commerce between our shores and those of the neutral countries of Europe will be conducted with just such persons on the Continent as the British authorities may graciously permit to engage in it. Such a system would be intolerable to a liberty-loving people even though there were no likelihood that the exercise of such despotic power would be abused nor the information thus surreptitiously elicited placed at the disposal of English rivals of American commercial houses. The mere detention of a mail steamer for five days—almost, if not quite, as much time as is required to cross the ocean—puts American trade at a tremendous disadvantage.

The European trader knows that an order to an American house may, and probably will, be detained for an indefinite time while on the way and may not reach its destination at all. The reply must encounter the same risks. He concludes that he will order from an English house, with which he can communicate without delay or interruption, and whose correspondence is passed by the censor in accordance with another regulation guiding him, as follows.

"10. Duties of D. A. C.'s—(a) The D. A. C. should see that the letters supplied to his table are divided before censoring, for the purpose both of removing the correspondence of persons on the privileged and suspect lists, if and so far as this has not been done by the sorters, and also, as far as practicable, of eliminating periodical correspondence between reputable concerns which experience has shown to contain nothing that requires censoring. Such eliminated correspondence should not be opened until the remaining portion of the mail has been disposed of."

PROPOSAL TO RATION NORTHERN EUROPE.

And the end has not yet come. It is now proposed to "ration" the countries of northern Europe, by which is meant that an account is to be taken of the foodstuffs heretofore sent to them, and that when the quantity which they were taking before the war is reached further shipments are to be interdicted. The presumption is to be indulged that any excess would go to the Teutonic countries, and, therefore, be subject to seizure. If in six months any of the Scandinavian countries takes a year's normal supply, one-half of which is allowed to go to Germany, her people may starve the other six months, though our warehouses be bursting with the needed meal and meat ready to go forward when the allies permit.

That they may regulate the amount of flour, corn, pork, or beef which we may sell to any of the neutral countries, upon the principle of blockade and by the application of the presumptions heretofore indulged or by arbitrary acts, concerning which a discreet silence is preserved, does not admit of doubt. The bare fact that copper or meat went to neutral countries in quantities greater than usual has been regarded as sufficient to hold and even to condemn cargoes as having an enemy destination.

In the case of copper, practically every shipment on the ocean was seized and held, ostensibly to await the determination of a prize court as to whether it was not really destined to the enemy country; and then no effort was made to bring the question to trial in the prize court, though the honor of the capturing country stood pledged for a speedy hearing. Justice required no less, as was declared by a great English judge, who denounced a delay of three months in bringing a prize before the court as a disgrace to the jurisprudence of the realm.

Any ship carrying copper was liable to be deflected from her regular course and detained indefinitely. The loss from detention was often greater than the freight on the copper, so that many of the lines declined to carry any such. It was intimated that shipments would be allowed to countries laying an embargo on exports of that commodity, but the seizures went on in respect to those countries that had made it criminal to send it beyond their borders. It was complained that consignments went "to order" the usual way, but suggesting to the suspicious that there was some reason for secrecy. The customs of the trade in times of peace were altered and bills of lading made to the consignees. Still the seizures went on. The British consuls supervised the loading in our ports and the diplomatic representatives attested the shipments, which were accompanied with proofs that the cargo was for consumption in the country to which it was consigned—all upon representations or intimations at least that with these formalities the vessels bearing them would be allowed to proceed unmolested. They were not. Finally the American shippers were approached with a proposition to submit in advance to the British Admiralty all the details of each shipment and to consign only to such persons and such places and in such amounts as should be approved by it, as a condition of exemption from annoying search and detention and the delay incident to the tardy procedure of the prize court. The proposition was indignantly rejected in December, 1914, but by April, 1915, every American exporter had been harried into compliance, and now not a pound of copper leaves our shores except under such a humiliating agreement.

I send a copy of the agreement to the desk and ask that it be printed as an appendix to my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will be done, in the absence of objection.

Mr. WALSH. By a campaign conducted on similar lines Great Britain will not have the least difficulty in prescribing just how much foodstuffs we may ship to Norway and who may handle them when they reach there. Three months of it and not a grain exporter in the United States but will be brought to his knees, unless, indeed, something blows up in this country. Those of us who believe that further forbearance but invites new aggressions are taunted with desiring to drive our Nation into war with England. We would, on the contrary, avert war by insisting upon and pursuing a course that must result in a cessation of the unlawful practices that make us in respect to our foreign commerce a subject nation.

THE REMEDY.

What is to be done about it? From many influential sources, and, quite curiously, from those who stand for peace at any price on the one hand and from those who are the special objects of their invective, those bearing intimate relations with the nations supplying themselves with munitions of war from our factories, comes the proposal that with each fresh imposition we should protest but defer further action until after the war, when reparation, money damages, should be demanded and the questions at issue and the amount of the award submitted to arbitration. It is insisted that the offending nations are now beside themselves, maddened with the lust for blood and as incapable of a just consideration of the rights of neutrals as infuriated combatants with murder in their hearts engaged in a pistol duel in the street are regardless of the innocent bystander.

The eminent and much loved senior Senator from Mississippi is one of those who would appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober. Any property loss can be paid for in money, he tells us. Can it? It is quite remarkable that so excellent a lawyer and so keen a reasoner on economic questions should care to take the responsibilty for a statement so fallacious. When a trespass has been committed and there is no likelihood of a repetition of it, the law awards damages as full relief. But when the wrong is continuing, when it has been repeated and the perpetrator threatens to continue his unlawful course, the law regards damages as wholly inadequate relief and awards injunction against a repetition of it. There are injuries so peculiar in character that the law regards money damages as quite inappropriate and inadequate. Indeed the whole domain of equity jurisprudence was developed because the remedies at law, which were by no means confined to the award of damages, were inadequate.

In the relations of nations as in the relations of men, the payment of money damages is frequently but a sorry satisfaction for wrongs inflicted. If a textile manufacturer in this country, who is building up a fine trade in South America or China, orders dyestuffs in Germany that are illegally seized by the allies, he may eventually get the value of his confiscated goods, but if meanwhile he is not able to supply himself elsewhere with dyes and consequently can not meet the orders for his product, how is he to get damages for a ruined business or a profitable line of trade that has passed in consequence of his delinquency to a rival in England? In the remarkable speech delivered in the House of Commons the 10th instant by Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, in which he declared in a vengeful spirit that though peace came the commercial war against Germany would not abate, he remarked:

"In the case of South America, we have since the war began developed a trade which I hope will continue long after the cessation of hostilities."

Perhaps he might have said no less of the neutral nations of Europe, with which trade and communication is hampered in the manner I have feebly endeavored to portray, filling in only the outlines.

Let us suppose, however, that the textile manufacturer does not himself import his dyestuffs. He is accustomed to buy from a New York importer, whose persistent efforts to get his usual supply have been met with repeated seizures. He may recover damages for his wares seized, but not for the ruin of his business. But the manufacturer can make no claim whatever. How could the Montana sugar-beet grower prove or collect damages because of an unproductive crop attributable to inferior seed which he was obliged to buy? He might be asked why he did not sow alfalfa. How would the cotton farmer prove the damages he suffered because he was unable to secure the fertilizer best adapted to his land? Perhaps he could have done as well had he planted corn. How is it possible to calculate the aggregate loss to the agriculturists and manufacturers of the country because their business has been more or less affected by the failure to get goods which might have been drawn from the neutral countries, or because of their inability to send thither those of their own production?

Even if the computation could be made with reasonable accuracy, the aggregate would be so stupendous as to forbid negotiations looking to the payment of such damages. Because they are speculative, they could not be computed, though the loss could not be controverted.

Besides, he has considered this subject but superficially, if he has reflected at all on it, who sees in it a mere matter of dollars and cents. Solemn treaties, the express obligations of sovereign nations are involved. Are we to be forced reluctantly to the conclusion that Great Britain and France too consider such as "mere scraps of paper"? Are we to be convinced that interest alone and not honor binds those great nations to such conventions as we have with them? And if we may not rely upon our treaties, when nations are put to stress of what use are they?

The obligation is no less sacred in the case of those implied undertakings arising out of the rules of international law. Webster asserted that—

"every nation, on being received at her own request into the circle of civilized Governments, must understand that she not only attains rights of sovereignty and the dignity of a national character, but that she binds herself also to the strict and faithful observance of all those principles, laws, and usages which have obtained currency among civilized States."

The persistent disregard of those laws and usages by the authorities of one State to the detriment of another is an encroachment upon its sovereignty, just as much as would be the occupation of a portion of its territory.

Acquiescence in such a course marks the country submitting to it as a subject nation.

It has pleased the British foreign office on at least two occasions when complaint has been made of unwarranted aggressions in the pursuit of the policy of the allies to accomplish the economic ruin of their enemies, to attempt to prove by statistics that the commerce of this country has increased since and perhaps because of the war. With profound respect, I venture to assert that the suggestion is wholly irrelevant. It would comport illy with the dignity, and it accords not at all with the spirit of the American people to submit to unwarranted encroachment upon their rights because some pecuniary profit attends a condition with respect to which they have just cause of complaint. I say nothing of the offense of assuming that the rising indignation of our people might be allayed by reference to the material advantage which the war in Europe affords them.

A belligerent can not justify itself for acts violative of our rights to the impoverishment or even the substantial loss of some of our people, because the war it is conducting has resulted in the enrichment of others or even in the improvement of industrial conditions generally.

When I addressed the Senate about a year ago upon a subject closely related to that now being canvassed, copper, an article of export in the production of which Montana has a leading part, was selling upon a limited market for about 10 cents a pound. To-day it commands from 25 to 30. Avarice could demand and could scarcely expect more. Cotton was quoted at from 6 to 7 cents a pound and now sells for more than 12, at least as much as would be looked for in normal times. These two commodities lead our exports in point of value. But if famine prevailed in the copper camps and cotton States, the questions at issue would not be vitally different.

The logic of the situation is plain. If the allies decline to yield to reason, we must cease trading with them. It would be the supremest folly to go to war over the present situation or any that is likely to develop out of it, when a remedy, wholly efficacious, that involves no sacrifice of life, is open to us. War would necessarily involve an embargo, since there could be no traffic with an enemy. Our rights as an independent Nation are at stake and we ought not to hesitate at any monetary or other loss necessary to maintain them. Similar aggressions drove this Nation to the course advocated in the event of the failure of the pending negotiations, during the administration of Thomas Jefferson, a course which eventually drew the warmest encomiums from one of the foremost English writers on international law, Sir Robert Phillimore, heretofore referred to. Commenting on the Orders in Council, issued during the Napoleonic wars, by which all places in France, in the countries of her allies, or any other State which had submitted to the restrictions of her Emperor, were to be considered as blockaded and subject to the restrictions and penalties of blockade, he says:

"In these orders the British Government, in their turn, enunciated a proposition, false in fact and bad in law. It may be some palliation that the measure was retaliatory, but it is not, according to the rules of eternal right and justice, a defense. The truth is that France was the first wrongdoer, Great Britain the second."

Then referring to the Nonintercourse Act, passed by the American Congress in 1809, he added:

"It is to be lamented that this act was not passed earlier, when the first wrong was done by France; but even with this deduction from its merit, it ranks high in the history of nations. It conveyed a just and dignified rebuke both to France and England, and it was worthy of the country which has contributed such valuable materials to the edifice of international law."

The Order in Council of March 11, 1915, is more clearly violative of the rules of "eternal right and justice" than were the orders of January 7 and November 11, 1807, so unsparingly denounced by Phillimore. Even in the wild orgy of that time no English statesman went so far as to proclaim a purpose to seize goods on a neutral ship that had not entered a French port and had no purpose to do so, simply because they had originated in the enemy country or that it was their ultimate destination.

There can be no doubt that merchandise of all kinds will seek entry into Germany through the ports of adjacent neutral countries if the law shall be observed. But how can we tolerate a course of conduct upon the part of the allies violative of our right to trade with a neutral country that they may more successfully carry out their effort to starve Germany?

The Government of the United States might, if it had had the military strength and resources, have posted a force during the Civil War along the left bank of the Rio Grande and thus have prevented all trade between Matamoros or other places in Mexico, and Texas. But it did not, and it had, consequently, no right to arrest innocent goods consigned to a Mexican port but destined for Texas. The allies may lawfully intercept all traffic between Norway and Sweden, on the one hand, and Germany on the other by blockading the Baltic ports, and if they did so they would, under the Springbok case, be entitled to seize goods bound for a port of either of those countries, but which are to proceed therefrom to Germany. That is to say, that goods that must pass through a blockaded port to reach their destination may be seized at any point in the voyage. As it is, the Scandinavian countries may sell to Germany while we can not.

It is no fault of ours that the exigencies of the war will not admit of a blockade of the German Baltic ports or that they forbid the circumvallation of Holland.

Mr. President, I speak as an American, actuated, as I hope, by such sentiments as an American ought to harbor. I am conscious of no spirit of hostility toward Great Britain or any of the countries associated with her. I have no desire to see Germany triumph in this war, but we are being daily forced a little further into the position of allies of her enemies. We are being placed more and more in the attitude of sordid or pusillanimous servitude to them or in that of covert abettors of their cause.

I have found myself unable to lend my support to the arguments of those who on yesterday presented here the monster petition praying for the imposition of an embargo on the export of munitions of war. It is unnecessary at this time to review the considerations which impel me to the belief that in the course pursued by the President, touching the subject to which it relates, he has acted the wise and prudent part. The humanitarian impulses which induced multitudes to sign that petition are in the last degree creditable. Others, not a few in number, probably would not have been so profoundly impressed with the wisdom of the course they so stoutly advocate had the Germans been able to command the ocean.

However, against the impassioned appeals of the very best people in America, God-fearing, peace-loving, Christian people, as well as against the bitter protests of the central powers, our Government, in both the executive and legislative branches, has stood firm for the principle of freedom of commerce with the belligerents even in the instruments of death. We have chosen to stand upon our rights to the overwhelming advantage of the allies, taking the position that to change our policy under the circumstances which confront us, except to subserve our own interests, would subject us to the charge of favoritism that would be unneutral in fact, however we might justify such a course under the law. Similarly, attacks have been made because the allies have been permitted freely to negotiate loans in this country with which to carry on the war and to meet the colossal expenditure it entails. In many other respects a strict observance of the duties which international law imposes upon or the exercise of the privileges it permits to neutrals has aroused the resentment of great masses of our own citizens and the hostility of people on the Continent whose good will we have every reason to cherish and whose friendly regard we enjoyed in the beginning of this devastating war. It would be but reasonable to expect that those who profit by our refusal to swerve from the path of strict neutrality, despite the appeals and protests to which alike a deaf ear has been turned, might be moved to a somewhat tender regard for our rights as neutrals. The more rigid we stand, the more contumelious is the treatment they accord us. The very day that saw the presentation of the great petition referred to, bearing a million signatures, brought news of a set purpose to make even more intolerable the invasion of our right to trade freely with the neutral powers in goods not contraband. If a fixed determination to goad this Nation into retaliatory measures or to try coercion were entertained by the allied powers, it would find quite fitting expression in the course of conduct of which our Government has so respectfully but so forcefully and justly complained. Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad.

For myself, I am convinced that we should not have adjourned last spring before authorizing the President to interdict commercial relations with any of the warring nations whenever, in his judgment, it became impossible to secure, through the diplomatic channels, recognition of and respect for our right to trade with foreign countries pursuant to and in accordance with the accepted principles of international law. I offer a bill, the purpose of which is to invest him with that power.

It is an enormous power to repose in any man, but no American citizen will doubt that it will be exercised with a wise discretion, not impetuously or vindictively, and with an eye single to the honor and the interest of the Nation.

APPENDIX.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

March 11, 1915.

At the Court of Buckingham Palace, the 11th day of March, 1915. Present, the King's most excellent majesty in council.

Whereas the German Government has issued certain orders which, in violation of the usages of war, purport to declare the waters surrounding the United Kingdom a military area, in which all British and allied merchant vessels will be destroyed, irrespective of the safety of the lives of passengers and crew, and in which neutral shipping will be exposed to similar danger in view of the uncertainties of naval warfare; and

Whereas in a memorandum accompanying the said orders neutrals are warned against intrusting crews, passengers, or goods to British or allied ships;

Whereas such attempts on the part of the enemy give to His Majesty an unquestionable right of retaliation; and

Whereas His Majesty has therefore decided to adopt further measures in order to prevent commodities of any kind from reaching or leaving Germany, though such measures will be enforced without risk to neutral ships or to neutral or noncombatant life and in strict observance of the dictates of humanity; and

Whereas the allies of His Majesty are associated with him in the steps now to be announced for restricting further the commerce of Germany, His Majesty is therefore pleased, by and with the advice of his privy council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:

1. No merchant vessel which sailed from her port of departure after the 1st March, 1915, shall be allowed to proceed on her voyage to any German port.

Unless the vessel receives a pass enabling her to proceed to some neutral or allied port to be named in the pass, goods on board any such vessel must be discharged in a British port and placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court. Goods so discharged, not being contraband of war, shall, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, be restored by order of the court upon such terms as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just, to the person entitled thereto.

2. No merchant vessel which sailed from any German port after the 1st March, 1915, shall be allowed to proceed on her voyage with any goods on board laden at such port.

All goods laden at such port must be discharged in a British or allied port. Goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court, and, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, shall be detained or sold under the direction of the prize court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into court and dealt with in such manner as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just:

Provided, That no proceeds of the sale of such goods shall be paid out of court until the conclusion of peace, except on the application of the proper officer of the Crown, unless it be shown that the goods had become neutral property before the issue of this order.

Provided also, That nothing herein shall prevent the release of neutral property laden at such enemy port on the application of the proper officer of the Crown.

3. Every merchant vessel which sailed from her port of departure after the 1st of March, 1915, on her way to a port other than a German port, carrying goods with an enemy destination, or which are enemy property, may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Any goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court, and, unless they are contraband of war, shall, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, be restored by order of the court, upon such terms as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just to the person entitled thereto.

Provided, That this article shall not apply in any case falling within articles 2 or 4 of this order.

4. Every merchant vessel which sailed from a port other than a German port after the 1st of March, 1915, having on board goods which are of enemy origin or are enemy property may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court, and, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, shall be detained or sold under the direction of the prize court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into court and dealt with in such manner as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just.

Provided, That no proceeds of sale of such goods shall be paid out of court until the conclusion of peace, except on the application of the proper officer of the Crown, unless it be shown that the goods had become neutral property before the issue of this order.

Provided also, That nothing herein shall prevent the release of neutral property of enemy origin on the application of the proper officer of the Crown.

5. Any person claiming to be interested in, or to have any claim in respect of, any goods (not being contraband of war) placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court under this order, or in the proceeds of such goods, may forthwith issue a writ in the prize court against the proper officer of the Crown and apply for an order that the goods should be restored to him, or that their proceeds should be paid to him, or for such other order as the circumstances of the case may require.

The practice and procedure of the prize court shall, so far as applicable, be followed mutatis mutandis in any proceedings consequential upon this order.

6. A merchant vessel which has cleared for a neutral port from a British or allied port, or which has been allowed to pass, having an ostensible destination to a neutral port, and proceeds to an enemy port, shall, if captured on any subsequent voyage, be liable to condemnation.

7. Nothing in this order shall be deemed to affect the liability of any vessel or goods to capture or condemnation independently of this order.

8. Nothing in this order shall prevent the relaxation of the provisions of this order in respect of the merchant vessels of any country which declares that no commerce intended for or originating in Germany or belonging to German subjects shall enjoy the protection of its flag.

ALMERIC FITZROY.

APPENDIX B.

COPPER AGREEMENT BETWEEN UNITED STATES EXPORTERS AND BRITISH ADMIRALTY—COPPER FROM UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

Whilst His Majesty's Government are at present, so far as they are able, preventing any copper from reaching their enemies, they have no desire to interfere in any way with the sales of the United States copper producers to purchasers in neutral countries which are willing to guarantee that the copper which they import is for the consumption of those neutral countries.

If the United States producers would be willing to cooperate, His Majesty's Government will not interfere with their copper shipments to those neutral countries which have placed copper on their prohibition list and whose prohibitions of export are found to be effective.

Whilst His Majesty's Government can not abandon in any way their right to search vessels, they will be quite willing to allow to proceed to its destination all copper which is to be sold only to named consumers, and not to merchants, dealers, or forwarding agents, in such neutral countries as have placed copper and articles manufactured mainly of copper on their list of prohibitive exports, provided that a copy of the contract of sale is sent to the director of the trade division of the Admiralty, and it shall contain a clause to the effect that neither the copper itself nor any of its products shall be exported. Such copper, upon arriving at its destination, shall be put into a warehouse, so that it can not afterwards be declared in transit. The bill of lading must show clearly the name of the actual consumer, or of a recognized London merchant, or the name of a banker who shall be approved by His Majesty's Government.

It is agreed that the undersigned will not export copper to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, or Italy, except in compliance with and subject to the conditions of article 3 hereof, and that it (the undersigned company) will not export copper to other neutral countries, except subject to permit of British Admiralty.

Shipments of copper to Great Britain or her allies may be made without restriction.

All sale contracts for neutral countries to be forwarded to the British Admiralty, either through its London representatives or through His Britannic Majesty's consul at the port of New York.

Shipments of copper against contracts entered into previous to the signing of this agreement and any existing f. o. b. contracts are exempt from its provisions.

* * * * * * *

We will be prepared to conform to the different provisions set forth in the above regulations of the Admiralty as regards shipments of copper from the United States of America to neutral countries, and we assent to the terms of the letter of January 2, 1915, from Richard Webb, director of trade divisions, to Messrs. C. S. Henry & Co. (Ltd.), a copy of which letter, marked "Exhibit A," is attached hereto.

——— (Co.).

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. WALSH. I do.

Mr. POMERENE. I desire to suggest a question to the Senator, if I may. I am in entire sympathy with the Senator's protest against interference with our foreign commerce, whether it be by Great Britain or Germany or any of the other belligerents. The Senator has suggested as a possible remedy for these interferences the placing of an embargo on all our commerce with the offending nation. Of course, if that is done, the effect is twofold—one upon the offending nation, the other upon our own citizens, our own commerce, our own manufactures.

Has the Senator taken into consideration what would be the possible attitude of our commercial and manufacturing interests in the event that an embargo was to be placed upon all shipments to the offending nation, and thereby cut off all commerce with that nation?

Mr. WALSH. The Senator has considered that. It would obviously be a contest between patriotism and a desire to profit out of the situation, and it is a question as to which would prevail.

Mr. President, it was very properly suggested on the other side of the Chamber the other day that the time has arrived to act. As a basis for that action, I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill at this time, and I ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana asks unanimous consent to introduce a bill and that it may be read. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The bill (S. 4053) to interdict commercial intercourse between the United States and any foreign country which shall unlawfully interfere with the foreign trade thereof was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever the Department of State shall find it impossible to secure from any foreign power satisfactory assurances that it will desist from acts done or threatened, deemed by the said department to be an unlawful interference with the right to carry on trade between the United States and any other country, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to issue a proclamation reciting such condition.

SEC. 2. That after 30 days from the date of issuing such proclamation it shall be unlawful for any person, partnership, or corporation to sell or contract to sell or deliver or contract to deliver to any such nation so mentioned in such proclamation or to purchase or contract to purchase for or on account of any such nation any goods, wares, or merchandise, or pay for any such goods, wares, or merchandise, or to accept money upon deposit or otherwise to be used in payment of any purchase so made.

SEC. 3. That after such period it shall be unlawful for any person, partnership, or corporation to export, sell, or contract to sell, or deliver or contract to deliver, or purchase or contract to purchase, or to procure the delivery of or to transport or contract to transport or to accept for transport any goods, wares, or merchandise, knowing or having reason to believe that such goods, wares, or merchandise are to be exported to any foreign country so named in such proclamation or to any colonies, dependencies thereof, or other territory over which its sovereignty may extend.

SEC. 4. That after such time if any goods, wares, or merchandise shall be put on board any ship, vessel, or other craft, with intention to export the same to any such country so named in such proclamation or to any of the colonies or dependencies thereof or other territory over which its sovereignty may extend, with knowledge had by the master of any such ship, vessel, or other craft, or which he could have secured by the exercise of reasonable diligence, such ship, vessel, or other craft shall be forfeited, and the owner and master thereof shall each pay treble the value of such goods, wares, or merchandise. And the discharge of any goods from any such ship, vessel, or other craft within any such country, colony, dependency, or territory shall be deemed prima facie evidence of knowledge of such intention.

SEC. 5. That all goods, wares, or merchandise sold or contracted to be sold for export or which are in course of transportation to any port for export to any country, colony, dependency, or territory contrary to the provisions of this act shall be forfeited.

SEC. 6. That the United States circuit court for the district in which any ship, vessel, or other craft, or any goods, wares, or merchandise, subject to forfeiture under sections 4 and 5 of this act may be, shall have jurisdiction to entertain suit to enforce such forfeiture and to issue all appropriate writs and orders to seize and hold the same and to make such orders touching the sale or other disposition of the same as may be necessary or proper, or it may direct that the property be held for the use of the United States.

SEC. 7. That any person violating this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than $100,000 or by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SEC. 8. That whenever the President shall become satisfied that any goods, wares, or merchandise exported from the United States to any country not named in any such proclamation are allowed by such country to be reexported to any country so named as offending in such proclamation, he may issue a proclamation reciting such fact, and thereupon all the provisions of this act shall apply to goods to be exported to such country.

SEC. 9. That whenever, after the issuance of any such proclamation, the President shall receive satisfactory assurances from any offending power named therein that it proposes no longer to persist in the acts in consequence of which such proclamation was issued, or whenever in his judgment the public good may so require, he may by proclamation suspend the operation of this act as to any or all countries named therein.

Mr. WALSH. I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

During the delivery of Mr. WALSH'S speech,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Montana please suspend for a minute while the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business? It will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana will proceed.

After the conclusion of Mr. WALSH'S speech,

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands.

Mr. HARDING. Mr. President, I have felt, naturally, the diffidence of a new Member in undertaking to participate in the debate on the pending measure relating to the Philippine Islands. I have listened, with that reverence which must come to one who is new in this Chamber, to the progress of the debate with rather conflicting emotions, until I have finally reached the conclusion that one from Ohio ought at least to give a reason for his vote, that one who comes from the State of him who led in planting our flag in the Philippines, and from the State of him who laid the foundation of our American civilization there, ought at least to voice his protest against the proposed bill.

We are not moved in Ohio by that fear of the greed of the East, as suggested by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE], nor is the undercurrent of our dependable thought materially changed by the clamorous call for radical reformation. I think the current of thought in the great Middle West goes unerringly on, uninfluenced by either. Our judgment, as I have seen it attested in Ohio, is that the United States of America has no right and has no reason to extend a benevolent protectorate over the Philippine Islands without control, and I, for one, Mr. President and Senators, mean to vote against the pending bill.

When the Senator from Arkansas, for whom I have conceived a very great respect, introduced his first amendment to the pending measure I confessed I rejoiced. I said at the time: Here is one leader of the dominant party in this country who proposes to carry out a party pledge; and if I believe that we had no right in the Philippine Islands, if I believed that we were denying the Filipinos a God-given right of inalienable liberty, if I had subscribed to the successive platforms of the Democratic Party for the last 16 years, I would unhesitatingly vote for the first amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

There is a very familiar expression, Mr. President, originally uttered by a very distinguished Member of this body long since gone. I think he was at the time troubled with the problem of the resumption of specie payments. In the course of his discussion of the problem in an administrative capacity he uttered that famous dictum, "The way to resume is to resume"; and I want to say that the way to grant Philippine independence is to grant it. If I should use the language sometimes used on the streets, I would say the practical way to grant the Philippine Islands their independence is to "chuck them" and let them work out their own destiny.

When the pending measure of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] was first under discussion in the Senate, the debate took rather a curious turn. I was very much interested in the persistent use of the word "self-government." Well, Mr. President, self-government is one thing and popular self-government is quite another thing. If we mean to grant the Philippine Islands their independence, it is none of our business what kind of government they have. It may well be an autocracy; it may be a despotism; they may prefer a dictatorship; or they may, and most likely will, attempt a republic like that of China, which recently flashed a moment on the firmament of republics as a sort of triumph of rational over dollar diplomacy, and then again faded from the firmament. What business is it of ours if the Filipino people have the inalienable right of independence, what kind of government they may choose to have? We accepted the sponsorship; and if that is binding we have no right to set them adrift. If it is not binding, the majority in this Chamber ought to vote unanimously to set them adrift at the earliest possible day; and I warn you, Senators on the opposite side of the House, that you are breeding trouble for the United States of America every day you delay doing so under the promises of the Democratic Party.

I have heard the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE], and other distinguished Senators on the other side of the House, say that this great question ought to be discussed without reference to partisan or political bias. Why, sirs, when we assumed the sponsorship for government in the Philippine Islands, there was no partisanship involved, and the first platform of the party at that time responsible for the conduct of public affairs, and which took upon itself the administration, the preservation of peace, the leading of the Filipinos in the right path, there was no consideration of politics. There never would have been any partisanship, and the question pending before this body to-day would never have been raised if the party now in power had not made its paramount issue of expansion and imperialism in 1900. The movement in the Philippine Islands is not only the echo of that enunciation in 1900 on the part of the party now in power, but of each succeeding declaration of that party every fourth year since then.

But, Mr. President, the question now on the amendment pending is not one on the character of government in the Philippine Islands; it is not what sort of a basic law or fundamental government we shall prescribe for them; it has come to be the great question of Philippine independence, and I am opposed to it, Mr. President, for two striking reasons. In the first place, the granting of Philippine independence changes the policy of the Government of the United States of America from the very beginning. In the second place, it alters a policy of the United States of America for the last 17 years, under which we have made the most magnificent contribution to the history of unselfish nationality or the unselfishness of nations that has ever been written.

There is this to say of the United States of America: We are the first Nation on the face of the earth that ever unsheathed the sword on behalf of suffering humanity. We did that in Cuba in 1898. Perhaps some one will question the statement. I grant that Congress in making its declaration of war had more in mind an act of revenge for the destruction of the battleship Maine; but the great, kindly soul that was at the head of this Republic at that time put it on a higher plane. He disavowed any intention of the acquirement of territory, and literally went to war for humanity's sake. Then, out of the fortunes of that war, we acquired the Philippine Islands.

Whatever else may be said—and it has been wonderfully emphasized in this debate—our work in the Philippine Islands in education, in sanitation, in elevation and civilization has been the most magnificent contribution of a nation's unselfishness ever recorded in the history of the world. If it be true that in 17 years we have schooled the Filipino people until they are quite fit for self-government, then we have made more advance for that people in 17 years than they acquired in three centuries under the Spanish occupation. But this splendid achievement, Mr. President, has been lost sight of in the debate in this Chamber amid a lot of fine phrases about "inalienable right" and "God-given liberty" and "government without the consent of the governed" until I have come to the conclusion that the bronze statues of American Indians that make ornate some portions of this Capitol would turn their stoical stares to sardonic smiles if they could only know.

Why, we have never heretofore been seriously concerned about the "consent of the governed." We have not been speaking of it in a century and a third of American progress. There has been much recalling of the spirit of the American founding fathers. Mr. President, the man who likens the Philippine situation to that of the American colonies can find no real analogy. Independence was not the inspiration of the War of the Revolution. Nationality was not the impelling force back of the War of the Revolution. It was the means of the preservation of independence when once we had achieved it. Note the difference, if you please. There is no ground for outcry about oppression in the Philippines. We were grieving against the mother country because of unjust taxation; we were grieving because of a denial of our participation in the commerce of the world. In the Philippine case, if the debates on this floor have stated the facts, we have not only kept aloof from unjust taxation, but we have been prodigal in the expenditure of Federal funds in their behalf.

Mr. President, I somehow believe that the destiny of this new-world Republic was written by an Infinite hand in the consciousness of some Divine purpose. I can explain to myself our phenomenal progress in no other way. I can not understand our very victory for independence itself unless some Master hand was directing, yet we have lost sight of that important fact in much of the discussion on this floor.

Why, Mr. President and Senators, the American Republic never before gave a thought to the "consent of the governed"; never gave a thought to the violation of "inalienable rights"; did not give much serious thought to the threatened overturning of our form of republic when we made the Louisiana Purchase; and yet Thomas Jefferson, the distinguished leader of his party, revered to this day, made the Louisiana Purchase with the most astounding assumption of authority ever exercised; and he thereby gave to the American Union that vast territory which added 13 States to the jewels in the crown of an expanding Nation. I am glad he did it; and I should like to divert for a moment for the entertainment, if not for the information, of Senators to read a paragraph published in the January number of the Century Magazine, in the article by Helen Nicolay on the growth of the American Republic. Speaking of the Louisiana Purchase—no, not of the Louisiana Purchase, but solely of the purchase of the city of New Orleans, not the vast territory which was an empire in itself—she recites as follows:

> There was a tremendous outcry. It was not only undemocratic, but ruinous both in money and policy. The United States already owned too much territory. Every added inch increased the danger of our unwieldy Republic breaking into pieces. Besides, and this Jefferson's political opponents emphasized with undoubted relish, what had become of the strict construction of the Constitution about which the Republicans were forever parading before they came into power? Proposing to buy a foreign city was a greater liberty than Federalists had ever dreamed of taking with the sacred document.

I might read on further, but what I have read is enough to illustrate my point.

There is another striking incident. From the same grantor the courageous fathers bought the territory of Florida. Nobody worried about the violation of "inalienable rights"; nobody asked about "the consent of the governed"; and when insurrection arose in Florida, good old Andrew Jackson put his determined foot thereon, and not only did he not ask for "the consent of the governed," but he picked up some 4,000 rebellious inhabitants of that territory and transplanted them from the sunshine of Florida to the shady groves of Arkansas; and so on, Mr. President and Senators, with every step of this expanded Nation.

Nobody was concerned about the violation of rights when we made the Gadsden Purchase; nobody worried about inalienable liberties when we secured that cession from Mexico that gave us that splendid territory of the West. We have never been concerned about these things until finally a political party's promise with relation to the Philippines has come to the point where it is put to the test. If we are concerned, Mr. President, about these things, I want to ask, Why not let us be consistent? I have heard nothing about the danger of colonial possessions except as to the Philippines; I have heard no question about rights in the splendid territory we have in the mid-Pacific known as the Hawaiian Islands. Nobody has raised this question of rights or of righteousness in the case of Alaska or of other territories; and Porto Rico, which is peculiarly like the case of the Philippine Islands, has never once been mentioned, to my knowledge, in this discussion.

The Porto Rican case may well be referred to for a moment. It does not happen that there has been any political discussion with reference to the island of Porto Rico. Just an echo, if you please, of politics rather than patriotism reached the islands, and there was for a time a restlessness and a determination to be free from American occupation; but that has passed away, and the progress in Porto Rico is a most gratifying thing for an American to point to. I should like to say on this floor that I hope to see the day when we can grant citizenship to the people of the island of Porto Rico and bring them into still closer relations with the United States.

I was very much interested in the discussion of the Senator from Arkansas relating to the impossibility of developing a fit citizenship from such a race. Why, Mr. President, his own tribute to the Empire of Japan is the answer to his statement. I have a notion, Senators, that under the uplifting influence of American civilization any of the members of the human race can be brought up to a stature that befits them for American citizenship. We have the proof at home. Without any disparagement of any class of those who come to this land from the downtrodden nations of the Old World, I have myself been the witness of those who come here and hold their heads erect, breathing in the atmosphere of American liberty and opportunity; and while the influence does not always bring the parent to the full stature that becomes American citizenship, it is invariably true that the next generation is a step higher in the human scale and finds its place fittingly into citizenship and participation in the affairs of the United States of America.

The whole history of the American Nation, Mr. President and Senators, is written about the covenant of our nationality. I do not want to refer to the Civil War except in passing to say that it would never have been fought had there not been a covenant of nationality, which is involved in this very question raised here to-day. Nobody to-day questions our American nationality, none raises a voice against it, none seeks separation therefrom except a very small number of people in the Philippine Islands, who, I believe, Mr. President, are very much more anxious to exploit than to exalt the great mass of people in those islands.

I said, Mr. President, that the covenant of nationality lead to the great Civil War. There is a strange significance to me in the fact that our sovereignty in the Philippines was instituted by that admirable, that kind, that loving, that sympathetic American who first revealed the reconsecration of the South to the concord of American Union. It is significant because it affirms what I believe to be the course of our American destiny. Those of you who knew him, those of you who lived—as you all did—in his time, know that there was nothing selfish, there was nothing oppressive, there was nothing crushing about William McKinley, and no Government under him and no Government of ours devoted to his memory could have such an influence.

Mr. President, the debate on the Philippine bill has served to develop the infinite difficulty of making an honorable retirement. It has been interesting to me to note that the proposition of the Senator from Arkansas, which seemed to me to be so practical in carrying out the policy of his party, has been so modified that the time was first extended from two to four or five years, and, if I understood the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] correctly in the debate yesterday, finally to nine years.

It is significant to me that no proposition presented to this Assembly strikes directly at the question; and I tell you, Mr. President and Senators, that we ought to grant the Philippine Islands their independence or we ought to quit talking about it, either in this Chamber or on the stump in political campaigns.

I think it is impossible for us to honorably withdraw. I think it is impossible, first, because of our obligations to the Filipino people themselves. I should dislike to believe that this great Nation, so much interested in the last quarter of a century in uplift work, so deeply interested in the uplifting of a downtrodden people that our unfortunate Mexican policy of "watchful waiting" was founded on such a design. I should dislike to think that we are anxious to cast the Philippines adrift because of the mere fact, if you please, that they would endanger us or add to our responsibilities in time of war. I want to go on record as saying, Senators, that if war ever comes with the empire of the Orient, it will not be because of the Philippine Islands; it will be in spite of them; and, while I am not much of a military authority, I venture to make the assertion that the Philippines will serve as a fitting outpost to warn this mainland of impending danger.

In the next place, without going further into the discussion, I think we can not retire because of the obligations to ourselves and to the other nations of the earth. I do not wish to discuss, Mr. President, this question from what seems to be a selfish viewpoint, but one can not be in this Chamber without catching the aspirations of the American people. I know what is in our hearts. It is in every official message; somehow or other, it is the desire of every patriotic American. Here is a Nation with limitless resources; here is a Nation excelling in genius; here is a Nation unmatched in industry; and everything that is proposed in this body is designed to aid and encourage the widening of American influence and make us a dominant commercial and industrial nation. Well, if that be true, I want to ask what field, other than South America, offers greater attractions than the Orient? And if we are to go into the Orient for an expansion of commerce and trade, I fancy that the possession of these rich islands, the Philippine Archipelago, will be very much to our advantage.

Mr. President, there is another phase of this subject which I desire to touch upon, and then I shall not detain the Senate longer. There is not only the viewpoint of our covenant to the world and to civilization, but at this particular moment this reversal of the American policy, to my mind, would be the most unfortunate thing that could happen to the United States of America. I do not want it said that this great Nation, aspiring to a place in the councils of the world, that this great Nation, which to-day is the only one whose voice is heard above the din of conflict in a continental war, is so miserably afraid that it wants to cast aside some of its possessions to avoid some of the dangers of war. I had rather stand erect as an American and be unafraid, and particularly at this time when, in some way or other, most unfortunately, Americanism is very much derided in the Old World. Contempt is shown for it in Mexico; disregard is shown for American rights on the seas. Why not, Mr. President, reassert ourselves, not only confident in the possession of the territory which is righteously ours, but make it ornate with an assertion of Americanism that is befitting so great a Nation.

Mr. President, I have been very much interested in another phase of this subject. Much has been said in the current debates relating to the dangers of colonial possessions. I venture to make reply that there is not an instance in history where a colonial possession proved unfortunate to the mother power, if I may call it so, where the national heart was right.

I may cite two instances. No power on the face of the earth ever rose to such sublime glory as the Republic of Rome; and the Republic of Rome came to its glory through its colonial possessions, in every one of which the citizenship was proud to claim the Roman connection. It drove the Republic on, unfailingly and unflinchingly, until that time came when the Empire succeeded the Republic and Rome became rotten at heart. Then her colonies became a menace.

There has been cited here more than once the gratification of Great Britain in dealing with her colonies. I had much rather refer this body to the beautiful example of Holland and the Netherland colonies. That little kingdom of Europe, with its colonial possessions, has been able to maintain a commerce that might reasonably be the envy of any other nation on the face of the earth. But I make bold to say that any nation which is right at heart may possess colonies in great confidence, and bestow the blessings of the civilization which that nation has attained; and in my judgment, Senators, this Nation need not be afraid of the Philippine Islands. We must be afraid of ourselves at home.

One more phase. I do not believe that it disparages the citizenship of the Philippine Islands to question their capacity for self-government. I am not always sure that we have that capacity ourselves in these boasted United States. But whether we have or not, the Filipino people have been accustomed to our spirit of civilization for only 17 years. I grant that the islands have their college graduates; I grant that they have their brave men, their brilliant leaders; but Manila is not the Philippine Islands. I grant, Mr. President, that there are 600,000 children in the schools of the islands, rollicking in a laughter that is the echo of our own in these United States, and walking in the light of opening opportunity. But 600,000 in the schools out of a population of 8,000,000 is a mighty poor guarantee of a dependable autonomy. Before we think of such a thing, let us not only have 600,000 children in the schools of the Philippine Islands; but, under American education and occupation and sponsorship, let us have 2,000,000 Philippine children in the schools. Then the pathway will open for a higher civilization, and with it a devotion to the Nation that led the way.

Mr. President, in the determination of this question of Philippine independence, we do one of two things: We determine to call in the outposts and narrow, if we can, the influences of American civilization to our own shores; or we determine to go courageously and unfalteringly on, spreading our boasted American civilization throughout the world.

I have sometimes wondered what the impelling influence has been. I know very well that a nation leading in civilization and in that uplifting work which contributes to the weal of humanity can no more limit its influence to its territorial or coast-bound sphere than can the man who stands high in his community, and has the character and the attributes that make him an influence in the activities of the world.

Mr. President, we have boasted heretofore that we have seemingly founded the ideal Republic. I do not know whether we have or not. A century and a third is only a very little while in the history of the world. But we have seemingly founded the first dependable popular self-government on the face of the earth, because the fathers had the inspiration to write civil liberty into our organic law.

It seems to me, if it has been our privilege and our boast that we have established and developed the best popular Government on the face of the earth, that we ought to go on with the same thought that impelled Him who brought a plan of salvation to the earth. Rather than confine it to the limitations of the Holy Land alone, He gathered His disciples about Him and said, "Go ye and preach the gospel to all the nations of the earth."

Let us stop and think before we alter the policy of these United States. Let us not think about the selfish side of commerce and industry alone. Let us ask ourselves if the time has not come when it is befitting to return a vigorous, persistent, conscience-founded, determined Americanism; and clad in our convictions of conscientiousness and righteousness let us go on, Mr. President and Senators, in our efforts to fulfill the destinies of what I believe to be the best republic on earth.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER].

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I propose to offer the amendment now. I have modified the amendment, as follows:

On line 5, strike out "whenever" and insert in lieu thereof "so soon as."

On line 6, strike out "be permanent and."

On line 10, strike out "in perpetuity."

I will ask the Secretary to read the amendment, which I offer as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment as modified.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill, as a substitute, the following:

The President of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to indicate to the great powers of the world the desire of this Government to extend to the Philippine Islands and the Philippine people full and complete independence so soon as it shall be warranted in the belief that such independence will be respected by the other powers of the world. The President is further authorized and requested to secure from such other powers such agreements as will insure the independence of said islands, and when such agreements have been made he shall forthwith direct a convention to be held in such islands for the purpose of adopting a constitution providing for a republican form of government; and as soon as such constitution has been adopted and officers have been elected and a government inaugurated thereunder he shall, by proclamation, declare such islands and the people thereof to be a free and independent state, with all the powers of complete sovereignty.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] was kind enough to inform me the other day that I was probably mistaken in the assumption that there was anything of a partisan character either in the bill or in the offered amendments. But scarcely had the Senator finished that statement when the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE], in his very clear argument, admitted that he had dragged a plank of the Democratic platform into the particular amendment which he offered, and for which I am offering this substitute.

The Senator from Arkansas has tied to the tail of his amendment that plank in the Democratic platform which declared in favor of a coaling station in the Philippine Islands. Now, I put the question directly to the Senator from Arkansas as to what use we would put that coaling station to or what benefit we would derive from it in case we granted independence to the islands? I have waited very patiently, Mr. President, for an answer to that question.

I also ask the Senator from Arkansas this question: Is there not an inconsistency between a declaration that we shall grant independence to the Philippine Islands and a declaration that we shall maintain a coaling station and a naval base at such islands? Does not the very necessity of maintaining a coaling station or a naval base require such control over the islands as will secure to us for all time such a naval base? Or, putting it in another way, suppose that the Philippine Islands should grant to us, as the purchase price of their freedom, for any indefinite time, a naval base on those islands, and the very next day after she is free from our control, being perhaps a little pressed for funds, Japan should come to her rescue and say: "We will furnish you the necessary funds for conducting your government, and in return for the payment of that we kindly ask you to give us a naval base and a coaling station." Do you imagine for a single moment that she would be likely to refuse such a request as that? Why should she refuse? The moment that she is out of our control, that moment she is more directly under the influence of this great Nippon Government than that of any other Government in the world. So that instead of granting independence, instead of unloosing all ties which bind that country to the United States, you are in the same act binding us by another agreement to maintain the integrity and the independence of the islands not for a period of eight or nine years, but as long as we hold a naval base in those islands.

It seems to me that the two propositions in the amendment are absolutely inconsistent, Mr. President.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question along the line he is now arguing?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. KENYON. Have not we the same menace that we have heard about to our country from a military standpoint and a naval standpoint if we keep a coaling station or any kind of a military base there that we would have if we kept the whole islands? In other words, if we have a naval base or a coaling station and it is taken away from us, our people would never consent to that any more than they would consent to taking the whole islands. So that we do not relieve ourselves at all of the menace in the matter, do we, by giving up the islands and at the same time holding a naval base and a coaling station?

Mr. McCUMBER. Why, Mr. President, we increase the menace, because in case of war with any other country the first act of the enemy would be to strike at our coaling station or our naval base in the Pacific.

Mr. KENYON. The coaling station might be easier to capture; but I think the Senator will agree with me that the American people would never permit one foot of territory to be taken away from them by hostile force.

Mr. McCUMBER. Why, Mr. President, if we maintain a naval base in the Philippine Islands, we must maintain a sufficient force of Navy and Army to protect that base, not only as against insurrection in the Philippine Islands, not only as against any danger within the islands themselves, but also as against any danger outside of the islands; and that would require just as large a naval force as it would to protect the whole islands. There can be no possible escape from that proposition.

I am sorry the Senator from Arkansas has absented himself, because I desired a vote upon this amendment in order that we may very speedily arrive at a conclusion as to just exactly what is wanted on the other side with reference to this bill.

The Senator from Arkansas yesterday indulged in quite a few stories to exemplify his position. Let me call his attention to another one which he did not mention yesterday.

The Senator has undoubtedly read of the Irish trooper who had been riding upon a rather fractious mule. The mule was rearing and tearing around, but Jerry was still able to maintain himself in the saddle. Finally the mule struck forward with one of his hind feet and got his foot caught in the stirrup. Jerry immediately began to scramble down, with the remark, "Begorrah, if you are going to get on, I will be getting off." [Laughter.]

Are you not somewhat in the same position with reference to your amendment? When the Filipino people begin to get into the saddle themselves, is it not time for us to be getting off? Or, putting it in another way, are we not safer in the saddle with both feet in the stirrups than we would be with one foot on the ground and the other tied to the stirrup?

I think that when we provide for a naval base in an entirely independent country in Asiatic waters we are putting ourselves in a decidedly dangerous position; and I think the Senator agrees with me that we must maintain the same power to protect our naval base and to shield the islands against an attack which would threaten that base that we would have to maintain in order to protect the islands under our control.

Then the Senator has failed, so far, to give us any valid reason or purpose for a naval base on the Asiatic side as long as we have no possessions there that we must defend.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, I can not exactly see the connection between a bucking mule and a naval base, but I can say to the Senator that so far as I am concerned I have about the same experience with the one that I have with the other.

The naval-base business need not give anybody any difficulty, because the naval base would not be attacked until the sovereignty of the islands was attacked. Then it would be simply a question as to where would be the most appropriate place to direct our defense or counterassault.

There is nothing about a naval base that requires a governmental establishment and an Army to protect it. It is one of the places of convenience and may be abandoned without dishonor, and may be taken without overcoming the nation that undertakes to maintain it.

In determining the relative importance of the different possessions of a country at war, naval bases cut mighty little figure, especially at distant points. They are not altogether intended for war. They have other collateral purposes in connection with commerce to prevent a good many things short of war.

So far as a naval base in the Philippine Islands is concerned, I can not conceive that the United States would ever want to maintain one, because our object in getting out of there would be entirely contrary to the purpose of maintaining one for defensive purposes.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is what I wanted the Senator to say.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. We want to get out of there because we do not want to defend or be attacked in that quarter of the globe. There is nothing there to justify the assumption of any such risk.

Mr. McCUMBER. That is exactly what I wanted the Senator to say—that there is no object whatever in attaching to his amendment this naval-base proposition that is borrowed from the platform of his own party. The Senator can see no harm in it, according to his own argument, nor does he see any use for it. On this side some of us, as already indicated, can see some harm, and we can see no use for it on the face of the earth; and in the latter proposition we agree with the Senator.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I will call the Senator's attention to the fact that I have modified the amendment so as to make it optional with the President as to whether or not he shall, in the time of negotiation, provide for the retention of a site for a naval base. I think that when he comes to look into the situation as it will exist after we withdraw he will readily reach the conclusion that there is not the slightest necessity for doing any such thing.

Mr. McCUMBER. Why should we put in the bill a provision to leave optional with the President something which we admit is of no value, and has really no place in a bill to grant independence to the Philippine Islands?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I said the other day, and I think I may appropriately repeat it now, that all legislation is in some degree a matter of compromise. If there were nobody to be consulted except the Senator from North Dakota and myself, I think we could arrange the naval-base proposition much quicker by leaving it out.

Mr. McCUMBER. And I think we would arrange it about right, Mr. President, too. We would probably get rid of the Philippine Islands once and for all time, and in a proper way.

The Senator, I think, did not hold to his usual inclination to be perfectly fair when he stated that the amendment which I had offered asked the permission of foreign governments before we should grant independence to the Philippine Islands. There is no permission asked in this amendment. This amendment simply declares to all of the countries of the world that the Philippine Islands are now possessions of the United States, and that the United States is willing to grant them independence, but that the United States is not willing to grant them independence unless the United States feels assured that the world will recognize such independence. We are not asking permission to grant them their freedom. We are simply asking other countries to enter into an agreement that that which we do grant shall be respected by them at a time when we would no longer be in a position to insist upon it. To-day we are in such a position because we possess the islands.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I am wholly unable to discover the difference in ultimate meaning between the two statements made by the Senator, one ascribed to me and the other made by himself. As I understand the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota, the action of the President in releasing the Philippine Islands from the further control of the United States would be predicated upon the previous ascertainment of the willingness of other countries to respect the sovereignty of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. McCUMBER. If we use the word "respect" instead of "consent," that is a different proposition. They are not consenting that we shall free the islands from our control, but are entering into an agreement that under no circumstances will they interfere with their independence.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. My purpose is to withdraw American sovereignty over those islands whether foreign governments will consent to respect their independence or not. I am entirely willing to continue for five years the existing control there, which I think carries with it a suggestion to foreign nations that they will respect it for that length of time. At the end of that time I am not particularly concerned from a national standpoint as to what becomes of them.

Mr. McCUMBER. I can see a difference between the views of the Senator and myself. The Senator's view, placing it in simple, plain language, is that after a certain number of years, four or five, he does not care particularly what becomes of the Philippines, whether they are made independent or whether they are taken possession of by Japan. He rather inclines to the position that they would be better off under Japanese control than they would if left to their own independence.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. Just one moment. My view is that what we want and what the Filipino people want is independence. They are not asking that they shall be transferred from depedence on this country to a dependence upon some other country, but they are asking that they have their independence of any and all countries; and that is what I want to see before we ever let go of them.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. An independence that can not maintain itself is not much of an independence. If we are to follow them up, either by making contracts on their behalf or by a perpetual guaranty on our own, they would not enjoy independence. They would simply be a dependency of this country. We would give them the right to embroil us in difficulties without having the right to prevent them from doing so where our interest was involved.

I give a rather more comprehensive meaning to the word "independence" than the Senator does. I think when we are out of there, after having afforded a reasonable opportunity to those people to prepare for the new responsibilities that will rest upon them, we have done everything we ought to do. Then it is a question of "root, hog, or die."

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes; but it is a question, Mr. President, as to whether we have done all that we should do. I am frank in saying that I think we should go further; that we should secure an agreement from those nations who would be most likely to threaten the independence of the Philippine Islands after we have ceased our control over them that they may still retain their independence.

Mr. President, I listened with a great deal of pleasure to the address just made by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING]. I think he touched a responsive chord in the heart of every American citizen when he said that we wish to press our civilization onward and upward; but I think there is a limit to our right to press it. There is a vast difference between expanding upon this side of the hemisphere, between purchasing and making part of our domain a territory adjoining us, peopled by a white race, and pressing our control over into Asiatic waters and seizing upon a people of an entirely different race, with little or no Caucasian blood in their veins.

They have their civilization; we have ours. They are not consistent in all respects with each other. Alaska is a part of North America and its southern extremity but a few miles from our northern border. The Gadsden Purchase and Texas and Florida were all countries contiguous to the United States, populated with the same kind of people. They were not Malays; they were not negroes. I for one am not in favor of adding to the color question any further than we must deal with it right here in our own country.

I am not questioning the power of the United States to hold those islands. I am not asking that we free our control over them through any fear of our ability to protect them. A country of 100,000,000 population at the present time and with opportunities to expand manyfold over in the next few years need not be afraid in the long run of any nation upon the face of the earth, and, I might almost add, though all the nations upon the face of the earth combined against us.

It is not through fear, Mr. President; it is through what I conceive to be the better policy of the United States to keep out of Asiatic territory, to expand our governmental influence only upon this side of the ocean and in this hemisphere and with people of our own character and inheritance.

Now, the Senator from Ohio says it does not make any difference to us after we have released the Philippines whether their government becomes republican, monarchical, or autocratic. That may be true; but I think we should start them off with the American ideal of government. My amendment simply indicates that we shall start them right with a republican form of government, give them our ideals and our conviction as to the character of a government that should be maintained, and then if they wish of their own volition to change that, of course they have the right as an independent nation to do so.

Mr. President, I have discussed simply and clearly, first, whether we want to let go of the Philippine Islands before we know what will become of them; secondly, whether we wish to adopt an easy, sure method of maintaining their independence; and, thirdly, whether we should start them among the nations of the world as a republic. My amendment gives them that opportunity. It can be voted up or voted down. It expresses my own views. I hope we shall not turn these islands loose with no agreement to safeguard their independence.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, there have been four principal arguments used by the proponents of this Philippine measure to support their position. One is that we have bound ourselves by a promise to give the Filipinos their independence. Another is that the Philippine Islands are a financial burden to us. The third is that the Philippine Islands are a military weakness, and the fourth is the sentimental argument that a government constituted as our own should not hold sovereignty over an alien people.

I have heretofore discussed the question of how far we were bound by any promise that has been made in regard to Philippine independence. I now want to discuss for a few minutes the question whether the Philippine Islands are a commercial asset to us or are a financial burden.

I enter into the discussion of that question at this point in the consideration of the bill because there is no statement which has been oftener made by those who favor independence than that the Philippine Islands are costing us annually anywhere from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000.

In discussing this measure I have not heretofore discussed the financial value of those islands, because, although I believe that they are a great commercial benefit to us, I have not felt that under the consideration in which we entered those islands their commercial relation was an important and controlling reason for our conduct on this measure. We are bound by much more important reasons, in my opinion, in regard to our policy in those islands. It was declared in the most formal way by the Congress of the United States that the object of our being there was for the purpose of uplifting and civilizing the Filipino people. If that was our motive and our purpose, it is not consistent with that purpose that we should weigh in the balance on either side our commercial relations to the Philippines; and at this moment I do not advance the argument which I am about to make because I consider it should control or even largely influence the Senate in deciding this legislation. I consider it now because I think the statements which have been frequently made that the islands are a financial burden are entirely erroneous, and it is misleading to let them pass unchallenged.

The first appearance of that argument in a formal statement was in the report which was made by the chairman of the Committee on Insular Affairs in the House in introducing a Philippine bill in the Sixty-third Congress. He there stated that there were 17,370 soldiers in the Philippine Islands, and that the cost of maintaining them was $1,500 a soldier. Of those soldiers, only 12,277 were Americans, the balance, some 5,000, being natives, who were paid and organized on an entirely different basis from the American Army. But without separating the two classes of soldiers, he took this estimate of $1,500, multiplied the entire number of 17,370 by it, and arrived at a result of $26,000,000, which he claimed to be the cost of the military occupation of the islands.

He then assumed that the Philippines must have largely increased the cost of the Navy. Without bothering himself to give any analysis of this he apparently assumed that it was another $25,000,000 or so. Therefore, he arrived at the position that by giving up the Philippine Islands we would save the United States $50,000,000 annually.

One of the first subjects which the Philippine Committee of the Senate took under consideration in their study of conditions in the islands was this question of the annual cost of the islands to the United States. They asked Gen. McIntyre, the head of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, to make a careful report upon that subject. They gave him instructions to make his report as complete and accurate as possible. Gen. McIntyre made such a report, which is on page 666 of the hearings before that committee. It gives the figures in considerable detail, and as all the information that there was at the disposal of anybody was available for Gen. McIntyre on account of his position in control of those islands it must be regarded as the most definite statement we have. His report was that for the last 12 years the average annual expenditures of this Government, caused by the occupation of the islands, had been nine and a half million dollars, and that for the year 1914 the expenditures were $7,700,000.

This amount is as careful an estimate as can be made of the increased cost of the American soldiers that have been in the Philippines, over and above what it would have cost if they were in the United States. It is in some items excessive. For instance, it includes the entire cost of barracks in the Philippines on the ground that if our soldiers are withdrawn that expenditure would be useless. But if these soldiers had been in the United States we would probably have had to make some increased expenditures over what have been made for that purpose at home. The acceptance of this amount as the cost of our Philippine occupation is based on the theory that the size of our Army has not been increased by having these soldiers quartered there. This theory the advocates of a high cost for the Philippines do not accept. To meet their views it is necessary to add to it the cost of maintaining 12,000 soldiers at home. The General Board of the Army have recently figured that the total cost of maintaining a United States soldier, including all overhead expenses and averaging the cost of such soldiers whether at home or abroad, is $1,000 per man. If this Philippine occupation has caused an increase in the Army equal to the number of soldiers quartered there, we must add to Gen. McIntyre's estimate a thousand dollars for each of the 12,000 men in the Philippines, or a total of $12,000,000. This would make the outside possible cost of our military occupation $19,700,000.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that that has been the case. I do not think that there has been any increase in our Army on account of our maintenance of the Philippines. But if there has been, then the amount that would cover that increase is the figure which I have given.

These gentlemen then want to add to those figures something for the maintenance of the Navy, on the ground that we have a larger Navy to-day than we would have had if we had not the care of those islands to look out for. I certainly am not able to give my assent to that proposition. I do not believe that our Navy is any larger to-day than it would have been if we did not have the responsibility of those islands; and certainly in the light of the present movement in this country to very largely increase our Army and to very largely increase our Navy, the policy of preparedness in favor of which the President is now making speeches in different parts of the United States, it does not seem to me that we can claim that either the Army or the Navy was increased on account of our possession of those islands; but if they have been, it is a fortunate result.

Mr. President, this is the amount that we have spent under the conditions as they have existed. If the world had not been in its present disturbed condition and if this movement had not been made for the independence of the islands, which has come about on account of the control of the Government by the Democratic Party, and produced a more or less disturbed condition among the inhabitants of the islands, we would probably not have needed as many as 12,000 soldiers in the islands. I have no doubt, and in this I am simply stating what military men have told me—what Gen. McIntyre has said—that we could easily maintain our power and our sovereignty there with one-half the number of soldiers we have had there in the last few years. As a matter of fact, Spain for several years maintained her sovereignty with from 1,000 to 2,000 soldiers, and England has less than 2,500 in Bermuda and the West Indies.

If that is true, it is manifest, then, that when we look forward to the future the cost of the islands may reasonably be expected to continually diminish.

That, Mr. President, is the cost of the islands as I see it. On the other side of the ledger to balance our expenditures we have the benefit from the commerce of those islands. That commerce has grown enormously. Before we took possession of the islands we had practically no exports to the Philippines. They were $60,000 in 1892, and the highest for the seven years preceding our occupation was $162,000. They have now grown by rapid steps to the enormous total of $28,500,000, and in that $28,500,000 are comprised products of practically every kind of industry in the United States. They are the products of the farm, the products of the manufacture, and the products of the mine. So the returns are widely distributed among our people.

It has occurred to me to try to discover what is the value of $28,500,000 of exports to the United States or to any country. I approach my statement in regard to that question with a great deal of diffidence. I have searched everywhere that I thought the information might be obtained to find some discussion in the literature of economics on the question of the exact commercial value of a given amount of exports. I have had the authorities in the Congressional Library try to find something that bore on this point, but they have not succeeded. I have therefore had to fall back upon my own analysis of that problem.

The views at which I have arrived, however, are fortified by discussion with several Senators whose minds naturally incline to the consideration of that kind of a subject, and I have discussed it with two men outside of Congress who may be regarded as financial experts.

The statements I shall make about it, I will say, are, so far as I know, agreed to by all the gentlemen with whom I have discussed it. The conclusion at which I have arrived is that the value of $28,500,000 of exports to any country is practically $28,500,000.

It is generally admitted in considering that question that the profit of capital in the commercial transaction of selling its products to the Philippine Islands is a benefit to this country. It might perhaps be assumed that that would amount to 6 or 10 per cent of the value of those exports.

But we must also admit that the wages of labor are equally as profitable to a country as the wages of capital. The employment of our labor is just as necessary as to find employment for our capital. Therefore the amounts that are paid to labor, which, on the average, I believe, in this country are about 30 per cent of its products, will also have to be reckoned as a direct benefit.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. LIPPITT. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LEWIS. I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island to evolve from his point of view a thought which I think would be very interesting. I believe he has given as much thought as any Senator on this floor touching the question of labor and products in the Philippine Islands. It is this: The Senator has been in favor of a protective tariff. I take it the Senator is still, for his very copious and complete speeches have shown that he favors the continuance of the protective system to the United States of America. Now, I ask the Senator would he favor the enforcement of a protective system against the island of Hawaii, and, again, would he favor——

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, I shall have to ask the Senator to excuse me.

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator did not catch my query, if he will just let me finish. I take it he would not favor the advancement of a protective tariff against Hawaii in favor of the United States. Therefore I assume he would not as against the Philippine Islands. Therefore I ask the Senator as follows: If we hold the Philippines and the American manufacturer carried his machinery to the Philippine Islands and educated the Filipinos into the method of production, would he not be able to so produce for the islands that he could send goods back, compete with the American labor and overrun the American market by virtue of the cheapness of labor in the Philippines and of our inability to put a tariff against our own possessions?

Mr. LIPPITT. I am going to ask the Senator from Illinois to excuse me from now entering into a discussion of the protective tariff. That is a question on which the Senator very well knows a great many arguments on both sides can be evolved. I am now discussing a definite commercial question which has a bearing, as I think, upon the discussion of the question that is immediately before the Senate. It is rather an involved one, and I should like to continue my analysis of it, if the Senator will allow me not to be diverted at this moment.

Mr. LEWIS. I misapprehended what the Senator was addressing his argument to.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LIPPITT. I do.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Rhode Island to the fact that he is arguing from the standpoint of commercial advantage upon the theory that if these exports from the United States are not made to the Philippine people when they are under our Government they will not be made at all.

Mr. LIPPITT. If the Senator from Colorado will excuse me, I am not arguing it at present on any basis except that of trying to discover what is the proper value to be given to a certain number of dollars of export trade. If I can establish successfully the theory to which I have myself come in regard to that value, we can then discuss the subsidiary questions in connection with it.

First, I should like, if the Senator will allow me, to continue to give my reasons for supposing that the value of exports amounting to $28,000,000 is $28,000,000.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Very well.

Mr. LIPPITT. When I have finished that I will be glad, if the Senator wishes, to discuss with him whether we would retain the full amount of our exports in case we did not own the islands, which I understand is his proposition.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The assumption which the Senator makes is that we will lose all that commerce, whereas my theory is that if you treat those people fairly, if you give them their independence, you will get more from them than you get now.

Mr. LIPPITT. I will discuss that question when I have finished the particular matter I was considering when interrupted.

I had then suggested to the Senate that the profits of capital and wages of labor directly employed in articles exported were a benefit to the exporting country. It is also true, it seems to me, that in addition to this direct employment of capital and labor there is also an indirect employment in the production of articles that serve as the raw materials to the particular products that are exported which is equally beneficial. For instance, if you should take boots and shoes, on the basis of the statements which I have been making, the capital and the labor employed in their manufacture are directly benefited. But boots and shoes are made out of leather. The leather is produced upon the ranches. If there is not a market for those boots and shoes so that we are not able to manufacture in this country the amount that we are exporting, it is manifest that the ranchman and the tanner will not have a market for their leather.

Also, all the transportation interests of this country, which is our largest industry, find additional employment in taking these articles from the farm to the mill and from the manufactory to the coast on their way to the foreign country. In the same way, if you take an article from the farm, if you take wheat or flour, which are also exported to the Philippines in very considerable quantities; if you take lumber, which is exported; if you take mineral oil or crude oil, which is exported, not only is the man who produces that particular article, and the labor involved in it, benefited by the transaction, but all the subsidiary industries that enter into the production of those articles are benefited.

Therefore, analyzing this subject in this way, the conclusion which I have come to in regard to it is that the cash measure of the value of the export trade of any country—not our own in particular, not this particular trade, but of any foreign trade—is substantially 100 per cent of its value. It is quite possible that some one who may investigate this subject and think of it more deeply and longer than I have been able to do will find exceptions to be taken to that statement, but I think they will ultimately come somewhere near that conclusion.

If I am correct in this assumption, we have on the debit side of our Philippine occupation for the year 1914, as a commercial proposition, a cost of $7,700,000 on one theory or $19,700,000 on another theory, and we have to our credit a trade whose value was $28,500,000; which means a financial benefit in one case of $20,800,000 annually or in the other of $8,800,000, either of which is a very comfortable addition to our national resources, and as the years go by will make a substantial return to offset to some extent the large expenditures we have made in the past.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. LIPPITT. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. The only exception I can think of would be raw material that may be imported into the country and the cash from this country that goes out; but, barring that, I can not see but what the Senator is absolutely correct. Taking the importations of raw materials into consideration, I doubt very much whether it could possibly at any time exceed 5 per cent of the amount. So I think the Senator from Rhode Island is perfectly safe in saying that at least 95 per cent of all the exports from this country to the Philippine Islands is of direct benefit to the people of the United States and of the commerce of this country.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Utah for his very clear statement in approval of my views, and the suggestion of the exception which he makes seems to me very well taken. I have no doubt there will be found, on a careful analysis of this subject, other small items to which my theory would not exactly apply, but I think it is substantially correct.

Mr. President, we have another test of the value to a country of foreign exports. From the earliest date in history a market for exports has been persistently sought by the statesmen of every great nation.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING] a few moments ago referred to the trade of Rome. The statement he made is quite true. It was to capture the trade of a rival commercial city that made Rome declare that Carthage must be destroyed. To come down to more recent times, it was to discover new channels for trade to the Indies that sent Columbus across the western ocean and resulted in the discovery of this country; it was to extend her trade that the great mariners of England, Raleigh and Drake, and their associates, scoured the seven seas and planted the flag of England wherever they hoped there would be a profitable market for trade. England in recent years has maintained her navy largely to police the channels of trade between herself and the great colonies which she has established; and it has been the constant flow of wealth from those colonies that has been the chief source of her financial strength and which makes her the commanding figure that she is in the world to-day.

For the benefits of their trade France has taken Algiers and Tunis, and within a few years has gone to the verge of war with Germany for the trade of Morocco. Italy, only a few years ago, went to war with Turkey for the possession of the trade of Tripoli. The export trade which France has with these African colonies amounts to $140,000,000 a year; and so great does she consider its value to be that she maintains 130,000 soldiers in those Provinces to guard it, and makes annual appropriations from her own exchequer of more than $20,000,000 to augment their local revenues.

Within very recent years Japan has taken Korea as a result of a great war, and is developing it for the purpose of benefiting her foreign trade.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. LIPPITT. I yield.

Mr. WEEKS. I think the Senator from Rhode Island is quite sound in the statements he has made and in the conclusions that he is drawing, but perhaps he has overlooked one instance which demonstrates the correctness of his theory. As I recall the figures, in 1895 we had a trade with the island of Madagascar of $500,000. That year France took over the island, and the next year our trade with the island amounted to only $11,000; it was practically eliminated, the trade going to the mother country, France.

Mr. LIPPITT. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts for his very pertinent illustration.

I was just speaking about Korea and Japan taking it over for the purposes of its trade. In 1904, before the Japanese-Russian War, when Japan had no control of that country, the exports of Japan to Korea were $5,880,000; in 1914 those exports had grown to $19,800,000; in other words, in 10 years Japan had increased her trade with Korea by the sum of about $13,000,000. I have not been able to ascertain how many soldiers Japan has in Korea to control that country, but the direct appropriations from the Japanese treasury to the finances of Korea in one year, the year 1913, were $6,175,000; in other words, Japan thought the trade of Korea so valuable that she paid by direct money appropriations, in addition to all the expense that she must be put to on account of her army, a sum that was equal to one-half the total cash value of the increase in exports which she had obtained on account of her occupation of that country.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. LIPPITT. I yield.

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator from Rhode Island justify the occupation of Korea by Japan?

Mr. LIPPITT. I have not discussed that subject. I was merely talking about what she was willing to pay for her trade and trying to illustrate the importance of foreign trade to a nation. I am not entering into any of the moral considerations as to what ought or ought not influence them.

Mr. CUMMINS. I understand, then, the Senator from Rhode Island does not mean that in order to enlarge our trade we ought to enter upon aggressive warfare in countries that can not resist us.

Mr. LIPPITT. I do not know whether or not the Senator from Iowa happened to be here at the time I began my remarks, but I then distinctly stated that I had not considered that the commercial benefit that might come to us from our relations to the Philippines ought to be a controlling influence in the consideration of the question; that I was considering it simply from another standpoint.

Mr. CUMMINS. I know the Senator has given this matter a great deal of thought, and, diverting him a moment to what we may call the moral considerations, I ask, Why should not one nation conquer another in order to acquire the trade of that other or any other advantage that may flow from the conquest? Why should not a strong nation take a weak one, if it believes that it can at once enlarge its trade and confer benefits or advantages upon the captured or conquered people?

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, it has been the practice of the world as far back as history goes to pursue that course.

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator think we ought to continue that course and that the world ought to continue that course?

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Iowa that there is nobody on this floor who more strongly disapproves of war for the purposes he has described, or for other purposes of aggression, than do I; I would much rather join the Senator in a movement to get universal peace than universal trade by conquest.

Mr. CUMMINS. Then, if we were not in possession of the Philippine Islands, the Senator from Rhode Island would not advocate taking possession of them by force?

Mr. LIPPITT. That is, for the purposes of their trade.

Mr. CUMMINS. Or for any purpose?

Mr. LIPPITT. Well, Mr. President, I think that if we were not in possession of the Philippine Islands I should be very glad.

Mr. CUMMINS. Then the Senator—I ask because I want fully to understand his position—is of the opinion that we ought to remain in possession of the Philippines because our accidental or unintended occupation of the islands has created some obligation upon our part that we have not yet fulfilled?

Mr. LIPPITT. That is substantially true. It is not an indefinite obligation, in my opinion, though; it is an obligation that has been distinctly expressed and formulated by the United States Congress and by the President of the United States, acting in his capacity originally as Commander in Chief of the forces of the United States.

Mr. CUMMINS. Just one other question. Would the Senator from Rhode Island favor a representation to the people of the Philippine Islands that we expect they will ultimately become a State in the Union and entitled to all the privileges and rights of citizens of a State in the Union?

Mr. LIPPITT. I would not, Mr. President.

Mr. CUMMINS. Will the Senator from Rhode Island say why not?

Mr. LIPPITT. I would rather not discuss that phase, if the Senator will allow me, just at this minute, because the subject I was discussing is so entirely different from it.

Mr. CUMMINS. I realize that my question is not pertinent to the discussion which the Senator from Rhode Island is now carrying on.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Rhode Island yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. LIPPITT. I yield.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island whether he believes we would have much trade with the Filipino people if we should deny rights to them which they believed belonged to them?

Mr. LIPPITT. I did not quite catch the drift of the Senator's question.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I want to ask the Senator from Rhode Island whether he believes that we would have much trade with the Philippine people if we were to deny to them rights to which they believe they are entitled? The Senator says that he does not believe in ever giving them statehood. If that is the case, and we, under our form of government, recognize that those people are entitled at some time to statehood, is it possible that the Senator thinks that we could have good trade relations with the Philippine people if we were to deny them rights to which they believe they are entitled?

Mr. LIPPITT. In the first place, Mr. President, I do not think the Filipino people consider that they have such rights or would want to exercise those rights if they had them, for the information which I have, and which I believe is correct, about those islands is that while there is a small political party who have made a great outcry in regard to independence, nothing in the world would be so distasteful to them as to have the United States Congress to-day pass a joint resolution that on the 1st day of next July our forces would be withdrawn from those islands and that they would be given this thing about which the Senator from Colorado talks of their wanting so strongly.

Now, let me go further than that in answer to the Senator's question. I have answered the question several times on the floor of the Senate within the last two weeks, and I really am reluctant to continually discuss the same subject and to make the same answer; but the conditions between us and the Philippine people are such that we are responsible for the maintenance of order and for the development of those people. Whether it was right or wrong, we went into the Philippine Islands without the consent of those people, without the consent of the Government of those people, which was then the Kingdom of Spain. We destroyed the Government which had lasted there, and which was substantially satisfactory, for three centuries, and we substituted in place of it the Government of the United States. We can not leave those islands without leaving a stain on the history of this country until we leave them in such a condition that the maintenance of order will be probable, at least, if not certain.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President——

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, I do not want to be further diverted into a discussion of this point; but the question which the Senator from Colorado asked me a few moments ago, if he cares to repeat it, I shall be very glad to take up with him now; that is, the question whether or not we would retain the Philippine commerce, of whose value I have been trying to make some estimate, in case we abandon the government of the islands. I think that was the question which the Senator asked.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; my question was whether or not we should retain that trade if we should refuse to the Filipinos rights which they believe they possess according to our form of government.

Mr. LIPPITT. That was the question the Senator just asked, but not more than 5 or 10 minutes ago he asked me the question whether I thought, if we withdrew our government from the Philippine Islands, we would lose this trade. If the Senator cares to hear an answer to that question now, I will be glad to make it.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No. My position was that the Senator was assuming all the way through, in regard to the benefit that was coming to this country, that we would lose all of that trade if we did not keep the islands, whereas, in my judgment, we shall gain by giving independence to the islands.

Mr. LIPPITT. That was exactly the question which I thought the Senator had asked me, and I will say to the Senator, in reply to that question, that I not only think we would lose the trade of those islands, but I am almost certain we would lose it in such case. The only way we obtain trade with the Philippine Islands at the present time is by reason of the fact that we have a preferential tariff there. Exports from this country go there without being subject to any import duties. Articles exported there by any other nation in the world are subject to a duty. So, we have that advantage so long as we retain the sovereignty of these islands; we have the preference of trade with those people. If they become an independent people, they must stand in the same relation to us that they stand in toward every other nation in the world. They can not make treaties giving special preferences to us in regard to such important matters as the trade of their islands without incurring the enmity of other nations who are not treated equally as well. It is only common sense, therefore, to suppose that our trade would at least be very materially diminished; and I venture to say that if those islands should be taken over by Japan our trade with the Philippines would not only be materially diminished but would be practically destroyed.

Sir, before the Russian-Japanese War we had a very large trade with Manchuria. That trade has almost disappeared. For the commodities formerly sent there by the United States have been substituted the products of Japan. I do not blame her for trying to find a market for the products of her people and her capital. It was for these purposes, I think, largely that she went to war, and she is enjoying those benefits as a result of the victory she won.

The fact is, Mr. President, in regard to the trade of the Philippine Islands that not only has it mounted in a very few years from nothing to the sum of $28,500,000—which is a very considerable sum of money—but the trade of that country has only been scratched. The Philippines have most abundant resources, as testified to by many people who have examined into that subject.

In the short period of five years, I think, we have increased our export trade to the Philippines from $10,000,000 to $28,500,000, and it is a very reasonable supposition that in another 15 years, if the present relations between us and the Philippine Islands continue, we might have an export trade of $50,000,000 with those islands. I want to say that, in my opinion, the day that we announce that we are going to sever our connection with the Philippines the trade of those islands will be recognized by the statesmen who control the destinies of every other great commercial nation in this world as one of the great prizes open for their attainment. Methods of obtaining it will be a matter of constant discussion in the councils of every nation that wants to expand its commerce, and that includes all the great nations of the world. They will look with the greatest astonishment upon this Nation, which at one minute is discussing the expenditure of $50,000,000 for shipping, to be run, as it is admitted, at a loss, for the purpose of establishing foreign trade, while the next minute it deliberately turns around and abandons a trade which it already has established and the future prospects of which are so fair. Nothing can be more inconsistent than the position Senators on the other side of this Chamber now take in regard to the Philippines and that which they took for two long months a year ago in this Chamber, in connection with another measure, on the ground that they wanted to develop the foreign commerce of the United States.

Mr. President, there is another argument to which I desire to refer, namely, the argument that the possession of the Philippine Islands is a military weakness. I do not believe that it can be successfully denied that our occupation of the Philippines does expose us somewhat to foreign attack. It exposes us to foreign complications exactly in the same way as any part of the three and a half billion dollars—I think that is the figure now—of our exports exposes us to the same thing. We can not as a nation enter into the markets of the world, with our products without also assuming responsibility in regard to them. I think that the Philippines to some extent open us to attack exactly in the same way as the possession of Porto Rico does, as our relations with Cuba do, as the Hawaiian Island and Guam expose us to attack; but I do not believe that the American Nation is so timid that it wants to allow that circumstance to exercise a controlling influence in determining its course with regard to this question.

I will say, sir, that in the hearings that were held upon this subject that very question was asked of the Secretary of War, Mr. Garrison. His reply was that from a military standpoint we would be better off without the Philippines. Then he goes on to say:

> For instance, I think any one of Great Britain's outlying islands is a liability to her, because it is more difficult to defend, of course, than home territory and it is at any time likely to require defense. There is not any question about that. That would not alter my notion about what we should do. I think we should do what we promised, and what we have held out, regardless of the consequences to ourselves.

In the remarks which the President of the United States made yesterday he expressed very much the same idea that the Secretary of War expressed a year ago. He said:

> The hard, ugly fact is that it—
>
> Referring to the world—
>
> will heed us only if it is certainly known that our obligations to ourselves and our ideals can and will be met to the utmost and without delay should anyone seek to embarrass their fulfillment or to make it impossible.

That is the position which the head of the party to which Senators on the other side belong has committed himself within 24 hours; it is the position to which the Secretary of War has also committed himself. So that we have the Commander in Chief and his highest military adviser believing that it is not the proper policy of this country to be influenced by the mere threat of a disturbance.

Mr. President, it is a very curious thing in history that the Philippine Islands have been the only nation in the Orient, or so far as I know in any other part of the world, that has been made the subject of two great humanitarian propagandas. Three centuries ago Spain undertook to Christianize the people of those islands. In those days the dissemination of the Christian religion was one of the great and noble purposes of many of the Governments of Europe. I am aware that the methods they employed were not always those that we would approve of to-day, but they, nevertheless, were inspired by a belief that in what they were doing they were advancing the higher purposes of humanity. I want to read to you what the King of Spain, Philip, after whom the islands were named, said in regard to that question. Originally those islands were looked to as possessing abundant supplies of precious metals. I read from Taylor's report upon the Philippine insurrection:

> An early contemporary writer says that when it was reported to the King that the Philippines were not rich in gold and pearls and that their occupation might be a source of expense rather than of profit, he answered, "That is not a matter of moment; I am an instrument of Divine providence; the main thing is the conversion of the kingdom of Luzon, and God has predestined me for that end, having chosen me as King for that purpose, and, since he has intrusted so glorious a work to me and my crown, I shall hold the island of Luzon, even though by so doing I exhaust my treasury.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator who said that?

Mr. LIPPITT. Philip, the King of Spain.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Philip II?

Mr. LIPPITT. Yes; Philip II.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator will permit me, my recollection is that the sort of Christianity that Philip II would carry would not do the Filipinos very much good.

Mr. LIPPITT. I admit that, according to our light, that is true; but nevertheless the introduction of Christianity to the other nations of the world was at that time one of the high and noble objects of the people of Europe. We may or may not approve of it, but the thought that inspired the words of the King of Spain was regarded in that age as one of its ennobling aspirations, and the courageous persistence with which he and his successors continued the work to which they had devoted themselves resulted in entire success. Through all the Orient the only people who are subject to the influences of Christianity are the Filipino people.

Now, it so happens, Mr. President, that after the lapse of three centuries another great nation, the United States, has undertaken in the Philippine Islands to introduce what it believes is one of the worthy purposes of our age. It has undertaken in the most solemn way and by the most binding promises to teach those people the art of self-government.

The King of Spain believed in his mission, and would not be hindered in its fulfillment by fear of the consequences. We have elected to take his place in the control of these people, and declared our purpose to be their elevation, as he believed his was. I do not think we will shine in comparison with Spain if, when we have undertaken such a project, the mere thought that it may involve us in some difficulties is enough to make us abandon our purposes. If our action is controlled by that consideration, I do not think this Nation will be very proud of it in future years.

Mr. President, in considering this question of independence for the Philippines there is one rather important matter that has not been mentioned in the debate upon this subject. It is the question of the financial ability of the Philippines to run their government. The success of a modern government largely depends upon the revenues which are at its disposal. The Philippine people at the best are not a rich people. Their total revenues to-day amount to only $15,000,000—not more than the cost of a single battleship. Of that $15,000,000 not over a million and a half to two millions are available for what we may call public works—for works of permanent benefit in those islands. If the protection of the United States is withdrawn from them, it is manifest that they will have to take into consideration not merely their protection from foreign powers, but, what is more important and will perhaps be more difficult, the maintenance of order within their own territory.

The great service which the United States Government is now rendering them is that it insures domestic tranquillity. If we withdraw our protection, it means that the money they now have available for improvements, and even more, will have to be devoted to the primary purpose of every government—the maintenance of order. It certainly means much heavier taxation. The great service which the United States Government is performing for the Filipino people is in relieving them from that responsibility. The maintenance of order is so fundamental in the duties of every government, and particularly of one whose people are situated as are the Filipinos, that the thought has constantly occurred to me in the consideration of this subject: "What is going to happen to them in case we withdraw our protection?"

All my consideration of my position on this subject ultimately comes back to the consideration of that question: What will be the conditions in those islands, for whose domestic order we are responsible, if they are left to their own resources? In connection with my thought on that subject I want to read the statement that has been made upon it by Mr. Dean Worcester.

Of all the Americans who have had connection with those islands none have been more devoted to the interests of the Filipino people than Mr. Worcester. The work he has done there has received the highest praise from the men who were associated with him in the government; and now that a new régime has come to the islands, his successor in the department of the interior has put into his report of this year praise as pronounced as that of any of the men of his own political faith. No American in the islands has ever had such intimate knowledge of the so-called wild people or un-Christian people of the islands as has Mr. Worcester, and if there is any man who is entitled to speak with authority on the subject of the Filipino people's independence of the United States it is Mr. Worcester.

He was asked what would happen there with complete independence, and his answer is so concise and complete that I desire to take this opportunity of putting it into the RECORD. I am reading from page 302 of the Senate hearings:

> I think that what would happen would be that there would be a quarrel for offices in the first instance; that elections would soon become farcical; that within a comparatively short time the different political factions would become so at outs with each other that armed violations of public order would result; that we would soon have a state of bloodshed and anarchy, and that not very long after complete independence had been granted there would occur aggressions against foreigners owing to the disturbance of the public order; that these aggressions would be of such a nature as to justify foreign intervention and would be made the basis for such intervention; and that the islands would be taken possession of by some foreign power or powers beyond the peradventure of a doubt.

The thought that continually comes to me in regard to the future of these people is, if the picture which is there painted by Mr. Worcester should come true, how much of the responsibility for it would rest upon my shoulders if I voted to-day to give them their independence in what I consider their present unprepared condition?

I am aware that Mr. Worcester is merely a single individual. I am aware that however intimate his connection has been with the islands and with their people, he is as much subject to error as other human beings. But I can not shut my eyes, sir, to the possibility of what he says being true. If it should so happen that after we had withdrawn from the islands such conditions as now prevail in Mexico occurred there—if murder and oppression and robbery of the natives should prevail, such as prevails in Mexico—if murder and robbery and other worse crimes were perpetrated upon the American citizens there, would not the responsibility for that rest upon my shoulders if I voted to-day to take away from those people the protection that America is giving them?

I can not help believing, sir, that the Senators on the other side of this Chamber who are thinking of voting for immediate independence—and I particularly think, sir, of the distinguished Senator from Arkansas, who leads in that policy—ought to think in the most serious manner of the direct, personal responsibility that, in my judgment, will rest upon their shoulders if these unfortunate conditions should prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I do not know that there is any possibility of proceeding much further to-day with the bill. I should like to ask the Senator from Rhode Island, however, whether it is possible to have a unanimous-consent agreement that beginning on Tuesday all speeches shall be limited to 10 minutes?

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, the thought that occurs to me in regard to that question is that there as so many amendments here, and I do not know how many Senators on this side wish to discuss them further; that without consultation with them I should not personally care to express an opinion upon that point. I think, however, that the Senate is very close to a vote on this subject, and I thought perhaps it would seem wise to the Senator in charge of the bill to suggest that the legislative day of Tuesday should be continued for the purpose of arriving at a vote. It seems to me that if the discussion of the bill were then made continuous it would not be long before the discussion would be exhausted, and in the natural course of events a vote would be obtained.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I think it is not possible to secure an adequate attendance here and to get prompt action as long as the time of the Senate is taken with lengthy speeches. Inasmuch as the merits of the whole bill have been discussed by all those who intend to discuss them now, except one or two who can come in to-morrow, it seems to me that if we can limit the speeches to 10 minutes we can get action much more effectively, and we can in that way secure a good attendance of Senators.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, let me suggest to the Senator that I think to-morrow all the long speeches will be concluded. With the exception of one or two Senators, I know of no one who intends to make any lengthy remarks, and they are not very lengthy. Why not leave it until they are through and then see if we can make the agreement to-morrow?

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I can not hear the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I have just suggested to the Senator from Nebraska that he should not try to get an agreement to-day on the question of the length of speeches to be delivered; that to-morrow, no doubt, most of the lengthy speeches will be over, and there will be more Senators in the Chamber than there are at this time. It would be much better to ask for a unanimous-consent agreement at that time than at this late hour of the day.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I should be very glad to see the arrangement made that is suggested by the Senator from Rhode Island, for I have no disposition to delay a vote. I should not be willing, however, to consent to the agreement proposed by the Senator from Nebraska, for I have some observations to make upon an amendment that I will offer in due time. I could not agree to a limitation of debate to 10 minutes until I at least have said what I want to say.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. For that reason, in making my request, I omitted Saturday and Monday, and have phrased it so that it would apply only to Tuesday.

Mr. CUMMINS. But I do not know what will be before the Senate on Saturday and Monday. I do not know how completely other matters may take up the time of the Senate.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I will let the matter go over until to-morrow, then, but I give notice that I shall make the request again.

I now ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that will be done.

INTERNATIONAL HIGH COMMISSION.

Mr. STONE. By the consent of the members of the Committee on Foreign Relations I report back favorably, without amendment, the bill (H. R. 8235) to provide for the maintenance of the United States section of the International High Commission, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the bill be read first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the appointment of the nine delegates by the Secretary of the Treasury to represent the United States in the proceedings of the International High Commission to be held in Buenos Aires, Argentina, during the year 1916, in accordance with the action of the First Pan American Financial Conference held in Washington during the year 1915, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved March 4, 1915, entitled "An act making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916," be, and the same is hereby, approved and confirmed; such delegates shall be known as the United States Section of the International High Commission and shall cooperate with the other sections of the commission in taking action upon the recommendations of the First Pan American Financial Conference; and the President is authorized to fill any vacancies that may occur in the United States section of said international commission.

For the purpose of meeting such actual and necessary expenses on the part of the United States section of the commission as may arise from its work and investigations, or as may be incidental to its attendance at the meeting of the said International High Commission, the sum of $40,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be immediately available, and to remain available until expended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After three minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, January 29, 1916, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 28, 1916.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Louis D. Brandeis, of Massachusetts, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, vice Joseph Rucker Lamar, deceased.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

Charles M. Sleeper, of South Berwick, Me., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 1, with headquarters at Portland, Me., in place of Willis T. Emmons, whose term of office expires by limitation on February 29, 1916.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

INFANTRY ARM.

First Lieut. Wylie T. Conway, Sixth Infantry, to be captain from January 18, 1916, vice Maj. James J. Mayes, judge advocate, who resigned his commission as captain of Infantry only, January 17, 1916.

Second Lieut. James L. Frink, Third Infantry, to be first lieutenant from January 18, 1916, vice First Lieut. Wylie T. Conway, Sixth Infantry, promoted.

Second Lieut. Edmund R. Andrews, Thirteenth Infantry, to be first lieutenant from January 21, 1916, vice First Lieut. Harry S. Malone, Sixteenth Infantry, who died January 20, 1916.

Second Lieut. Joseph A. Rogers, Twentieth Infantry, to be first lieutenant from January 22, 1916, vice First Lieut. Luther Felker, Sixteenth Infantry, retired from active service January 21, 1916.

POSTMASTERS.

COLORADO.

Henry V. Fluke to be postmaster at Eads, Colo. Office became presidential January 1, 1916.

IOWA.

Bezle I. Dee to be postmaster at Akron, Iowa, in place of Minnie A. Muhs, resigned.

MICHIGAN.

Fred O'Melay to be postmaster at Hillsdale, Mich., in place of S. B. Frankhauser. Incumbent's commision expired January 15, 1916.

MISSISSIPPI.

Hubbard E. McClurg to be postmaster at Ruleville, Miss., in place of H. E. McClurg. Incumbent's commission expires February 19, 1916.

NEBRASKA.

Louis H. Deaver to be postmaster at Cody, Nebr. Office became presidential January 1, 1916.

August Dickenman to be postmaster at Talmage, Nebr. Office became presidential January 1, 1916.

George C. Fox to be postmaster at Bayard, Nebr., in place of Francis Wisner, deceased.

Grover C. Hoback to be postmaster at Nehawka, Nebr. Office became presidential January 1, 1916.

H. P. Wilson to be postmaster at Geneva, Nebr., in place of Hattie A. Little. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1915.

NEW YORK.

John G. Armsby to be postmaster at Petersburg, N. Y., in place of Hiram J. Moses. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1915.

Arthur C. Dunning to be postmaster at Yorktown Heights, N. Y., in place of N. I. Mekeel. Incumbent's commission expired December 21, 1915.

Clarence M. Graves to be postmaster at Champlain, N. Y., in place of T. H. Dickinson. Incumbent's commission expires February 7, 1916.

Dennis P. Hayes to be postmaster at Tupper Lake, N. Y., in place of Ernest A. Drew. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1916.

Thomas R. McGinley to be postmaster at Stapleton, N. Y., in place of Frederick Rohde. Incumbent's commission expired May 16, 1915.

Asa G. Neff to be postmaster at Downsville, N. Y., in place of Archie Campbell, resigned.

William G. Phippin to be postmaster at Red Creek, N. Y., in place of Orson F. Jones. Incumbent's commission expired December 21, 1915.

Emil J. Trimpin to be postmaster at Prince Bay, N. Y., in place of U. G. Sprague. Incumbent's commission expires February 1, 1916.

George B. Van Valkenburgh to be postmaster at Catskill, N. Y., in place of Lucius R. Doty. Incumbent's commission expires January 29, 1916.

NORTH CAROLINA.

J. J. Farriss to be postmaster at High Point, N. C., in place of W. G. Bradshaw, deceased.

OHIO.

Frederic C. Betts to be postmaster at Williamsport, Ohio. Office became presidential January 1, 1916.

F. B. Biggert to be postmaster at West Jefferson, Ohio, in place of John H. Bidwell. Incumbent's commission expired January 15, 1916.

O. C. Reynolds to be postmaster at Peebles, Ohio, in place of Cary A. Watts. Incumbent's commission expires February 15, 1916.

Thomas N. Swearingen to be postmaster at Winchester, Ohio, in place of Thomas E. de Bruin. Incumbent's commission expires February 15, 1916.

OKLAHOMA.

Charles M. Hirt to be postmaster at Pawhuska, Okla., in place of W. E. McGuire. Incumbent's commission expires February 1, 1916.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Michael C. Bermingham to be postmaster at Blossburg, Pa., in place of George D. Clark. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1916.

William Critchfield to be postmaster at Herminie, Pa., in place of Shepherd M. Lash, removed.

J. L. Davis to be postmaster at Cherry Tree, Pa., in place of J. G. Sechler. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1916.

PORTO RICO.

Carlos F. Torregrosa to be postmaster at Aguadilla, P. R., in place of C. F. Torregrosa. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1916.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

William L. Blackmon to be postmaster at Kershaw, S. C., in place of Martin Cauthen. Incumbent's commission expires February 21, 1916.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Otto Engelbrecht to be postmaster at Elkton, S. Dak., in place of Henry Heintz. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1915.

TEXAS.

Searcy B. Boulware to be postmaster at Hempstead, Tex., in place of T. O. Taylor. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1915.

WEST VIRGINIA.

G. A. Porter to be postmaster at Kenova, W. Va., in place of Albert G. Holt. Incumbent's commission expired January 15, 1916.

M. J. Wilson to be postmaster at Milton, W. Va., in place of J. A. Justice. Incumbent's commission expired January 15, 1916.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 28, 1916.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS.

To be probational second lieutenants, with rank from January 12, 1916.

Gilbert Dudley Fish.
George Mayo.
Paul Theodore Bock.
Charles Otis Boynton.

Arthur Peter von Deesten.
Edward Nelson Whitney.

POSTMASTERS.

MINNESOTA.

C. M. Anderson, Baudette.
John A. Timpane, Waterville.

NEW YORK.

Fay W. Amidon, Hilton.
Warren C. Brady, Brushton.
Walter F. Brown, Remsen.
Antoine N. Burton, Keeseville.
Henry J. Griffin, Bombay.
E. J. Hanratta, Watervliet.
Hans C. Hansen, Fishers Island.
Ernest D. Joslin, Voorheesville.
Thomas O'Brien, Carmel.
John W. Rose, Arlington.
George W. Runyon, Spring Valley.
Scott B. Smith, Warrensburg.
Ezra H. Welling, Monroe.

VERMONT.

John L. Welsh, Proctor.

WISCONSIN.

Alois Goebel, Mount Horeb.
J. E. Hennig, Princeton.
Carrie Kautsky, Colby.
Herman Kronschnabl, Dorchester.
John H. Levis, Black River Falls.
F. A. Lonsdorf, Athens.
P. J. Love, Coleman.
Joseph Marx, Hilbert.
Otto J. Melcher, Wantoma.
Frank Mischo, Wabeno.
Andrew J. Osborne, Barron.
Henry Pattison, Durand.
Alfred W. Puchner, Edgar.
George I. Richmond, Lodi.
F. C. Schliesman, Cambria.
W. D. Schultz, Stanley.
Henry R. Schumann, Kohler.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, January 28, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art love, rich in grace, plenteous in mercy, pour out upon us Thy blessing. We confess our ignorance, and pray for wisdom; our weakness, and pray for strength; our selfishness, and pray for nobility of soul, that we may reach the ideals which in our better moments we long for. Increase our faith and confidence in Thee, in ourselves, and in our fellow men, that we may answer conscientiously the call of the now, and pass on at the appointed time, unperturbed. In the spirit of the Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on to-morrow, after the reading of the Journal, I may address the House for 40 minutes on the subject of a tariff commission.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that there are already two speeches set for to-morrow, that of Mr. HENRY, of Texas, for 30 minutes, and that of Mr. Foss, of Illinois, for 40 minutes.

Mr. BORLAND. Subject to the orders already made, of course.

The SPEAKER. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. BORLAND. Forty minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] asks unanimous consent that to-morrow, immediately following the remarks of Mr. Foss, of Illinois, he be permitted to address the House for 40 minutes on the subject of a tariff board or commission. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether the Indian appropriation bill is likely to be in to-day or not.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think it will be in to-day.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Texas expects, then, to go into general debate on it to-morrow?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I have not consulted the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL], the minority leader on our committee, on the subject of whether we will take it up to-morrow or not.

The SPEAKER. This request of the gentleman from Missouri is subject to that.

Mr. MANN. Yes; I so understand; but if we are going into general debate to-morrow it would be better to have the speech made during general debate on the bill.

Mr. BORLAND. If that is agreed upon, all right; but I would like to have the order made now, and we can arrange that later.

Mr. MANN. If we get up the Indian appropriation bill, the gentleman will take his time then?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes. I would be perfectly willing to do that; but, pending that, I would like to have it arranged for now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that both the Post Office appropriation bill and the Indian appropriation bill were ordered to be reported yesterday.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my request be allowed now, pending the determination of the question of general debate on the Indian appropriation bill, which may be arranged for later. I would like to have the order made now as a pending order.

Mr. GARNER rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas rise?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit a request for unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. But before that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] asks unanimous consent that the order be made now to allow him to have 40 minutes after the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] concludes to-morrow, subject to the conditions——

Mr. MANN. He makes that request?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes. If the Indian bill is in the House for general debate, I am willing to take the time then, but I would like to have the order made now anyway.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] asks unanimous consent that the order be made now to allow him 40 minutes to-morrow at the conclusion of the address of Mr. Foss, and if the Indian appropriation bill is taken up he will transfer the order so as to use the time during general debate on that bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] be allowed to address the House for one hour at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that his colleague Mr. DIES be permitted at this time to address the House for one hour. Is there objection?

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is Private Calendar Day and pension bills have the preference. I have talked with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] and with some other Members on the floor who desire to take part in the general debate, including the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY], the ranking member of the committee on the minority side of the House. We have agreed about general debate, and we will submit it to the House all in one proposition, if that is satisfactory to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GARNER. That is satisfactory provided my colleague [Mr. DIES] gets his hour. If the gentleman from Missouri will make his request so that my colleague from Texas will get his hour it will be entirely satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. Let us hear what the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] has to suggest.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar. I do not know what bill will be called up on the Private Calendar, but pending that I will ask unanimous consent that two hours and a half be given to general debate, one hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] and one-half of the remainder to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] and one-half by myself.

Mr. DICKINSON rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. DICKINSON. I rise, Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of asking the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] to withhold his request until I can make a request for unanimous consent.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. I yield, Mr. Speaker, for that purpose.

Mr. DICKINSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a memorandum by Mr. Franklin H. Lane, answering the question, "Why does the Democratic Party deserve the continued confidence of the country?" and showing that the Democratic Party has made good under the administration of President Wilson.

Mr. MANN. I shall not object, Mr. Speaker, but it will take a good many such articles to convince the people of the country. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to printing this essay by Secretary Lane defending the administration?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] will yield to me, I wish to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech made by Mr. Paul Warburg, of the Federal Reserve Board, defending our financial system.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing an article or speech by Mr. Warburg. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by placing in the RECORD an argument in behalf of Federal aid for roads in the public domain.

The SPEAKER. Who wrote it?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The argument is my own and that of a constituent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington asks leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing certain remarks of his own and of other people on the question of the Government furnishing aid for the building of roads.

Mr. MANN. When did we pass the good-roads bill?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. This relates to roads on the public domain, in the forest reserves.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman would have authority under the general leave.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I doubt it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. I should like to modify my request and ask for three hours' general debate—one hour to be occupied by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] and one hour each to be controlled by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] and myself; and inasmuch as the rules would not otherwise permit it, I ask that the general debate be permitted upon any subject and not confined to the bill.

Mr. MANN. As though we were in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union?

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. As though we were in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar, and pending that motion he asks unanimous consent that the general debate be limited to three hours——

Mr. MANN. On the first bill.

The SPEAKER. On the first bill; one hour to go to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES], and the other two hours to be divided equally between the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY].

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, that arrangement will be satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. And that the debate be on any subject that any gentleman desires.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to have the gentleman modify his request so as to give 40 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCCULLOCH].

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. That to be included in the three hours?

Mr. MANN. No; in addition to that.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. In addition to that. I am willing to modify the request to that extent, to make the time 3 hours and 40 minutes, the 40 minutes to go to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCCULLOCH].

The SPEAKER. Then the request is changed to 3 hours and 40 minutes, 1 hour to be used by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES], 40 minutes by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCCULLOCH], and the other 2 hours to be equally divided between the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar, in order under the rule.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] will take the chair. The Chair is informed that the gentleman from New York declines on the ground of the pressure of other public business, and the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER] will take the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House for the purpose of considering bills on the Private Calendar. The Clerk will report the first bill.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. The first bill printed on the calendar is not the one entitled to preference to-day. I ask to call up House bill 10037, the omnibus pension bill.

PENSIONS.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (H. R. 10037) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and twenty-one Members present—a quorum. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] is recognized for one hour.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, this is a time for plain speech, for truthful and candid statement. The question we are called upon to determine is vastly more vital to the American people than the political fortunes of any man or political party. This question rises high above the riot for party advantage and the noisy clamor of men for place and power. It goes to the very foundation of our institutions and affects every man, woman, and child in the Government. The question, briefly stated, is this: Shall the Government of the United States reverse its policy with regard to militarism? Is the danger from without sufficiently great and apparent to justify us in creating a danger within in the form of a large standing Army and a ponderous American Navy? President Wilson told us that it was a nonpartisan question, and I shall treat it as such.

This great Republic was established by the victory of the citizen soldiery of the thirteen Colonies against the standing army of England. In all the hundred and forty years since our independence we have relied upon the citizen to come forward and defend his country in time of peril. He has always responded, and has always borne the flag of victory. Our fathers who founded this free Government and maintained it against every foe were of one mind against a large standing army. Foes from without they had met and vanquished, they had no dread of invasion; but they had learned the lesson of all history that the spirit of liberty, equality, and free government could not live in the military atmosphere. Before we reverse this policy of antimilitarism, under which we have builded so wisely and so wonderfully, let the people be shown the danger from without which is to be met by taking to our bosom the internal danger of an overgrown military and naval establishment.

Those who seek to frighten this Nation into military and naval extravagance have been driven to the absurd and unpatriotic task of belittling the volunteer soldier upon whom we have always relied for the defense of our country in time of war, and discrediting the American Navy, which in gallantry and efficiency is the greatest in the world, and which in point of defensive strength is second only to that of England. In order to bully and stampede the people into the expenditure of vast treasure, they have pictured our country as being hopelessly and helplessly unprepared to meet an enemy.

THE VOLUNTEER SOLDIER.

Mr. Chairman, I shall not take up the time of Congress in defense of the volunteer soldier. His place in history is secure. No war for liberty was ever won without him. As a citizen home builder he erects the State in times of peace, and as the citizen soldier he protects the State in times of war.

Those who seek to build up a large military establishment in times of peace constantly din it in our ears that the great victories of the world have been won by regular soldiers, professional fighters, as it were. The very contrary is true. The great wars of ancient and modern times have been largely, almost entirely, waged by volunteer forces. The early wars of the Greek Republics were waged by volunteer soldiers against the regular soldiers of the Persian Empire, and the victory was with liberty against barbarism and despotism. After the disastrous defeat at Cannæ it was the Roman farmers, volunteer soldiers, who rallied to the standard and finally won the victory.

In the civil war between Charles the first and Parliament the standing army of England was small, but what there was of it was with Charles, and they were most ingloriously defeated at Marston Moor, and driven to hopeless ruin at Naseby.

In our Revolutionary War the struggle for freedom was fought and won solely by volunteer soldiers. Have the advocates of a large standing Army forgotten that the early battles of our Revolutionary struggles—Lexington and Concord Bridge—were won against British regulars by the volunteer farmer soldiers of Massachusetts? Have they never read Emerson's stirring lines?—

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embatti'd farmers stood,
And fired the shot heard round the world.

At the Battle of Bunker Hill the British regular army under Lord Howe was defeated by the Colonial volunteers under Warren, Prescott, and Putnam.

When the British regular army under Burgoyne invaded New York they were thoroughly routed and compelled to surrender to the militia volunteers of New York and New England under command of Gens. Gates, Schuyler, and Arnold.

One of the most decisive battles of the Revolutionary War was that of Kings Mountain. The patriot volunteers routed and destroyed the British forces composed of regular soldiers.

It is well known that the brilliant victories of the French in the early stages of the French Revolution were won by volunteer soldiers against the regular soldiers, the standing armies, of Prussia, Austria, and Russia.

In our own War of 1812 the one decisive victory won by our forces on land was the Battle of New Orleans, when, with an inferior force of militiamen under command of Gen. Andrew Jackson, a militia general, the British regular soldiers were disastrously defeated. The British general was a brother-in-law of Wellington and the British soldiers, of superior numbers, were seasoned troops of the regular army. They were met by inferior numbers of raw militiamen and disastrously defeated.

The 700 Texas soldiers who destroyed the regular army of Santa Ana at San Jacinto and achieved Texas independence were volunteers—farmers, lawyers, doctors, and merchants.

The American soldiers who won the Mexican War of 1847 were volunteers. In a message to Congress at the close of the Mexican War, President Polk recorded his estimate of the citizen soldier and uselessness of a standing army in this country. He said:

One of the most important results of the war into which we were recently forced with a neighboring nation is the demonstration it has afforded of the military strength of our country. Before the late War with Mexico European and other foreign powers entertained imperfect and erroneous views of our physical strength as a Nation and of our ability to prosecute war, and especially a war waged out of our own country. They saw that our standing army on the peace establishment did not exceed 10,000 men. Accustomed themselves to maintain in peace large standing armies for the protection of thrones against their own subjects, as well as against foreign enemies, they had not conceived that it was possible for a nation without such an army well disciplined and of long service to wage war successfully. They held in low repute our militia, and were far from regarding them as an effective force, unless it might be for temporary defensive operations when invaded on our soil. The events of the late War with Mexico have not only undeceived them, but have removed erroneous impressions which prevailed to some extent even among a portion of our own countrymen. That war has demonstrated that upon the breaking out of hostilities not anticipated, and for which no previous preparation had been made, a voluntary army of citizen soldiers equal to veteran troops, and in numbers equal to any emergency, can in a short period be brought into the field. Unlike what would have occurred in any other country, we were under no necessity of resorting to draft or conscriptions. On the contrary, such was the number of volunteers who patriotically tendered their services that the chief difficulty was in making selections and determining who should be disappointed and compelled to remain at home.

The splendid feats of arms of the Civil War were achieved by the volunteer soldiery. At the Battle of Bull Run there was 1,464 soldiers of the Regular Army on the Union side, and they shared in the rout and flight of the Union forces that went down to defeat before the volunteers under Beauregard and Jackson. The victorious Army of the Potomac was a volunteer Army, as was the Army of Northern Virginia. Gen. Joe Hooker, a brave commander of the Army of the Potomac, in his testimony before the committee on the conduct of the war in 1863, said—that the Army of Northern Virginia was never surpassed as an army in ancient or modern times.

There was not a regular soldier in it. The flower of the South was in that body of "incomparable infantry, that array of bright muskets and tattered uniforms, that army which, as Swinton said, "carried the revolt on its bayonets and which in all its vital parts died only with its annihilation at Appomattox." Every soldiers of it was a volunteer.

The most hopeless and desperate charge made on either side during the Civil War was that of Humphrey's division of the Army of the Potomac at Marye Heights, Va. That division was composed exclusively of volunteer soldiers.

What volunteers can accomplish when they are interested in their cause and know for what they fight can be gathered from the history of the Boer War, where the Dutch Burgers of the South African Republics in battle after battle defeated the regular soldiers of the British Army when they were often outnumbered four to one and always more than two to one.

Such, Mr. Chairman, is a brief historical reference to the feats of arms of volunteer soldiers of the past. As long as this Nation is worth dying for men from all the walks of life will rush to the flag in time of war. Our peace soldiers of the standing Army always have been and will continue to be our national police force, who serve their country for a sufficient sum of cash, but they never have been and may never be relied upon to be our reliance in time of war. That sacred duty rests with the volunteer soldier, and we can safely depend upon him.

The advocates of a large standing army have been driven from pillar to post in the vain search for excuses, and some of them have cited the Mexican troubles as a reason. This Mexican excuse for a large army would be treated as humorous if it did not emanate from exalted sources, and even so it must mark and illustrate the very limit to which great men can be driven in the advocacy of an untenable position. President Polk did not experience any difficulty in handling the Mexican situation at a time when our standing army was only 10,000 men. President Grant reduced the standing army to 25,000 men without regard to the disturbances in Mexico, and our Mexican boundary was just the same extent then as now. President Wilson experienced no difficulty in landing the Army at Vera Cruz, and Gen. Funston has repeatedly stated that he did not need or desire a larger force on the Texas border. We have 129,000 trained militia soldiers who are available to the President, under the terms of the Constitution, to enforce the laws, suppress insurrection, and repel invasion. We also have a large force of regular soldiers, some fifteen or twenty thousand, quartered upon the people of the Philippine Islands, which could be used if needed on the Texas-Mexican border. We have in reserve to-day a million modern rifles and 300,000,000 rounds of ammunition, and whenever the President needs men to shoulder these rifles to enforce the law, suppress insurrection, or repel invasion they will come forward as they have always done in every period of our history. Finally, the Mexicans get their supplies of guns and ammunition from the United States, and the President can quickly render them harmless by putting an embargo upon the shipment of arms and ammunition to Mexico.

So much in answer to those who endeavor to teach the American people that a great standing army must be maintained in time of peace to insure the national safety in time of war.

SLANDERERS OF OUR NAVY.

I come now to answer those who feel it incumbent upon them to decry and slander our Navy and coast defenses in furtherance of the campaign to alarm the American people into a reversal of our policy of antimilitarism. Why, let me inquire, do these superheated patriots find it necessary to underrate and libel our means of national defense? The answer is apparent. If our coast defenses and our Navy are what we have built them to be, no foreign enemy can land upon our shores. And unless the American people can be made to believe that the country is in danger they will not burden themselves and endanger the safety of civil supremacy by maintaining in time of peace a large army and colossal navy. This same agitation was in progress a year ago, although it had not assumed the large and violent proportions of the present. Congress was in session, and the committees of both the House and Senate conducted investigations into the state of our defenses. Let it be kept in mind that I am quoting from testimony taken a year ago. We have spent $200,000,000 on our coast defenses in recent years, and in a rigid examination, Gen. Weaver, Chief of Coast Defenses, testified in this hearing a year ago that our fortifications were ample and the most efficient in the world. In summing up his testimony Gen. Weaver says:

I have been a close student of the whole subject, naturally, for a number of years, and I know of no fortifications in the world, so far as my reading, observation, and knowledge goes, that compare favorably in efficiency with ours (p. 77, Hearings before the Fortifications Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee).

Within the past few weeks Gen. Weaver has reiterated his testimony given a year ago.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles, in a statement the other day, testified to the strength and efficiency of our coast fortifications. He said:

Having had much to do with placing and construction of our fortifications and inspecting every one along the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf coasts, as well as having had an opportunity of seeing all the great armies of the world and many of their strongest fortifications, including the Dardanelles, I am prepared to say that our coasts are as well defended as the coasts of any country, with the same class of high-power guns and heavy projectiles, and I have no sympathy for the misrepresentations that have been made in the effect to mislead the public. Our Nation is composed of sovereign citizens who appreciate their independence and realize the difference between their condition and that of the millions of men now mere subjects of some despotism and used as food for powder.

It has been said by the critics of our naval strength that our Navy lacks auxiliary vessels. Admiral Blue, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, in his testimony a year ago said:

I believe I am correct in stating that we have now more auxiliary vessels in the Navy than any other nation maintains in times of peace (p. 40, Hearings before House Naval Affairs Committee).

Another criticism of the Navy, which has appeared in all the eastern papers and many elsewhere, is that our Navy is deficient in submarine strength. Admiral Fletcher, commander of our fleet, testified before the House Naval Affairs Committee, and as to submarines he said:

I should think it would be reasonable precaution to provide a few more submarines, considering our extensive coast line in the Atlantic and in the Pacific. Yet I will say that, compared to other nations, we are well provided with submarines to-day (p. 520).

In a further statement the admiral said:

I think a reasonable increase of submarines, 8 or 10, or something in that vicinity, would be a proper increase.

The Secretary of the Navy, speaking for the administration, had requested Congress to provide eight new submarines. On the heels of Admiral Fletcher's statement that we needed 8 or 10, and Secretary Daniel's request for 8 new submarines, Congress appropriated for 18 submarines, which was 8 or 10 more than Admiral Fletcher said we needed.

In the effort to frighten honest, peace-loving people the statement has been glaringly flung across the headlines that the German submarines would come to our shores, destroy our cities, sink our battleships, and do divers and sundry other frightful things. The fact is that the American Navy contains more than twice as many submarines as the German Navy, and what is more the German submarines could not operate against our coasts, because the Germans have no base of supplies from which to operate them on our coast. Such is the testimony of Admiral Badger, member of the Naval General Board and the predecessor of Admiral Fletcher as commander of the Atlantic Fleet, at page 504 of the hearings.

I have heard the defamers of our Navy say over and over again that our warships were not ready for war, that many of them were in dry dock, many out of commission, and none in prime condition. Asked as to these calumnies, Admiral Fletcher testified as follows:

I would say in an emergency some vessels are ready to-day; some would be ready to-morrow; but I would say that all of them could be ready within a week (p. 561 of the hearings).

And finally, in this testimony which Admiral Fletcher gave before the committee a year ago, he said that—

England is the only nation on earth that has a navy we could not successfully resist.

In a report made recently, Admiral Fletcher tells us that our Navy is 15 per cent stronger now than it was a year ago, and that in accuracy of gunfire it has improved 30 per cent in the past year.

Testifying last year as to the progress of the Navy, Secretary Daniels said:

The Navy program has been upgrade all the time. The Navy is getting better every year. The present Congress gave three dreadnaughts and we have 7,000 more trained men in the Navy than a year ago (p. 597 of the hearings).

Following that testimony of the Secretary, Congress made the largest appropriation for the Navy in the entire history of the country, $150,000,000 being appropriated.

Those who are engaged in the unpatriotic task of underrating the strength of the American Navy should have a care. The people are likely to demand to know how the money has been spent. A reference to the 1916 edition of the Navy Yearbook, page 535, discloses that we have spent more money in recent years on our Navy than has been spent by both Germany and Japan. Those who cry down our naval strength may prove too much.

More money was appropriated for new construction in the Navy in the first two years of President Wilson's administration than was appropriated in the entire four years of Taft or in any four years of Roosevelt, and at this time there is 50 per cent more construction in progress for the Navy than at any period since the Civil War.

We have five times as many officers and men in the Navy to-day as we had at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War.

LET THE TRUTH BE TOLD.

Public opinion must settle this question in the end, and there can be no public opinion of the question until the public know the truth.

The metropolitan newspapers and magazines, with few exceptions, have declined to state both sides of the question. The effort seems to have been to stampede the public into hasty action. Out with the truth. No great question like this can be determined without the facts.

One of the tricks of the organs and advocates of naval waste is to compare the American Navy with the German Navy without advising the country that a part of the German Navy has been destroyed in the present war. For instance, they credit the German Navy with nine armored cruisers, when it is a proven fact that six of these armored cruisers have been destroyed. See Navy Yearbook, page 537.

In a statement compiled at my request by the Bureau of Naval Intelligence on January 5, 1916, it is shown that up to that date the German Navy had lost 82 war vessels. True, these ships were not—with the exception of the Goeben, sold to Turkey—the first-line vessels of the German Navy, but every one of them was valuable war craft and had entered into every calculation as to the comparative strength of the German Navy. This is but one of the many tricks being played upon the public. Volumes would be required to refute them all.

OUR GROWING ARMY.

At the beginning of the Civil War the standing Army consisted of 10,000 men. During the progress of that war it grew to large proportions, but after the close of the war President Grant reduced the Regular Army to 25,000 men, and so it stood until the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. Since this last war the standing Army has been increased, under first one pretext and another, until it now numbers something over 100,000 men. Large increases are proposed at the present session of Congress.

COMPULSORY MILITARY SERVICE.

It has never been possible to recruit the standing Army to its full authorized strength, for the reason that the young men of the country will not go into the Army. Of those who join many become dissatisfied and refuse to serve out their terms of enlistment. The reason for this is manifest. Our country is at peace, and no one feels it to be his patriotic duty to join the Regular Army as a private soldier where the most difficult feats awaiting the private consist in drill and drudgery.

If our boys will not join the Army of their own free will and accord, how is this great Army to be provided? The answer of our Army officers, with one voice, is compulsion. That is what they call universal service. But call it what you will, it means that when an American youth arrives at a certain age, say 18, he is compelled to join the Army, in time of peace. That system exists in every nation of Europe, excepting England, and has existed for a great period of time. Without compulsory military service no nation was ever able to maintain a large standing army in time of peace. The United States is no exception to the rule. That is the direction we are headed for, and every young man's mother should begin to ask herself if she is ready to send her son into the uniformed idleness of the standing Army. In Europe, even in peace times, it is said that every laborer has a soldier on his back, because, after all, some one must feed and clothe all these soldiers. Are our farmers, laborers, men in all the walks of life, ready to increase their burdens by taking each a soldier upon his back?

Our fathers were afraid of the influence and effect of a standing army. They dreaded the military spirit. Among the standard works upon free government may be mentioned De Tocqueville's Democracy in America. He was a profound student of government in the Old World, and in about 1845 he came to America to study our system. Would you like to know what he thought and said of this question? Here are some pertinent quotations from his writings. They contain food for thought. De Tocqueville, in his standard work, Democracy in America, which has been quoted from and approved in every country where the people aspire to free government, makes the following significant references to military men and the military spirit:

All men of military genius are fond of centralization, which increases their strength; and all men of centralizing genius are fond of war, which compels nations to combine all their powers in the hands of the government.

Among democratic nations, the man who becomes an officer severs all the ties which bound him to civil life; he leaves it forever; he has no interest to resume it. His true country is the army, since he owes all he has to the rank he has attained in it; he therefore follows the fortunes of the army, rises or sinks with it, and henceforward directs all his hopes to that quarter only. As the wants of an officer are distinct from those of the country, he may perhaps ardently desire war or labor to bring about a revolution, at the very moment the nation is most desirous of stability and peace.

After all, and in spite of all precautions, a large army amid a democratic people will always be a source of great danger; the most effectual means of diminishing that danger would be to reduce the army, but this is a remedy which all nations have it not in their power to use.

All the ambitious spirits of a democratic army are consequently desirous of war, because war make vacancies and warrants the violation of that law of seniority which is the sole privilege natural to democracy.

A thousand circumstances independent of the will of man concur to facilitate the maintenance of a democratic republic in the United States. The Americans have no neighbors, and consequently they have no great wars or financial crises or inroads or conquests to dread; they require neither great taxes nor great armies nor great generals; and they have nothing to fear from a scourge which is more formidable to republics than all these evils combined, namely, military glory.

It was George Washington in his Farewell Address who said:

Cultivate peace and harmony with all nations. * * * Overgrown military establishments are, under any form of government, inauspicious to liberty, and are to be regarded as particularly hostile to republican liberty.

The wise and prudent Benjamin Franklin supplied this prudent suggestion as to armies:

An army is a devouring monster, and when you have raised it you have, in order to subsist it, not only the fair charges of pay, clothing, provision, arms, and ammunition, with numberless other contingent and just charges to answer and satisfy, but you have all the additional knavish charges of the numerous tribe of contractors to defray, with those of every other dealer who furnishes the articles wanted for your army, and takes advantage of that want to demand exorbitant prices.

Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, offered this substitute for war:

War is not the best engine for us to resort to. Nature has given us one in our commerce which, if properly managed, will be a better instrument for obliging the interested nations of Europe to treat us with justice.

Those who espouse the five-year program do so in the face of the Constitution, which provides that the Congress shall have power—to raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

Mr. Chairman, I have no fault to find with the Republican leader, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], for having changed his mind on this question of military and naval extravagance. A year ago the Republican leader threw the great weight of his opposition against excessive appropriations for these purposes. He then led the fight against the large proposed increase in the naval and military bills. I regret, of course, that he has gone over to the other side; but when a man concludes that his opinions are erroneous it is his duty to change, and I always admire the courage of gentlemen who can stand up and make the manly admission that they have been wrong. It is my opinion that Mr. MANN was right a year ago when he said on the floor of the House, in opposing the increase of appropriations for the Navy:

Now, when we make a reasonable provision for war, that is all we ought to be expected to do. It would be foolish, it seems to me, for any country to spend all its resources in preparing for war and neglect other things which are much more important.

That statement is peculiarly forceful when we take into consideration the fact that at the present time we are spending more than two-thirds of all the revenues of Government upon wars of the past and in preparation for prospective wars. Indeed, we not only spend more money on account of war than any other nation spends in time of peace, but we spend a greater per cent of our revenues for these purposes than any other nation.

Neither do I complain at President Wilson's change of mind in regard to this preparedness question. The President thrilled me with his speech to Congress a year ago, and I applauded his statements to the echo. I regret that I can not applaud all that he now says in opposition to what he then said. Mr. Chairman, it is an easy and a pleasant thing for a Democratic Congressman to stand with the Democratic President and it is difficult and dangerous to oppose him. And yet I can not forget that 300,000 people have placed me upon the watch tower and that I have neither a moral or political right to consult my own convenience or safety in dealing with those vital public questions which affect the well-being of my constituents and my country. I still adhere to those opinions and principles announced by the President a year ago, and while I freely concede his right to change his mind I steadfastly assert my right to keep my opinions, so long as they appear to me to be based upon wisdom. A year ago, in an address to Congress, President Wilson said:

We are at peace with all the world. No one who speaks counsel based on fact and candid interpretation of realities can say that there is reason to fear that from any quarter our independence or integrity of our territory is threatened. * * * We have never had, and while we retain our present principles and ideals we never shall have, a large standing army. * * * The country has been misinformed. We have not been negligent of the national defense. * * * But I turn away from the subject. It is not new. There is no new need to discuss it. We shall not alter our attitude toward it because some amongst us are nervous and excited. * * *

I believed those words of the President were true a year ago, and I have had no occasion to alter my belief.

FROM WHAT SOURCE DOES DANGER THREATEN US?

Every strong nation on earth except the United States is in war to-day. The world has never before witnessed anything to equal the immensity, the horror, the waste, and the devastation of this war. The trenches across France and Russia alone are nearly 2,000 miles in length. Twenty million men are engaged in deadly combat. Three million men have already been killed outright. Many million more are crippled for life. More millions are herded in concentration camps as prisoners of war. Millions of those compelled to live in damp, cold trenches or as prisoners of war will come out of it physically unfit for either war or work. The war has already cost fabulous billions and the nations are mortgaged almost to the limit. And yet we are told that some one or more of those nations meditate war with the powerful United States, the wealthiest and most powerful nation in the world. Could England and her allies go to war with us now? No. They are dependent on us for munitions of war, cotton, wheat, meat, and money. If the allied powers were to go to war with us to-morrow, their case in Europe would at once become hopeless. They know that to be true. We know it. It is so apparent that no thoughtful man can doubt or deny it. But suppose we become involved in war with Germany? Well, suppose the case. Japan has been in war with Germany for nearly two years. Have you heard of German soldiers invading Japan or Japanese soldiers invading Germany? Certainly not. The German Navy is bottled up. Her very ports are blockaded.

If we were now at war with Germany she could not send a single man or a single warship against us. The high seas are completely closed to her. If we were at war with Germany, would we send our Navy to Europe? Certainly not. England, France, and Italy have more than three times the Navy of Germany, and they are unable to get at the German Navy, because it is behind the land batteries and mine fields. Would we send any soldiers over there? Of course not. Japan has sent neither warships nor soldiers. The allies are amply supplied with both. Then, in the event of war with Germany, what would we do? Simply give financial aid to the allies; nothing more. And when the general peace of Europe came we would make terms along with the balance. There would be riots here and there on the part of those who were not in favor of such a war, business and prosperity would suffer, there would be much unemployment, and at the end of it we would be saddled with billions of national debt and higher taxes. Simply that, and nothing more. But when the war in Europe is over, even though we keep out of it, will not Germany immediately thereafter attack us? My answer to that is that no nation is likely ever to attack us without cause, and my hope is that we will always be too sensible of our might, justice, and manhood ever to provoke war with any nation. Germany, along with the balance of the nations at war, is being literally ruined by the war. There is scarcely a home in Germany where the inmates do not mourn the death of a member of the household. The end is not yet. Every day war claims its thousands. The very earth reeks with the decaying bodies of men—married men, single men—the very hope and flower of European manhood.

When this unspeakable cataclysm is over, there will be crêpe on every door knob in Europe. Around every fireside there will be an empty chair. The benches in every public park will be filled with crippled men. Every hospital and insane asylum will be filled with the victims of the carnage. And yet we are told that just as soon as the war is over the survivors will say good-bye to their wives, mothers, sisters, children, or sweethearts and sail for America to begin war all over again. Was ever a more preposterous proposition held up before the American people?

NO INVASION OF THE UNITED STATES.

I am glad the President said in a speech the other day that he took no stock in the statement that our country is in danger of invasion. With that out of the way what is all the scare about? Some of the fright has been produced by the dealers in war munitions, some by sensational journals and magazines, some by the moving-picture campaign, some by Army and Navy officers who want promotion, and some by the Teddy Roosevelts, who are never truly happy unless they can see blood and bellow like a bull at a slaughter pen. The munition makers are reaping a harvest of gold out of manufacturing the instruments of death. They know their business is likely to play out when the European war is over, and they are fertilizing American soil with a view to another harvest.

NO MORE PROFITS IN WAR PREPARATION.

Mr. Chairman, I have always been opposed to Government ownership where it could be avoided, but I am prepared to make an exception in the building of a navy and the manufacture of munitions of war. We will never get rid of the war cry until we take the profits out of making and building for war. Upon the very best authority I am able to state that there are concerns in the United States making a million dollars a day out of the manufacture of war munitions. Bethlehem Steel stock has gone up from almost nothing to $500 a share. So it has been with many of them. Human nature is weak. We must not tempt men. They are prone to praise the bridge that carries them over. They are likely to cry "wolf" for the purpose of inducing us to buy a gun. The profits must come out of this traffic in killing machines, at least in every case where the Government is the purchaser. The Government must make its own instruments of preparedness.

QUIT PROPHESYING WAR.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe we are in danger of war. If our prophets would quit talking war and prophesying war the danger would be even more remote. I have often heard men who ought to know make the statement that President McKinley was pushed into the Spanish-American War by those who were continually talking and prophesying war and seeking political advantage. The American people do not want war. President Wilson has done much to keep us out of it. We are all grateful to him that he has led us along the paths of peace. We owe it to ourselves and to the President to aid him in preserving the peace, and we can best do that by drying up the mouthy jingoes who seem intent upon bringing on a war for others to fight. It often happens that Fido brings on a dog fight which he does not remain to see finished.

OUR POSITION.

None of us oppose preparedness. We all want a strong Navy. We want the Government to go right along in a normal way improving the Navy in the future as in the past. Just now we have $200,000,000 worth of warships appropriated for and under construction. We are willing to go forward in the great work of building up the Navy. We think our fortifications are the best in the world, but if the officers in charge of them will tell us that more men and more powerful guns are needed, we will join in the movement to supply them. But we are not to be swept off our feet by baseless rumor and unsupported clamor for huge additional appropriations. We are not for peace at any price. The safety and honor of the Nation is as dear to us as to those lion-tongued lip warriors who question our courage and patriotism. We simply refuse to be bullied into embarking the Nation into what we feel and believe to be the beginning of militarism.

WHO IS TO PAY THE BILL?

Mr. Chairman, gentlemen in this Chamber say they are in favor of building the greatest Navy in the world, and organizing an Army of a million men, but they become strangely silent when asked about raising the ultimate billions to pay the bill.

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to say to the gentleman from Texas that I favor a tax on incomes to supply any additional sums appropriated for these purposes. Wealth should bear its fair proportion of these burdens.

Mr. DIES. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. QUIN] is right, as he usually is.

Taxation for any purpose levied upon consumption is unfair and unjust. Why should men pay taxes in proportion to what they eat and wear and use? The amount of a man's taxes should correspond to the amount of wealth he owns and not the amount of clothes he wears or food he eats. If we appropriate additional sums for the Army and Navy we should raise the additional revenues by a tax upon wealth, by a graduated inheritance tax, by an increased graduated income tax, to the end that men shall pay taxes upon what they own in proportion to that ownership. Moreover, it is my firm belief that if we will take the profit out of the business of preparing nations to war and lay the taxes upon wealth we will hear less of this cry of "Havoc, let slip the dogs of war."

THE DANGER OF MILITARISM.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion, I wish to warn my colleagues and the country against the military spirit which will inevitably follow in the wake of a large military and naval establishment. The spirit of liberty, fraternity, and equality, those exalted principles upon which our Republic rests, will not long survive a rampant spirit of militarism once we allow the soldier to outrank the citizen. It has been so in all the ages of the world. Once we commit this Government to that fatal folly we can not hope to escape the fate of nations gone before. Let us set our faces against these world-old fallacies as our fathers before us did. These theories which the founders discarded as incompatible with the existence of free government have in all time drenched nations in blood, extinguished liberty and equality, and left mankind no refuge but the sword and the scepter. Have we forgotten the traditions and the history of America? We have reached our present great national stature without a large standing Army. We have won our way to the very mountain top without the danger of its presence. May I render into prose the lines of Taylor and Kipling:

> Have we forgot! Does a Roman lust for war profane our ancient holy things? Are we to trample into dust all the lessons of the past and be stricken with the rabbles of the Kings, the scarlet rage of gun and sword? Have mercy on Thy people, Lord; be with us yet, lest we forget; lest we forget!

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the war in Europe in the field commenced, I believe, a year ago the last of July, 1914, or the 1st of August. It was like a flash of lightning out of the clear sky. There may have been those who actually foresaw what was then actually coming, though it is very easy to prophesy in advance upon either side of a question and then claim that you are right if one of your prophecies comes true. Certainly to this country the war was unexpected. I think also that we generally believed—I know that I did—that it would not last long. Modern wars within the last 50 years, or since we have acquired in the world the modern methods of warfare, usually have not lasted long. We not only hoped, but we believed that it would soon be over. I doubt whether a single Member of this House at that time expected the European war to last as long as a year; yet it is still going on, with more determination on each side now than when it commenced, and, so far as I can see, with no prospect of peace. When two great forces are at war as they are now it is always to the advantage of one side or the other to involve other countries in the struggle.

When the war in Europe broke out I took occasion in a few words in this House to say that there would be many temptations for us to enter the war or to take sides, and that it was our duty always to remember that we were standing for the American people and ought under all circumstances to be and remain strictly neutral, with sympathy on neither side. [Applause.]

I do not know whether I have changed my mind since a year ago or not, though I would not be ashamed to change my mind, because consistency is one of those things which bother me the least. But I do know that the situation in the world has changed in the last year; I do know that the events of the last year have so modified the facts that one may at least realize the truth to-day. The trouble with some of these patriotic, sincere, honest, and misguided lingerers in the past is that they never learn an event until it is ancient history. [Applause on the Republican side.] We do not believe, or I do not believe, in a great standing Army. I do not believe in the permanent necessity for a great Navy, but I believe that a country like ours, which refuses to consider the situation of to-day because of the needs of the past, has no real right to remain at peace and will not be able to.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] seems to find great amusement in the fact that I reached certain conclusions apart from the clamor, away in the quiet of garden work. It will be in the quiet of the fields, Mr. Chairman, in the quiet of the homes, in the quiet of the work throughout the country that the patriotic people of the country will make up their minds, will determine the course which we will pursue; and if the gentleman from Texas has a garden and will return to its quiet and think up to date, instead of living in the past, there may be hope even for him. Mr. Chairman, we have a great duty to perform. We must determine, because we are in a position where determination must be made, either that we will do nothing, upon the chance that Providence will protect us or that there is no danger, or that there is a possibility of danger, and if so, then prepare to protect ourselves and our country against it. [Applause on the Republican side.] And while the President of the United States, who ought to know more about the actual situation than any Member of this House, is going around the country to state the case on his side, it were more becoming for the Members of his party in this House to at least await his statement before abusing him as talking "idiotically," as the gentleman from Texas said this morning. [Applause.] If the crisis exists, we must rise to the occasion. If there be no crisis, and we so decide, there is no reason why we should do anything. I am not afraid. The American people are not afraid. They know no fear; but, as reasonable beings, if they are wise, they view the situation as it is, and so viewing it, as it seems to me, with the possibilities of danger which lurk in the future, we will meet the situation, rise to our responsibilities, and put this Nation in a position where it may protect itself against any foreign foe. [Applause.]

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCULLOCH], who has been granted 40 minutes, to consume that time now.

Mr. McCULLOCH. Mr. Chairman, I have introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That the House instruct the Committee on Expenditures in the Post Office Department to investigate at its earliest convenience the purposes and probable results of the proposed motorization of the rural mail service.

I was led to introduce this resolution because of the complaints which had been made to me by patrons of rural mail routes in my own district, and because of complaints which have been brought to my attention by Members of Congress from the State of Ohio on this side of the Chamber protesting against the reorganization of rural mail routes by the introduction of motor-vehicle rural routes in the State of Ohio. The complaints have been so numerous, so frequent, and so vigorous that with the assistance and cooperation of the minority members of the Ohio delegation I have attempted a careful investigation of the general situation in regard to the Rural Free Delivery Service in my district and the State of Ohio, and especially the effect of the introduction of motor-vehicle routes upon the efficiency of the service. I have also given some attention to the probable reasons for the change from horse-drawn vehicles to motor vehicles.

The mail service, urban and rural, is the most important service the Government renders the people. The rural mail service has brought the rural communities in immediate touch with the cities and has been a good thing, not only for the farmers and residents of rural communities but for the country at large. The farmer receiving daily mail service is able to keep in touch with what is going on in the world. He becomes thoroughly informed through his daily newspaper as to current events. He is able to familiarize himself with the market quotations on his produce, the things he has to sell, and the things he has to buy. I am sure, from my investigations, that the rural service is appreciated by the farmers and the residents of rural communities. Any policy, therefore, which will in the slightest degree reduce the efficiency of this service, especially on the claim of economy, will meet with prompt and vigorous resentment from them.

The development of the rural service has of necessity been gradual. Road conditions have had a great deal to do with preventing the service from being made complete; but every action of Congress and every policy of the Post Office Department as it relates to this service should be progressive and inaugurated with a view to extending the service, and no action should be taken or any policy inaugurated that will in the slightest degree curtail the service. Mail should be delivered daily to every rural family at the nearest point on the highway on which they live, and the service should be extended with that end in view. I am opposed to the mile rule or the half-mile rule or any other rule which requires patrons to go for their mail beyond the nearest point on their highway. If the service is to be complete, as it should be, everyone should be treated alike, and the way to treat all alike, the road conditions permitting, is to serve everybody daily at the nearest point on the highway on which they live.

On June 3, 1915, I received a letter from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General in which he stated that he was engaged in a "readjustment of the Rural Delivery Service in several States of the country where uneconomical conditions prevail."

After receiving this letter I attended meetings of the rural carriers in every county of my district, questioned them in regard to the service, and requested through newspapers information from patrons generally in regard to the rural mail service in the sixteenth congressional district. My investigations developed the fact that by a number of minor extensions of the service in the sixteenth congressional district the service would be made entirely satisfactory to the public, and, in view of the fact that the changes required to make the service satisfactory were few, I became convinced that by the addition of a few more carriers and with very little additional expense the service in the sixteenth congressional district could be made very near complete and entirely satisfactory.

I was very particular to observe in my trips through the district and in my conversations with rural carriers the kind of men who are rendering this service for the Government, and I was impressed with the fact that they are for the most part high-grade men, interested in the welfare of the service; that they take great interest in their work and are willing to go out of their way to make the rural-mail service on their routes satisfactory. In the sixteenth congressional district and throughout the State of Ohio the rural carriers are organized, and hold frequent meetings where the discussions are open, and there is an exchange of views and experiences which can not but be beneficial, not only to the carriers themselves, but to the service at large. In this connection, however, I desire to say that I noted one thing, and that was a feeling of uncertainty on the part of rural carriers as to the attitude of the department at Washington in regard to them and the future of their service. At that time I felt strongly that this was wrong; that there should be a better understanding between the carriers and the department. All will agree that strict discipline should be maintained in order that the best possible service may be rendered by post-office employees, yet at the same time the employees should feel that if they do render satisfactory service that such service will be appreciated by the department.

MOTORIZING OF ROUTES.

Some time in November, 1915, there appeared in one of our local newspapers an announcement that the rural routes in Stark County would be motorized, and that an examination would be held for the purpose of providing an eligible list from which appointments would be made. I wrote the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General a letter under date of November 27, advising him that in my judgment any attempt to establish motor routes generally in the sixteenth congressional district would prove very unsatisfactory and unsuccessful, and would create a great deal of dissatisfaction among the patrons, because the road conditions at this time in my district are such as to make motor routes impractical for more than a few months in the year. Motor routes may be practical some time in the future, but they are not practical in my district now.

In reply to that letter I received a letter from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General in which he states that the department did not have under consideration at that time a revision of the service in the counties of my district.

The rumors of changes in the service still being persistent in my district, I called on the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General in person and he informed me that there were changes contemplated, and that he would write me about them. A few days later I received a letter from him in which he informed me that the department proposed a reorganization of the rural-delivery service in Stark County—my district—effective April 1, 1916, and I quote the following from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General's letter:

In Stark County there are in operation at the present time 53 rural routes, aggregating 1,279.2 miles, costing $62,976 per annum. Under the revision there will be 39 horse-vehicle routes, aggregating 1,069.3 miles, and 4 motor-vehicle routes, involving 218.9 miles; this combined service costing $53,664 per annum. Not only will a greater mileage be covered and a saving of $9,312 per annum be effected, but service will be extended to 82 families not now supplied. It may be stated that in order to admit an arrangement which will reach these 82 families, it will be necessary for 64 of the patrons to move their boxes a short distance, but very few roads have been omitted, and in no case has a route been withdrawn from a highway where it is apparent that a hardship would be imposed.

It is apparent from my correspondence with the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General that the dominant purpose of the department is to economize, and on the face of the statement of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General himself, 64 of the patrons on the routes affected in Stark County will be compelled to move their boxes, and that a number of highways have been omitted that have been heretofore covered, so this amounts to a curtailment of service, at least to the extent that I have mentioned. The fact that he claims that 82 families who are not now supplied will be supplied under the new arrangement does not justify, in my judgment, the changes of the mail boxes of 64 patrons, and the omitting of highways heretofore covered.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes.

Mr. BURKE. In corroboration of the gentleman's statement I desire to say that the department undertook to revise and consolidate the rural routes in my district, consisting of six counties, and by doing so it was proposed to throw out of employment 21 carriers. They added new accommodations for 302 families but discommoded 304 families who had had the mail delivered at their doors since the rural carrier system was first established. I protested vigorously against any such reform and economy at the expense of efficiency.

Mr. McCULLOCH. An extension of the service should contemplate the service to all of these people at the nearest point on the highway on which they live. If there were no other purposes in this change than to economize, I would still be opposed to any economy that in the slightest degree reduces the efficiency of the service or curtails it. The Government should not economize in that way. Such economy is false economy and I do not believe the people will stand, neither ought they to stand, for a curtailment of their mail service under any claim that a few dollars are being saved to the Government by so doing. There are other ways of economizing without taking away from the people the direct benefits that result from adequate mail service. I am opposed to the readjustment of rural mail routes by motorization of rural routes in the sixteenth district of Ohio, and throughout the State of Ohio, as being carried on by the department, for the following reasons—and my views in this connection have the approval of every Member of Congress from Ohio on this side of the Chamber:

First. Because the road conditions in the sixteenth district and the State of Ohio generally are such as to make motor service, except on a few highways, impractical for more than a few months of the year. I favor motor routes where they are practical, but the 50 or 60 mile routes the department is inaugurating are only practical where year-round service is possible, and year-round service is only possible where roads are improved. The question is entirely one of roads, and the roads in the sixteenth district and the State of Ohio generally are not sufficiently improved for year-round automobile service. Some of them, even under the most favorable conditions, do not permit automobile travel except for a few months in the year.

There can be no doubt that automobile rural routes will come. It is only a question of time. When you build a house, you build the foundation first—not the roof—and improvements of roads is the foundation of automobile mail service, and it should not be attempted except on improved roads. I voted for the Shackleford good-roads bill passed by the House some days ago, because I believe in Federal aid for good roads, and I stand ready to support any other bill which has for its purpose the improvement of roads; but I am opposed to the Post Office Department experimenting in the sixteenth district and the State of Ohio with impractical schemes to the detriment of farmers and rural communities under the guise of effecting economy.

The department, according to information I have received personally from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General himself, has worked out a scheme of combination service—motor service part of the year, with an auxiliary arrangement for other vehicle service when the roads are bad. They establish a 50 or 60 mile motor route over roads that are improved and roads that are unimproved, and by what they call an "auxiliary service" they expect to take care of the mail service on these 50 or 60 mile routes when the roads are bad. This scheme has proven to be unsatisfactory and impractical in almost every place where it has been tried, and it has been tried in a number of different States. The reason for the failure of this plan should be apparent to everyone. The motor vehicle may do the work satisfactorily on a 50 or 60 mile route when the roads are good, but when the roads are bad it is impossible to use motor vehicles over the unimproved roads of the route.

Under the plan of the department when the roads are bad the carrier may employ a substitute, but it is impossible to apportion the motor route between the two men so as to render efficient service, for the reason that motor service for the most part covers a continuous route for its entire length, and to divide such a route so that the regular carrier will start out in one direction and the substitute or auxiliary carrier in the other direction so as to cover the entire route would necessitate the retrace of, in most instances, the full portion covered by each man. Thus if the route is a 50-mile route, such an arrangement involves actual travel of 50 or more miles daily for both the regular carrier and his assistant, which is a physical impossibility with a horse-drawn vehicle, and where it has been attempted has brought about complaints and dissatisfaction, to which I will hereafter refer.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Has there been any motor carrier or carriage in the gentleman's district up to date, so that he could ascertain whether it could be done as the Fourth Assistant indicates?

Mr. McCULLOCH. No; there has been no route put into operation in my district.

Mr. FESS. If the gentleman will permit me to say it, there has been in my own district, and we have fairly good roads, and there has been considerable complaint upon the ground that it can not possibly be effective, even with the shorter route. I have a letter to that effect since yesterday.

Mr. McCULLOCH. That seems to be the general impression and that seems to be the result in half a dozen States throughout this country where they have attempted to inaugurate and put in force this motor-vehicle service.

Mr. KELLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do.

Mr. KELLEY. Does the gentleman know whether or not this new policy which has been inaugurated in some States has been abandoned and a return made to the old system?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do not know that to be true, although I have heard rumors that the department may take such action.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I think it has been stated here that one of the States—for example, Georgia——

Mr. McCULLOCH. It may be.

Mr. FESS (continuing). Has had some modification.

Mr. McCULLOCH. I might say to the gentleman, however, that the purpose of this resolution and the purpose of my remarks to-day and the reason for the interest of the Ohio delegation is that we hope to save the State of Ohio from the distressing experience that has been gone through by the people of other States, and that is why we are taking up this matter now.

Mr. SWEET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I will.

Mr. SWEET. Has the gentleman ever asked for any inspectors in his district?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I have taken the matter up with the department and I have protested against the change. I have been advised they are going to go through with it.

The test of the efficiency of such a route is when the roads are bad, and it is when the roads are bad and the farmers are confined to their homes by inclement weather that they desire regular mail service most.

I am informed that when it was determined to motorize the rural service that postmasters were requested to send in maps on which they noted improved roads and unimproved roads which were in fair condition in the counties where the reorganizations were to be made. The postmasters were requested to furnish the department information as to how many months in the year, in their opinion, the unimproved roads on the maps would be fit for motor service, and the postmasters made their guesses as to how many months in the year the unimproved roads would be passable by a motor vehicle. It was pointed out to me by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General that some of the unimproved roads in Stark County were regarded by postmasters as being available for motor service for as many as nine months a year. Of course the postmasters were not in a position to say what the seasons might be. One season might be very wet and roads be impassable by motor vehicle for a much greater length of time than in another year, so that the opinions of the postmasters, to say the least, were only guesses.

With this information, which in some instances, as I understand, was supplemented by reports of inspectors, the department at Washington worked out on paper these motor routes, and in order to keep them on improved highways and unimproved highways which the postmasters thought would be available for motor service for the most months of the year, they were compelled to and did cut off all other highways, and the patrons on the highways which were cut off will be compelled to come up to the paved roads or the unimproved highways which in the opinion of the postmasters will stand motor service or go to town for their mail.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do.

Mr. FESS. Do I understand that the plan that the gentleman has suggested is to unite two of the routes now where horses are used and make one route, and then only employ a motor in the months of good weather and the horses in the months of bad weather?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Well, that is practically correct.

Mr. FESS. Now, take these roads or take the roads in my county, and, as I say, we have fairly good roads, and it is known as a good county road; how many months in the year, in the gentleman's judgment, could a motor be used to deliver the mail regularly?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I think that depends upon the year. Now, in some years, when the seasons are wet, they could not use a motor vehicle for as long a time as they could when it is a dry season, but I would say not to exceed on the average seven months.

Mr. FESS. Well, now——

Mr. McCULLOCH. I think our postmasters in Stark County report some unimproved roads that they claim can be used for nine months, but I think that is too long a time.

Mr. FESS. Suppose that a man who has a route would employ a substitute. Is there any time in the year when the motor could not make any part of that route? That is, would he have to have a horse in addition to the motor?

Mr. McCULLOCH. He certainly would, or else he would have to hire one, or his substitute would have to have one, because there would be months in the year when the motor vehicle could not cover the entire route. He may go over a paved or improved road with a motor vehicle all the time, but he could not go over the unimproved roads all the time.

Mr. FESS. Where does the economy come in if a man who is owning a motor has to own a horse and vehicle and either employ another man or own two horses?

Mr. McCULLOCH. The only place where the economy would come in is that they are attempting to throw the burden on the carrier who can not carry the burden. And I will present a letter during the course of my remarks which shows conclusively that no man can meet these requirements and will not meet them.

Mr. FESS. What is the effect on the service?

Mr. McCULLOCH. A demoralization of the service, absolutely.

Mr. FESS. That is what will happen in my county.

Mr. McCULLOCH. For instance, suppose the route is between Washington and Baltimore. The carrier on his regular route would circuit around and reach Baltimore. After he reaches Baltimore, he would come back on the other side or down a paved road. Now, when the roads are bad he must employ a man to work, say, the unimproved highways, and he works the paved roads. He gets to Baltimore, and so does the other carrier, but they have both got to come back to Washington. So they both have to retrace, and if it is a 50-mile route these two men have to travel 100 miles, because you can not work out a motor route that is not circuitous; it has got to be that way.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do.

Mr. FESS. When I was before the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General on this same matter he told me that the routes that he had in view were not passable the year round. He drew before me a map and he said, "Here is your highway map, and these are marked macadam roads," and you could not tell the difference between a bad and a good road, whether one had been built and worn out, while they are marked macadam roads. How much information can the Post Office Department get down here with simple maps and take that as their guide?

Mr. McCULLOCH. They can not get sufficient information to make the service as it ought to be, and it will result, as it has resulted everywhere, disastrously.

Mr. FESS. With that as their guide, it certainly means nothing, does it?

Mr. McCULLOCH. It does not mean anything, except an unsatisfactory service.

Mr. FESS. It does not in reference to the map he showed me of my own county, because I have been over the roads, and yet they are marked macadam, while they are not passable throughout the bad months of the year.

Mr. McCULLOCH. In other words, the motor service is a silk-stocking service, only available for the patron on the paved roads or the unimproved roads, as designated, and the patron who is not so fortunately situated is either cut off or required to go a long distance for his mail.

The motor service has also resulted in a process of consolidation which has changed in a large number of instances the mailing address of patrons. The farmer residing near a town where his business affairs are conducted suddenly finds himself getting his mail over a route originating at a town miles away, with the resultant confusion and unsatisfactory service which result from such a general tearing up of the mail service.

Second. I am opposed to this reorganization because wherever the attempt has been made to inaugurate this motor service it has proven a failure, and I have introduced this resolution in order that the people of the State of Ohio may be saved from the distressing experiences that the people of the States of Georgia, Iowa, Michigan, California, Illinois, Indiana, Florida, Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts have gone through by reason of this so-called readjustment of the rural mail service.

Mr. FESS. May I ask if you have made an investigation which justifies you in making the statement in reference to these various States?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I have examined newspaper reports from every State that I have named, which reports indicate that the service is unsatisfactory. Of course, that is as far as my investigation has gone. But every report that I have had, and I have had a report from every State that I have named, every newspaper report that I have before me or have seen has been one condemning the service.

Mr. DOWELL. I would like to suggest that the gentleman include the service also in the State of Iowa, where it has been practically destroyed by the system inaugurated by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.

Mr. McCULLOCH. I have named Iowa.

And before I state my third reason for being opposed to this readjustment I desire to insert in the RECORD some of the editorials and newspaper articles which have been brought to my attention in regard to motor service in other States.

[Articles appear at close of the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio.]

The complaints and protests set out in the articles which I have inserted in the RECORD should convince Congress, if not the department, that, at least, this is a subject or matter that should be investigated by Congress, and we trust—and I speak for the Republican Members of Congress from Ohio—that an investigation will result in the department's desisting from inaugurating a policy in the State of Ohio which has been so disastrous in other States.

My third reason for opposing this motorization of rural mail routes is that the direct charge has been made that it is being done for political purposes, and that the civil service is being prostituted for the purpose of serving the political purposes of those who are inaugurating this motor service. I am not in a position to say that this is true, and I do not make the charge; but the fact that the charge has been repeatedly made, which is a most serious charge, should result in an investigation.

The purpose of the civil service is to divorce the Government service to which it applies from politics and political manipulations. Every person who has advocated reform in the civil service in recent years has pointed to the Post Office Department as an example of efficiency in the public service resulting from civil service; and whatever of efficiency has resulted from the civil service as it has been applied in the Post Office Department has resulted because of the fact that it has been strictly free from politics, as it should be. The civil service, in order to be an effective instrument in developing efficiency in the public service, must be, like Cæsar's wife, above reproach; and just as soon as it is used for political purposes it should be abandoned and we should return to the spoils system, so that political manipulating may be done in the open and not under cover.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman yield to his colleague?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I will.

Mr. SWITZER. In this proposed motorization scheme how are the carriers to be selected? Are they going to transfer from the present rural horse-carrier service, or is there to be a new eligible list?

Mr. McCULLOCH. According to the ruling of the department it must be a new eligible list. They are not, according to the rule of the department, subject to transfer.

Mr. SWITZER. What becomes of the two present rural carriers that are substituted for?

Mr. McCULLOCH. They are notified that their services are no longer required, and they are out of the service unless they take an examination; and they are not subject to transfer to motor routes, as I shall hereafter set out clearly.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Certainly.

Mr. ASHBROOK. I would like to say to my colleague that I believe the Members on the Democratic side of the House are just as much opposed to this innovation as the Members on the Republican side. I do not hear so much on your side as I do on my own side, but I do know that Democrats are complaining very bitterly against this innovation, and I want to say that I am personally opposed to it.

Mr. McCULLOCH. I want to say in that connection that my purpose in referring to it is that there may be an investigation. This charge has been made, and the fact that it has been made should interest the gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber in having it investigated, and I shall so state a little further on in my remarks.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman permit me another interruption?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield to his colleague?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I presume that the speaker had me in mind when he spoke about the charge as to its being for political purposes. I made that charge openly before the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. It is in the hearings, and I stated my reasons why. While it is true the Democratic Members from the rural districts, I think, are generally opposed to this, yet I can not find any reason why the department is pushing it and in the manner which they have done it, except that it is creating vacancies, and the vacancies are not to be filled by transfer. That is a very suspicious thing to me, and I made the charge, and I am willing to stand by what I said.

Mr. McCULLOCH. In connection with the remarks of my colleague from Ohio [Mr. FESS] I desire to say that I did have in mind his direct charge, but I also had in mind the fact that in going through these newspaper articles, almost without exception, that charge is made; and I had in mind, further, the situation in Georgia. I knew what had been done there. The Democrats are affected. Now, if this is the situation——

Mr. ASHBROOK. And they are complaining.

Mr. McCULLOCH. They are complaining; and since that is so, the gentlemen on the other side ought to join with us in getting the investigation.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield to a question?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I will.

Mr. DOWELL. Is it not true that the carriers that have been relieved from the service by reason of extending the routes are not transferred to the service on another route, and that they are let out of employment?

Mr. McCULLOCH. They are notified that their services are no longer required. That is true of cases that came under my observation.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Did you ever find any authority for these changes being made?

Mr. McCULLOCH. To what changes do you refer?

Mr. HULL of Iowa. The rural-route changes made by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General. Where did he find his authority to make them?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I suppose he is acting under the direction of the Postmaster General.

Mr. HULL of Iowa. Where does the Postmaster General find his authority?

Mr. McCULLOCH. It is my understanding that the Postmaster General has supervision of the mail service, rural and otherwise, and so I suppose he is the responsible party. And he is a part of this administration. It is directly traceable to his department. There is no doubt about that, if that is what the gentleman meant.

The charge has been made that the motorization of rural routes is a scheme on the part of certain officials in the Post Office Department to eliminate from the service certain employees because of their political affiliations. I could not conceive that this could be true, but in the face of persistent rumors and charges and the presentation of facts tending to substantiate the truth of the statement that had been made in this regard and because it is of importance to the people of this country to have the civil service free from politics and political manipulations, would seem to me to be reason sufficient for Congress to investigate the charges. The gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber as well as the Post Office Department should welcome such an investigation if there is no truth in the charge. In this connection I desire to call to the attention of the House one case which is one of many instances that have been brought to my attention, and which tends to substantiate to my mind this charge, that readjustments in the Postal Service are being used as a cloak to cover political manipulations.

I do not say that they are all being made that way. It may be that the postmasters are responsible. It may be that it is not the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and then it may be his policy. But where there is so much smoke there must be some fire, and there is a lot of smoke. A rural carrier in my district who has been in the service some 10 or 12 years, who is now in the prime of life, who has an enviable record as a rural carrier, who is physically and mentally able to discharge his duties efficiently, and who, by reason of his years of experience, has become a high-class, efficient employee in the Government service, came to my office in Canton and advised me that he had been notified that after a certain date his services would no longer be required as rural carrier as his route would be absorbed by a motor route. He then asked that he be transferred to the motor route, and he was informed that under the ruling of the department the rural carriers using horse-drawn vehicles were not eligible to be transferred to motor-vehicle routes. It seemed to me inconceivable that a carrier who had spent 12 years in the service, who had a perfect official record, who was in every way competent to discharge his duties, so far as the prompt and accurate delivery of the mail was concerned, should be eligible to render this service if he rode in a horse-drawn vehicle, but would be ineligible if he rode in a motor vehicle, and I wrote the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General a letter, of which the following is a copy, requesting information on this subject:

HON. JAMES I. BLAKSLEE,
Fourth Assistant Postmaster General,
Post Office Department, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Inclosed copy of article that appeared in the Canton Repository to-day in regard to the changes that are contemplated in the rural districts of Stark County. I am informed that the notice being sent out of the examination referred to in the article states that present carriers are not eligible for this appointment unless they take examination. I am at a loss to understand why it is required that carriers in the service should take an examination in order to be eligible for this appointment.

As I understand, persons in the civil service should be eligible for transfer, and it would seem to me that this is one of the cases where persons in the service should be eligible for transfer. I would therefore appreciate very much information in regard to the proposed changes and advice as to the reason for requiring present carriers to take the examination rather than permitting them to be eligible for transfer.

Assuring you that I shall appreciate information on this subject, I am,
Sincerely, yours,

ROSCOE C. McCULLOCH.

He answered me under date of November 17, as follows:

HON. ROSCOE C. McCULLOCH,
Canton, Ohio.

MY DEAR MR. McCULLOCH: In reply to your inquiry of November 11, I beg to state that inasmuch as the compensation allowed for service over a motor-vehicle route is materially greater than that allowed for service over a route permitting delivery otherwise than by motor vehicle, the department considers it inadvisable to fill the position of carrier for motor-vehicle route by transfer.

Attention is invited to the statement in section 2 of the inclosed pamphlet to the effect that it is not permissible under the competitive requirements of the law to make certification from a register to a position with a materially higher compensation than that for which such register was established.

Rural carriers desiring to become eligible for appointment as carriers for motor-vehicle routes should take the prescribed examination. A carrier on the ordinary rural route who desires to take the examination for the motor-vehicle route is given a credit of one-half per cent of each year's service up to six years, and the maximum age limit is waived in his behalf.

Sincerely, yours,

J. K. PICKETT,
Acting Fourth Assistant Postmaster General.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman again yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to his colleague?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do.

Mr. FESS. Does that mean that promotion is never except when you promote from one type to a similar type, and from one salary to an equal salary? You can not promote from a lower salary to a higher salary, or you can not promote from a horse-drawn vehicle to a motor vehicle? It that the ruling?

Mr. McCULLOCH. You can not transfer from a horse-drawn vehicle route to a motor-vehicle route.

Mr. FESS. And you can not be promoted from the lower position to a higher. Is that it?

Mr. McCULLOCH. It must be, if the position of running a motor route is higher than running a horse-drawn vehicle route.

Mr. FESS. Would that be a promotion, to go from one thing to another, if there is no change whatever in the salary or otherwise?

Mr. McCULLOCH. It would be an increase in the salary, more than anything else, apparently, but it would be the same service. But it is not a real increase of salary. Under the rulings and requirements it is more expensive for a carrier to operate a motor route than to operate his regular route, so that it is not an increase of compensation at all, and will not so work out.

Mr. FESS. If you will allow me to interrupt you on the other point you made, I will state that the instruction given in our country was that the examination was to be held at 9 o'clock, and the request was made that it be not placed at the time the rural carriers should be employed, because they could not take it. The inference is that by not changing it there is no use for the rural carriers to take the examination, because they are not eligible to the new places. In other words, you thereby proceed to create one vacancy, and that vacancy to be filled by somebody not yet in the service.

Mr. McCULLOCH. That seems to be the situation.

After I received this letter I sent for the carrier, and I asked him his politics, and he told me he is a Republican. This one case alone convinced me that there is something deeper in the minds of those who, under the name of reorganization, are tearing the mail service in this country to pieces than a desire either to economize or to increase the efficiency of the service. So far as I am personally concerned, since we have the civil service and not the spoils system, I do not care whether the majority of rural carriers in this country are Republicans or Democrats, so long as they render efficient service and keep out of politics, and I do not believe that the people of this country are willing that under the guise of the civil service, and using it as a cloak, politics should be played in the mail service.

Even though the department should be acquitted of the charge that politics are being played in reorganizing this service, it is apparent that their work has been a failure, that the reorganization is impractical, has resulted in dissatisfied patrons, and in the end will not effect the economy they claim.

I desire to read a letter which was brought to my attention this week in regard to the impracticability of the reorganization:

———, Ohio, January 23, 1916.

I just want to bother you a little, as I do not expect to have occasion to do so much oftener. Yesterday, January 22, was the "big day" for some "poor devils" in ——— County, Ohio, for it was yesterday that over 150 applicants crowded the examining headquarters in ———, Ohio, in order that they might have a chance to drop some money for this country of ours, or more especially the Post Office part of it. Strange, however, was the fact that there were only 3 carriers (rural) and 1 substitute out of the 30 carriers in our county that took the examination. Two of these three carriers have never driven a motor car, and hence do not know what they are about; and the third one is an old soldier from our office who at first told us he would not have the job, but finally changed his mind, thinking that he and his son, who is the substitute, can operate the route between them for a while at least, if either secures the appointment. I have been in the service for 14 years and have traveled nearly every road in ——— County, and I think I know what is possible and what is not. I have used an auto for four years and have used three different machines; that is, I wore them out. I am still driving a Ford, but I ought not to do so, as the roads are nearly gone. For the lack of proper attention our roads are getting worse instead of better. For instance, a road that was regarded as a good country road a few years ago is to-day a very poor road, because being close to a large city automobiles and trucks of every weight and description are pounding them to pieces, and when they become impassable, then they stay away; but the rural carrier must go just the same. I understand that two routes are to operate from ———, Ohio, one 52 miles and the other 56 miles; one pays $1,708 and the other $1,604; both are 11-month routes. It can not be done and done right. Nothing but a Ford will even approach the job, and figuring from past experience and expense I find that the cost is going to be almost prohibitive. Gasoline here sells for 21 cents per gallon. It will take at least 6 gallons for a 50-mile route, which will amount to $31.50 per month for gasoline. Lubricating oil will cost $7.50 per month at least, which totals $39 per month. Tires for a Ford will cost $45 for each 30 days, which will bring it up to $84 per month for expense. Our roads will wear out a Ford truck on a 50-mile-a-day trip in about a year, or allow for a two-year life of the machine and figure the original cost at $500 and allow a fair price for it at the end of two years, say, $200, will mean a depreciating cost of $12 or more per month, thus bringing the total cost per month up to $96. Deduct that from $142, which is the highest salary to be paid here, will leave $46 per month from which a substitute must be paid and horses must be hired and auto repairs must be made, as I have made no allowance for repairs in my previous figures. I can not see how a man can clear $1 per day, so I don't want the job. So much for expense item. Now, about the work. The schedule for our routes here provides to leave office at 8 a. m., return at 3 p. m. I have been wondering who is going to do all the "real work" and when it is going to be done. Let me explain: Our mail can not reach here before 7.30 a. m. because of traction facilities, and it takes me from 7.30 to 9 a. m. to work my mail for a 26-mile route, as I have the smallest route from point of business done and number of boxes served. All the other carriers (and there are four of us here) handle from 12,000 to 15,000 pieces per month, while I handle about 10,000 pieces only, hence it takes longer to work their route and will be impossible to get started before 10.30 or 11 a. m. My best running time on the route with an auto is three hours, and I have a local reputation for speeding. The other carrier take from four and one-half to five and one-half hours running time, hence I figure the best any man can do is eight hours for running time, and at the same time serve from 350 to 500 families and transact the business necessary. On bad days, such as rain, mud, or snow, it will take from 9 to 10 hours "on the road," hence the carriers stand to work from 10 to 14 hours per day. These figures are for good luck daily, and do not allow for tire or motor trouble. I am in a way connected with the local Ford agency, and teach the operation, care, and construction of this and other machines to purchasers after my hours of labor on the route, and I think I nearly know the strong parts and the weak parts of any machine that can be operated on a rural route nearly as well as any post-office inspector or post-office official. Therefore, with these facts before me and with the knowledge of the work, I decline to submit myself to such an unholy sacrifice. Unless the Post Office Committee makes it possible to retain the present routes, "we are out of it."

The following statement is along the same line:

Actual experience of a mail carrier with automobile over a route of 24 miles demonstrates that no more than 7½ miles per hour can be made and good service rendered; at the above rate it will require seven hours to cover a 50-mile route. This gives him one hour to "stick" his mail.

Experience with an automobile over a 24-mile route for 10 consecutive months (the machine being new at the beginning of the 10 months) resulted in the expense of $300 for tires, gasoline, oils, and repairs, besides a depreciation in value of the machine estimated at $200. Expense for horse-drawn vehicle for the remaining two months (for bad road conditions) was $60, making a total of $560 for a 24-mile route; double this trip and it will be $1,120, following the above average for 24 miles.

The following article from the Evening Item, of Richmond, Ind., dated January 21, 1916, gives some idea of the situation in one community where the motor service is being tried:

"WE WANT LITTLE RED WAGON BACK," SLOGAN—ALL OVER WAYNE COUNTY FARMERS ARE CIRCULATING PETITIONS AND VOICING INDIGNANT PROTEST AGAINST NEW MOTORIZED MAIL-DELIVERY SYSTEM—DEMAND A RETURN TO OLD SYSTEM, UNDER WHICH THEY GOT THEIR MAIL ON TIME AND EVERY DAY.

"We want the little red wagon back" is the most popular song in Wayne County to-day. It is the slogan of the organized demand by Wayne County farmers for the reestablishment in this county, in as short a time as possible, of the old horse and wagon service, which gave universal satisfaction to the families it served for a decade or more.

The motorized rural route service has been condemned by hundreds of farmers; its ultimate success, as predicted by post-office men, is scoffed at, and only the old service and the strict civil-service conditions under which it was conducted will satisfy the demand that has grown up in this county.

It is confidently believed that unless the farmers of Wayne County get a satisfactory mail service, like that in effect here until this year, there will be a near uprising. The sentiment among the farmers is strong and it is being freely voiced. Petitions are being circulated all over the county, in which farmers are calling for the reestablishment of the old service, and, together with the demands that already have been expressed by scores of farmers and signed petitions, the vote against the motorized service and in favor of the "little red wagon" is rolling up to threatening proportions.

That the policy followed by the Post Office Department in this whole matter has been destructive should be apparent to everybody, and Congress should act to protect the people and insure to them, so far as it is possible to do so, adequate mail service.

In the face of thousands of protests from all over the country I am informed the Post Office Department remains firm in its attitude that its reorganization of the Rural Mail Service shall be carried out. If the department persists in this reorganization scheme, it will be only a matter of time until every district in the country will be affected. If the scheme is impractical, as the overwhelming proof would indicate, it should be stopped. The people are entitled to relief through Congress, and they will look to their Representatives in this body to protect them in their rights.

On behalf, therefore, of the Republican Members of Congress from the State of Ohio I ask that an investigation be made by the proper committee of Congress of this situation to the end that the one direct service which the Government renders the people in the transportation and delivery of their mail shall not be impaired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. McCULLOCH. I do.

Mr. DOWELL. Was the service in the gentleman's district and in the State of Ohio satisfactory and efficient before the proposed change was made?

Mr. McCULLOCH. At the beginning of my remarks I stated that I had made a thorough investigation of the service, and I found that by making a few minor extensions or changes, that would require but little expense, comparatively, the service could be made entirely satisfactory to the public.

Mr. DOWELL. The purpose, then, of the resolution is to secure sufficient evidence and facts to place before the Congress and the department to restore and reinstate the former routes and the former service?

Mr. McCULLOCH. Yes; and such extensions as may be necessary to make the service as complete as possible.

I submit the following as a part of my remarks:

CALIFORNIA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of California was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Sebastopol (Cal.) Times in December.

(2) A further editorial appearing in the same issue of the above publication.

(3) Article appearing under date of December 23 in the San Martin (Cal.) Despatch.

(4) Article appearing under date of November 19 in the Fresno (Cal.) Morning Republican.

(5) Article appearing in a December issue of the Watsonville (Cal.) Daily.

(6) Article appearing under date of July 11 in the Fresno (Cal.) Morning Republican.

(7) Article appearing in the Union Labor Journal, of Bakersfield (Cal.), issue of July 7.

(8) Article appearing in the Bakersfield Echo.

The Sebastopol (Cal.) Times publishes the following news story:

Post Office Inspector Frank Hare arrived yesterday morning in compliance with a request from Postmaster Gallagher to go over the rural route and receive a practical demonstration of what the carrier has to do. He went out with Grant Wren on route 3, as rerouted, the inspector recognizing only the department's new routing which went into effect on the 1st of the month. They left on schedule time and returned at 9.15—three hours and a quarter late. The day was somewhat disagreeable, but the evening was comparatively light. The mail also was much lighter than usual or he would have experienced what it means to come in at 11 o'clock, wet, cold, and hungry after six hours of groping along the roadside in the dense murk of Erebus. As it was, he was quite ready for supper on arrival.

Tuesday morning Postmaster Gallagher took the situation by the horns, feeling that it devolved upon him to get the mail to the patrons, and reestablished the old schedule by sending Arthur P. Sweetnam out on route 4 on his own responsibility. For three days the patrons had the satisfaction of receiving their mail on regular time. With the arrival of the inspector this arrangement was again upset, and what the outcome will be, no doubt, depends on his report. The carriers on routes 1 and 2 returned about the same time as the carrier on route 3. Postmaster Gallagher will insist on his going over all three routes so that he will know exactly what each one has to contend with. Inspector Hare did not state last evening whether he would go out again this morning. He is on the verge of illness, suffering from an attack of grippe, and may conclude that he has seen enough to satisfy him of the impossibility of making the new routes and arriving on the schedule time of 6 o'clock.

In the same issue of the same publication this editorial appeared:

In its attempt to reform the Rural Postal Service the Post Office Department seems to be working on paper theory rather than practical knowledge. The whole country has been thrown into greater or less confusion by the effort to make a standard route instead of a standard service, for it is not alone Sebastopol and Sonoma County that is affected, but every State in the Union.

Officials have sat in their offices and rerouted the entire Rural Mail Service without taking into consideration the character of the country, whether it was mountain, valley, or prairie, and without consideration of roads or climatic conditions. It would seem that with a large force of inspectors at its command, together with every postmaster in the country to draw on for detailed information, the department should have been able to know what it could and what it could not do, but it appears these most reliable and willing sources of information have been wholly ignored.

It is quite possible that retrenchment may be necessary, but it is not to be effected by placing impossible requirements upon the rural carriers. There is grave suspicion that Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakslee is possessed of an upper story of solid ivory instead of a cranium filled with gray matter; but, of course, it would not be the part of wisdom or politeness to make any such diagnosis without a full knowledge of the facts, but he has the symptoms.

In the meantime, while the mail service is badly shot to pieces, the Post Office Department has the doubtful pleasure of being swamped by protests that do not wait to be carried by mail, but go by wire and by wireless.

The patrons of the rural routes out of Sebastopol appreciate the efforts and will stand by Postmaster Gallagher in restoring the former service while laboring with the department for its reestablishment.

The San Martin (Cal.) Dispatch of December 23 says:

After years of struggle with adverse circumstances, San Martin had just emerged into the bright light of prosperity when along comes an order from the Post Office Department stating that on March 1, 1916, the rural service will be discontinued and her rural people hereafter served from Gilroy and Morgan Hill. This order will affect adversely village and country alike. On the extreme end of 50-mile routes from either of the towns above named means rotten service at all times and oftentimes during the winter no service at all, as no carrier can make the 50-mile run between 11 o'clock a. m. and dark over muddy country roads. Ranchers taking daily morning papers will not get them until well toward evening and evening papers about 28 hours after issue, Saturday and Sunday papers the next Monday afternoon. Under present conditions our ranchers call at the San Martin post office and get these papers Saturday evening and Sunday morning. But under the new economic conditions their papers will be either in Morgan Hill or Gilroy, effectually barred by distance. This miserable service will deter settlers from coming here, thus crippling the growth of the town.

Again, taking away the 115 rural families from our local post office will so reduce the receipts of that institution as to eventually lead to its discontinuance, thus leaving the merchants, artisans, real estate dealers, and citizens in general but one uncertain mail per day instead of the four now enjoyed. The railroad commission can prevent railroads from discontinuing a service once established, but the Post Office Department, regardless of destruction to business enterprise, rides roughshod over the vested rights of the people.

The last resort will be the coming election, but an effort should be made to stay this destructive order by a vigorous protest to the department through Representative HAYES and Senator PHELAN. This protest is now in the hands of R. F. Fullington. Sign it and let us, if possible, prevent the threatened calamity.

The Fresno (Cal.) Morning Republican of November 19 says:

Inauguration of the new motor rural-delivery routes for Fresno County has been postponed from December 1 to January 17, according to instructions received in a telegram from the acting Fourth Assistant Postmaster General at Washington, D. C., to Postmaster Earle Hughes yesterday.

Postmaster Hughes has been busy for several weeks making investigations of the proposed routes. He then took up the matter of postponement with the Washington authorities, on the grounds that the installation of the service December 1 would be impracticable.

A few of the rural residents who will not receive their mail until afternoon as result of the new service have complained to Congressman DENVER S. CHURCH. Upon his return to Washington for the next session of Congress, Congressman CHURCH will request the post-office inspectors who have full charge of the arrangement to make a more detailed survey of the field before the system is put into operation.

Postmaster Hughes asked for the postponement for several reasons. The difficulty of putting the scheme into operation at a time when Christmas mails begin to get heavy was one. He also pointed out the impossibility of getting drivers for the routes when the examination is held November 27. The men would not want the routes temporarily, he said. He desired to wait until the eligible register was determined as a result of the civil-service examination.

"Not enough consideration has been given to the planning of these routes," Hughes said yesterday. "Some are too heavy for the 50-mile run. In many places the boxes have not been placed conveniently for the drivers.

"The territory will be increased on all the routes and will be covered by the motor cars for less expense. Ten carriers are now employed from the Fresno office, at a cost of $1,200 a year each, or $12,000 a year, and under the new system 120 miles will be added and the expense will be only $10,500.

"While the arrangements of these routes are wholly in the hands of the post-office officials, and are in no way connected with politics, Congressman CHURCH will ask an investigation to make sure there will be no discriminations. A month and a half will be had to straighten out the kinks after the selection of the carrier is determined."

The following was taken from a recent issue of a Watsonville (Cal.) daily:

The proposed consolidation of the rural post-office routes in this valley and the substitution of automobiles for wagons after January 3 is not meeting with general approval in this valley. The change means that the patrons of the free rural delivery will in some cases not receive their mail until late in the afternoon, and during the winter months it will be still later than in summer before the deliveries are finished. The new routes will mean that the automobiles must cover a radius of from 50 to 60 miles where 20 or 30 miles are now traversed.

In the San Andreas, Calabasas, Larkin Valley, Eureka Canyon, Browns Valley, Carneros, Prunedale, and Hall districts of this valley the roads are not any too good in winter, and while a horse and wagon can plod through the mud with difficulty, yet an automobile will have a still harder job to get through the slush. The new system might work out in a first-class manner in some sections of the State, but those opposed to the change do not believe it will be a success in this valley.

That three motor-vehicle routes will succeed the present five rural routes operating out of the Watsonville post office is the present plan of the United States Post Office Department, according to advices received here in the past few days. The new order will go into effect on January 3 unless further changes are announced, and the ruling means that the present system will be done away with.

The present routes are as follows: No. 1, Green Valley, College Road, and Casserly section; No. 2, Hall district, Elkhorn section, Pajaro; No. 3, San Andreas and Calabasas; No. 4, Carneros and Prunedale; No. 5, Coralitos. The proposed order will combine routes Nos. 1 and 3 into one automobile route, leaving route No. 2 alone for the present, and combine routes Nos. 4 and 5. The present rural-route carriers are Charles Peckham, Henry Trafton, James Cox, L. Mansfield, and E. L. Bradley, and under the new system, while all can take the civil-service examinations for the new positions, yet the new ruling means that at least two of them will be out of employment after January 3.

While the present carriers cover a radius of perhaps 25 miles, the new carriers will travel from 50 to 60 miles. At present the carriers leave the post office at 11.15 o'clock and return from 3 o'clock to 6. Under the new system it is expected that the carriers will not return before 6 o'clock p. m. at the least, and perhaps later.

The Government is extending automobile delivery into the rural sections throughout the country, and the San Joaquin Valley post offices nearly all have automobile carriers where there are two or more rural routes. The objection to the system is, for one thing, that the patrons will not receive their mail until later in the afternoon, especially in the winter months, when the wet roads will prevent any reasonable speed on the part of the automobiles.

While the carriers will cover more territory and have longer hours, yet they will receive no more compensation than the present carriers do. The carriers must also furnish their own automobiles.

Here is an echo from California—dissatisfaction—the same old story. It is taken from the Fresno (Cal.) Morning Republican of July 11:

Efforts of Postmaster C. M. Burnett to have changes made in the two new rural routes which are to replace the three existing routes on August 2 have failed up to the present. There is considerable dissatisfaction over the routing of the new delivery service. Route A will serve practically the same territory now served by routes 1 and 2. Route B will take in the territory southwest of Tulare, running within a mile of Waukena and through Corcoran, which towns have post offices. At the same time Oakland Colony, Bliss Colony, and the Woodville country, all tributary to Tulare, are not provided with a rural mail service, although they have been making an effort to get rural delivery for some time. It is believed here that the new routes will eventually be changed to correct this condition.

The Union Labor Journal, of Bakersfield, Cal., prints the following editorial in its issue of July 17—it bears the caption "To the scrap heap":

An earnest protest is being made by the rural carriers from the Bakersfield post office at the order recently issued consolidating the six rural routes from this office into three. The consolidated routes will require the use of an automobile which must be furnished by the carrier. The approximate length of the routes will be 50 miles.

One feature of the new order which gives Uncle Sam the appearance of being a none too considerate employer is that three men will be thrown into the scrap heap of the jobless, and for some of them it means that the door of opportunity to another job will be a rather difficult passage for them to negotiate.

The change will result in a saving of $2,700 per year in the pay of rural carriers from this office. Considering such saving it would seem that Uncle Sam could have afforded to pay for the service a wage commensurate with the pay of other laborers in this section. A wage of $125 per month for the man and the use and upkeep of an automobile would be rather inviting to a great many employers in Bakersfield.

Some of the men will refuse to take the examination for the consolidated jobs because of the smallness of the pay and the amount of labor which the jobs will carry. It is claimed by some of the carriers that it will require 12 hours' work per day to serve some of the routes. Whether such will be true or not we are unable to say, but fears have been expressed by patrons on some of the routes that the quality of service which has been enjoyed in the past can not be maintained when two routes are made into one.

The R. F. D. News, the rural carriers' organ, places the responsibility for the order largely upon the postmasters in offices where the change is being made. This paper attaches much significance in connection with the change to a confidential form letter issued to the postmasters from the office of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and attaches responsibility to postmasters who recommended such change.

It is said that the Bakersfield office and the Modesto office are the only offices in the San Joaquin Valley where consolidation of routes and establishing of auto service has thus been ordered.

It has been proposed that a petition to Congressman CHURCH be prepared, and that he be asked to use his best endeavors to the end that the order be rescinded.

The idea has ordinarily prevailed that a person who has taken a civil-service examination and has been admitted to the postal service has a job as long as he is able to render adequate service to the Post Office Department. This idea is evidently in error, and civil-service employees in the Postal Service are eligible to consignment to the scrap heap just as are other workmen.

It hardly seems fair to those men who have served the post office so long and faithfully that they should have no seniority over new men in an opportunity to continue in the service. While they are experienced in the service, the presumption is not well founded that such experience will give them a decided advantage over other applicants. Civil-service examinations are never a perfect test of one's ability to perform certain duties. The range of the examination covers a lot of things which are not so vital, and in some features of a civil-service examination most any high-school boy can discount an older man. Those features of an examination which are primarily academic will be much more easily handled by new applicants than by the old men in the service.

All in all, it does not seem that the treatment being given to the rural carriers from the post office is just what we have always expected from Uncle Sam as an employer.

About the same time, the Morning Echo, another Bakersfield (Cal.) newspaper, announced that the consolidation of routes there had been postponed for a month, because the postmaster could obtatin no one to serve the auto routes temporarily, reference to which was made in last week's issue of the News. The Echo says, in part:

The proposed consolidation of six routes into three routes to be served with auto delivery, the carriers keeping up the automobiles as well as supplying their own machines, is shied at by the old carriers, and several persons who have investigated the work gave up after going over the routes a few times.

Each route will cover 50 miles and the number of pieces of mail matter handled averages from 1,200 to 1,500 a day. On each route about 450 different patrons are served.

It is figured that the handling of the mail before taking it out onto the route will require three hours each day. Then in the delivery at least 250 stops daily will be required. That will means cranking a Ford 250 times on each trip, and it is estimated that one minute will be required for each stop and start.

The stopping and starting and the assembling of the mail, it is said, will take up seven hours a day and carriers as well as auto men say that it will be impossible to drive the 50 miles in less than three hours' running time, making the round trip, from beginning to end, take up at least 10 hours, barring accidents of every kind and delays.

Auto men who have figured on the rural route service state that at $125 a month the compensation is so small that a man had better go into the jitney service rather than work for the Government. It is figured that the gasoline, oil, breakages, and depreciation, even for Fords, will amount to 5 cents a mile, bringing the daily cost up to about $3 and affording less than $30 a month for the arduous work and responsibility.

FLORIDA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Florida was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing July 10 in the Miami (Fla.) Daily Metropolis.

(2) Article appearing in the Miami Metropolis of July 15.

On July 10 the Miami (Fla.) Daily Metropolis published the following news story:

Instructions from the Postmaster General have been received by Postmaster F. M. Brown calling for the discontinuance of the two rural routes running out of Miami on August 1 and the formation at that time of one 50-mile rural route. It is the idea of the department to have this single route handle all of the rural service in the vicinity of Miami.

It is believed that the order will bring forth a great deal of criticism and opposition from people who depend upon the rural routes for their postal service. At the present time two routes run out of Miami, one of them, No. 1 route, caring for the people south of the river to Coconut Grove and west of the Everglades, and No. 2 route serving the people north of the river to Lemon City and west to the Everglades. No. 1 route covers 25.85 miles and No. 2 route 25.4 miles.

The order calls for the formation of one 50-mile route known as No. A route. The same order was issued to post offices in different parts of the country in an effort to cut down operating expenses. In some places the order will probably prove a benefit where little mail is carried by the rural routes, but in communities like Miami it will not only work a hardship on the rural carriers but will also prevent an adequate service.

During the winter the two rural carriers in Miami have about all they can do to handle their routes, as the mail is exceptionally heavy. People well acquainted with the conditions say that it will be practically impossible for one man to handle the service. The order provides a salary of $1,500 for the one carrier, an increase of $300 over the salary received by the two carriers now. However, the one carrier will have to cover the 50-mile route and extend proper service to the people. If he finds it impossible for him to do this alone it will be necessary for him to employ an assistant out of his own pocket.

At the present time the people residing on the beach are circulating a petition to have one of the rural routes cover the beach territory. The people over there have no mail service at present, and if the rural routes were sent that way it would add about 14 miles on the trip. Under the late order it would be impossible for the extra mileage to be added onto the new route.

The condition of the rural route service at the present time would permit adding enough mileage to each of the two routes to make them 50-mile routes, according to people who know the conditions.

The Miami (Fla.) Metropolis of July 15 says, editorially:

Strange as it may appear, the Post Office Department is the only enterprise in Dade County which seems to have taken a backward step.

The recent order, effective August 2, consolidating two vehicle delivery routes into one is not giving the unalloyed pleasure here that the Government officials may have expected.

Still there is nothing to do but take the medicine, express an opinion, and watch results. When Uncle Sam writes his prescriptions they are generally imperative, even though hardships are entailed.

The R. F. D. News of July 10, giving a list of 45 motor vehicle routes in effect August 2, includes Miami, and shows that on the one route designated here 547 families will be served with their mail daily. There are more families on this route than any one in the entire list, which includes cities in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Oklahoma, and Texas. For instance, at Rankin, Okla., 172 families are on the route. At Cestos, Okla., 139 families are served. The nearest approach to the Miami route in point of number of families served is Arlington, Ga., which has 490. Most of the cities in the list have on their route about half of the number of families assigned to the Miami route.

This discrimination is so palpable that further comparison seems unnecessary. Miami is a growing city, and its size can not even be approximated by consulting antedeluvian Government census reports. Cities like Miami double and treble in population between census enumerations.

GEORGIA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Georgia was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing July 14 in the Daily Tifton Gazette, published at Tifton, Ga.

(2) Article appearing in an August issue of the Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

(3) Article appearing in a November issue of the Tifton (Ga.) Gazette.

(4) Article appearing in the Cleveland (Ga.) Courier of November 19.

(5) Article appearing in the Ochlochnee (Ga.) Daily Times Enterprise.

(6) Article appearing in a December issue of the Gainesville (Ga.) News.

(7) Article appearing in a December issue of the Macon (Ga.) Daily Telegraph.

(8) Article appearing in an issue of the Savannah (Ga.) Daily News.

(9) Article appearing in the Dahlonega (Ga.) Echo.

The Daily Tifton Gazette, published at Tifton, Ga., in its edition of July 14 prints the following editorial—it speaks for itself:

The people living on rural free delivery mail routes the country over should make a concerted and emphatic protest against the inauguration of the motor-car service.

This pretends to be an improvement on the service; in reality it tends toward inefficiency. It is but another step in the process of cheapening the Postal Service generally and in cutting down the expenditure for rural free delivery in particular.

The system has been heralded all over the country as an extension of the Rural Free Delivery Service and an improvement thereto. It was extensively advertised as such in specials from Washington, published broadcast over the country by newspapers who thought the Post Office Department was dealing fairly with them and that the statements were true. On the contrary, the change is an effort to cut down by one-third the money paid to rural free delivery mail carriers.

As to how the change will work, take the one proposed for Tifton as an illustration: Here the purpose is to abolish two rural free delivery routes and substitute for them one motor route. The two rural routes have a total mileage of a little over 50 miles and the proposed motor route the same. The two rural carriers would receive after July 1, $1,200 each, or a total of $2,400 for the two. The carrier on the motor route is to be paid $1,608. This would be a saving (in one sense of the word) to the department of $800, and that is the sole reason for the change; the service has nothing to do with it.

As it happens, both of these carriers have motor cars. They leave the Tifton post office at 8 a. m. and usually return by noon, so that practically all the people on their routes receive their mail by 12 o'clock. Under the change proposed the motor carrier would go over one of the routes in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Half of the people to be served would have their mail delayed six hours.

Perhaps the idea of the department is that this would make no material difference; but it would. At least one firm doing an extensive business by mail, located 4 miles out of town, has advised that the delay would make it necessary for it to withdraw patronage from the rural route and send in to the post office for its mail.

The change would make the service inefficient, because delays would be unavoidable. No automobile yet made can be expected to run 50 miles a day 6 days in the week and over 300 days in the year without mishap. In event of breakdown the carrier can not leave his mail, so must wait for the chance passer-by. Accidents and consequent delay in the service would be unavoidable.

The time that must be made in order to cover both routes would be conducive to mistakes, probably result in mail being carried by, and otherwise delay the service. The man who drives the motor can not read and assort his mail while doing so. He must do that during stops. With a long route to serve and a big volume of mail to handle, mistakes would necessarily be more frequent.

Both carriers who will be thrown out of positions here have spent many years in the Rural Free Delivery Service. One of them has carried on his route for nearly a decade and has given the best years of his life to the work. Both have zealously endeavored to perfect their service, with the reasonable expectation of being advanced on merit. Now they are thrown out of their positions and must take their chances with new competitors if they desire to apply for the motor route. Thus two good men and faithful employees are injured, while the man who gets the route will not be benefited, for the pay is pitifully small when the cost of motor and upkeep is considered.

If retrenchment was necessary, the effort at parsinonious cutting of salaries would have something to defend it. But last year and the year before the Post Office Department not only paid expenses but turned a surplus into the Treasury. In other words, it took money from the pockets of the people which it did not need and applied it to defraying other expenses of the Government. This was neither legal nor right.

What is being done at Tifton will soon be done at nearly every post office where there are two or more Rural Free Delivery routes. The time for the people to protest, and especially for the people in the rural districts to protest, against this infringement of their rights is now.

The Daily Tifton (Ga.) Gazette in August published an editorial on the Postal Service saying, in part:

If we may judge from the local conditions, a wave of indignation is rising over the entire country that promises to reach high tide about the time that Congress meets. Whether he deserves it or not, Mr. Burleson has made himself very unpopular in many quarters and especially with the rural voters. Unless he is taken to account for the conduct of his department before the elections next year, the Democratic Party will feel effects of the resentment against him at the polls.

The Tifton (Ga.) Gazette in a recent issue says:

In every well-regulated business concern, seniority, experience, and faithful service command preference and promotion. In fact, many manufacturers, heads of wholesale or retail establishments, railroads, and others have adopted or are adopting systems of promotion based on service and efficiency, and systems of old-age pensions for employees no longer able to work. At one time there was a strong movement for an old-age pension system in the Government service. Under the civil-service law, seniority and efficiency should insure advancement.

Is the Rural Free Delivery Service to be the one branch of the Government service in which the idea on which the civil-service law was conceived is to be set at naught and in which seniority, efficiency, and faithfulness count for nothing?

The rural free delivery mail carriers are probably closer to the great mass of the American people than the employees of any other branch of Government service. Contrary to nearly every other branch, they must not only be prepared for their work by education or training, but must furnish a certain amount of equipment, either mechanical or in live stock, with which to carry on their work. They are also more exposed to the weather with its consequences, and the demands of the service preclude any other employment.

In the revolution of the Rural Mail Service incident to the substitution of long motor routes for the short rural free delivery mail routes, many carriers are being thrown out of employment. In this, so far as we have been able to learn, no regard has been paid to seniority, efficiency, or past faithful service. In many cases men who have served the Government for a decade or more and who have grown so old in the service that no other avocation is readily open to them; who have invested a sum in equipment for their work sufficient to pay for a modest home; these have been summarily dismissed with short notice and no time to prepare themselves for something else, as if they had been unfaithful, incompetent, or dishonest.

Can a Government as great and as rich as ours afford to do this thing? Can such a wrong be perpetrated in the name of progress and economy? Surely the fair-minded American people will not be parties to such an unfair and unjust proceeding?

In the name of justice and fair dealing the rural free delivery carrier is entitled to some assurance that he can hold his job so long as he is faithful and efficient. The civil-service law was enacted to give such assurance to Government employees.

The Cleveland (Ga.) Courier of November 19 says:

Jackson County is to have a general shake-up in Rural Mail Service through the introduction of the substitution of automobiles to take the place of horses. For some time the department has been endeavoring to better conditions and improve the service by combining two routes or more into one and serving the whole by auto. This is impossible on any and all roads in north Georgia that we have ever seen.

We have ever stood for the improvement of the mail service, and if we believed that automobile service could permanently be put into use we would push it with all our might. But there have been many days even during the past summer that automobile service was practically impossible over the roads we have. If the people want better service, or before service can be given them, we must have roads that will not get knee-deep in mud every time it comes a few days rain.

If certain sections of the country have sufficient roads and patronage to warrant this service, then it should be introduced, and that section less fortunate in ronds, wealth, and population given more consideration than they have received by the present service.

Service which is very much needed in this country has been rejected time and again. For instance, that section in this country known as Etris has been exiled from mail service for several years, and every effort made to improve their convenience to mails have proved futile. Rural service has been rejected two or three times, a proposition to serve them by a loop route has been turned down, a proposed star route to run between Porter Springs and Cleveland, which would have served them, has been declared unwarranted and other propositions have also failed.

We think it the duty of the department to give the people a more equal service without lessening the efficiency of the service rather than to undertake an impossibility to better serve some and leave others without any service.

The Daily Times-Enterprise, of Ochlochanee, Ga., on December 3 printed the following:

The post-office authorities at the local office are working under a decided disadvantage with the attempt of the Post Office Department to combine three rural routes into one and have one man carry it. The task is one that is well-nigh impossible, and the service, as a result of the attempt, has become disorganized, and many kicks are being registered each day because of failure to make the time.

Men have been tried whose experience is of some years, others who are experts at running a car over country roads and know mail service, and others who are inexperienced and willing and anxious to make good. It has been a flat failure, and the several who have tried it can not possibly do the work and come out even on the pay that is given.

The motor route is 65½ miles long and is composed of three routes. The figures or estimates of distance and time necessary for each route are as follows: Route No. 1, 26½ miles; average time, 4 hours and 30 minutes. Route No. 3, 23 miles; average time, 4 hours and 40 minutes. Route No. 6, 17 miles; average time, 3 hours. This gives a total mileage of 65½, total time of 12 hours and 10 minutes. The statements show conclusively that it is not feasible and is bound to result in delays and inconveniences that are very discomforting. One of the men who tried the route took the mail himself on all three routes, and he got back to the city after 7 o'clock. This was in dry weather and when the roads were in good condition.

The price paid for this work is $150 per month, a saving to the department of something like $1,300 per year over the old system. Those served by the mail agree that it is a saving that will completely disorganize the service and disgust competent men who want to enter the work.

The Gainesville (Ga.) News recently printed the following editorial:

The efforts of the Post Office Department to motorize the Rural Free-Delivery Mail Service in this section is impracticable. The condition of our public roads will not permit of motor service throughout the year. When winter rains and freezes come, no automobile can traverse a 50-mile route daily; consequently, we fear that to try to force this service at this time will retard rather than further the Rural Mail Service.

Congressman BELL, in speaking of the matter, has well said:

"It is quite apparent to my mind that the proposed motor service in our section of the country means the beginning of the end of our rural free delivery of mail. Under the present system the rural delivery of mail is the greatest blessing the country has had from the Government in a century. It is plain to any reasonable mind that the motor service can not be performed in our section in the winter season, and the result will be a demoralization of the service and an attempt to change it into the old star-route service.

"If the roads and climate conditions made the proposed service practicable the year round, the people would gladly welcome it. Provisions have been made when motor service can not be performed on the 50-mile routes for the carriers to employ a substitute to convey one-half the route by team, and he can not afford to pay more than $750 per annum, which would not compensate a substitute for the service performed, and, of course, he will resign, as will the carrier himself, and we will then face the demoralizing result of the service proposed.

"As the free delivery of their mail is about all the country people of this section get from the Government, it is hoped that the Post Office Department will abandon its efforts to motorize this service, for the reason that it is impractical and will mean the curtailment, if not abandonment, of this service."

The Macon (Ga.) Daily Telegraph prints this:

The opposition developing toward making the rural free delivery routes throughout the State all automobile delivery is pretty well grounded for the time being. It is hardly time yet for such a change. It is just as important that the farmer get his mail as regularly every day as the city man, but the stipulating that the carrier in the rural sections shall cover their routes by automobile, with twice the distance to cover by virtue of that faster mode of transportation, will not do for a while yet. Somebody is guilty of a great deal of stupidity in the Post Office Department.

It may be granted that in most counties in Georgia for 8 or 9 or even 10 months in the year, in some parts an even 12 months, a man in a light car could cover a great deal more territory than a man with a horse and rig, but no matter what the gain in these good-roads months failure a few days during rainy winter weather and through only temporarily built neighborhood roads washing down so that an automobile could not get through would ruin the whole thing. A horse and rig can get through almost any sort of road in almost any sort of weather; an automobile can not promise that. We are not throwing off on Georgia roads, but there are few States in the Union that can stand up to the test the Post Office Department so egregiously proposes to the certain curtailment and detriment of its own service. In a few years Georgia will be ready for all auto routes, but that time is not now; and the people seem to be expressing themselves quite freely to that effect, too.

The following is taken from a recent issue of the Savannah (Ga.) Daily News:

Serious trouble in delivering mail on motor route A, established on September 1 last, is being experienced by post-office officials, and as a result the patrons at Elyod Heights, Vernon View, White Bluff, the Isle of Hope, and other places must call at the post office for their mail.

The post office yesterday found itself without a carrier for the route after struggling two months to make regular deliveries. It has been impossible to secure a temporary carrier to await the appointment of a permanent carrier.

Route A covers 54 miles, has 500 post-office boxes along the way, and serves over 1,500 people. One trip by automobile is required to be made over the route daily. The position pays a salary of $1,500 a year, but still it is going begging.

Yesterday an official of the post office called on local automobile men, asking them to take the place temporarily. All refused. This is said to have been on account of the high price of gasoline.

When the route was established a temporary carrier was placed in charge, but at the end of the first month he gave it up. The second month had the same result. Monday the officials did succeed in getting the mail delivered in that section. Automobile men claim they can not handle the route and make money. Some time ago a civil-service examination for the position was held, but the results have not yet been announced.

The Dahlonega (Ga.) Echo of a few days ago says editorially:

If the proposed plan of the Post Office Department combining two rural free delivery routes into one, to be carried by auto, is put into effect in our section, we see the finish of R. F. D. We also see some fat officeholders looking for new jobs after said failure has taken place.

If some R. F. D. expert can sit on a throne in Washington and map out a plan for rural free delivery in Lumpkin County superior to what we now have, then he can get a better job than he now has. To combine two routes and carry same by auto and cover that entire route the year round in one day is impossible of practical accomplishment.

We may submit quietly, and, again, we may not. It is too near general election time for any man or set of men to play such fool politics. It is too ridiculous to call a political move; it's absolute suicide.

With the railroad crying for more pay for hauling the mail, the express companies fighting parcel post, this move savors of automobile influence. The Postal System of the United States, to my personal knowledge, is superior to that of any other country on the globe, and I can not believe that any well-balanced person would attempt such a foolhardy thing as combining two rural routes and call it either economy or efficiency, for in our section it would mean neither.

Party politics would not be considered one minute as for or against such a move as this. The rural communities are familiar with daily mail service, and will resent with the ballot any effort to tamper with same. Those responsible for this move must remember that they are public servants, and those responsible for such people holding office will be held accountable for their acts.

Lumpkin County will have nothing but the best, and we are so peculiarly located and of such peculiar political taste as to be in a position to demand it.

The Fresno (Cal.) Morning Republican printed this item on November 1 under a Clovis (Cal.) date line:

Yesterday Postmaster Earle Hughes, of Fresno, was in Clovis to cooperate with Mrs. Kate Bell, local postmistress, in eliminating certain motor-route inconsistencies brought about through recent changes of carrier routes in this vicinity.

Owing to the fact that the Washington officials were not familiar with local road conditions, a route from Clovis and one from Fresno were overlapping. This feature was done away with by a change in the routing, at the same time giving better service to people in this section.

The Washington officials will be notified of the necessary change, as the road suggested by the department would have led through the heart of several vineyards.

ILLINOIS.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Illinois was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown in the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing November 10 in the Daily Journal-Gazette, published at Mattoon, Ill.

(2) Article appearing in the September 16 issue of the Springfield (Ill.) News.

The Daily Journal-Gazette, of Mattoon, Ill., says on November 10:

If the Post Office Service throughout the country is being reduced in efficiency in the same proportion that the Matoon post-office service is there can be little debate about the lack of ability of the "big guns" down at Washington to manage the business of the country to produce the best service for the people. The changes that are being made and that have been made in the handling of business of the Mattoon post office can not be charged up to the people connected with the local office. They are suffering about as much by the changes as are the patrons of the office. The changes that have reduced the efficiency of the service and that will reduce it still more unless the department chiefs get wise to the situation probably follow the visit and inspection of some special representative of the Post Office Department who thinks he has to make recommendations in order to make good with the fellow who is above him in authority and so on up the line. It is not so very long ago that Mattoon had an all-night office. It was a great convenience to the public. The all-night service was cut off, and since then cut after cut has been made until the service has been so reduced that the public is being very, very badly served. Just as an example, a new rule that has been promulgated by somebody higher up than the local post-office authorities makes it necessary if you wish to mail a parcel-post package to go to the general-delivery window, where it is often necessary to stand in line, because of congestion of business, to get the package weighed. After you have found out how much postage it takes to transport the package, you have to go to another window, and if business is rushing you stand in line for an opportunity to purchase the necessary postage. Even now your troubles have not ended, as you have to go to another part of the lobby to find the proper place to deposit the package so that it may start on its journey. It is almost necessary to have a chart in order to find your way. Of course, it may be all O. K. after you have learned the devious route and kept control of your patience and temper, but as one attaché of the local post office remarked: "The system will probably be changed again before the public gets fully acquainted with the present one." Thus it is that the inspectors and efficiency experts hold their jobs while the gentle and trusting public, which pays the bills, gets poor service, and the local post-office employees get the kicks, when in truth they are in no way responsible and are hampered and harassed almost beyond endurance because of the decrees of the numbskulls higher up.

The following editorial, headed "Crippling the rural mail," is taken from the September 16 issue of the Springfield (Ill.) News:

Resentment is growing among farmers all over the country as the result of the curtailment of the rural mail service under the plea of economy.

Routes have been lengthened and consolidated. The number of carriers has been reduced. As a consequence communities that have been getting their mail regularly now get it at uncertain intervals, and often the family mail box is a mile or two from home.

The excellence of the rural mail service has been a great help to the farmer, because it has brought him into close touch with the world. Aside from the telephone, no other factor has had so great an influence in making the farm popular.

The crippling of the service by the Postmaster General therefore is causing genuine alarm.

"I believe a mistake is being made that will not tend either to economy or efficiency," John A. McSparran, master of the State Grange of Pennsylvania, said in discussing the new system. "The lengthening of the routes is not the place to correct the waste, for the length of the route must continue for many years to be dependent upon the distance a horse can travel under average conditions in the time allowed between trains that carry the mail to and from the terminus of the route."

The attempt to substitute the automobile for the horse at this time is foolish, Mr. McSparran says. The state of the roads is not such that an automobile rural service would be possible, except for a few months in the summer.

A recent letter from an Illinois carrier says:

Things are beginning to happen in Illinois. Fred Snyder, from Maple Park, who was with us at Detroit, has had his route consolidated with another, making an auto route of 54 miles. He is the temporary carrier, but don't expect to take the examination.

Don't know how soon they will jar us, but let her come. We are all equipped with shock absorbers.

INDIANA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Indiana was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the August 27 issue of the Marion County Mail, published at Indianapolis, Ind.

(2) Article appearing under date of November 19 in the Roann (Ind.) Clarion.

(3) Articles appearing in the Evening Item, of Richmond, Ind., issue of January 21, 1916.

The Marion County Mail, published at Indianapolis, Ind., in its issue of August 27 says:

The action of the Post Office Department in dismissing rural carriers in Marion County without giving the men a fair chance is creating much feeling among the patrons on the rural routes. One well-known farmer was in the Mail office Monday, and stated that the new carrier on one of the routes recently changed was causing all kinds of trouble. He said the report was out that the carrier could not read. He said the old carrier was one of the most courteous of men and very accommodating.

It is said a new scheme is being worked in Marion County in firing the carriers. Instead of sending regular civil-service inspectors, the department orders the Democratic postmaster to send out some one in the office here, and that the scheme is working fine. The suspended carriers report that local men have been doing the investigation and filing the reports against them.

The Mail received this special report from Washington this week:

"Members of Congress declare that complaints they are receiving from both rural carriers and patrons have been more numerous and bitter in the last few months than for years before.

"Rural carriers claim that they have suffered chiefly on two counts, one, that although they are under civil service there have been hundreds of dismissals without just cause, the other that their routes have been lengthened and their work increased, without additional pay. The complaints from patrons of the rural routes are uniformly based upon sweeping reductions in the service.

"The conditions causing these complaints are due to the failure of the Post Office appropriation bill and the consequent necessity for managing the Postal Service under a reenactment of last year's appropriation. The principal changes ordered by the department reducing the carrier force arise, first, by the proposed consolidation of about 1,500 routes 25 miles long into half that number 50 miles long; second, in lengthening the standard routes. It is estimated that more than 2,000 rural carriers have lost their places under these reductions.

"The patrons of the rural routes base their criticisms on the claim that many have had to move their mail boxes at least half a mile from former locations, and they, instead of the carriers, must travel that distance for mail; all these charges cripple the effectiveness of the Parcel Post Service, especially as to perishable goods. There is also a general complaint of curtailment of Rural Free Delivery Service. Mass meetings of patrons have been held in many localities protesting against the demoralization of their service, and they are daily becoming more frequent.

"Reports from associations of rural carriers claim that not only have the men lost their enthusiasm for the service, but through fear of dismissal have resigned. This is largely the result, it is said, of department instructions to have Democratic postmasters instead of civil-service inspectors make confidential reports upon the qualifications of carriers as a basis for reductions. This arrangement has opened the way to rank discrimination in favor of Democratic carriers."

In the changing of rural routes the Post Office has already made the offices at Cumberland, Julietta, Southport, Nora, and Wanamaker so unprofitable that it is hard to get anyone to take care of them. The pay is too small.

The Roann (Ind.) Clarion of November 19 says:

Change in rural mail delivery out of Roann took effect last Monday, following an order some time ago from Postmaster General Burleson, discontinuing route No. 1 out of Roann, one out of Wabash, combining the two into a 50-mile motor route, to be known as route A of Wabash.

In short, the local system, which has proved efficient and satisfactory for 15 years, has been "shot to pieces" for no other reason than that Post Office officials are trying to save money on a system that probably never will be self-supporting.

Economy is all right as long as it does not interfere with efficiency, but as soon as it does it is no longer economy. Mail carriers are unanimously of the opinion that 50-mile routes will never be practical. No doubt they can be covered during the summer, but when winter snows block the roads it certainly will be impossible to traverse 50 miles of them in any kind of automobile.

Following the order for the change in deliveries here, petitions were circulated among the patrons affected by the change, and everyone, it is said, signed the paper protesting against the move. So far, these petitions have been completely ignored by officials.

Farmers living anywhere near Roann have decided to come to the post office for their mail rather than to suffer the inconvenience of a change of address.

The following letter was received late last week from a rural-route patron—he desires his name withheld—at Leominster, Mass.:

The curtailment of the Rural Free Delivery Service, which, I note through the columns of your valuable paper, is quite extensive in the Southern and Western States, has at last struck the New England States, and Massachusetts in particular.

The situation in Worcester County is becoming very grave according to reports from surrounding towns, which I note from an article in the News of November 13 concerning the town of Rutland, Mass., and that the various communities are deeply stirred.

As stated in a previous issue of the News, the route at Pratts Junction, covered for many years by Carrier W. A. Dingley, is suspended and the territory divided between route 1, of Lancaster, which is extended from 24½ to 28 miles. Route 1 from Sterling Junction gets a big slice added to its territory, and route 1 from Leominster is extended from 25 to 30.8 miles.

To enable the Lancaster route to be extended, several miles were taken off and added to the Leominster route, the latter route having a slice of nearly 4 miles cut off and which is taken care of by route 1, of Fitchburg.

Thirty families residing in Leominster, within 2 to 3 miles of the post office, have been obliged to have their mail changed to the Fitchburg post office, which is from 4 to 5 miles distant. On one street thus served 14 patrons living within a half mile of the Leominster City Delivery Service have moved their mail boxes to within the limit of above service, and prefer to walk a short distance, thus getting two deliveries a day rather than have their mail come through Fitchburg.

The town of Ashby is also affected, as will be noted from the following article appearing in the Fitchburg Sentinel:

The revision of the rural-mail delivery service in Worcester County, which has extended the routes becomes effective on November 16, and will affect Fitchburg to some extent, although this city, through adding a part of the territory formerly covered by Leominster, Lunenburg, and Ashby rural carriers, will not lose either of its rural carriers. Ashby, however, is less fortunate and one of the two rural carriers employed in that town will be retired, while the territory of Leominster and Lunenburg men will be extended in other directions, increasing the daily distance to be covered, and other carriers further down the line are to lose their jobs.

While there are claims to the effect that the service is to be systematized and improved, those rural residents who are to find themselves off the regular routes of the carriers after November 16 do not quite see it in that light. These people, however, will not be deprived of the service, as they are permitted to erect mail boxes at the nearest point to their homes on the new routes of the carriers. Fortunately for Fitchburg people, there are few, if any, in this city who will be inconvenienced along those lines.

The following letter is from a citizen of Conrad, Iowa:

I thought I would write a few lines from this neck of the woods. They have made quite a change in the rural routes around here at Union, Liscomb, Allison, and Conrad. They gave No. 1 from here 1 mile and No. 2 4 extra miles. This gives the latter 29 miles. This 4 miles is over by-roads and 1 mile of it has not had a grader on it for 30 years, until mail began going over it. It was graded this fall, late, and then it commenced raining and the farmers began hauling corn over it. It is a fright now. It takes from seven to seven and a half hours to make the route. The carriers don't have time to feed their teams; only stops long enough to water. He has his chores in the morning by lantern and at night by lantern. Eleven to twelve hours a day.

FARMERS DEMAND RETURN TO OLD SERVICE—RURAL ROUTE CHANGES MADE BY INSPECTORS ABSOLUTELY OF NO BENEFIT, SAYS PROF. STARR; DENIES HAVING RESIGNED CARRIER JOB—EVERY NIGHT HIS WORK REQUIRES HIM TO STAY ON DUTY UNTIL 2 OR 3 A. M. SORTING MAIL FOR NEXT DAY'S DELIVERY—DIDN'T CARRY ROUTE THURSDAY BECAUSE HE WAS PHYSICALLY EXHAUSTED—DOESN'T BELIEVE MOTORIZED SERVICE EVER WILL BE AS SUCCESSFUL AS WERE "LITTLE RED WAGONS"—POSTMASTER BECK GREATLY WORRIED OVER SITUATION, HE SAYS.

Failure of the post-office inspectors to afford any real relief in the local rural mails delivery muddle or to offer any hope of adequate relief brought Prof. James C. Starr, carrier on Route D, to decide upon resignation from the service, Thursday. Prof. Starr denied in an interview Thursday evening that he had tendered his resignation to Postmaster C. B. Beck Thursday morning or had thrown his keys on the postmaster's desk, both of which actions he was accredited with in the Thursday evening issue of a local newspaper.

"I have not resigned," said Prof. Starr, "but I think I shall. I went to work at the post office Thursday morning and arranged my mail for distribution, but I was too nearly exhausted, so I gave to Frank Wilson, superintendent of mails, a key to a lock box at Abington, so that a substitute, if they should find any, could unlock the box while he was delivering the mail. I have been up until 2 and 3 o'clock every night since I took the job and was completely exhausted, so I came home and was in bed practically all day. I had to get some sleep.

WILL QUIT UNLESS RELIEF IS GIVEN.

"Unless I can have some assurance that relief will be given, I will quit. The changes the inspectors recommended were really of no benefit. They lengthened my route, if anything, gave me the Abington hills, and increased my number of boxes from 269 practically to 300. They said they had authority only to increase the salaries of the carriers to $1,800 a year, which increase was made known Thursday morning, and to decrease the length of the routes to 50 miles. In the rearrangement, however, the inspectors required the carriers to come back to the post office at noon, and thereby made the routes longer if anything.

"The inspectors also promised in my hearing that they would bring immediate relief to the labor of 'sticking' the mail in the post office. If I had somebody else to 'stick' the mail, I believe I could handle the outside part of the route all right.

"I think I would have been able to get through this bad weather if my substitute, Mr. McMinn, had not become ill of sore throat. That threw all the work back on me. I tried Wednesday the experiment of taking with me a driver for the machine, leaving me merely to put the mail into the boxes. With that arrangement I got back to the office at 5.30 o'clock Wednesday evening.

"After supper I stayed at the post office until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning alone trying to arrange the mail for Thursday. I went back to the office Thursday morning and arranged more mail, intending to make the trip again, but I was 'all in,' and decided to come home."

NOT NEARLY UP TO LITTLE RED WAGON.

Mr. Starr said he did not believe the motorized rural route system can be made as satisfactory under any conditions as were the horse routes that existed before. He said he believed the new system can be made to work well in the summer time when the roads are good, but that the condition of the roads in the winter is such that the use of the automobile all the time is out of the question.

"I told Mr. Beck," he said, "that I believed if I stayed on I could make the route go in the summer if I lived through the strain that long. As it has been, though, I have been working myself to death and losing money at it. I believe that my expenses for two weeks were greater than my income. I had to hire two horses, two buggies, and my assistant. The gasoline bill for the route was $1 a day, besides the wear on the tires. Mr. Foland, of Route B, has had to purchase a new pair of tires already."

BECK ADMITS WASHINGTON WAS IN TOO BIG A HURRY TO ATTEMPT MOTORIZATION.

Deplorable failure of the motorized Rural Route Service not only in Wayne County, but in other counties where it has been attempted, has struck a hard blow at a pet scheme of Postmaster General Albert Burleson, and the direct cause of the trouble in Wayne County is ascribed to haste in the establishment of a system that post office officials here believe would require a year to establish and the acceptance by the department in too literal a sense of the figures for the time of service made in experimental trips in this county. This is admitted even by Postmaster Charles B. Beck, who made those trips.

Back of the 18 days of messing around in the rural mail delivery in this county is a story of more than eight months of planning in the Post Office Department. When the motorized routes went into service here January 3, with admittedly long routes, their immediate success was anticipated. The consequent disorganization of a mail service that had been considered good brought a resounding wail of dissatisfaction from farmers.

BECK COVERED THE ROUTES IN AUGUST.

In August and September of 1915 Postmaster Beck went out on four Richmond rural routes and covered them by automobile. The first two of these routes were covered in 3 hours and 57 minutes delivering the mail. These were two of the old wagon routes, each covering 28 miles.

The other two routes were a trifle longer, with different kind of roads and territory, but they were covered in 4 hours and 40 minutes. These routes included more than 56 miles.

The number of boxes, the number of miles covered, the average speed at which the machine traveled, and other information about these experimental trips were forwarded to the Post Office Department at Washington by Postmaster Beck, who secured the information through personally accompanying the carriers.

The absolute failure of the carriers to make such time now is blamed on the roads, but Postmaster Beck is wondering how the drivers on those experimental trips managed to do it at all.

Even making good time, J. C. Starr says that the regular carrier can not afford to hold the job. For most of the year, he says, the carrier would find it necessary to employ a helper to carry half the route. The helper, says Starr, gets all the money and the regular carrier gets the complaints.

INSPECTORS DID NOT DO ANY GOOD.

Inspectors sent here to untangle the mess into which the rural service had been plunged lopped off a little here and a little there, and after dividing the routes into two sections of 29 and 21 miles long on the average recommended that this reorganized system go into effect January 18. Some of these routes are declared by the carriers to be actually longer and with more stops than before they were reorganized by the inspectors. J. C. Starr, carrier of route D, asserts that this is true. It was denied by Postmaster Beck.

Not only has route D received poor service with the reorganized routes, but persons on other routes have had the same experience. Poorly routed mail still is a source of trouble, and the mix up in the Richmond post office has resulted in misunderstood and badly mixed-up directions to rural-route families.

Postmaster Beck, with Congressman FINLY H. GRAY, refuses to be saddled with the blame for the initiation of the motorized service here. Mr. Beck does not, however, shift the blame elsewhere, only denying that he suggested it for Wayne County.

CALLED TO WASHINGTON ONE YEAR AGO.

Charles R. Swain and Alexander Garrigus, Indiana post-office inspectors, were called to Washington a year ago. Inspectors from other States were called in until there were 38 of them in Washington. And while there the motorization scheme was mapped out, and they were instructed to furnish information to the department and to work out plans for establishment of such motor service.

One of the first of these motorized counties in Indiana was Tippecanoe. Others were established a few months ago in Kansas. The experience was not satisfactory in Tippecanoe County. But postmasters who attended a convention at Lafayette after the motors went into service there were enthusiastic about the service, Postmaster Beck, who attended that convention, said:

"To-day in Wayne County, where the rural-route families under the old system did have automobile service, they now under motorization have service from a horse-drawn vehicle."

TWO MEN ON EACH OF THREE ROUTES.

On each of three routes out of Richmond to-day there are two men delivering mail, one of them carrying by motor and the other by horse and wagon. On route D, which is described as the worst of the bunch, and where J. C. Starr, the carrier who resigned, says that the service never can be successful, one man is attempting to do the job. Postmaster Beck said to-day that if he had been able to get the men who could do it he would have sent two men out over route D several days ago.

It is with much difficulty that Mr. Beck can be induced to talk about the rural-route situation.

"I've talked too much already," he said. And he has taken strongly to the "closed-door" policy, which he began two weeks ago, and which aroused the ire of several farmers who called at his office to see him. The closed door was rather tightly shut to-day and it was only after repeated efforts that an entrance could be gained.

At the time Mr. Beck went into office he says he determined upon the open-door policy. He said he wanted the postmaster to be accessible.

NO MORE OPEN-DOOR POLICY FOR BECK.

This spirit has left him. He says that the postmaster of Richmond receives all the knocks in Wayne County and that every complaint about the mail service comes to him. He finds, he says, that his time is taken up too much by persons with trivial troubles. When June, 1918, rolls around Mr. Beck says he is done with public office.

Consequently the closed door to the office of the postmaster. At the time the inspectors were here a week ago, working up the data on which they recommended the reorganization of the service, Mr. Beck said he was forced to close and lock his office door to give privacy to the work of the inspectors. He has decided to continue the policy, however, for his own convenience. Newspapermen only with some difficulty secured an interview with Mr. Beck to-day.

BECK TELLS WHY NO MAIL ON ROUTE—NO NOTICE FROM CARRIER STARR THAT HE WOULD NOT WORK UNTIL THURSDAY, 8 O'CLOCK—NO ONE AVAILABLE TO TAKE HIS JOB—IF BECK HAD OWNED AUTO AND NOT BEEN SO TIRED HE WOULD HAVE CARRIED THE ROUTE HIMSELF.

Failure of J. C. Starr to give notice of his intention not to carry rural route D, serving the southern part of the county, is assigned by Postmaster C. B. Beck as the explanation of why the 300 families of that route did not receive mail service on Thursday. Mr. Starr did not give notice of his final decision to Postmaster Beck, who received his first definite information through Frank Wilson, superintendent of mails.

"When I came into the office about 6.30 o'clock Thursday morning, I spoke to Mr. Starr, the same as I did to the other persons in the office," said Mr. Beck. "He told me he was done and that he wanted to quit.

ADVISED STARR TO "STICK IT OUT."

"I said to him that he did not want to quit right away. He had told me a few days before that he would like to be relieved, but I told him that we had no one to put in his place. I said that he ought to stick it out, that it would finally go all right.

"When we finished talking, he said, 'Well, all right.'

"I was out of the office for a short time, and when I came back I was informed that Starr had quit. Mr. Wilson told me that he had thrown his keys down on the desk and resigned. That was about 8 o'clock, and it was too late then to get a carrier, if one had been available.

"I had worked down here until 10 o'clock the night before. If I had not been so completely worn out and had owned an automobile, I would have carried the route myself."

IOWA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Iowa was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

Article appearing in the Valley City (Iowa) Courier.

Article appearing in the Journal, Sioux City, Iowa.

Article appearing in the Nicholas (Iowa) Courier of September 30.

Article appearing in the October 7 issue of the Davenport (Iowa) Times.

Article appearing in the Glenwood (Iowa) Opinion of November 7.

Article appearing in an issue of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican.

Article appearing under a Clinton date line carried in a November issue of the Marshalltown (Iowa) Times-Republican.

Article appearing in an issue of the Wallace Farmer (Iowa).

Article appearing in the Sentinel-Post of Shenandoah, Iowa, under date of November 19.

Article appearing in an issue of Wallace's Farmer, published at Des Moines, Iowa.

Article appearing in the November 25 issue of the Farmer and Stockman, published at Des Moines, Iowa.

Article appearing in the Des Moines (Iowa) Capital of November 24.

Article appearing in the Des Moines (Iowa) News on November 21.

Article appearing in the Des Moines (Iowa) News on November 12.

The Valley City (Iowa) Courier a few days ago printed the following editorial:

According to the Post Office Department, in a letter sent to Senator KENYON, of Iowa, most of the energies of the department are being expended on creating new rural routes in the South. Arkansas has received 50 new routes; Missouri, 51; Texas, 46; and Oklahoma, 33. Iowa, in the same time, has had but 4. This is the record of the last fiscal year, and it is presumable that no other Northern States fared better than Iowa. There is much complaint all over the country because the present administration has bedevilled the rural route service in the name of false economy, and the clamor is not likely to subside in the North when it becomes known that northern postal service has been butchered to make a southern postal holiday.

The Journal, of Sioux City, Iowa, published the following editorial a few days ago:

If the newspapers elsewhere are recording as much dissatisfaction with the new-fangled rural delivery economy as is finding expression in the newspapers hereabouts, a good many votes are likely to be cast next year on the theory that Postmaster General Burleson is the paramount issue. And it is the observation of this newspaper that voters who vote their sentiments on the Burleson issue will mark their ballots with the idea of putting a new man in charge of the Post Office Department.

Postmaster General Burleson, one gathers, is trying to introduce a higher quality of economy and efficiency in the Rural Delivery Service. Undoubtedly he is trying to economize without impairing the utility of the service. If the chorus of wails echoed in the newspapers tells the truth, such economy as may have been gained has been attained for the most part by impairment of the service. The most radical change introduced has been the substitution of automobiles for horse-drawn vehicles in many localities. The theory is that an automobile ought to cover twice as long a route as the horse. There is bitter complaint that the little old Ford on a rough and muddy road is a snare and a delusion and sure to become more so next winter. And other changes have been made. Some routes have been abolished altogether, amid much gnashing of teeth. Others have been shuffled up and redealt so that one in a half dozen might be dropped. Out of it all has come a vast number of complaints about irregular deliveries, late deliveries, and no deliveries. Along one re-formed route in Iowa the patrons are reported to be boycotting the carrier and wrathfully driving to the nearest post office for their mail.

It may be that the reorganized rural route service will be a model of efficiency and economy four or five years hence. A more interesting question relates to possible conditions in November of next year, when the patrons of the rural routes will be dropping the Australian ballots into the boxes. Present indications are that the wrath of a lot of rural-route residents will still be hot against Burleson at that time.

The Nicholas (Iowa) Courier of September 30 prints the following:

To-morrow Nichols will not have a rural mail route. Theoretically speaking, all farmers living in this section of Pike Township will be getting their mail over the Conesville long-distance rural route. In practice, however, the Conesville mail man will not have very much mail to deliver or collect, for practically every man living on what were Nichols Routes Nos. 1 and 2 have decided not to have their mail changed from Nichols, and if the Post Office Department at Washington wants to pay a carrier $1,800 per year for riding around Pike Township enjoying the scenery let them do it.

A large number of our farmers have come in and rented boxes in town while others are arranging to come to town to get their own mail, and incidentally carrying their neighbors' mail out with them. The neighbors will take turn about in coming to town for mail.

This arrangement on the part of Uncle Sam is only a trial, and if our farmers will stick together there is no doubt but that the plan to carry out these long routes will be a failure. Stick, brothers, stick!

The following editorial is clipped from the October 7 issue of the Davenport (Iowa) Times:

The Post Office Department at Washington is making a number of changes in the rural mail routes in Iowa, and especially in the second Iowa district, that have caused protests from the patrons, for the reason that the changes are considered impractical and detrimental to the good of the service.

Sitting at a desk in Washington with nothing but maps before him is an Assistant Postmaster General, who has been figuring out on paper how certain routes could be changed and consolidated to save a little money. Some post offices are to be abolished. Some routes are to be sent out of other towns. Some people are to be made to walk a mile to get their mail.

It was proposed to abolish the post office at Fruitland. The people there were to be served out of Muscatine and the Fruitland routes were to be abolished. However, Congressman HULL made such a protest in regard to this change that it is understood Fruitland is to be allowed to keep its post office. The importance of the business at Fruitland was not understood at Washington. At Conesville similar changes were proposed. At Moscow it was proposed to cut 10 miles off one route and add it to a Muscatine route and to do away with the Moscow post office. At West Branch one route has been abolished and changes made in the other two.

Congressman HULL has been doing all that possibly could be done to convince the officials of the administration at Washington that these proposed changes are not satisfactory to the patrons, but in view of the desire of Assistant Postmasters General to make a showing of economy, as they think they will be able to do, the department is deaf to most of the protests.

It appears to be lost sight of at Washington that the first consideration in the conduct of the rural mail route should be service to the patrons. The effort to put the rural mail routes on a paying basis and at the same time maintain a satisfactory service is bound to be disappointing. Service appears to be secondary in the Washington officials' view. The long routes operated by auto are bound to break down in the winter, either when the snow is heavy or the bottom drops out of the roads, and then the farmers on these newly planned routes will have to go without their mail. Short routes operated from the smaller post offices, so as to be as close as possible to the people, are much more likely to give regular and satisfactory service.

The Glenwood (Iowa) Opinion of November 7 says:

The cutting down in the rural mail service whereby thousands of Iowa farmers have been deprived of their daily mail, will undoubtedly result in cutting down the vote for one Woodrow Wilson at the November election of 1916.

In a recent issue the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican says:

The farmers of Iowa justly are up in arms over the action of President Wilson and Postmaster General Burleson in their radical changing of rural mail routes. Many routes are being cut out and others are being lengthened so that in some cases it is not possible to cover them in a day. Some one sits in his cozy office in Washington, with no personal knowledge of the character of the country, and in an arbitrary manner designates the course of the routes. In one instance in Iowa County the route is fixed to go over the road that long ago was abandoned.

The kick of the people in the country districts is justifiable. Owing to the length of many of the routes, the rural carriers are ordered to leave the central office before the morning mails arrive. The papers of to-day are as a result delivered 24 hours late. So it is with important letters. The farmer to-day wants his market news when it is news. It means much to him to have this information promptly.

One result that has already followed this economy on the part of our Democratic administration is the order of those affected not to have their mail delivered. They prefer to call for it at the post office, even though at times the inconvenience of doing so is rather burdensome.

This economy on the part of the administration is due to a desire to save some $4,000,000, about one-half the cost of a new battleship. Better omit the battleship and add to the comfort and convenience of those living in country districts.

The rural delivery was inaugurated by Republican Congressmen for the benefit of the farmers. Republican administrations have always supported the service; they have been even ready to extend its usefulness. Next year Democratic congressional candidates will hear from the farmers on this question in a manner that will not be pleasant for them, and in a way that will mean fewer votes for their ambitions.

This news dispatch, under a Clinton date, was published in the Marshalltown (Iowa) Times-Republican:

That the feeling of dissatisfaction over the changes made in the rural mail routes is just as great since the changes have been put into effect as it was before they were made was learned by Congressman HULL. HULL, in a swing through the county by auto, visited 10 towns and met from 25 to 70 people at each town, who added their protests to those of others against the changes made.

The principal reason for complaint was a later service in many cases, the necessity of changing a post-office address which had been established from 10 to 50 years, the greater distance from a mail route, and in some cases getting no service at all.

In many instances farmers can get approximately the same service as formerly, but their mail must be sent to a new address. It goes to a town where they do practically no trading and no shipping. Many of them object seriously to changing an established post-office address, and are going to town after the mail as they did before any rural service was started.

The following article, by a contributor, "L. G. H.," is clipped from a recent issue of Wallace's Farmer, Iowa:

Farmers throughout Iowa, and in many other States, have been holding mass meetings to protest against the changes being made in the Rural Free Delivery Service. After being used to as good service as was possible under the circumstances, they do not propose to see the present efficiency crippled without registering their kick. In an attempt at economy the department has been lengthening certain routes, combining others, and discontinuing some. The general result seems to be poorer service, more inconvenience, and great dissatisfaction on the part of most of the patrons.

At New Providence three routes have been combined into two and at Eldora two routes have been discontinued. These changes are typical of what seems to be a general shake-up. Under the new arrangement, which goes into effect on October 15, a great number of patrons will be off the main route and will have to travel long distances to their boxes.

In their petition to the Postmaster General the people served from the New Providence post office call attention to what they have done to maintain in good condition the roads traveled by the rural-mail carriers. Many of the roads have been graded and graveled, while some of the roads where the carriers did not go and where the travel was light have been neglected. The latter roads are poorly kept in summer and frequently are impassable in winter. The new routing takes a carrier over some of the roads of the latter type and makes his route over the improved portion only incidental. After going to the expense of improving and maintaining reasonably good roads for the carriers, the road supervisors feel aggrieved to see these changes in the routing made, especially when the new arrangement gives less efficient service to a greater number of patrons than was enjoyed under the original routing.

Some of the patrons claim that they would be just as well satisfied to go back to the system in use before the time of Rural Free Delivery as to have delivery under the new arrangement, which makes many of them go a half mile or more for their mail. With a mail box at a considerable distance from one's home the inconvenience of receiving or sending registered and insured mail or parcel post makes the service next to impracticable. It is simply impossible for a carrier to conform to a regular schedule. If a patron wishes to see him, to send a registered letter, buy a money order, or send a parcel-post package, his only course is to take a trip to the nearest point where the carrier passes and wait for him there, possibly for several hours in bad weather. Although mail boxes are protected by the Government, few persons would care to leave the parcel-post package or money for a post-office order exposed to the weather and possible molestation in a box half a mile away from the farm. Neither do they care to have parcels sent to them by post unless they can have their mail box at a reasonable distance from their home.

If any changes are to be made, the patrons feel that such modifications should be in the nature of improvements and not steps backward. After being used to good service, one feels more keenly the lack of it when it comes. Under the new arrangement many patrons who have received their mail from a certain post office for years are shifted to some other post office with poorer train service and connections.

The greatest hardship is expected to come in winter, when roads are in poor condition. Even under the present arrangement, some of the carriers often have trouble in getting through on bad days. Everyone who has lived on a rural route knows what it is to have the carrier miss his trip. Farmers have become accustomed to their daily papers and to getting their letters or packages promptly, and if the carrier does not come, the day's work seems incomplete. Under the new arrangement many claim it will be a physical impossibility for many of the carriers to complete their routes, making the service uncertain, and for many about as inconvenient as it used to be when they had to drive to town for it.

The Sentinel-Post, of Shenandoah, Iowa, on November 19 said, in part:

It is likely that a wave of indignation and protest will issue from Page County when the results of the rural-route changes in the county are learned.

The changes in the routes are not confined to any one town.

Those it affects heard from are greatly aroused and incensed that such important changes should be made without consultation or suggestions from them. Some of the routes have been changed so there is no open road for them to extend over and some of the streams they cross are unbridged. It will work a hardship on the patrons it affects and on the carriers also. It will be impossible for the carriers to make the mileage daily that they will be required to make in order to deliver the mail on the new routes. Some of the routes are 30 miles in length, and none lack much of being that long.

There is no question but that the Postmaster General will be besieged with petitions from the patrons asking that some of the changes be not made.

Postmaster Robinson states that he was not consulted in regard to the changes and knew nothing of them until he received the instructions this morning.

The following editorial appears in a recent issue of Wallace's Farmer, published at Des Moines, Iowa:

For some months past the Post Office Department has been making rather serious changes in the rural routes the United States over, the aim being to make the routes longer and encourage the use of automobiles, which would force farmers to make better roads and would save the Government several million dollars each year. We have no doubt that there are sections of the country, particularly in the Eastern States and wherever roads are such that automobiles are practicable, where this saving can be made without decreasing the efficiency of the rural-route service. When, however, this reform, so called, is applied in the West—or wherever there are no hard-surfaced roads good all the year around—the Post Office Department is bound to get itself into trouble.

In a talk with a high official of this department who is actively interested in this so-called reform it was claimed that farmers are just as well served with this change, with the exception that in many places the farmer might be obliged to walk a quarter of a mile for his mail instead of having it brought to his door. The reason for this would be that he lives on a by-road, and giving him his mail in a box at his door would involve a heavy expense to the Government.

There is very loud complaint coming from farmers in the corn belt, the complaint being that the department has not sufficiently considered the matter, does not seem to be aware that there are months during the year when the automobile is quite useless as a means of transportation, when the farmers themselves do not try to use it, and that planning an automobile rural route means that the farmers will not receive their mail with any regularity and may not receive it for a week at a time.

If the object of the Post Office Department is to save money, there is a way in which it can be saved much more easily and with positive benefit to the farmer. That way is simply to correct the notorious abuses of the second-class mail privilege. The same high official tells us that this costs the Government every year $50,000,000 in excess of the receipts. The utmost that they hope to save by using automobiles instead of wagons is about $6,000,000 a year. While it is trying to save at the spigot by putting the farmers to great inconvenience and practically depriving them of their mail for days at a time, it could more than double the amount of saving simply by putting a clamp on the publishers who are giving their papers away, and paying agents to give them away for them, and thus getting their claws into the treasury of the Post Office Department and compelling it to subsidize a business transaction which has not enough of service in it to stand on its own merits.

No change such as that contemplated and in process should ever be undertaken without a thorough survey, not merely of the geography of the country but of the condition of the roads. We expect to hear protests going up from every Congressman in the corn belt, or at least those parts of it which have not hard roads suitable for automobile service. The Government has voluntarily agreed to deliver the mail at the farmer's door The farmer has the right to insist that this agreement be kept. When the time comes that it can be done by automobile service on a route 50 miles long or more, farmers will rejoice. But until that time the Government should either fulfill its contract or else give up the attempt and let the farmers get their mail at their post office as of old.

The quickest way for the Post Office Department to save money is to correct the abuses of the second-class privilege, which have been tolerated so long that it now fears to attempt to correct them. As long as it carries papers for which the publishers do not receive even the cost of the white paper on which they are printed, and which are thus sold at "merely a nominal price," it should not complain of the cost of fulfilling its contract to deliver these papers at the door of the man who has been so unfortunate as to be put on their lists by hook or by crook.

The Farmer and Stockman, of Des Moines, Iowa, a James W. Pierce publication, of November 25 says:

I have already raised my voice against the injury being done to the Rural Free Delivery Service by combining routes and expecting carriers to cover 50 miles a day in a motor car the year around, an utterly impractical and impossible thing in many sections of the grain belt. Friends in Washington advise me that protests are pouring in from farmers generally, and that the matter will be made one of the big issues on the floor of Congress when that body convenes next month. I sincerely hope the protests will be so many and so loud that the order will be rescinded without delay.

My own position and that of thousands of farmers is well voiced by a farmer friend who writes to me, following the reading of my recent article, entitled "Impairing the Rural Free Delivery Service":

"Can it be possible that the postal authorities are so dumb or indifferent to the best interests of the people that they would willingly and knowingly do that which, if persisted in permanently, will ruin the Rural Free Delivery Service? It has taken time and money to bring the service to the high point of efficiency which it has attained. Then why destroy it without a shadow of a reasonable excuse? The authorities must certainly know that no carrier can cover a 50-mile route daily the entire year. Were I a rural free delivery carrier and my route was 50 miles long I would certainly refuse to carry the mail any longer, and I would be justified in so doing. The people should give the authorities to understand that a deal of that kind is absolutely and positively intolerable. You are on the right track; stay on it. I wish you every success."

I am delighted, indeed, to have such strong indorsement from such a representative farmer as I know the writer, Mr. W. M. Shaver, to be. I am delighted, moreover, that we who have united to protest against this matter have such a strong champion in Congress as one of the new Members from Iowa, Mr. RAMSEYER, is proving himself to be. Here are a few extracts from the vigorous letter he has sent the Postmaster General on this subject:

"The farmer in the Middle West is a business man and is as much in need of and entitled to his daily mail as is the merchant or manufacturer in the city. The daily market reports are a greater necessity to the average farmer than is any class of mail delivered to the retail merchants of our cities and towns.

"Iowa stands lowest in the percentage of illiteracy of any State in the Union. There is no illiteracy among Iowa farmers, and they devote more time each day to reading daily papers and magazines and take a keener interest in what they read than does the urban population.

"In regard to the automobile service and doubling the mileage of carriers contemplated by your department, I beg to advise you that we do not have the gravel and sand roads like they do have in some of the States. In Iowa we have dirt roads, which get muddy when it rains, and automobiles can not run in Iowa mud. It is the experience of rural carriers in Iowa, who have owned automobiles a number of years, that they can use them only about 100 days in the year. By your contemplated automobile service, over half of the time the farmers will either be deprived of their daily mail or receive poorer service than they have heretofore received.

"The farmers strongly resent your department's policy in curtailing the rural-route mail service; they are convinced not only that they need the mail delivered to them daily, but that they are entitled to such service. Furthermore, in this controversy, the farmers are exhibiting a determination that they are going to have their free rural-delivery service not curtailed, not only when the roads are good, but that they are going to have it extended until every farmer receives that daily service, rain or shine."

I feel like saying, "Hurrah for Congressman RAMSEYER!" May he never give up until he has gained his point. He has the farmers not only of his home State but of the country generally behind him, as one man. You and I must write our Congressmen, and must protest in the most vigorous language at our command, against something that will seriously and permanently impair a service the value of which to farmers can hardly be computed.

The Des Moines (Iowa) Capital of November 24 says:

Postmaster General Burleson will have a hard time convincing the Iowa delegation in Congress that he was justified in changing the rural mail delivery routes of the State. The storm of protest that has been aroused in every community where the new routes are effective is going to make itself heard in Washington and some one will be forced to do a lot of explaining.

Blunder No. 1 was made when the department neglected to send their men here to personally investigate the situation. One trip over a few of the rural routes would have convinced an inspector that Iowa roads are not to be reckoned with on paper. They possess an originality at certain seasons of the year which defies the best-made plans of Burleson or his assistants. There is a limit to the number of miles a mail carrier can travel in a day and that limit must be based upon mud and not upon asphalt or gravel.

The changing of the post-office address to a town 10 or 15 miles distant, as was done in a number of cases, is a hard blow to the farmer. It is almost equivalent to an order from the Government that he change his church and his circle of friends. It is also inconvenient, as many times rural residents get mail at the post office that comes in after the carriers leave.

The chief cause of complaint, and one which will be hard to explain away, is the loss of delivery where the carrier is unable to cover the long route that the Government has mapped out for him. This is happening time and again, according to reports from over the State. Rural delivery of mail was a novelty a few years ago. To-day it is as much of a necessity as the telephone.

The Post Office Department says it is attempting to economize. We have never advocated reducing the high cost of living by doing without sugar in our coffee.

Mr. Buireson has stirred up a hornets' nest in Iowa.

The Des Moines (Iowa) News on November 21 printed this:

Fifty letters reached the News Saturday protesting against changes made in rural routes. In the last few days more than 200 persons have written they are dissatisfied with the new scheme for delivering mail.

The chief complaints are these:

Many rural-route patrons who formerly received their mail before noon each day are now getting it from one to three days late.

Nearly all those affected have to travel from a quarter of a mile to three miles to get their mail.

Carriers will be unable to make their routes when roads are muddy because of bad roads they will have to travel, the condition of the roads not having been taken into consideration, farmers say, by inspectors who mapped out routes.

The Des Moines (Iowa) News of November 12 featured the following news story on its front page:

It is probable that the maiden speech of Congressman C. C. DOWELL, when he gets down to Washington in a couple of weeks, will have to do with the wonderful system of rerouting Iowa rural free delivery mail carriers in Postmaster General Burleson's new plan of economy. DOWELL is literally swamped with letters and petitions of protest over the change.

"I never saw anything that met with such general protest," says the Congressman. "It is practically universal among farmers. It is not politics, as it includes Democrats, Republicans, Populists, Prohibitionists, and Socialists alike."

Among the points of the seventh district from which DOWELL has received kicks are Norwalk, Prole, Ackworth, Indianola, Cumming, Orilla, Dallas Center, Waukee, Lacona, Nevada, Ames, St. Charles, New Virginia, and Ankeny.

"I haven't received a petition yet in which it wasn't stated that every man approached, whether on the new or old route, had signed the protest.

"The chief argument against the change is that apparently no consideration was given to the condition of the roads over which is laid out the new route. It does seem to me that with a body of efficiency experts from the Washington department sitting here at the local post office for the last six weeks—on full pay—at least a topographical map of the State might have been consulted. Instead the changes were ordered from Washington, where they have no more idea of Iowa hills and mud roads than a man in the moon.

"I have yet to hear of a single instance where a new route was inspected before the change was ordered.

"In some cases I found that the local postmaster had been consulted, his recommendations absolutely ignored, and then the word was passed down from the department that the change was made on the proposal of the local office.

"Iowa farmers are anxious to get their mail, and get it regularly, and they are as much entitled to that privilege as though they were living in the city. With that in view, they have spent considerable money and donated labor to perfect the roads over which the rural routes passed. Now these road improvements are absolutely ignored. At Dallas Center $5,000 was spent in making a good road, passable the year round, and now the new route touches it only to cross over it.

"Changing rural routes in Washington for States where they have hard surfaced roads may be all right, but it doesn't work in Iowa. Ten years from now, when we have more generally hard-surfaced roads and graded down our hills, it might be done.

"Apparently the chief idea has been to double up two horse drawn routes of an average of 24 miles into one of 48 miles covered by automobile. That is a fine theory, but it won't work during about four months of the year when it is all a team of horses can do to plow through the mud roads. Iowa isn't ready yet for routes longer than can be covered with horses in muddy weather.

"The result will be that for a very considerable part of the year farmers will not only be unable to get their mail, but to secure merchandise by parcel post, which they have recently learned to use very extensively. Up until the time of the changes farmers knew when they could order an article from town by letter or by telephone and just when it would be delivered. There's no way of telling that now. In fact, in many instances their trading points have been completely changed.

"For instance, at Orilla a route that completely encircled the town has been transferred to Cumming, so that the Cumming carrier now completes a circle about Orilla. There is a progressive group of business men at the latter place who have fitted up a sort of free clubroom for their farmer customers. They are actually grieved over the change, and a mass meeting protesting the change has been held.

"They say this is being done for economy's sake. That isn't the case, at least at St. Charles, where four routes have been revamped so that it now costs $6 a month more than it did before; the same number of patrons served and general protests all around.

"The first petition I received I immediately forwarded to the Post Office Department at Washington, receiving in return a very nice little letter. When I sent the next letter I received identically the same letter, with the exception that the name had been changed. Evidently these kicks are coming in on them pretty thick and they are using a form circular reply. So I have decided to wait until I get down to Washington.

"No; I am not making any speeches; not just yet."

The following is taken from a recent issue of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald:

What the economists have done to keep down the big deficit in the national finances is to slaughter the Rural Free Delivery Service to which the farmers and city business men of the Nation have long been accustomed. What they have done to that valuable service in Kent and Ottawa Counties is sufficient to raise a yell here that is reaching the skies.

To-day no man knows whether he is to receive mail by the means he has long been accustomed to or not. He doesn't know whether he can go out to his front gate and get the mail from the old familiar box or whether, if he is to get it at all, he must place that box a mile or so away from his home and tramp over there daily if he would get his mail.

He no longer knows whether he will get his mail in the forenoon, as has for years been his custom, or whether he will get it along toward evening; and in many a case he is now assured he will not get it at all, because the route has been suspended entirely.

He no longer knows if it will be possible for him to get his mail from the town in which he has been accustomed to do his trading or whether it will not go to a town many miles farther away from his home than the old center.

More than all this, many a man living on a rural route to-day is not getting his mail. Why? Because persons sending mail to him don't know how to address him. He doesn't know how to tell them to address him. More than all that, the postmasters themselves do not know how to tell anybody where to send mail nor where to get it. The rural free delivery has been so messed up that no man knows now where he lives, and the worst is he can't find out.

In cutting out many routes an attempt has been made to include at least a portion of these routes in some other route. The result is that many a rural route carrier has in his possession a long list of names of persons of whom he never before heard. He doesn't know what roads they live on nor what their homes look like when he sees them. He doesn't know how to lay out his route so as to reach these homes, and many a man is getting no mail as a result.

Take this mess as a fair sample: One route out of Grandsville has been discontinued and given to Jenison; one route out of Jenison has been discontinued and given to Hudsonville; the only route out of Allendale is abandoned and given to Hudsonville; and one route out of Hudsonville has been discontinued. Here are parts of Kent and Ottawa Counties all mixed up in such manner that nobody knows where he lives.

The Grand Rapids office has lost 2 routes, having now but 12 instead of 14 routes. The Holland post office has lost 2 routes, having now only 10 instead of 12.

At Rockford things were generally mixed up, and the people there sent a man to Washington to make protest. So well did he protest that he managed to save the four routes leading out of that office, but in the rearrangement eight families living about 2½ miles out of the city lost their free delivery altogether. John Hammer, Clare Zimmerman, Joseph Carpenter, F. H. Stewart, W. Simpson, and three others are the ones who are left out in the cold.

At Cedar Springs things change so fast the postmaster can't keep track of the changes. A few days ago orders came to discontinue one route; the necessary rearrangement was made. With Monday came an order to discontinue still another route. So now nobody knows where anybody lives.

Lowell has lost 1 route, Cannonsburg has lost 1, Harvard has lost 1, Alpine has lost 1, Belmont has lost 1, Conklin, in Ottawa County, has lost 1, Ravenna has lost 1, McCords has lost 1, Coopersville has lost 1.

Every day others are being discontinued, rearranged, and mussed up. Many can no longer receive their mail at their doors as formerly. Many can not get it at all, while some must walk a mile or two to a corner where the mail is delivered. It is like returning to the old days with them. It's all gone wrong.

Here is just a sample of what the mess means. Take the Grand Rapids Herald as an example, and this is typical of many other business houses doing business with farmers on the rural routes. When the changes were ordered postmasters sent in notices. In many instances the postmasters frankly declared they didn't just know how papers should hereafter be addressed to reach certain subscribers. Immediately subscribers began to complain that they had not received their papers.

It took a few days to correct the mailing lists in accordance with instructions. This was done promptly. The new lists were sent one day. Next day came word that more changes had been made and that the newly prepared lists were useless. The necessary corrections were again made and the lists set all over again. Now comes word that still more changes have been made and again the circulation department is busy trying to make the necessary new corrections. Meantime there is great difficulty in getting the papers to the men who ought to have them.

And so it is with other business houses. All are having their troubles, and many a farmer is wondering why he is not receiving his mail, why the piece of harness he ordered and wants right now has failed to arrive. It is all because the rural routes in Kent and Ottawa Counties have already been so confused that no man can tell much about them. Other counties will get this same confusion as fast as the Democratic Postmaster General can issue the orders to ruin the Rural Delivery Service.

KANSAS.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Kansas was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desired printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Wichita (Kans.) Eagle, issue of November 14.

The Wichita (Kans.) Eagle on November 14 printed the following news story:

Of vital interest to every farmer in the Southwest is the attitude of the Post Office Department at Washington toward western rural mail routes, and in the recently adopted policy of Postmaster Burleson a large number of farmers see before them a step back toward pioneer days, when they received mail something like once or twice a week, and war could be declared and a battle fought before they heard of it.

The new policy is this lengthening of rural mail routes, or the consolidation of two into one with an automobile carrier. To many this policy might seem a sign of advancement, but to a large number it has its discounts, because in the Southwest, as in any country, there are muddy times when it is impossible to drive through the country in an automobile. A few rural mail routes in Oklahoma have been consolidated, making one long route covered by auto where before there were two covered by horse and wagons. On these routes, it is claimed, mail service is not reliable, and that often the farmer gets mail but twice a week.

The average western farmer has been trained to read the news every day. He no longer can do without his daily newspaper, but a daily newspaper is perishable goods—it must be new to be news. Twice or three times a week mail service won't be sufficient.

At Derby the experiment of consolidating two rural routes into one long one, giving the route to one carrier, who must have an automobile, is to be tried. Already farmers on the routes affected are complaining of what they fear will be in store for them. A number of complaints are said to have been made at the local post office and reported from there to the department at Washington.

The importance of the change may be realized were one to consider the entire country suddenly cut off from mail service all but two or three days in the week. What would then happen in the entire Southwest will happen on the consolidated mail route when stormy weather prevents the automobile carrier from making his trip.

Rural mail carriers on an average route receive $1,200 a year. The carriers on the consolidated and lengthened routes will receive $1,800 a year, with the privilege of employing a substitute in rainy or muddy weather when teams must be used. Two months of the year are all that is permitted to the consolidated carrier, it is reported, for the employment of a substitute. If roads are impassable for more than two months in the year, somebody will have to do without their mail, it is figured.

Farmers in the Southwest are awakening to the possible curtailment of mail luxuries that they have been enjoying and are asking for relief or that something be done to safeguard their mail services.

MASSACHUSETTS.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Massachusetts was unsatisfactory to patrons in the State of Massachusetts is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in a December issue of the Worcester (Mass.) Daily Telegram.

(2) Article appearing November 16 in the Worcester (Mass.) Daily Telegram.

(3) Article appearing under date of November 24 in the Fall River (Mass.) Evening News.

(4) Letter written under date of December 15 by Aaron C. Dowse to Representative WILLIAM H. CARTER, as published in Rural Free Delivery News.

The Worcester (Mass.) Daily Telegram has recently published the following:

LANCASTER, November 11.

A petition has been circulated and signatures secured protesting against the rearrangement of the rural free-delivery route that serves the public from Lancaster post office.

Under an order received by the postmaster, which is ordered to go into effect Tuesday, November 16, that part of rural free-delivery route No. 1, known as the Neck Road, which is just outside of the village, will be discontinued as a rural route, and persons living on that road will be obliged to go to the post office for their mail. The post-office authorities say this was done to enable them to add to the Lancaster carrier a part of the route that starts from Pratts Junction.

The rest of the Pratts Junction route is to be added to the routes starting from the Leominster office. One route will be discontinued entirely. There are about 20 families on that part of the Lancaster route which it is proposed to abolish. They hope to be able to have the authorities in Washington rescind their order depriving them of rural service. The petition went forward to Washington to-day.

On November 16 the Worcester (Mass.) Telegraph printed the following:

Congressman SAMUEL E. WINSLOW has received another letter from Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakslee, in answer to a letter he sent to the Post Office Department the latter part of last week protesting over the conditions in Millbury in connection with the now very incomplete rural free delivery service in the town.

The vicinity in which conditions are particularly bad is in Sutton, the mail on that service being sent out from the Millbury post office.

In his letter of yesterday to Mr. WINSLOW, Mr. Blakslee states that, according to information in the hands of the department, there will be but seven former patrons of the service who might have to change the location of their mail boxes.

In another paragraph in this letter he admits that four of the former patrons of the service will in all probability lose the service altogether. But he states that they can not be reached without the carrier retracing his route, and this is something the department can not allow.

To understand the protest that the patrons of the rural free delivery service in Sutton are making it will be necessary to state that for 50 years the town had two deliveries of mail each day.

Fifty years ago Sutton had a post office and the mail came from Millbury as it does to-day. In the old days there was a stage coach line from Millbury to Sutton, and this coach made two trips daily, and the driver had the contract also to carry the mail between the two points.

At the start of the rural free delivery, however, the post office in Sutton was abolished, and at that time people were satisfied to have it so, as they thought that the service would be better than the old order of things.

Under the service, until the order of last week went into effect, Sutton has had two deliveries and two collections daily, and this was the case even in the old stage-coach days.

Under the new order of the department Sutton will get but one delivery and one collection per day. A large part of the patrons will not receive their mail until late in the afternoon.

Many of the residents of Sutton are business men who are in business in both Worcester and Millbury, and under the old order they could get their morning mail before leaving for their places of business; now, in many cases, they will not receive their mail until their return to their homes at the close of the day, in many cases causing a great inconvenience.

At the close of his letter Mr. Blakslee states that he will see if in any case there is any undue hardship imposed on the patrons of the service. The department has refused to suspend the new order until an investigation can be made, as Mr. Winslow asked in his last letter to the department.

The protest of Sutton to the Post Office Department lays stress on the fact that conditions now are worse than they have been since before the Civil War times.

The following was written by John J. Marriman, Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald, and was published on December 2:

The most heartily disliked man in political Washington to-day is Postmaster General Burleson. Democrats and Republicans alike join in flaying him for his arbitrary and, as many say, foolhardy reorganization of the rural mail service.

Until recently the standard rural route was 24 miles and the maximum salary $1,100. Two years ago Congress voted to pay rural carriers a maximum salary of $1,200. When it is considered that these rural-mail distributors purchase and pay for the upkeep on all their equipment, it will readily appear that $1,200 is not exactly a bonanza.

Soon after Congress raised the pay of the rural deliveryman Postmaster General Burleson undertook to establish arbitrarily what the maximum route should be, adding to the existing 24-mile standard other regulations concerning the weight of mail and the number of pieces which must be carried to qualify for the maximum salary.

Congress took cognizance of Mr. Burleson's usurpation of the legislative function and spanked him by including in a joint resolution, passed at the last session, a particular section voting the $1,200 maximum salary to rural carriers covering the standard route regardless of the Postmaster General's supplementary requirements.

But Mr. Burleson, of Texas, was not to be feazed in the least by such an inconsequential annoyance as Congress. He found in the old law, which had been continued, a few words authorizing the payment of a maximum salary of $1,800 to carriers covering routes of 50 miles or more. The fact that this section was intended to apply in new territory where automobile service was practicable did not trouble him. As soon as Congress had adjourned the Post Office Department, through Fourth Assistant General Blakslee, began either a chastisement of Congress or an economy program—the real intent is the subject of much conjecture—and proceeded to extend the existing routes from 24 miles up to 30 and more, according to two plans credited to the fertile genius of Mr. Blakslee.

The first plan, called the retrenchment or prevention of retracing plan, applied to routes covered by horse-drawn vehicles. It combined routes, eliminated routes, and, as far as possible, prevented the passage of carriers over the same ground. The second plan inaugurated automobile service and also combined old routes to make new motor routes, some times 50 miles long.

Both plans read well and they have saved the Government money, but the patrons of the rural mail service have paid in serious inconvenience for the economy. From all sections of the country, from Democrats and Republicans, complaints of this new rural service now pour into Washington. Up in Stow, Mass., a carrier who had been in the service for 15 years, who owned his own special equipment and had a perfect record, threatened to resign when his route was extended to 30 miles because of the impossibility of completing it during the winter season. When the matter was brought to the attention of the department the official word came, "Resignations will not interfere with department plans."

In Maynard a carrier starts at 11 a. m., works until 7 p. m., and then fails by 4 miles of completing his route. He drives back to Maynard, some 4 or 5 miles, and when he arrives finds all outgoing mail trains departed, so that collections have to hold over until the next day. Down in Westport the New Bedford evening papers do not arrive until the evening of the day following publication. The Sherborn post office, according to the department's original plan, was abolished and the post-office address of town officials changed to Framingham.

These few cases are but typical of hundreds of others reported from all parts of the country. Farmers depending upon the receipt of newspapers and crop reports to market their goods advantageously receive their mail too late to be of value. Perishable goods sent by parcel post remain out in the sun 8 or 10 hours or are detained overnight before they can be dispatched.

The attitude of the rural sections toward Postmaster General Burleson's "economy-without-efficiency" management is forcibly, if not elegantly, expressed through constant and bitterly caustic criticisms universally appearing in the rural press.

A Senator completely in touch with the situation declared to-day that 95 per cent of Congress, regardless of party, was opposed to the reorganization.

It would seem as though Mr. Burleson, the reputed master politician, has overstepped all reasonable limits and sacrificed party interests for the sake of "showing" Congress. But Congress is quite a meal for even Mr. Burleson. It now looks as though the rural service situation, combined with the railway pay fight, will precipitate one of the bitterest contests in the history of postal legislation.

The following is taken from the Fall River (Mass.) Evening News of November 24:

Bitter opposition has developed to the plan of reorganizing the rural free-delivery system in towns and villages in the vicinity of this city and New Bedford, and as a result the Democratic administration in Washington is coming in for a severe arraignment. Like a bolt out of a clear sky, orders were received by parties affected, on Monday morning, whereby some of the rural carriers—some of them under civil service—are to be deprived of their positions after November 30. Routes are to be changed so that patrons will not receive their mail until a day later than at present, and carriers who were fortunate enough to retain their routes are to have additional work with no mention of extra recompense. A system which has been followed out successfully for 16 years with practically no complaint is to be thrown into a condition for upheaval and disruption.

Following a meeting of rural-delivery patrons in South Westport Tuesday evening, at which Congressman WILLIAM S. GREENE presided and Congressman JOSEPH WALSH, of New Bedford, was one of the principal speakers, the following telegram was sent to Postmaster General Burleson in Washington by Congressman GREENE:

"Citizens of the district I represent, in mass meeting assembled at South Westport, are bitterly opposed to orders that have been issued overthrowing the rural-delivery service. They and constituents elsewhere ask that the date named when orders shall be effective be postponed until an investigation can be made. In many cases important business interests will be seriously affected by the proposed changes. I shall be in Washington on December 2 and desire to confer with you upon the vital questions involved."

Congressman WALSH, of New Bedford, spoke upon the demoralizing effect of the recent orders and was followed by about a dozen speakers, all of whom scored the proposed changes severely.

It was pointed out by the various speakers that the business of raising young chicks has been established in South Westport, and considerable business has been done in the poultry and egg line. Improved plants have been constructed, and with the opening of the Parcel Post Service the farmers and poultry dealers were given the opportunity to carry on an extensive business. Under the present system of rural delivery one section of the town receives its mail in the morning and the other section in the evening, thus enabling the people to receive their orders by mail and fill the orders for distribution in the morning mail. It was stated that if the present system of delivery is revamped the service formerly given from Westport will be transferred to the head of Westport post office and lines will be changed so that the whole thing will be in a demoralized condition. Evening papers will not be received until they are a day old, and men in the poultry business will be from one to two days behind in their business transactions by mail.

If the proposed changes go into effect, it was pointed out that a substitute carrier in South Westport, a woman, will sever her connection with the service as the result of the drastic orders.

Congressman GREENE said that if additions are made to some of the routes no mortal horse would be able to cover the distance required in a day. The limit at present is 24 miles a day, and the carriers would be obliged to secure automobiles to cover their routes. He also said that carriers who already have automobiles and those whose routes have been taken away from them find themselves with automobiles on their hands and no salaries.

That the citizens of Somerset are stirred up to white heat over the recent orders from the Postmaster General to abolish the office of Rural Free Delivery Carrier Benjamin C. Gibbs is putting it mildly. Already several letters and telegrams have been sent to Congressman WILLIAM S. GREENE and the department at Washington protesting against the orders. A call for a public protest meeting is also being talked of.

On December 15, Aaron C. Dowse, chairman of the board of selectmen at Sherborn, Mass., sent the following letter to the office of Representative WILLIAM H. CARTER, Massachusetts, in Washington:

I have read copies of the two letters written to you by Hon. J. L. Blakslee, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and it is quite apparent that the official in question misunderstands the conditions that control and the situation that obtains at the present time in Sherborn.

In his letter of November 6 he writes of a "more systematic arrangement," and declares that there is no reason to believe "that the patrons will be seriously inconvenienced thereby." My answer is that our people are seriously inconvenienced. Facts outweigh theories, and we who receive the mail under the present very "systematic (?) arrangement" are daily witnesses to the truth of my statement. He further asserts that "according to reports only three families will be required to relocate their boxes," referring to those on Pleasant Street, who for the first time in 13 years are thus inconvenienced. How about the families on Bullard Street? Was there a report on that street? The statement that "with the exception of families residing on the road between Western Avenue and Sherborn post office all will receive direct service through the latter office without having to change their post-office address" sounds queer and very inaccurate to the residents of Main Street, north of Dowse's corner, and the residents of Everett Street, more than 15 families in all, who are put into the Framingham office and must change their post-office address from Sherborn to Framingham. A mile only from the local post office, on the principal street, and in the most populous part of the town they can not now get their evening mail at the local office. It is very evident that the "reports" received by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General were misleading, to say the least. "In view of the foregoing facts and in the absence of any evidence" he refused to postpone inaugurating the new arrangements. I think I have shown that the foregoing are not "facts," and I ask how evidence could be presented.

When the route, now mutilated, was arranged (some of it when Senator JOHN W. WEEKS was our Representative in Congress), our people were consulted, our conditions carefully studied, and our wishes considered. So far as I am able to ascertain, not a citizen of Sherborn was consulted before the present plan was outlined. Without our knowledge the arrangements were made, a peremptory order for the change was issued, and we are then refused a postponement because we have not presented "evidence," although we did file protests signed by nearly every citizen of Sherborn. If one of the inspectors will confer with our people we'll produce the evidence.

"It is not the department's purpose to injure or curtail the rural service," he continues. The service in Sherborn has been injured and has been curtailed. He asks "for suggestions looking to the establishment of additional service in your [Mr. CARTER'S] territory now without such service." My suggestion is that he give—restore—that service to the residents of Pleasant and Bullard Streets in Sherborn.

In his letter of November 15 he says: "The main objection against the discontinuance of the route arises through an assumption that the action presaged the discontinuance of the post office in Sherborn," and declares that certain mail gathered by the carrier is to be delivered uncanceled at the Sherborn office; but he forgets that by the present arrangement all the Everett Street mail, much on Main Street, and all collected after leaving the office on return from Farm Road, goes to Framingham. To kill by starvation is a slower process than to kill by the bullet, but none the less cruel and none the less sure.

Maple Street is also Framinghamized. On that street resides the secretary of our board of selectmen. All our town letterheads, etc., bear the imprint Sherborn. It is important that we get both the morning and evening mail. We don't propose to change our town name or town literature to Framingham. The result is that our secretary and other residents on Maple Street forego their rural delivery and get their mail at the local office. And still we are assured that no one "outside of three families" is inconvenienced. Our case is different from those cities in the Boston postal district. There the mail is addressed not to Boston, but to the particular city—Malden, Everett, Newton, as the case may be. The city does not lose its civic individuality.

It is to be presumed that the department having in charge the United States mails desires to secure and encourage the largest possible efficiency, and that the quickest possible delivery of mail marks a large part of that efficiency. The convenience, satisfaction, and accommodation of mail recipients constitutes the real test. By that test the efficiency of our rural-mail delivery has been impaired 50 per cent. The primitive is reinstalled and the modern is relegated to the scrap heap. Because our mail carrier desired to give us the best possible service, he purchased an automobile and was able to reduce the time in going over the route one-half. For this enterprise he is punished, or so it seems to us. We now have a one-horse cart delivery and the accompanying schedule shows how the Post Office Department has slowed up its service. I notice that in the South the carrier routes are being motorized, and the department has been sharply criticized therefor, the roads there being bad. Putting auto delivery on bad roads in the South and West and displacing that same delivery in Massachusetts, where the roads are good, seems a bit strange to the uninitiated.

But that isn't all. The department has, so far as our mail service is considered, cut the town in two. It has halved it right on its main street and its most populous village only a mile distant from the office. It prevents these people thus Framinghamized from getting their evening mail at the office, and it is now impossible to get mail until the next day—the Boston evening paper and the near-by papers that contain our local news.

Now contrast the present delivery with the former. Bear in mind that I am in no way criticizing the carrier, Mr. Hollis. He has been given a route altogether too long and has had placed on his shoulders a burden too great for any man. He does the best he can. If the patrons suffer, the fault is not his, but the authority that imposed the task upon him. Take note also that the schedule is a fair-weather schedule; what it will be during the winter storms and spring thaws I hate to contemplate. The delivery begins late, and lateness is multiplied by lateness with every mile covered. In this schedule I am naming only a few recipients at different points on the route; of course, all intervening points show a corresponding difference in time between the old and new schedule.

Our last morning mail arrives at our local office at 8.30 a. m. Mr. Goulding left the office at 9 a. m. Mr. Hollis leaves at 10.30 a. m. He would leave it at even a later hour but for the fact that our local postmistress routes and bundles the mail, which I understand is really not a part of her official duty. As it is, the mail remains in the office two hours after arrival before the carrier takes it from the office.

The first stop is at the house of Norman B. Douglass, who is within a half minute's walk of the station where the mail arrives, and half a mile distant from the post office; the mail which he sees leave the station at 8.25 a. m. he now receives by carrier at 10.45 a. m. Mr. Goulding delivered it at 9.10 a. m. My own mail (Lake Street) I previously received at 9.45 a. m.; now at 11 to 11.15 a. m. Note also that Mr. Goulding before coming down Lake Street had to cover Main and Everett Streets to the Natick line, now set off to the Framingham route. Oscar H. Howe, at the extreme south of Sherborn, previously received his mail at 10.45 a. m.; now at 12.05 p. m. Milo F. Campbell, on South Main Street, a mile from the local office, previously received mail at 11 a. m.; now at 12.30 p. m. Rev. H. E. Bray, on Farm Road, half a mile from local office, previously received mail at 10 a. m.; now at 1 p. m. James F. Leland, southwest Sherborn, previously received his mail at 11.45 a. m.; now at 3 p. m. I am told that his son mounts his bicycle in the morning, goes 5 miles to the Framingham High School, attends all the sessions of that school, returns home, and arrives there before his parents receive their morning mail. Take another case, Mr. Leslie Philbrook, on Western Avenue—and all along that avenue are in like condition. He is less than a mile from Framingham, from which point our carrier makes his start in the morning. Previously he received his mail at 11 to 11.15 a. m.; now he gets it at 4 p. m. And this illustrates pointedly how little consideration the planners of the present "systematic arrangement" gave to the convenience and needs of mail recipients. Mr. Philbrook's interests are naturally with Framingham, it being his nearest population center. Now, he is put into a Sherborn route and people whose interests are in Sherborn—or Natick as a population center—are put in the Framingham route. Had the department deliberately planned to perfect a system entirely out of consonance with the people's interests, it could not have done it more effectively than in the existing arrangement.

Is this the service which we, a live town, less than 25 miles from Boston, are entitled to?

I inclose schedule in tabulated form, showing time of past and present mail delivery by carrier. I also inclose a sketch showing how the town is cut in two. At Dowse's corner the two routes almost interlock.

I am not criticizing efforts at economy, although I think the Post Office Department is the last branch of our Government where penuriousness should be practiced. "There is that scattereth and maketh rich and there is that withholdeth more than is meet that tendeth to poverty," particularly in the Postal Service.

I believe an arrangement could have been made—had our people been consulted—whereby Mr. Goulding, leaving the local office immediately after the arrival of the last morning mail, could have covered all of Sherborn except the distinctive village at north Sherborn; could have given quicker service than we are now getting, and enable us to preserve our civic entirety to which our history as a township—incorporated 240 years ago—entitles us.

Mr. Blakslee in a recent address said: "I concede that there may be some errors; there may be some inaccuracies; there may be some instances where better arrangements could have been made; and here and now I emphatically state that, given time, all such inaccuracies will be corrected and that nowhere, when substantial representation shall be made showing conclusively that the department has been in error, will there be one day's delay in a correction thereof." We await the correction, pointing to his statement in regard to the few obliged to change post-office address as a specific error.

In conclusion, speaking as a citizen, as chairman of the board of selectmen, as representative to the legislature from this district, and voicing the unanimous sentiment of our people, I pronounce the present arrangement unsatisfactory, impairing the efficiency of our carrier service full 50 per cent. We hope you may be able to convince the department that our citizens are not querulous faultfinders, but have a substantial grievance, and one that should be remedied without "one day's delay." It may be the department inherited, as Mr. Blakslee says, "a system that would have wrecked any business house." It is equally true any business house impairing its service as the department has impaired it in Sherborn would be "on the rocks" in 60 days. We ask for no "special privilege," but only what the Postmaster General says it is his object to accomplish, "efficiency in the operation of the Postal Service."

MICHIGAN.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Michigan was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Adrian (Mich.) Daily Telegram.

(2) Letter to the Detroit Times by Ami Whitney, of Quincy, Mich.

(3) Article appearing in the Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal, issue June 24.

(4) Article appearing in the Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal June 22.

(5) Article appearing in the Owosso Argus in June, 1915.

(6) Article appearing in the Flint Daily Journal June 28.

(7) Article "Farms and its affairs," page edited by J. H. Brown in the Battle Creek Inquirer.

(8) Article appearing in the Grand Rapids Herald of December 28.

(9) Article appearing in the Mount Clemens Monitory September 24.

(10) Article appearing on September 22 in the News-Palladin, of Benton Harbor, Mich.

(11) Article appearing in the November 16 issue of the Grand Rapids Herald.

(12) Article appearing in November, 1915, in the Grand Rapids Herald.

(13) Additional editorial printed in the Grand Rapids Herald the same month.

(14) Article appearing in the issue of December 2 of the Lenox Standard.

(15) Editorial published in a Michigan daily (Herald).

And in the same issue the Daily Telegram says again:

The principal trouble with the people of Lenawee County, who have been complaining over poor rural mail service since the latest order of the Postmaster General went into effect, appears to have its source in the fact that many of them have to walk distances varying from 300 feet to half a mile for the mail which, before the order, was delivered at their doors.

Telephone interviews with practically every postmaster in the county has developed information leading one to believe that the most serious thing the Postal Department at Washington has committed has been that of inconveniencing its rural patrons. Were Michigan farmers so unfortunately situated as some of their less lucky brothers in other States they would be thankful for the opportunity to walk only half a mile for daily mail service. Once accustomed to the service which was enjoyed in this county before the order went into effect, however, it is a hard matter to take a step backward, particularly when that step means inconvenience which is not rewarded by any better service.

Some carriers have been laid off, some have had their routes lengthened, others have had their mileage diminished, and all the offices, without exception, report some change in their rural organization, due to the new system which has been in effect just 10 days.

One carrier, Mr. Norcross, was laid off at the Adrian office. His district covered that part of the county northwest of the city in the vicinity of Wolf Creek, and it is now covered by routes Nos. 1 and 2 from Adrian and one route from Clayton.

Route No. 1 is extended 2 miles, and No. 2 is increased a like distance. No. 3 gets a 7-mile boost. No. 5 gets 4 miles and No. 6 gets 5 miles. No. 7 is the only route out of Adrian which remains unchanged, while No. 8 has 7 miles added to it.

Palmyra carriers have a total of 8 miles saddled to their daily travels, one carrier taking over 4 miles formerly served from Jasper and the other taking a like distance from the Deerfield office.

At Tipton, from where the protests came in the largest numbers and in the loudest manner, one entire route is taken away. The postmaster said this week that the territory of the discontinued route is being covered by carriers out of Adrian over worse roads than those which could be traversed by the Tipton carrier.

The Tipton postmaster stated that the majority are coming directly to the office at Tipton for their mail.

Two routes at Clayton were altered, one being shortened two miles and the other increased 6 miles. The 2 miles taken from the first carrier embraced a stretch of road 1 mile in length on which the carrier had to double back. The stretch has been abandoned, and the people living on it march to the corner if they want their daily paper.

A. F. Gardner, of Jasper, No. 2, was unfortunate enough to have a route which the department considered should be eliminated, and so one out of Jasper now serves 200 people, whereas before the 15th of this month the two routes served 300 people. The other hundred do the Edward Payson Weston stunt daily to the crossroads.

Hudson, No. 1, loses quite a distance, 8 miles being handed to the man from Addison. Hudson gains 2 miles, however, from Pittsford, outside the county.

Six miles are taken from Morenci, No. 3, and the salary of the carrier is also reduced. No. 2 is extended to the town line at Fairfield, and the Canandaigua territory, formerly served from Morenci, is taken over by Hudson. "Great confusion is resulting from these changes," said the postmaster at Morenci.

An increase of 12 miles is noted at Blissfield, where the carriers take over business from Riga, Jasper, and Deerfield. The postmaster at Blissfield does not consider the changes beneficial at all, and expressed a hope for further reorganization which might result in better service and more efficient and accommodating delivery to rural patrons.

Ami Whitney, of Quincy, Mich., contributes the following letter to the columns of the Detroit Times under date of June 25:

In the Times of June 17, under the heading "Uncle Sam is extending his business and lowering rates," you say: "Uncle Sam's little old Post Office Department continues to plug away increasing the efficiency of its service, doing more things and doing them better than ever before." Now, Mr. Editor, will you allow me a little space in regard to the "increasing efficiency of its service"?

In the writer's neighborhood are eight farmhouses. The owners of these houses and farms are all good farmers and up to June 15 and for 15 years or more before that have had free rural mail delivery at their homes. A few days before June 15 we get notice that we would have to move our mail boxes to the four corners, east or west, as we might be located from the corners, or we would not get any mail, making it necessary for these people to travel from one-fourth to one-half mile, and some of them more, for their mail. Now, then, Mr. Editor, is that "increasing the efficiency of the service"? Why should our neighbor over yonder in sight have his mail brought to his door? Eight of us have to go from one-fourth to one-half mile or more for ours. If that is "increasing efficiency," we don't know what inefficiency would mean, and we are kicking. Do you blame us?

I suppose there are thousands of other farmers in the same fix that we are, and this under a Democratic administration that believes, or pretends to believe, that the people should rule. Our motto is, "The greatest good to the greatest number and free rural mail delivery to every house on every road in the country." I said we are kicking, and we are going to keep on kicking, and if it is necessary to get what now belongs to us will help to put Mr. Burleson out of the Post Office Department next year.

The Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal in its issue of June 24 prints the following news letter from the town of Fenton:

Postmaster F. H. Chaplin this morning received notification from the Post Office Department at Washington of important changes to be made in the Rural Free Delivery Service, effective July 1, whereby Fenton loses one rural carrier and the patronage of 20 miles of rural route.

One change brings the cement plants south of here under the Linden post office and the Linden carrier, Daniel Pomeroy, will deliver mail within 1 mile of here. Other patronage goes to the Grand Blanc office. W. D. Clark, who has been the carrier on route No. 5, has been discharged. In point of efficiency and the satisfaction given patrons, Clark was considered one of the best rural carriers Fenton ever had. The other four routes, with the exception of that covered by Sanford Avery, are increased to 30 miles and the salaries to $1,200 a year. Avery, the oldest carrier in point of years, will cover 21 miles at a salary of $1,000.

General dissatisfaction is being expressed at the change. Persons who all their lives have been receiving their mail at Fenton now get it either through Linden or Grand Blanc. The cement plants are placed in a puzzling position. They say that all their business is done through the Fenton post office and that it is impossible to change. If their mail is still sent to Fenton it must be forwarded to Linden and will not be delivered until after 5 o'clock the next day, after the offices are closed.

Farmers are objecting, because where heretofore the mail has been placed in boxes in front of their homes they will now have to go a quarter or half a mile to the nearest corner where the carrier will stop.

The same paper on June 22 printed the following letter from Clio:

Postmaster James J. Jones and the four rural-mail carriers out of this village were greatly surprised to receive official notification from the Post Office Department at Washington to the effect that the rural routes of this village had been extended so that they now reach to the corporation limits of Mount Morris. Each route was increased from 4 to 5 miles in length so that the average length of the routes is approximately 30 miles. Two of the carriers received a substantial increase in salary so that all the carriers are now receiving the same salary per annum.

It is believed here that the two rural carriers out of Mount Morris have been relieved of their routes through the shake-up which is to take place July 1. By lengthening the routes of this village it reasoned that the north route of Mount Morris is usurped by local carriers, while the south route has been taken over by Flint carriers. According to the routes as outlined by the Postal Department, many of the patrons will have to go half a mile to get their mail, as side routes which are not thickly populated will not be covered after July 1. The extension in mileage will add approximately 200 families to the patrons of the local office, but as the routes extend to within half a mile of Mount Morris, it is doubtful whether the patronage there will be very large.

WE PROTEST AGAINST SERVICE MUTILATION.

Apropos of the recent mass meeting—June 19—Corunna, protesting against rural route changes in that locality, the Owosso Argus, in a recent issue, says:

Reports from Washington state that the protests made by the rural mail patrons of Michigan will be given consideration. The protests were made as a result of the rerouting of the routes in Shiawassee and other counties in Michigan.

Officers of the Post Office Department are reported as saying that the routes will be changed in some instances, if it can be proved to their satisfaction that the present routing is not better. It is said that charges of politics such as made at the protest meeting in Shiawassee County have hurt the cause of the protestants. The Post Office Department declares that a cry of politics is always one of the first to be raised when any change is made from the old order.

Nothing directly has been heard by the members of the Shiawassee committee regarding its protest.

The Flint (Mich.) Daily Journal in a later issue, June 28, says:

The centering of rural free delivery routes on the larger cities is the object of a new ruling of the Post Office Department, which takes effect in Genesee County Thursday. By this ruling a tenth route is to be added to the nine already in operation from the Flint post office, while all over the county routes are to be consolidated and in many cases carriers dropped from the service in order that the remaining men shall cover beats approximately 30 miles in length. Salaries are standardized at $1,200 a year, except in a few instances.

The new order adds in the neighborhood of 300 families to the number already served by the Flint office, while the patronage of the smaller post offices throughout the county is correspondingly decreased. Then, too, there are a number of patrons added who were not reached by the rural service heretofore.

The chief purpose of the centralization scheme, as explained by Postmaster Baker, is to bring farmers who live in the vicinity of the larger cities under the "local zone" of the Parcel Post System, thereby reducing the rates to be paid for the delivery of farm produce directly from producer to consumer, and bringing such produce directly into the city without the necessity of transferring it at another office. It is expected also that the new ruling will cut down the expenses of the rural free delivery.

While considerable objection has arisen from some of the village post offices throughout the county, particularly at Fenton, where a peculiar situation has developed, local officials are of the opinion that the change can be effected with but little confusion. Some of the rural communities report that patrons are objecting to the change because in a number of instances the mail is deposited in boxes at the nearest corner for persons who are not directly on the route, instead of being delivered at their doors as formerly. There are but few such cases on routes originating at the Flint office, according to Postmaster Baker, while there are several instances where persons who formerly had to travel some distance to get their mail now have it delivered at their doors.

In forming the new routes, Postmaster Baker has notified all patrons that their mail boxes must be marked with the name and a number which will be supplied by the carrier. This is to aid substitutes who may be called upon to cover the routes, and unless the regulation is complied with the carriers will refuse to deliver mail.

To aid in the readjustment the postmaster has notified all patrons of the routes leading from Flint of their new addresses, asking them to notify their correspondents and publishers of newspaper and periodicals for which they subscribe of the new address, giving their present addresses also.

In regard to the situation at Fenton, where the change has put the cement plants on the Linden routes, although they are just outside of Fenton, much to the inconvenience of the factory men, Postmaster Baker is of the opinion that some sort of arrangement may be made whereby the companies may continue to get their mail from the Fenton office.

The Linden (Mich.) Leader printed the following item in its issue of July 2:

A number of our farmers are indignant over the changing of the rural-route system in this part of the county, which change was made by somebody that we think has qualified for membership in the bonehead club.

Our three carriers are to make about 5 to 10 miles farther each day. Some have increased in patrons, while others have lost.

Our carriers go within a mile or so of the following towns, Gaines, Durand, Swartz Creek, Grand Blanc, and Fenton, which, we think, is needless, as some other carriers come about the same distance from Linden, and we lose some good patrons that do their trading here. But more will get their mail from Gaines, which means that the Parcel Post System is no good to them, for the Linden merchants used to send numerous articles to them as their orders were telephoned in. This will be a loss to the Government in this one town. What must it mean in the same circumstances throughout the whole United States?

It used to be that when a route was laid out a man was sent here to look the ground over, but now they change it entirely down at Washington, and we must abide by it. Who runs this Government, the people or the politicians?

Some politicians will find out who elected them to office in the next campaign. We don't blame our President Wilson for this, any more than we would blame our principal of our high school if a couple of children got into a fight on the way home from school. We think the circumstances are similar.

The Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Republican on July 6 published the following news item from the town of Rowley:

Democratic economy isn't relished by the farmers of Buchanan County, nor by the rural mail carriers of this vicinity. Heretofore there have been three rural mail carriers from this place, but recently an order went into effect reducing the number to two. The farmers living on a part of the former route now have to walk a mile for their mail, instead of having it delivered at their doors. Some of them decline to do this, and they go to town for it once or twice a week, as they used to do in the old days before there was any rural free delivery.

There have been several indignation meetings, and some petitions have been sent to Washington. But that has had no effect. The Democratic administration is getting the country further into debt every day, owing to the failure of the Democratic tariff to provide sufficient revenue to run the Government. Consequently rural free delivery now exists in name only.

Still other reductions are to go into effect the 1st of August. Instead of having two rural free delivery mail carriers, the Government intends to have but one. He is to have an automobile, and he is expected to cover all the territory now covered by two mail carriers.

He can do this in fine weather, but in rainy weather and in winter weather he will have to hire a substitute to drive half his route with a team, while he himself drives the other half. He will receive $1,800 a year, and pay his substitute from this. The two mail carriers now get $1,200 a year, making a total of $2,400. When there were three the total was $3,600, which is just twice as much as the Government will be paying after August 1.

The "Farm and its Affairs" page, edited by J. H. Brown, in the Battle Creek (Mich.) Inquirer:

Scores of farmers have spoken to us about the recent changes in rural mail delivery and asked if something could not be done by the clubs and granges to ask the Post Office Department to stop cutting off and changing so many routes.

It would do little good at the present time to kick about the changes. The Postmaster General is trying to reduce expenses in some way and is taking it out of the farmers and rural mail carriers instead of reducing his own salary. Really, it is all right to lop off expenses in the Rural Delivery Service where practical, but we fear a mistake is being made in this wholesale changing and slashing.

The plan of increasing a route several miles where an automobile is to be used is all right from spring to late fall, but it will be impossible to keep up this kind of delivery in southern Michigan during the cold winter months, with snow knee deep in some of the roads.

Lots of farmers will be obliged to go without their mail regularly and others will be obliged to go to the post office as in the old days before the service was organized. All three routes out of Galesburg have been discontinued. Several farmers within sight of that village will have to have their post-office address changed to Kalamazoo, 10 or 12 miles away, and even the daily papers will be another day older when they finally arrive at the farmers' doors.

Experiments are all right, but we think the Postmaster General is making some of them backward this summer.

The only thing to do is to wait until Congress convenes next December. Then there will be a mighty big kick brought in by scores of Senators and Representatives from their farmer constituents from one end of the country to the other. The Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads will have their hands full for a while, and we are of the opinion that Mr. Burleson's head will swim before he gets through with this rural route changing job.

We are interested in this matter because it was in our old farm home near Climax that rural mail delivery was started in Michigan. We helped lay out the first route and published in the Michigan Farmer the following week a full front-page map showing both the routes traveled by L. A. Clark and Willis Lawrence. These routes have not been materially changed during these 18 years of service. Now a portion of one of the Galesburg routes has been given over to a Climax carrier.

Of course, with better roads the automobile can be used for about eight months in the year, but no dependence can be made on automobiles for rural delivery in the wintertime in this section of the country.

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald of December 28, says:

The Herald continues to receive letters in condemnation of recent rural free delivery changes in western and northern Michigan. Many of these letters come from men who are in some way connected with the Postal Service and who therefore dare not give their names for publication lest the penalty be the addition of further unbearable conditions in which to work. Nevertheless these letters are eloquent in continuing demonstration of the fact that rural free delivery efficiency is being serious impaired and that rural free delivery carriers are being subjected to impositions which are as unjust as they are undeserved. For example, we quote the following from a letter received to-day:

"It seems to be in order for we common people to give our experiences through the columns of your paper as to the economic effect of the tearing up of the old rural routes and the rerouting of them. The two routes out of ——— did not escape. At the big meeting of postmasters in Saginaw our local agent for the Government felt it best to add 4 miles of the heaviest mail and worst roads of No. 2 mail route to No. 1 route, giving the old gentleman, who had all he could handle and who has been so faithful for 14 years as a carrier, a dose that he can not manage in the snowy winter months. The change took effect December 1. The carrier did his work faithfully up to that time. It is said the Government sent his check for the month of November, but, for some economic reason, the postmaster says he was ordered to hold it until notified to turn it over to the carrier. What is the trouble with things? Must the cry for economy come out of we common people who work and earn what we are supposed to get? Will some one answer?"

Rural free delivery routes throughout Michigan generally have always been just as long as they could be made with any sense of humane justice to carriers or horses, and certainly just as big a burden upon carriers as efficient service could permit. The new arrangement of routes is in many instances more than carrier or horse can stand, particularly in the winter months, when our country roads are heavy and our snows are deep. When such conditions are created, rural free delivery efficiency must suffer. It is absurd and costly "economy" which undermines "efficiency."

The rural free delivery should never be permitted to take a backward step. On the contrary, every rural free delivery change should be in the direction of progress and efficiency. Nothing is more vital to farm convenience than adequate, prompt, and satisfactory mail connections. This is the function of the rural free delivery. When the Post Office Department interferes with this function it runs squarely counter to the communal welfare. We suspect that this proposition will play an important part in the great nation-wide electoral referendum which will be taken next fall when the people of the country are given their quadrennial opportunity to exercise a voice in National Government.

The Mount Clemens (Mich.) Monitor printed the following article in its news columns on September 24:

Burleson and his crowd of factotums at Washington have conferred upon the people of Macomb County a general disturbance of the mail servfice, which will be ineffective October 1. It is a bird of an arrangement.

The routes are all increased to approximately 30 miles. Anybody who knows anything at all, knows that a 30-mile route in this county is an impossibility. With good roads and weather a man with a horse or an automobile could "negotiate" such a route. No horse could get anywhere near serving such a route with bad roads.

In Mount Clemens the routes in a general way are thus: No. 1, 29.52 miles, enlarged from Washington and Utica; No. 2, 29.88 miles, enlarged from Washington; No. 3, 29.90 miles, takes 4 miles out of New Baltimore; No. 4, 29.60 miles, takes out of Roseville; No. 5, 30 miles, takes out of Roseville; No. 6, 29.63 miles; No. 7, 25.90 miles. Nos. 6 and 7 are rearrangements of routes out of the city, No. 7 also taking out of Warren. In all about 100 families are taken from other offices and given to Mount Clemens.

The Roseville carrier is transferred to Halfway, and Roseville loses her route. At Halfway, William Kissell, Republican, is fired.

Utica loses route No. 4, and George M. MacGuill, Republican, is bounced. The office may lose enough to back to fourth class. Romeo loses route No. 4, and William Scott, Republican, is bounced. Washington holds her two routes, greatly lengthened. No reduction at Lenox and Richmond, but routes are lengthened. No carriers let out at New Haven, but about 4 miles added to each route. Warren loses one routes, B. M. Newberry, Republican, fired, and other routes extended. New Baltimore loses one route and Frank Bacon, Republican, is fired. Other route extended. Memphis loses one of three routes, and W. G. Barnard, Republican, is fired. We do not hear that Armada loses, although routes are extended.

The News-Palladin, of Benton Harbor, Mich., printed the following news story on September 22:

Rural route patrons served by the Benton Harbor post office are coming to the front with remonstrance petitions against the operation of the new order of the Post Office Department which, effctive October 1, cuts two routes from the local office.

Nearly every route of the city's six has forwarded protests to Postmaster Campmell, Congressman HAMILTON, and post-office officials.

Patrons are unanimous in voicing their sentiments against the change. Among the other reasons cited for protest in the new order is against the civil-service doctrine which holds that length of service shall be given preference. In this instance Carriers Wallis and Phares, two of the veterans of the local department, are to be removed and younger men retained.

Following are given a few of the reasons as cited by one very familiar with the service, relative to the unfavorable results that will be worked by the operation of the new program: An increase in mileage traveled for each carrier from 5 to 10 miles. An increase in weight of 800 to 1,000 pounds per month. An increase in pieces of mail of about 50 per cent. An increase in expense to each carrier of from $150 to $200 per year. An increase of time put in by each carrier of from two to three hours per day; a consequent decrease of wages for extra time and equipment of about $300 per year. Many miles of poor crossroads substituted for stone roads. An almost impossible regular service in the wintertime, with carriers returning after dark at best. Service withdrawn from many patrons served for years; other patrons required to get mail from other offices, causing delays. Delays on outgoing mail, consequently crippling Parcel Post Service. Sacrifices service of country patrons, without similar effect on city deliveries. Deprives men of positions who have given years of service to the Government. Cuts out automobile service on most of the routes. Gives Benton Harbor same number of routes as village of Coloma.

It is stated that rural-route patrons expect the aid of the city, chamber of commerce, and all other bodies in their effort to change the plan of the department.

It is possible that resolutions will be forwarded to the chamber and city council asking for such aid.

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald of November 16 says:

One Grand Rapids man, who is in a position to know whereof he speaks, yet who can not allow his name to be made public in this connection, frankly commented yesterday upon the folly of rural mail route procedure as now going on in Kent County. Here are some of the points he made:

"The change of rural routes as proposed by the Post Office Department is a joke.

"Take, for instance, route 12, which under the old system is out of Reeds Lake; the shift puts this route over on the west side, out of Station A, serving patrons west of Grand Rapids instead of east. Many business men in and out of Grand Rapids have this and other route lists. They will address people around Reeds Lake who were formerly on this route at rural route 12. The mail wil go to route 12 on the west side first and will then be resent to Reeds Lake, which makes a delay of probably one day in delivery. Merchants use the same mailing lists for six years and longer. In time trace of the people who lived along the old rural route 12, out of Reeds Lake, will be lost by the new rural route 12 carrier and Station A postmaster, and these letters will go to the dead-letter office through no fault of either the sender or addressee.

"When rural-route lists first were made out by the Post Office Department you could go to the post office and get the names. Now, unless you are an officer of the law seeking a criminal, you are not allowed access to the lists. Business men who wish to reach prospective patrons in their territory through the mails can not get these lists of persons living along rural routes unless they buy them from men who go to the trouble of driving over the routes and indexing all residents. This means they may be forced to pay an exorbitant price for these lists which should be open to them the same as the city directory is open to the public.

"They talk about the postal deficit. No wonder there is a deficit. In a private business, if the overhead expense was eating up the profits as it is in the Post Office Department, the business man would seek more business to cut down the deficiency. Does the Post Office do that? If it did it would open its lists to the business men, thereby assuming more business. In this way the department could help materially in making the parcel-post plan pay.

"Closing these lists to the public will make a difference of from 10 to 33⅓ per cent in rural-route business, I believe.

"The average number of families on a rural route is about 125. Average pay of rural-route carriers is $1,200. How many farmers do you suppose would pay $10 a year to have their mail delivered? Then why not let the business man stand part of the expense by allowing him the use of these lists so that he will send more mail and therefore increase your revenue?

"If the Post Office would do business efficiently, even rural routes would pay profits.

"Changing of these routes in many cases is absolutely foolish. These changes may increase the efficiency of the carrier, but at the same time they decrease the value of the route to its patrons. Farmers living near a town and doing their trading there in many cases will receive their mail over routes starting from a town much farther distant. Take the case of the people around Martin in Allegan County. One route starts from Martin and there is a post-office station there, but another route from Plainwell passes directly through the center of the town of Martin, serving many people there. Farmers living a few rods from the Martin station will receive their mail from Plainwell, 9 miles away.

"A business man in Grand Rapids has taken the trouble to go over the old routes and compile a list of residents. The routes are now so changed that his list is of no value, yet he is not allowed access to the post-office list.

"Rural-route lists, made out years ago, are still being used by many business houses. As a result much mail comes addressed to persons who have moved or to dead people. This results in mail piling up for the postmaster. If the present lists were open to the public, these old ones would be thrown away. The present system favors the advertising man, who takes the trouble to get up a list and can then charge his own price."

The same paper printed this a day or so later:

Some of the more glaring impossibilities in the proposed rerouting of Kent County's rural mail service are being corrected. One or two of the absurdities to which the Herald gave some editorial attention last week have been remedied. Postmaster Hogadone, of Grand Rapids, who is bearing the brunt of the effort to bring some semblance of reason and service out of the proposed economies and curtailments, is struggling brave-heartedly with his task and is making some progress. This is slightly encouraging. And it should be encouraging to other farmers who find the rerouting plans outrageously impossible. All who have a complaint to make should make it now, while the pot is still boiling.

Ventilate your troubles, farmers!

Let the postmaster and the public know the nature and the extent of whatever embarrassment the new rural free delivery curtailment and rearrangement in Kent County will bring you.

Don't bank on it too strongly; but there is some slight possibility of relief for the more aggravated cases.

Of course, no amount of tinkering can keep Kent's rural free delivery efficiency up to previous measure under the new economy plan of things. There must be no expectation of any such miracle. We must settle down to a general acceptance of the bitter fact that the rural free delivery is going to suffer for a year or two. And pity 'tis 'tis true, true.

But if we holler loud enough, perhaps, we can at least escape a maximum of inconvenience and embarrassment and depreciated service.

And here is another editorial from the Herald:

The more we hear of rural free delivery rerouting plans in Kent County the more evident becomes the unescapable conclusion that a serious blow is being leveled at rural mail-dellvery efficiency. Heretofore a rural mail route has been about 24 miles. This is a long, hard pull day in and day out. It is pretty nearly the maximum strain upon man and horse when winter intrenches for a three months' Michigan stay. Now it is proposed to make the routes 30 miles. Economy is the purpose. If the Government was on the verge of bankruptcy we would expect the Government to economize accordingly. But the Government is not on the verge of bankruptcy. It would not even be hard up if any common sense were displayed in our fiscal policies. And certainly we are not so hard up that the American farmer and the rural free delivery carrier must be penalized.

The Herald wants to hear from more rural free delivery residents who are in mail trouble. The best possible means to minimize this trouble is to make the trouble known. Tell the Herald and the postmaster and the public your story. Farmers who have had their mail at their instances walk from one-quarter of a mile to a mile away in order to be served. Many farmers will be unable to receive their mail better than every other day during the winter under new arrangements. Farmers living within a short distance from a town which is their natural trading center will now be served from some other town which is comparatively remote and unhandy and impossible as a trading center.

This is a serious business. It is serious for the farmers themselves, because good mail service is a business necessity on the farm these days. It is serious for the carriers, because there is a limit to endurance. It is serious to the entire county—the city included—because any blow at rural mail efficiency will find its reflection in troubles that will in one way and another come home to all of us. The least that the farmers should do is to be very prompt and very emphatic in making their protests heard.

The Lenox (Mich.) Standard in its issue of December 2 says:

Protests against the recent revision of the rural mail routes are being heard on all sides, as the service has been rendered unsatisfactory. Routes have been increased in length to approximately 30 miles, sufficient for a man and horse in good weather and on good roads, but out of the question at the season now approaching. The increase in mileage decreased the number of carriers, without regard to length of service, veterans being dropped from the lists promiscuously and young men employed. Congressman S. W. BEAKES, of Ann Arbor, is framing a bill which will be introduced as soon as Congress convenes. If it becomes a law the Post Office Department will be required to deliver mail at the gate of every farmhouse, providing access is given to it over good roads.

This editorial was taken from a recent issue of a Michigan daily from Ada, Mich., by a route patron:

The Herald sincerely hopes that the rural free-delivery rerouting in Michigan will work to the advantage of the service. But the physical burdens which are to be thrown upon carriers and their horses are such that it is improbable that the forthcoming winter's demonstration will prove anything other than that the rearrangements are vitally hostile to even passably acceptable rural mail service.

For example—and it is but one example out of many that are available—we are advised of one Michigan instance where three routes have been consolidated into two, with the result that the two new routes are each in excess of 30 miles in length, and each entirely beyond the physical capacity of a carrier and horse to serve daily in the winter time. Even as the routes originally existed, one of the three routes (where there are now but two) was 26 miles in length, and it was all the carrier could do to cover his ground. The carrier on this 26-mile route has always had to work a long day even in the fairest weather. At some times he has been forced to labor far into the night to cover his route. In the worst weather he has frequently been forced to make a portion of his trip on foot. What possible chance for his existence would a carrier have if 4 more miles were added to such a route; and what more inhuman burden could be put upon a horse; and under these latter conditions what chance has the rural free-delivery patron for continuous and satisfactory service?

After a rural carrier has toiled for years, faithfully serving his patrons under conditions that were frequently exhausting, it seems to the Herald that he has earned something better than summary discharge in the name of impossible "economy." One such carrier, for example, after 30 years in the Postal Service and after nearly 6 years of continuous satisfactory service on a particularly trying route, has been discharged with just 12 days' notice.

Another carrier, whose name can not be given because of the penalty which lese majeste involves at present, comments to the Herald (in private protest against the new burden put upon him) as follows:

"I believe I know as much about what a man and horse ought to stand as a correspondence-school department clerk with a map of our county before him."

Certainly it is an axiom that a rural free-delivery carrier can not be efficient if he is overburdened. Inefficient service can not disguise itself in the name of "economy."

The new plans that are now being worked out for Michigan are a serious menace to the welfare of rural free delivery as we see it. If the contrary can possibly come true, however, we shall thank Heaven for the miracle.

The problem is a serious one for farmers and rural-route residents. If they like the new arrangements, let them say so. If they do not, let them be equally assertive, because no iniquity can stand against persistent publicity. The Herald wants to hear from the people on these rerouted routes.

MINNESOTA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Minnesota was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Announcement carried under date of August 10 in the Anoka (Minn.) Herald.

(2) Article appearing under date of December 1 in the Litchfield (Minn.) Independent.

(3) Article appearing in the Saturday Review (Litchfield, Minn.) shortly after the above article appeared.

(4) Article appearing under date of August 19, in the Ortanville (Minn.) Journal.

The Anoka (Minn.) Herald of August 10 makes the following announcement:

Orders from the office of the Postmaster General were received at the various post offices in Anoka County Saturday which worked havoc in the splendid Rural Mail Service which has been built up in the county during the past ten years or more.

So far as is known, no inspector has visited the county to examine the routes and the needs of the people whom they serve. The order seems to be the result of a pin-headed effort at the department in Washington to cripple the service here in order to reduce the carrier force and show a paper saving in expense at the cost of the taxpayers' discomfort.

The Herald learns that four of the rural routes leaving the Anoka post office have been materially increased in length—from 5 to 6 miles each. Route No. 1 has been lengthened 5 miles. Joseph Clark is carrier. Route No. 2 has been extended 5 miles. Route No. 3, Forest Hunter carrier, has been changed very largely. * * * This route may possibly be handled in the summer, but in the winter can not be on account of a part of the road being abandoned in the winter from lack of travel and much snow. In making this change the department deprived Crooked Lake of Free Delivery Service.

Route No. 4, served by Archie Lang, has also been changed. Route No. 5, carried by James Green, has not yet been disturbed. In St. Francis, route No. 2, carried by Harry Miner, has been transferred to Isanti; route No. 1, by Albert Steinke, transferred to Bethel; and route No. 3, John Emmons, appears to have been discontinued. From Constance there are two routes: Route No. 1, carried by Oel Wold, and route No. 2, carried by Sam Severson. These have been increased. Carrier Laughlin's route from Fridley seems to have been discontinued.

There are 14 routes in Anoka County. Nearly all are affected and all to the detriment, apparently, of the people served.

The objection from the patrons will be vigorous, but whether of any use is a question.

The new arrangement goes into effect on August 16—next Monday—too short a time in which to bring pressure to bear upon the department and the individual responsible for the unfortunate change.

The Newcastle (Pa.) Herald printed the following editorial in its issue of August 11:

Postmaster General Burleson has denied with some heat the charge that rural free delivery was being restricted or that extensions were made where they are made at the expense of the carriers. The murmuring which has pursued the order reestablishing a number of routes, with the result of cutting out some thousands of carriers, has brought a rejoinder from the head of the department. He has come to the front with the suggestion that what he has done has been in the interest of efficiency and economy.

In the first place he declares that "retraces" have been eliminated; that all overlapping of routes has been cut out; and that each route has been made to bear the maximum. This has produced such a saving, he says, that a large number of carriers have been dispensed with, while the saving has made possible a big extension in the services where the extension has seemed to be needed.

Mr. Burleson's statement is a virtual admission that the economy practiced in his department is at the expense of the underpaid mail carriers. It is an admission that what has been achieved in the way of increasing the service without increasing the cost has been brought about by laying a heavier burden upon the backs of those whom we might call the day laborers of the Post Office Service.

The general managers and the thousand and one high-salaried officers with their brass cuspidors and mahogany furniture are still on the job at Washington with no suggestion from Mr. Burleson that they shorten their golf hours and increase the hours of service. With the increase of cost of government at Washington growing at the rate of $1,000,000 a week and the levy of a war tax upon the citizens of the country to pay for the official extravagances of the administration it is ironical to suggest the niggardly, petty, and foolhardy economy which has been put in force by Burleson, adding burdens upon already overworked shoulders and eliminating from service some to whom the employment was a prime necessity. Such grotesque and fanciful economies perform no good for the people, nor will the people be deceived by them while at the same time there proceeds waste which is so obvious and so flagrant.

The following appeared in a recent issue of the Troy (Pa.) Gazette-Register:

The Democratic administration at Washington would go far and seek long for campaign material which could be used to better advantage by its adversaries than the unreasonable demands which it is making upon the rural mail carriers. Here in Troy the carriers are not getting in from their routes until 7 o'clock, and it is the middle of August with roads in fairly good condition. What will the hour be in winter? Not earlier, certainly, than 8.30 to 9. Talk about an eight-hour day for Government employees, there's nothing to it so far as the rural carriers are concerned under the present administration. Then, too, it fired a lot of perfectly good men without cause on two weeks' notice; men who had been long in the service and were ill-prepared to undertake the readjustment forced upon them by the loss of their jobs. No reputable business house discharges good men without cause on so short notice, nor should the Government.

On December 1, the Litchfield (Minn.) Independent published this item:

Anoka has an auto rural free delivery route—length, 55 miles; pay, $1,800 per year. He takes the place of two carriers, at $1,200 each—a saving of $600. The auto carrier can easily make a trip twice as long as the ordinary route, and the intention is to put in these double routes as fast as it can be done, as a measure of economy.

A few days later the Saturday Review, another Litchfield publication, printed this communication:

EDITOR SATURDAY REVIEW: The last issue of the Independent contains a short editorial commenting upon the establishment of rural routes twice the length of the ordinary route, mentioning the one laid out in Anoka as an example of what can be done.

The Independent man says that "The auto carrier can easily make a trip twice as long as the ordinary route." If Mr. Peterson had ever left the beaten path from his print shop to the post office during the winter and spring seasons in this Northwest he would know, as everyone knows who will give one moment's thought to the matter, that such automobile routes are absolutely impracticable in the Northwest. Perhaps the Independent man can, by reason of his farseeing and unsound logic, tell us what sort of service the rural population will get when the routes are doubled in length. An auto can be used a part of the time in the Northwest—for six or eight months; but what of the rest of the year? Some people are so party blind that they will overstep the bounds of consistency in their frantic endeavors to show their approval of any old action their favorite party or party appointees may take on public matters.

The Independent has at various times shown its profound lack of knowledge of rural-route work and the growth of the rural service. A year ago at the close of the holiday season the editor stated that "even" the rural routes supplied a large portion of the holiday mail.

A MEEKER COUNTY CARRIER.

The Ortonville (Minn.) Journal, August 19, prints this editorial:

The Postmaster General has promulgated a move to use automobiles on rural routes and then double up the routes. Offices that now have six routes will maintain three, and where there are three they will undoubtedly all be consolidated into one route, one carrier serving all the patrons of the office with an auto.

This may mean a saving to the department, but it will mean the throwing out of employment of thousands that have no other means of support, and the money thus saved, in a political way, will go toward the creation of another new office, perhaps inspector of carrier autos, or something else just as foolish, in order to give some string-pulling politician a job, and the patrons of the various offices will not receive the service they are getting to-day, for there will be many stormy days, and days when the roads are bad, that the machines can not operate, and the farmers' mail will lie in the office.

Under the present system, the carriers go, regardless of weather conditions, and they all have a tender spot in the hearts of the people. A howl should go up from all parts of the country against this move, as no possible good can come from it for the people at large.

The Osseo (Minn.) Review of November 24 says:

Somebody made a fearful blunder. No preparation was made for routing the carriers from Anoka who took the routes away from Osseo. The carriers are confused. They are new in the mail service. They do not seem to realize their responsibility. They seem to have no definite route and do not sort their mail according to any system, and deliver it on the route in a haphazard way. On the route east of the Osseo-Anoka road and toward the river the carrier has been within a mile of Osseo at 7.30 in the evening.

It is generally supposed that when a rural carrier falls through any cause to cover his route before dark he must take the shortest route to his post office and reach it in the shortest possible time.

The change has been in effect now for a week. In some cases people have reported that they have received mail but a couple of times; in some cases some mail every day, but most of that belonging to neighbors. If a mail carrier can't learn his route in a week he will never learn it.

Ed Koenig claims to have received no first-class mail since the change up to Saturday night—four days. Fred Wolter, no mail in four days than that of his neighbors. Nick Aubart takes two daily papers but received none for four days. While standing in the office the writer heard John Aubart inquire if the rural delivery had been discontinued. He thought so, because he had received no mail for five days. "Well, if that is going to be the outcome of the change I will rent a box in the post office here, for I am in town two or three times a week," said Mr. Aubart. Mrs. M. H. Bennet is very much dissatisfied. She receives mail, but mainly that of her neighbors. Then the telephone is resorted to to notify those who have mail left at her house or in her box.

Then the Peterson boys, P. S. and T. L., arrive at the post office. "We don't want to register a kick, but would like to know what has become of our mail, as we have not received any since the change was made." This was several days after the change. Gabe Zimmerman received some mail but it was not his own. C. W. Purdham received one paper in four days. E. I. Cropley missed mail the 16th and 17th, the carrier being told by a neighbor where he lived. Ole T. Berg has received no Scandinavian papers and talks strongly of getting his mail in Minneapolis. Paul Schmidt received no mail for several days, and the carrier did not take the mail left in the box, so Mrs. Schmidt had to drive to Osseo to mail her letters. Mrs. Schmidt lives 2 miles from Osseo.

Joseph Leger and J. C. Staige had no mail up to Saturday, and Leo Wolter came in Saturday and asked if they are yet having rural-delivery service or if his part of Hennepin County had been abandoned. H. H. A. Schmidt came into this office Tuesday this week and stated that out of about 13 papers he takes he only received 2 last week. The Osseo Review went into the hands of the carrier Thursday morning and he did not get it until Saturday evening. This is almost criminal. Mr. Schmidt lives only 3 miles from the post office here, and to think of it taking nearly three days for the local paper to reach him is most damnable. The Review wants to ask the Anoka postmaster what becomes of this mail?

From the part of the route above mentioned east of the Osseo-Anoka Road, 23 people are now getting their mail from the Osseo post office, refusing to have it delivered by any one from Anoka. About 10 more are talking strongly of moving their boxes over on Osseo route No. 1. If they do this, it will take 33 boxes from this route, nearly half that was on old route No. 6.

The people in general say they are not going to stand for everybody handling their mail, nor are they going to stand for it being left at schoolhouses or with children to care for. They say the old routes were satisfactory, the old carriers were always accurate, and everybody was thoroughly satisfied. All say, give us back what we had in the same way we had it.

Several days before these complaints were registered the following petition was sent (November 15) to Washington from Osseo:

OSSEO, MINN., November 15, 1915.

Hon. ALBERT BURLESON,
Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In writing this letter to you we wish to advise that we have called a meeting of "protest" regarding the change of mail service affecting the routes Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 6 out of Osseo, and changes made in routes Nos. 4, 5, and 1, and are setting forth our reasons in this letter why the present standard and satisfaction should be maintained:

1. All mail will be 24 hours late for all patrons and 46 hours late for the greater part of patrons on three routes.

2. Ninety-six per cent of the people affected by change in routes do all their business in Osseo and not in Anoka.

3. Thirty families that receive their mail at the door and are cut out from service, and all families on any route will not receive any better service from proposed change.

4. Shippers of cattle and sheep receiving notices of shipment would receive their mail from Anoka, going via St. Cloud, Minn., and same would be delivered to Osseo three days late, and this affects the greater part of three routes.

We therefore ask you to give this matter careful consideration, a matter which vitally concerns patrons in a thickly settled community, and which change will result in nothing but dissatisfaction, and hope to see you restore the former good service.

Yours, very truly,

THE OSSEO FARMERS' CLUB,
B. V. DIBB, President.
H. W. GRAY, Secretary.

The club appointed P. Rougier, B. V. Dibb, and John Schrieber as a committee to go with other club committees from here, Robbinsdale, Hopkins, and St. Louis Park to see State and county committeemen, Congressmen, and Representatives, besides holding an audience with Gov. Hammond, in hopes of holding up the change until proper facts and business data can be secured, showing clearly the inadvisability of making this change.

It appears from all the information obtainable that this change, which let out the two oldest carriers out of Osseo, has created a hatred toward the guilty parties that will be felt for a long time to come.

OHIO.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Ohio was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Ohio State Journal, of Columbus, Ohio, under date of December 30.

A Washington dispatch under date of December 30 to the Ohio State Journal, of Columbus, Ohio, says:

Protests against the Post Office Department plans to motorize the Rural Delivery Service in Ohio are being received by all of the Ohio Members of Congress whose districts are affected. Representative SIMEON D. FESS will add his personal protest when he returns from Ohio to that of numerous constituents.

Objections in the proposed changes which the reorganization would make in Greene, Madison, and Warren Counties are being expressed in strong language in letters received there. It is feared that under the reorganization Yellow Springs, the home of Representative FESS, would lose all its rural routes. Other protests come from Spring Valley, Greene County, based on the supposition that under the reorganization all rural routes in the county would radiate from Xenia.

OKLAHOMA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Oklahoma was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Lahoma (Okla.) Sun.

(2) Article appearing under date of November 18 in the McClain County News, Blanchard, Okla.

(3) Article appearing in the Kiel (Okla.) Record.

(4) Article appearing in the Drummond (Okla.) Messenger.

(5) Article appearing in the Okeene Leader.

(6) Article appearing in the Perry (Okla.) Republic August 26.

The Lahoma (Okla.) Sun in a recent issue published the following:

As was predicted when the change to automobiles was made in the Rural Mail Service, there is a great deal of dissatisfaction all over the country. The change in the routes has the same effect elsewhere that it has here, and is causing many patrons to get their mail one day late besides other inconveniences.

The change was doubtless made with good intentions, but there has never been a more serious blunder by our Postal Department. Our Rural Mail Service has been the greatest service which our Government has performed for the farmers, and that service has now been badly crippled.

Now is the time to cause the authorities to feel the weight of public opinion, and the way to do this is to bring all possible influence to bear on the Government. Those who are dissatisfied with the present service should take pains to let their sentiments be known. A personal letter or a petition to your Congressman or Senator is a very efficient way to do this. Now that Congress is in session, both Congressmen and Senators are being deluged with protests, and everyone who desires a resumption of the former service should let their wishes be known.

The McClain County News, published at Blanchard, Okla., on November 18, published this:

Postmaster General Burleson's scheme to consolidate rural routes goes merrily on. We have heard much kicking on the combining of routes. The department claims it is saving money, but the test is not satisfactory to the people.

The farmers were getting good service, but it was too good to suit the politicians. The carriers were getting only a living out of their work, and after a year's work serving a consolidated route they will be in debt, and when this kind of service falls through it will be a blotch on the business ability of the administration for the Republicans and Socialists to hold up to ridicule.

Several routes have already blown up, but the people generally have not been told about it. It will all come out in the next presidential campaign. President Wilson is more than likely innocent of the bungle, but in a campaign the Chief Magistrate generally has to bear the burden of his subordinate's mistakes. We hope the Democratic managers will call a halt before this goes any further. A good way to help save the day at the next election would be to have A. S. Burleson resign.

The town of Washington may not appreciate losing a rural route and a good family. Congressmen sometimes win on election day by their ability to secure a Federal building, but a rural route is worth a Federal building every three years. There is no bragging about it being done where it hits.

There will be a so-called civil-service examination at Purcell on December 11, to determine the eligibles for motor-vehicle routes out of Byars and Purcell.

We think an examination in this case and on all consolidated routes is uncalled for and an injustice to the carriers who are already in the civil service.

This item was taken from the Kiel (Okla.) Record of a few days ago:

For the past several days there has been no mail taken on the rural routes out of the Kiel post office. The postmaster received orders to consolidate routes Nos. 1 and 2 and place same as motor route A and have one man make the route. The postmaster has used his every effort to secure some one who would take the position, but can not. The route would be 58 miles long, and would be a money-losing proposition at the salary offered. A petition has been circulated and signed by nearly every patron of this office, asking the Postmaster General to change the routes back as they formerly were.

The Drummond (Okla.) Messenger published the following in a recent issue:

A petition is being circulated among those on the rural mail route out of Drummond, but now from Enid, to change to the former route. For three days last week there was no mail delivered on this route, and the petition states that since August 1 the services have been very unsatisfactory and each day the mail is delivered at different hours, if at all, and each day a part of the mail is carried by or put in the wrong boxes. On September 14, 15, and 16 there was no mail delivered at all to patrons from Drummond office. Because of the service seemingly being worse each day the patrons desire to change. The petition is left at the Gregg store.

The Okeene Leader, Blaine County, Okla., published the following as a news item about 10 days ago:

Last Tuesday morning the rural mail carriers out of Okeene refused to make their routes. Since the department ordered the routes consolidated they have been served by temporary carriers appointed by the postmaster, who, after trying the long routes for some time, have decided that they could not make them on the stated salary. The postmaster being unable to secure carriers, the patrons are without the daily visit of the mail man.

The Perry (Okla.) Republic on August 26 printed the following:

The failure of the Democrats to pass the Post Office appropriation bill in the last Congress has shamefully crippled the rural free delivery service.

Members of Congress declare that complaints they are receiving from both rural carriers and patrons have been more numerous and bitter in the last few months than for years before.

Rural carriers claim that they have suffered chiefly on two counts—one, that, although they are under civil service, there have been hundreds of dismissals without just cause; the other, that their routes have been lengthened and their work increased without additional pay.

The complaints from patrons of the rural routes are uniformly based upon sweeping reductions in the service.

The conditions causing these complaints are due to the failure of the Post Office appropriation bill and the consequent necessity for managing the Postal Service under a reenactment of last year's appropriation.

The principal changes ordered by the department reducing the carrier force arose first by the proposed consolidation of about 1,500 routes 25 miles long into half that number 50 miles long; second, in lengthening the standard routes and still further reducing the carrier force; third, by making one carrier serve two routes on alternate days and dropping the extra carrier. It is estimated that more than 2,000 rural carriers have lost their places under these reductions.

The patrons of the rural routes base their criticisms, first, on the claim that many have had to move their mail boxes at least a half mile from their former locations, and they, instead of the carriers, must travel that distance for mail; second, that instead of getting mail six times a week they receive it only every other day; third, all these changes cripple the effectiveness of the parcel-post service, especially as to perishable goods. There is also a general complaint of the curtailment of the rural free delivery service.

Mass meetings of patrons have been held in many localities protesting against the demoralization of their service and are daily becoming more frequent.

PENNSYLVANIA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Pennsylvania was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Report of the committee on resolutions of the Ponoma Grange, No. 23, Bradford County, Pa., passed on May 27 and 28, 1915.

(2) Article appearing in the Cannonsburg (Pa.) Daily Notes in its issue of October 4.

(3) Article appearing in the Easton (Pa.) Free Press.

(4) Article appearing in the Washington (Pa.) News October 28, 1915.

(5) Article appearing in the Gazette-Times of Pittsburgh, Pa., under date of December 22, 1915.

(6) Articles appearing in the Daily Notes, published at Cannonsburg, Pa., on November 26, 27, and 29.

(7) Article appearing in the Pennsylvania Farmer, published at Philadelphia, in its issue of January 1, 1916.

On May 27 and 28 last the Bradford County (Pa.) Pomona Grange, No. 23, Patrons of Husbandry, held its one hundred and forty-seventh quarterly session at New Albany, Pa. Here is what its resolutions committee reported. The report was unanimously adopted:

Whereas the Rural Free Delivery Service, which was established in Bradford County more than 14 years ago, and since has been extended to nearly all its accessible portions, and has afforded to its patrons great benefits not previously enjoyed by them, and has proved very satisfactory in every particular; and

Whereas changes made in the service by the Post Office Department, whereby some routes have been curtailed, some extended too far for efficient service, and others abolished entirely, have resulted in an impaired and inefficient service; and

Whereas it is reported that other changes are contemplated by the department which, if made, will seriously hamper and injure the service: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Pomona Grange, No. 23, Patrons of Husbandry, of Bradford County, Pa., now assembled, That any curtailment, extension, or abolishment of this service which impairs its efficiency or deprives its patrons of its privileges will be regarded by this body as a backward step in our mail service and one that will do its members and the public at large incalculable harm, for it will be an abridgment and deprivation of rights and benefits which in many ways have been of inestimable benefit. The service as now operated is the growth and product of 14 years and use, and is satisfactory and successful, and any radical changes should be carefully considered and not adopted until after an inspection of the route by a competent official.

For these reasons we hereby enter our most earnest protest against any further mutilation of a service which has proved so great an educative force and benefit to all the people whom it serves.

A New Albany newspaper, commenting on this resolution, says:

The resolution created tense interest and after a general discussion was adopted, and the secretary was instructed to send copies to the Postmaster General, the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, the United States Senators from this State, and the Representative in Congress from this congressional district.

The Canonsburg (Pa.) Daily Notes, in its issue of October 4, says:

The people of the Canonsburg district and of the entire county are encouraged with regard to the matter of reestablishment of the Rural Mail Service to the condition in which it was found before the change made a few months since went into effect. In the Canonsburg district the people are signing petitions to the department at Washington, and these will be forwarded inside of a few days. At the same time news comes from Washington to the effect that an efficient inspector will be in Washington County inside of a few days, and that he will make a close inspection of the routes as they were and as they now are, of the service as it was and as it is, and that he will recommend such changes as the facts may warrant.

This is encouraging. It is now, we take it, up to the people along the different rural lines in the county to speak to the department, not only by means of the petitions which are being signed but also by letter and by word of mouth to the inspector when he comes, and let it be known that the service as it now is is unsatisfactory, and to ask for the restoration of the service to the condition which it was in before the changes were made.

It is certainly true that the rural service in the Canonsburg district was changed for the worse and not for the better. The people are dissatisfied. They want the service restored to what it was. They are petitioning to that effect. Let them continue to speak through petitions and letters, and let them also arrange to meet the inspector when he comes into the district and make their wishes known to him. He will, we feel assured, give due consideration to the patrons of the lines. The Notes feels that the people along the rural lines can get what they want if only they will work wisely, energetically, and persistently.

The Easton (Pa.) Free Press, in a recent issue, says:

Farmer John A. McSparran, worthy master of the State Grange of Pennsylvania, does not approve of the attempts of Postmaster General Burleson to economize at the expense of efficiency in the Rural Delivery Service. McSparran has personal knowledge of the needs of farmers in the way of mail service and also knows a few things about the distance a horse can travel. In both respects he has the advantage of the Postmaster General, whose experience for 14 years was in Congress, where he never served on the Post Office Committee, and for 11 years prior thereto in legal offices in Texas.

In a recent signed article discussing orders for the extension of rural routes, McSparran points out that longer routes will mean that carriers will reach town late in the evening, too late for outgoing trains, and as a result the letter written by the farmer the night before must lie over until the following day before it is put on the train.

The Pennsylvania Granger also asserts that, judging by experience, a horse can not stand a 30-mile trip every other day unless he makes the trip at too slow a pace to suit the farmer who wants and is entitled to reasonably good mail service.

The Washington (Pa.) News of October 28 says:

There will be no improvement of the rural route delivery system in Washington County this year, and in all probability not until it is accomplished under a Republican administration. All the promises and pledges given by the postal authorities, both here and at the National Capital, of an early "inquiry" that would result in correcting the multitudinous faults developed under the recent crippling of the rural route system is nothing more than poppycock. True, an "investigation" may be made, but the News desires to go on record here and now as predicting that the "inquiry" will accomplish just about what the Redfield inquiry into the Eastland disaster accomplished and what all other inquiries made by the administration have resulted in to date—"whitewashes," pure and simple. That's it exactly. Absolutely nothing will be accomplished. The investigator may hear complaints, of which there will be plenty, and give suave and polite assurances of "doing everything in his power to correct conditions," and that will be the end of it. He will come to Washington at the public expense, kill a little time making a bluff at earning his salary, and return to the Capital, make his "report," and nothing more will ever be heard of the matter.

If there is anyone who is inclined to believe that there may be some remedial action taken, we offer the word of James I. Blakslee, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, for final proof to the contrary. Mr. Blakslee, who exercises jurisdiction over the rural route system, in an address before the convention of first and second class postmasters, recently held at Washington, referred specifically to the situation in Washington County.

"There are only 99 boxes in Washington County," he said, "where people who are served by rural routes are inconvenienced, and this does not represent a total of more than 247 patrons. The changes made last summer reduced the cost of rural mail service in Washington County several hundred dollars."

It is evident what Mr. Blakslee's ideas are relative to the Washington County situation. He is both peevish and pronounced in his attitude. Obviously he has more faith in the source of his information than Washington and Washington County people have, since he doesn't know so much about the inability of the source to tell a thing truthfully when he tries.

It is also quite evident that Mr. Blakslee has been grossly misinformed as to the extent of the hardships the curtailing of the rural system here has imposed. He does not know, apparently, that it will be a physical impossibility to expect a carrier to cover, under winter conditions, the whole territory in a single day embraced by some of the readjusted routes. Yes; there are a whole lot of things Mr. Blakslee doesn't know about the local situation, and which, for the good of certain "deserving Democrats" we might name, he doesn't want to know.

The Gazette-Times, of Pittsburgh, Pa., printed this news item under a State College date line of December 22:

Lengthening the rural mail routes in this State has cost the grangers $8,000,000 and greatly added to the inconvenience of farm life, it is charged in two resolutions offered to-day at the annual session of the Pennsylvania State Grange. It was declared that the Federal Post Office Department stretched 20-mile routes to 50 miles, to the detriment of both carrier and patrons. The grangers want the routes shortened, so that the rural residents can be served with mail as they were before the readjustment.

The chief complaint came from the master of Oxford Grange, No. 67, of Chester County, and his grievance was supported by H. S. Rankin, master of Pomona Grange, No. 16, of Washington County.

The National Stockman and Farmer, of Pittsburgh, Pa., quoting in its issue of January 1 from the address of Grange Master John R. McSparron at the forty-third annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Grange at State College, Pa., recently says in part:

The developments of the last year with regard to the delivery of county mail can hardly be looked upon by grangers with satisfaction. The introduction into the proposition of the question of making it pay expenses can hardly be agreed to, as the development heretofore has not paid, but no one complains, because it is service and not revenue that the Post Office Department was established to furnish. We are firmly of the opinion that the system that will render the best service must be based upon the distance and speed that a horse can travel in the time allowed. We are confident that the 20-mile route, with corresponding salary, is the wise basis for all seasons; then if the carrier wants to use an auto when conditions are favorable let him do so, and when an auto can not go, the horse can still render the service efficiently.

The Pennsylvania Farmer, published at Philadelphia, in its issue of January 1 says:

It is said that where there is smoke there must be fire, and the almost universal complaint on the part of the rural people about the service they are receiving from the rural delivery routes since the changes have been made by the department indicate that there must be something radically wrong. The lengthening and rerouting of the routes was said to be done in the interest of economy, but if this is achieved at the expense of efficiency it is a mighty unsatisfactory kind of economy. Country people have a right to kick at the result, and they should place their kicks where they will count most. It took years of effort on their part to establish rural delivery, a service that was long past due when it was instituted, and if the officials think they can safely withdraw it or cripple it they will find their mistake. We understand many farmers are cut off entirely; others compelled to go long distances to a box, and in many instances the trip is made so long as to make it almost impossible for the carrier to make it in time to deliver mail to outgoing trains. Nothing has done more to improve country life and link it to the life of the world than rural mail delivery, and what is needed and just is extension of its service, not curtailment. The Government is making great pretensions—in fact, is rendering good service—in other directions for the benefit of agriculture and the improvement of rural life, but let it not forget that they who are living the life out on the farms of our land and raising the food for the millions have other interests in life than tilling the soil and raising bigger crops. Let there be no hypocrisy in this work, neither underestimation of the character and force of the people who live out on the farms. Since economy is needed in order to meet the Treasury's needs, let there be a reduction in the size of the pork barrel and a more serious questioning whether intelligence, good service, and justice are not quite as important in the schemes of "preparedness" as armies and battleships.

The Daily Notes, published at Canonsburg, Pa., printed the following editorials, respectively, on November 26, 27, and 29:

The Post Office Department, not content with discontinuing one of the five rural mail routes from Canonsburg, which was done the past summer, has now ordered that a second route be discontinued at the close of the present month. Beginning with December there will be only three rural routes from the Canonsburg post office. At one time there were six.

Why the Post Office Department is taking this action is not known here, but it is said the movement is in the interest of economy. It certainly is not in the interest of efficiency or in the interest of the people residing in the Canonsburg community. As a result of the change, many people who make Canonsburg their trading center will be greatly inconvenienced. Their mail will be delivered from other towns.

Moreover, there is hardly a business concern in Greater Canonsburg that will not be to a more or less extent a loser by the change in the rural mail service. The Canonsburg business district, already circumscribed, is made even more so by the changes in the mail routes. To reach a party residing only 4 or 5 miles from here a letter must first be sent to Washington, Hickory, or Venetia, and will require at least 24 hours, and in many instances 30 hours, to reach its destination. The rural mail service at Canonsburg is rapidly becoming a joke.

The chamber of commerce will be in session to-night. The body should by all means take some action looking to a restoration of the rural mail service to what formerly it was. The discontinuing of two routes within a short period means less business at the local post office; it means less business for Canonsburg firms; it means a crippled mail service and one that will cause great inconvenience to many families in the community.

Let the chamber of commerce consider the matter to-night and take what action is deemed best to restore the mail service to what it formerly was. There is higher authority at Washington than Inspector Knight, who recently made a hurried trip to this county to inform the people what would not be done.

Let the chamber of commerce act.

A satisfactory rural mail service is necessary to the business success of the town. Merchants, bankers, real estate men, are you going to sit still and see the trade of the town injured by cheap politicians at Washington, D. C., who must do something to show that they are necessary? Why not arouse yourselves and act through your chamber of commerce? Now is the time to act—not three months from now. Let the chamber of commerce at its meeting this evening indorse the movement for a restoration of our free rural mail delivery to what it was in the days before it was tinkered with, and let it instruct the civic department of the chamber to take up this work and push it.

Is it not discouraging to all friends of progress that 15 years after the rural mail service was established in the Canonsburg district that the service is very decidedly poorer than it was when first established? It certainly is. We talk about "progress along all lines," but in the case of rural mail delivery the progress is that of the crab—backward instead of forward. Is not that something to be ashamed of, and is it not time for the community, town, and country to wake up and make a united push to have the service restored to what it was 15 years ago? We can do it; but we can not do it by keeping quiet, by sitting around sucking our thumbs and supposing that we have no rights except what some little two-by-four Post Office Department inspector sees fit to dole out to us. The time has come to don our fighting clothes and to go to it.

We hear of one who says in discussing the question of the rural mail service that the American people are asking too much of the Post Office Department in these days. But who owns the Post Office Department and who pays the expenses of conducting it? Why, the people, of course; and this being so, the people have the right to have the kind of service they desire. The post-office business is the people's business. It belongs to them, and not to the officials who for the time have charge of it. They are the people's hired men, and they should conduct business as their employers wish it conducted or get down and out.

Looks as though Canonsburg had been the goat in the rearranging of the rural mail service in Washington County. Are the people going to stand for it? It is up to them. They do not have to. They can have the former efficient and satisfactory service restored in spite of the two-by-four inspectors if they will assert themselves. There is no doubt about it. But lying down and keeping quiet will not get anywhere.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of South Dakota was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the article which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Sisseton (S. Dak.) Weekly Standard. The Standard in a recent issue says:

Postmaster General Burleson's lack of horse sense in the management of his department is causing much dissatisfaction on rural routes, and Congressmen are receiving so many complaints that an effort will be made during the present session of Congress to define just how the routes shall be operated, and, further, to limit the powers of the head of the Postal Department. Ever since he stepped into office it has been evident that Burleson is a visionary theorist, without proper knowledge of the needs of the service or conditions under which service is to be rendered. His latest scheme is to double the length of the rural routes and require carriers to provide themselves with automobiles. This plan no doubt appears fine to a man basking in the sunshine of Washington, where road conditions are the very best the year round, but think of that sort of service out here, where roads are often drifted full of snow for four months of the year and impassable for weeks at a time during a wet summer. A fine mail service our farmers would have under this automobile plan!

TEXAS.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Texas was unsatisfactory to the patrons is clearly shown by the articles and resolutions which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Farmers' Fireside Bulletin, of Arlington, Tex., issue of November 10.

The Farmers' Fireside Bulletin, of Arlington, Tex., publishes this in its issue of November 10:

Farmers' Fireside Bulletin has a copy of the organ or the Rural Letter Carriers' Association of the United States in which scores of letters from farmers in every part of the country served by rural carriers are protesting against the new measure of the Post Office Department in displacing from two to three horse-drawn vehicles with one motor vehicle in an attempt to work economy in delivering mail to rural routes. In these articles farmers, from Iowa to Ohio and from the Lakes to the Gulf, protest, asserting that such merging not only will cause a ruthless loss to carriers who are let out with large investment of useless horses and vehicles on hand, but that the new service is proving very unsatisfactory in almost every particular. Of course Farmers' Fireside Bulletin knows nothing about this matter, but surely the farmers along such routes do know. And it seems there is almost a unanimous objection on their part.

Now, as a rural mail service was inaugurated after a hard fight by farmers themselves, and is ostensibly for their benefit, they should be better judges than even the Postmaster General and all his assistants in Washington. Anyway, Farmers' Fireside Bulletin's columns are open to this important discussion. The following from a Farmers' Union local is a case in point:

"Whereas there is an effort being made to have rural route No. 1 from Newport discontinued and motor route from Jacksboro established in its place; and

"Whereas we know from long residence in this country that conditions of the roads on account of their rough, rocky condition, unbridged streams, and having to cross the West Fork of Trinity River twice, said river being uncrossable often for a week or more at a time on account of high water and muddy bottoms, would make service by motor vehicle impossible much of the time and unreliable all of the time; and

"Whereas the rural service by horse-drawn vehicles has always been satisfactory to patrons of this route and, we believe, all others; and

"Whereas the rural service by horse-drawn vehicles has furnished the rural citizens a market for millions of dollars' worth of their products—namely, horses, hogs, poultry, eggs, grain, hay, etc.—and by the establishment of motor routes this will be taken from them and given to the oil producers and motor manufacturers; and

"Whereas all parties being served by this and all other routes, to our knowledge, are satisfied with the present service: Therefore be it

"Resolved, By the Antioch Local No. 344 of the Farmers' Union, that we ask our Congressmen and Senators to protest and to file a vigorous protest with the Post Office Department against further action along this line.

J. P. KENNEDY, President.
T. C. HOM, Secretary.

WISCONSIN.

That the department's reorganization of the mail service in the State of Wisconsin was unsatisfactory to patrons is clearly shown by the article which I herewith submit and desire printed in the RECORD, summarized as follows:

(1) Article appearing in the Milwaukee Ledger.

The Milwaukee Ledger, in a recent Sunday issue, makes the following observation:

The program of the Post Office Department to motorize the Rural Free Delivery Service is, according to Members of the Congress who are here, to be vigorously opposed when the Congress reconvenes. It doesn't appeal to some of them.

The rural carriers throughout the country are seeking the support of Members of the Congress for a campaign against the proposed change in the service. Their opposition comes from the fact that wherever an automobile service is established carriers are displaced. In Indiana, for instance, only one county, Tippecanoe, has been placed under automobile service. This new service, which will go into effect September 1 in this county, will require 22 carriers.

The county is now covered by 36 routes. Under the new arrangement 14 carriers with automobiles will do the service now performed by 36 carriers. If this county, it is pointed out, is a safe guide, and it is regarded as a representative county, 61 per cent of the rural carriers in Indiana will lose their places when the automobile service shall become complete throughout the State. The same ratio of loss of places would, of course, extend throughout the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FIELDS] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. LANGLEY. And I shall yield him some time also if he desires it.

The CHAIRMAN. How much?

Mr. LANGLEY. I will decide how much when it becomes necessary.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, as the omnibus pension bill is now under consideration I felt this to be an appropriate time to submit a few observations with reference to the committee in charge of this bill. I am not now a member of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, but I served on that committee in the Sixty-second Congress, and I claim to know something about the workings of the committee and to know something of the unjust criticisms that have been hurled at the committee from time to time by a few Members on the floor of this House; and I for one, Mr. Chairman, feel that Members of the House other than members of the Committee on Invalid Pensions should make the defense to which they feel the committee is entitled.

During my five years' service in this House I have heard attack after attack made upon the floor of the House by a few gentlemen who oppose the passage of private pension bills. I have heard the charge of pork hurled at the committee, and as one who has served on the committee I want to say that I do not believe that there is a committee of this House or in any other legislative body that is fairer in its procedure than is the Committee on Invalid Pensions of this House. [Applause.]

Then we hear some complaints of a private nature that reflect upon this committee and other committees of this House, and I shall refer to one of those complaints, which is contained in a letter written by the secretary to one of the most prominent Members of this House and one of the most prominent Republicans in the United States. I want to say, first, that I make no charge against the Member himself unless he refuses, by his silence or otherwise, to disclaim responsibility for the letter which I shall read; but a Member is, of course, responsible for his office; he is responsible for the official acts of his secretary until he publicly disclaims responsibility for such acts. The letter to which I refer was written to a pensioner who is an applicant for an increase of pension, and who had formerly resided in my district; and, amazed as he was at the conditions which, according to this letter, existed here in the National Congress under Democratic régime, he appealed to me, through a friend of his in my district, to assist him, if possible, in securing for him the relief to which he felt he was entitled. The letter to which I refer, as I say, went from the office of one of the most prominent Members on the minority side of the House, a man who bears the distinction of having occupied the position of chairman of the Republican national campaign committee. I would perhaps have overlooked the proposition had it not been for the fact that I had been informed indirectly that similar statements were going from the offices of other Republican Members. And I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that if a secret campaign of this kind has been organized and is being conducted by any Member or Members of this House, or by their secretaries, it ought to be exposed. I refer to secretaries especially for this reason: That the man next in responsibility to the Member himself with the constituency of a district is the secretary, who is supposed, when he places his signature to an official letter, to voice the sentiments of his Member, and if Members are permitting their secretaries to misinform the people the country should be advised of that fact. If secretaries are, without the knowledge and consent of their Members, abusing their liberties and giving to the country statements that are not correct, the country, and especially their Members, should know it, so that their efforts may be curbed by their Members and disregarded by the country.

The letter to which I refer went from the office of the honorable gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY], who, as we all know, is one of the most prominent men in this body, and prominent in his party throughout the country [applause], and is as follows:

UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., December 28, 1915.

Mr. JOHN WHITINGTON, Royal, Ill.

DEAR MR. WHITINGTON: Your very kind letter of December 22 with reference to special pension bill addressed to Mr. MCKINLEY has been received in his absence.

Mr. MCKINLEY, as you know, will be pleased to introduce a bill for you, but the conditions down here are anything but favorable, and there is absolutely no chance of getting a bill passed. In the first place, all committees are in control of southern Democracy. They are trying to economize by refusing the meritorious claims of soldiers and giving absolutely no consideration to their bills. Of course the southern soldiers do not receive pensions, and these southern Democrats are not very enthusiastic about giving any help. I am sure he will gladly introduce this bill for you, but I can not say it will pass. I know that you will appreciate his position in this matter as we know you have a meritorious case and one he would like to help, but at this time it is an impossibility.

Wishing you a happy New Year and with kindest personal regards, I am,

Yours, very truly, C. A. WILLOUGHBY,
Secretary.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as I said, if this secretary was voicing the sentiments of his Member the people of his district should know it and should read some figures to which I shall refer in a few minutes. If the secretary was abusing the privileges extended to and the confidence reposed in him as secretary to a Member, his Member should say so, so that the people of his district and the country may know that he is not responsible for such statements, which he must know are untrue and misleading, as I will show by data which I have collected from the records. I have taken the pains to make an investigation of the work of the Invalid Pensions Committee in the Sixty-third Congress that I might be able to correctly inform the House and the country as to the attitude of that committee toward the soldiers. From this letter and from other reports that have come to me to the effect that the same character of statements are being made to soldiers in other congressional districts it is apparent that a secret and well-organized campaign may be in progress to aid the Members making them and their party in the coming election. If it be true that they are conducting under cover a campaign of that character for political advantages, it is only further evidence that they have no issue on which they dare to stand before the people in the campaign soon to come, and in the absence of an issue on which to stand are driven to the extremity of a campaign of secret deceptions which will not stand the test of public investigation.

Mr. LANGLEY. Will my colleague yield to me?

Mr. FIELDS. I yield.

Mr. LANGLEY. I observe that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] is not in the Chamber. I desire to inquire if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] knew that my colleague was going to read this particular letter emanating from his office?

Mr. FIELDS. I thank my colleague for calling my attention to that. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that I felt it but just to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] to apprise him of the action that I was about to take, and upon my arrival at my office this morning I called the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] and told him that if I could get the time this afternoon I would reply to a statement that had gone out from his office. Since the convening of the House the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] has been on the floor and talked with me about the matter.

Mr. LANGLEY. Pardon me, the point I desire to inquire about is this: Did the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] know that my colleague was going to read this particular letter, and does he know the contents of the letter?

Mr. FIELDS. We discussed, as I understood it, the contents of the letter a few minutes ago. I do not recall that we discussed the name of the recipient of the letter, but we discussed the substance of the letter in a general way.

Mr. LANGLEY. Pardon me just one minute more. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MCKINLEY] was under the impression that an entirely different letter than the one just read would be discussed by my colleague and that he did not know that this letter was to be read.

Mr. FIELDS. Well, then, I suppose the gentleman from Illinois must have in his files copies of other letters that are subject to criticism, as it seems to have been his impression or belief that I would reply to a letter different from the one just read. I am sorry that he did not remain.

Mr. LANGLEY. I am, too.

Mr. FIELDS. I do not want to be unfair with the gentleman from Illinois, and am not unfair with him, for I notified him that I would reply to a certain statement which had emanated from his office, and he should have remained in the Chamber to hear it read.

Mr. LANGLEY. I am sure that my colleague does not mean to be unfair. I do not wish to infer that at all.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, when I was interrupted I was saying that I have made some investigation, in fact a very thorough investigation, of the work of the Invalid Pensions Committee during the Sixty-third Congress. During that Congress the personnel of the committee consisted of 10 Democrats and 6 Republicans. I first attempted to ascertain the attitude of the majority members of the committee toward the minority members, and I want to say that no man who reads the figures which I shall present can charge that the majority members of the committee were unfair to the minority. The 10 Democrats who constituted the personnel of the majority secured the passage of 147 private bills, or an average of 14.7 bills to the member. The minority members of the committee, who were six in number, secured the passage of 134 private bills, or an average of 22⅓ bills to the member. You will understand that the figures 14.7 and 22⅓ represent the average. Some of the members who have large soldier constituencies secured a greater number of bills than others who have but few soldiers in their districts. For instance, one Democratic member of the committee, from a district which has but few, if any, pensioners, did not secure the passage of a single bill, and another Democratic member from a similar district secured the passage of only one bill. Only a part of the Democratic members of the committee came from districts which have a large number of pensioners, while all of the Republican members represent districts of that character. That is why the average to the minority is greater than the average to the majority members of the committee. Some of the majority members secured the passage of more bills than did some of the minority members. From the best estimate that I can make, the number of bills secured by each member of the committee, both majority and minority, fairly represents the whole number of pensioners in their respective districts.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LOUD. What was the average of the rest of the membership of the House?

Mr. FIELDS. I will get that later. Now I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. What does the gentleman mean by a member of the committee securing the passage of a large number of bills? Does the gentleman mean the bills which members of the committee introduced?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman mean to say that members of the committee got—how many bills apiece?

Mr. FIELDS. The Democratic Members got an average of 14.7 bills each.

Mr. MANN. Each Democratic member secured the passage of bills pensioning 14 different persons?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes, sir; 14 different persons, or an average of 14 and a fraction. I am speaking of the average. As I said a moment ago, some members got more than others owing to the character of the districts from which they came.

Mr. LOUD. From the Southern States?

Mr. FIELDS. From all the States, but principally from the New England, Northern, and Western States; and the Republican members got 22 apiece.

Mr. MANN. That is, members of the committee?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes, sir; members of the committee.

Mr. MANN. How many did the Members of the House get?

Mr. FIELDS. I am coming to that next.

Mr. LOUD. That is what I asked—they got less than half of that.

Mr. FIELDS. I will explain that point to the gentleman, if he will just wait until I can reach it. I have stated what the average was for the members of the committee. Now, if I may have the attention of the gentleman who interrupted me a while ago, I am coming to the point to which he and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] referred; that is, the number of bills secured by other Members of the House. And I want to say before I go into these figures that if the Invalid Pensions Committee had an expert mathematician to hold the balance of equality, or to figure out a fair distribution in pension legislation, he could not have beaten the work which this committee has done.

The Sixty-third Congress was composed of 435 Members. The Republicans and Progressives numbered 144, or 33.1 per cent of the total membership of that Congress.

Three hundred and five Members secured the passage of private pension bills during the Sixty-third Congress, that being 70.11 per cent of the total membership of the House. Of the 305 Members who secured the passage of private bills 106, or 34.75 per cent, were of the minority, a gain for them over their relative strength in the total membership of the House of 1.65 per cent.

There were 2,316 private pension bills passed by the House during the Sixty-third Congress. Of that number 774, or 33.41 per cent, went to the minority Members, which was a gain of thirty-one one-hundredths of 1 per cent over their relative strength in the total membership of the House.

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SLOAN. I have not been one of the critics of this committee; but would not the basis of comparison of distribution be better if we take the old soldiers of the various districts, and base the comparison upon the number for each district, than a distribution to the Members of the House such as the gentleman has made? I will ask the gentleman if he has made a comparison on the basis of the old soldiers in the various districts rather than the Members of Congress in this House, and has he it for presentation here?

Mr. FIELDS. I have made some estimates, and will reach that point immediately.

Now, answering the suggestion which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LOUD] made a few moments ago that other Members of the House had not fared as well as members of the committee had, I will say that if we compare the average number of bills secured by each member of the committee with the average for each Member of the House, why, the members of the committee have the best of it. But that is not a fair comparison, for we must bear in mind that many of the districts have practically no pensioners, while others have a great many, running in some instances into the thousands; and we must also bear in mind that most of the members of the committee came from districts which have a large number of pensioners. Only six members of the committee, four Democrats and two Republicans, came from southern districts, and three of those districts happen to have a very large number of Civil War soldiers, and the Members from those three districts secured the passage of a great many more bills than the other three from the South, whose districts have practically no pensioners. And in further answer to the statement of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LOUD] that the average number of bills secured by members of the committee is greater than the average number secured by other Members, I want to say that I can point out many individual Members who secured more bills than the average number of either the majority or minority members of the committee. These men, of course, came from districts where there is a large number of pensioners, while other Members from districts with only a small number of pensioners have secured the passage of only a few bills, and these facts are conclusive evidence that the committee did not base its apportionment of bills upon the number of Members in the committee or in the House, but upon the number of soldiers throughout the country, and their needs as shown by the evidence submitted in support of their claims. This explanation, I think, also answers the question of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN].

And in this connection I desire to say that the passage of any bill depends first upon the evidence submitted in support of it. A special examiner is detailed from the Pension Bureau, who examines the evidence submitted in a case before the case is considered by the committee, and his approval or disapproval of the case is placed upon it and goes on to the committee. There may be some districts, and doubtless there are, that have not received as many special bills as other districts with no greater number of pensioners on account of the failure of the claimants from such districts to make, or the failure of the Member to present to the committee, evidence sufficient to establish the merit of their claims for special act. I have been informed, and I think reliably informed, that one Member introduced about 700 private pension bills during the last session of Congress, but submitted evidence in only five cases. This Member knew as well as I know, and as well as every Member of this House knows, that it was necessary for him to produce evidence in support of a bill in order to secure its consideration. Then why did he introduce the 695 bills in support of which he submitted no evidence? Was it to deceive those soldiers for whom he introduced those bills. Evidently it was, for I have been informed, indirectly, though I think reliably, that that same Member is writing the pensioners of his district during this session that it is useless for him to introduce bills for them for the reason that this Democratic Congress will not consider them. I note, however, that that gentleman secured the passage of each of the five bills for which he submitted evidence. If he had the evidence to warrant the passage of other bills, and did not submit it, it was his fault and not the fault of the committee that he did not secure the passage of more bills. Or if he failed to advise the claimants as to the evidence required in support of their bills, thereby causing their failure to furnish it, he is likewise to blame for the fact that more of his soldier constituents did not receive consideration at the hands of Congress. But that gentleman knew when he introduced 700 private pension bills that he could not secure the passage of all of them, or even the passage of one-tenth of them. So, why did he pursue such a deceptive course with the old soldiers of his district, and why is he now resorting to the further deception of writing them that he can not secure the passage of their bills because this Democratic Congress is hostile toward them, when he knows, and the country knows, and the soldier knows, that this Congress, since it became Democratic, has been more liberal to the soldier than it has ever heretofore been? The answer is clear. It is a plan of deception for political purposes; but I feel quite sure that that gentleman and all others engaged in this campaign with him will learn before the campaign is over that the soldiers of our country can not be deceived in the manner that they are attempting. I want to say, however, in justice to the minority as a whole, that I do not believe that such tactics as those to which I have referred, which is nothing more than peanut politics, are resorted to by all, or by a majority of the minority Members, or are approved by a majority of them.

Mr. LOUD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes.

Mr. LOUD. I wanted to know the average number of cases considered for other Congressmen than those on the committee.

Mr. FIELDS. I have already referred to that. I will give it more fully, if I can have the time.

Mr. LOUD. That is a very important matter to us.

Mr. FIELDS. I have this information. It would be 2,035 bills, distributed among 281 Members. I can give the names of Members, if gentlemen prefer.

Mr. KINKAID. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Certainly.

Mr. KINKAID. Has the gentleman the number of bills that were passed for each minority member of the committee as well as the majority?

Mr. FIELDS. I have.

Mr. KINKAID. Will the gentleman state the number passed for the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. KINKAID]?

Mr. FIELDS. I am proud to say that my amiable friend from Nebraska [Mr. KINKAID] made a very creditable showing for his district. I find that he secured the passage of 14 bills. I shall not take the time to read the names of all the Members who secured the passage of bills, but I notice that the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Ainey, secured during the Sixty-third Congress the passage of 13 bills; Mr. AUSTIN, of Tennessee, 9 bills; Mr. ANTHONY, of Kansas, 16 bills; Mr. CRAMTON, of Michigan, 19 bills; Mr. FAIRCHILD, of New York, 17 bills; Mr. SELLS, of Tennessee, 18 bills; Mr. FESS, of Ohio, 13 bills; Mr. French, of Idaho, 14 bills; Mr. J. M. C. SMITH, of Michigan, 13 bills; Mr. Lafferty, of Oregon, 17 bills; Mr. MCKENZIE, of Illinois, 10 bills. I mention these partly for the purpose of showing that the bills which were passed were distributed throughout the country, and not confined to any one section; and I want to say in this connection that 109 of the 2,213 bills which were passed during the Sixty-third Congress went to the State of Illinois, which was 4.9 per cent of the total number passed.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I understand that charges have been made in some southern sections by southern Republican Members that they could not secure for their soldier constituents any consideration at the hands of this Congress. If soldiers in the southern districts are receiving letters of that kind, I want to call their attention to the fact that the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. SELLS, a Republican Member, coming from a southern Republican district, secured the passage of 18 private bills.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. I understand one of the points that the gentleman is seeking to make is that members of the committee fare much better than other Members of the House. Does the gentleman think that the 18 bills of Mr. SELLS and the 17 that Mr. FAIRCHILD secured was a gross discrimination against them?

Mr. FIELDS. I am making no such contention as the gentleman states; he wholly misunderstands me. I say that it has been fair. I believe that the committee has been fair in every particular and that it has been fair to every section of the country, giving each section recognition in proportion to the number of soldiers it contains, and giving first consideration to those soldiers who were in the greatest need of assistance, as shown by the proof submitted.

Mr. CRAMTON. As a minority member of the committee, I entirely indorse that statement.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. Has the gentleman the number of pensioners in each of these congressional districts?

Mr. FIELDS. I have the number of pensioners in each State, but not in each congressional district.

Mr. DOWELL. Can not the gentleman put that in the RECORD?

Mr. FIELDS. I do not have it.

Mr. DOWELL. Is there any way of ascertaining the number of pensioners in each congressional district?

Mr. LANGLEY. It can be gotten from the Pension Office.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman have in the RECORD the number of pensioners in each congressional district when he prints his remarks?

Mr. FIELDS. If I can get it without difficulty before I print, I will put it in the RECORD.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. I will.

Mr. SHERWOOD. I want to say that by giving the number of bills passed for each member of the committee it might mislead by being out of proportion in this way: For instance, in the District of Columbia there are 16 Grand Army posts and 1,600 soldiers. All these private pension bills for that District are charged to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. FIELDS. I have observed that fact, and have not charged those bills to the chairman in my calculations, but only those coming from his district.

Now, Mr. Chairman, standing further on my contention that the committee has been fair, I want to say that the men who come from the districts that seem to have the most pensioners have, as a rule, secured the passage of the most bills.

Mr. LANGLEY. Does not the gentleman think that that is proper—that an additional allotment ought to come to those Representatives of districts where the old soldiers are the greatest in number?

Mr. FIELDS. Absolutely so, for I believe that pension bills should be passed in the interest of the soldiers and not in the interest of Members of Congress.

Mr. LANGLEY. Will the gentleman yield to me to say "Amen" at that point?

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. Yes; for a question; but I have not much time.

Mr. HARRISON. How many bills, if the gentleman has the data, did my amiable friend from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] get in the Sixty-third Congress?

Mr. FIELDS. I want to say that my colleague from Kentucky comes from one of the largest soldier districts in the country, and that he received as many private bills as any other Member in the Sixty-third Congress. He has a large soldier constituency, and his constituency were not discriminated against by this Democratic committee simply because they happened to be so unfortunate as to have a Republican Representative. [Laughter.]

Mr. SLOAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FIELDS. I can not yield further, for my time will not permit. So, Mr. Chairman, it is plain to see that a fairer distribution could not be made than was made by this committee in the pensions bills that were passed during the Sixty-third Congress; and in addition to what this committee did in the Sixty-third Congress for the old soldiers, there are other benefits that the soldiers have received from that committee and this Congress since it went under the control of the Democratic Party. When the control of this House passed from the Republicans to the Democrats at the opening of the Sixty-second Congress, that honored veteran, Gen. SHERWOOD, who has seen the horrors and tasted the bitterness of the Civil War, was placed at the head of the Invalid Pensions Committee, and from his brain and ability, coupled with his love for and devotion to his comrades, emanated the bill which bears his name. That bill was favorably reported by a Democratic committee and passed by a Democratic House. It was then passed by a Republican Senate after it was stripped by Senate amendments of some of the benefits which it was designed to extend to the soldiers, and in its amended form it became a law. But amended as it was, it extended under its first year's operation relief to 376,782 Civil War soldiers to the amount of $20,800,000, or an average annual increase of more than $55 to each of the number thus benefited.

And now, Mr. Chairman, in the face of the figures which I have given, and the facts to which I have referred, it comes with poor grace from any Member of this House or any citizen of this country, be he from the East, West, North, or South, to say that the survivors of the Civil War have not and can not receive justice at the hands of this Democratic Congress. Such a statement is without foundation, and should be challenged and disproved whenever and wherever made. And I submit these observations as a challenge to, and a refutation of, the unfounded and unwarranted accusations to which I have previously referred, and I say now and here that any reports of like character that may come to me in the future will receive the same attention that I have given to these. I meet and answer these charges, not for the purpose of making a personal attack upon any one, but in justice to the truth, in justice to my party, and in justice to the soldiers of the country whom they seek to evade and deceive. I would be untrue to my convictions, untrue to my party, and untrue to the soldiers of my district and the country if I permitted the perpetration of such evasions and deceptions without raising my voice against them. I take this position, not because I admire personal conflict or enjoy participation in it, but because I believe that the man who has served his country in time of need is entitled to fair treatment and correct statements from the Representatives of the people or those connected with them, and it is gratifying to me to know that my party takes the same position, which is evidenced by the fair and liberal pension legislation which has emanated from this House since it went under Democratic control.

This legislation, which is the most liberal to the old soldier of any legislation that has ever been passed by the Congress of the United States, bears evidence of another fact of which the American people should be proud, which is, that any bitterness that may have lingered for a time in the hearts of the American people as a result of the Civil War is no longer harbored to any noticeable extent, but, to the contrary, we as a united people glory in the preservation of the Union, and cherish the memory of those who gave their lives that the Union might live and show our appreciation of those who survived the conflict. We may say, and truly say, that those who survived and returned to their homes and families, which was only a remnant of the number engaged in the struggle, were fortunate indeed. But they, Mr. Chairman, were not as fortunate as the country which could call them its own. Not as fortunate as the Union which they and their fallen comrades had preserved, for their remaining days were shortened by the ravages of war which they endured, while the Union was made secure and everlasting by the efforts which they extended and the burdens which they bore. Ah, no; they were not as fortunate as the Government which they reared to the highest pedestal of national honor by their undying faith and never-failing devotion. Not as fortunate as the ship of state which they fearlessly manned across an ocean of blood under a tempest of terror and death. Not as fortunate as we who come after them to enjoy the blessings of peace which they purchased for us at an incalculable price; and, Mr. Chairman, in voicing these sentiments I speak not as the son or grandson of a Union soldier, but, to the contrary, I speak as one whose ancestors were of southern stock, southern sympathies, and were southern soldiers in the great conflict. My grandfather was born in the Southland, followed the flag of the Confederacy, and died a captive in a northern prison. He and those with whom he served and died gave their fortunes and their lives as a sacrifice for the principles which they believed to be right, and I honor their memory for the noble and manly courage they displayed. It was not their love for conflict that brought upon the country the great struggle. They were victims of fate. Fate had thrust upon the country a question which antedated the birth of the Republic, upon which the North and the South honestly differed. That difference grew to such proportions as the years came and went that it eventually became irreconcilable, and the same fate that had forced the unfortunate question upon the country forced the breach which resulted in armed conflict; and the men of the South on the one side and the men of the North on the other took up their arms in a spirt of willingness to battle and to die, if need be, in defense of a principle which they believed to be right. The greatest evidence of their honesty of purpose, their love for principle, and their fidelity to duty on both sides was their duration under all the horrors that can attend warfare. But I shall not refer further to those horrors or the days through which they were endured. I will not recall their gloomy forms, but will say to them:

May the sorrows which thy presence brought
Be buried ne'er to rise again,
And the deepest affections of the Nation's heart
Rest alike on northern and southern men.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yeld three minutes more to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman to yield that to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. LANGLEY. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I simply want those three minutes to read to the committee the following article appearing in a paper called the New York Call, of January 23, 1916, entitled "Pork and Preparedness":

PORK AND "PREPAREDNESS."

A Florida Representative named CLARK has just made a most sincere and impassioned address in the Congress in the interests of "pork"—not the literal stockyards product, but the meat on which State Caesars feed—the graft that is derived from congressional appropriations for local post offices and other Federal buildings, dredging of creeks and waterways, and other activities that drain the National Treasury and bring money and employment to the various States. His position was that not one cent of public money should be devoted to "preparedness" until all the "pork" available for distribution has been extracted from the Treasury. Then, if any was left over, the militarists might have it.

Mr. CLARK magnanimously stated that he was seeking nothing for himself; that every town and hamlet in his district had its public building. But there were still many other places which had been left without their proper ration of "pork," and he stood for their "rights" in the matter unalterably. It was the first thing needful that this should be attended to; the rest could come afterward.

As the New York Herald puts it, "His singleness of purpose in the matter of congressional pork leads him to a heroic disregard of subterfuge." But, curiously enough, the Herald does not commend him therefor; it mocks him, instead.

If the "preparedness" advocates would only show the same "heroic disregard of subterfuge," and openly proclaim that they were after the same kind of pork, only through a different channel and on a different pretext; that they were spokesmen of groups who eagerly desired profits through the manufacture of war munitions, just as the others wanted them through the erection of post offices and the dredging of creeks; in such case Congress would know exactly where it was and what it was there for, and could proceed on its business with perfect smoothness and efficiency.

But, no! These "preparedness" fellows must have subterfuge; they must pretend that they are animated solely by patriotic aspirations and the sense of national danger; they must leave the impression that there is no pork in their demands; that they hate the nasty stuff, anyway, and wouldn't touch it on any consideration.

And CLARK, from Florida, knows they are lying, and they know that he knows they are lying, and they know it themselves, all around.

It is very creditable to him, but it is not wise. He is an unsophisticated creature, who imagines that because he can afford to tell the truth all others can afford it also. And the real reason they condemn him is because they understand that his method, if universally adopted, would infallibly lead to the abolition of all "pork"—a desideratum that can only be generally secured by "a heroic regard for subterfuge," to slightly paraphrase the expression of the Herald.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CROSSER].

Mr. CROSSER. Mr. Chairman, the earnestness with which we hear one side or the other in this European war discussed by many gentlemen on the floor reminds me of a story I heard the other day of a saloon keeper in New York City, who made a remark about "these confounded Belgians who started this war." He said that they made him tired. Some one standing by him remonstrated and said, "How do you make it out that the Belgians started the war? You are the first one to give us that information." The saloon keeper replied, "Well, I have some Englishmen and some Germans and some French and some Italians for customers, but I have no Belgians."

Mr. Chairman, in what I propose to say I shall have no customers, but I want to discuss for a few moments the method of manufacturing the facilities with which we are to protect ourselves.

In the midst of the hullabaloo that has been raised by the advocates and opponents of an increased Army and Navy it is not surprising that many earnest and thoughtful men, both in and out of Congress, are very much perplexed.

Notwithstanding the bigotry and intolerance of some of those who favor a great increase, no fair-minded man doubts for a moment the patriotism of those who believe that it is an unwise and dangerous policy to establish a great Army and Navy in this country.

At the present time, for very good reasons, I shall not state my position as to the proposition of making the United States a great military and naval power, although I have given a great deal of thought and investigation to the subject for some time past.

There is one phase of the subject, however, regarding which I wish to state my position very definitely and as vigorously as possible, and that is the method of providing the armament, munitions, and equipment. Upon the method of manufacturing these things depends very largely the amount we shall manufacture.

The tendency to serve one's self-interest is the primary law of human nature. I am not saying that it is not a good thing that nature has made this motive play the leading part in men's lives. All I say is that it is a fact that man, first of all, tries to promote his own welfare. There are, of course, a few men who have thought deeply enough so as to know that very often, and, in fact, generally, what is best for the great mass of mankind is best for his individual self, but such men are the exception to the rule.

There are great private institutions, with billions of dollars invested, in this country and in every other great nation of the world for the manufacture of armament, munitions, and implements of war generally. These concerns, of course, were established for the purpose of making money, and we can not be surprised at their great anxiety for more business. But, gentlemen, is not the manufacture of the implements of war by private concerns a dangerous thing to the peace, safety, and welfare of any people? If the business is not forthcoming, does not the private manufacturer whine that the Government owes him the business because it encouraged him to build plants for the manufacture of the implements and munitions of war? Not only does the manufacturer say this, but, in addition, the military experts urge as a reason for the increase of military and naval equipment the very proposition that we must furnish the private manufacturer enough business to keep him going. If you undertake to argue with these men the dangerous policy involved in such procedure, they denounce you as unpatriotic, as desiring to prevent our country becoming a great power, and so forth, just as the opponents of private manufacture in England were denounced as "Little Englanders" and in Germany as "Little Germany men." Is it possible that the earnest, industrious, peace-loving men of the United States will listen to such twaddle? I can not believe it. I know that they do not tolerate such doctrines.

Among the most serious objections to the private manufacture of armament, equipment, and munitions of war is the increased danger of our becoming involved in war because of the constant agitation and war scares engineered by the manufacturers in order to increase the demand for their products.

These private concerns constantly increase their demands and are continually raising the limit to which they think the Government should go with the Army and Navy in order, as they say, "to protect the country." All the nations of Europe engaged in the present war have gone through this experience. Almost always, of course, this is demanded for purely defensive purposes, not for aggression. The expenditures of the principal European countries increased by leaps and bounds during the last few years before the war, until the backs of the people were bent under the load of taxation.

Finally, of course, the jingoes must show that there is a real necessity for great armaments. Their continual promises that if given a certain number of ships and a certain number of soldiers, that is all they will ask, followed in another year by another demand for an increase in the Army and Navy, with another assurance that that will be enough, must give place to a different argument, and that argument war itself, with all the misery and bloodshed which necessarily results.

Another reason why it is unwise and dangerous for the Government to procure its war equipment from private individuals is the fact that these private individuals necessarily know all the secrets connected with the manufacture of either Army or Navy equipment, and this information, if given to a possible enemy, means a tremendous advantage to that enemy in time of war.

Another reason why it is best for the Government to manufacture its own equipment for war is that it can be done for a great deal less money than if done by private manufacturers. Secretary of the Navy Daniels in his report for 1914 said that the Navy Department manufactures anything, from a superdreadnaught to a pound of powder, cheaper than the same can be purchased from private manufacturers.

It is a fact that the Government can manufacture powder for one-half what it did cost to purchase from private manufacturers before the question of Government manufacture was urged so strongly two or three years ago in Congress.

These are some of the reasons which make it not only bad business, but, in fact, bad morals for the Government to continue the policy of procuring war supplies and equipment from private concerns.

It is a somewhat remarkable fact that while many of the great governments had been adopting a policy of direct government operations of many businesses, the business of preparation for war has almost universally been left to private individuals. The one thing which, above all others, should be free from the temptation to do everything for the sake of profit has been left in the hands of profit seekers, and has been a temptation which has grown instead of decreasing year by year.

Some of the farseeing men of Europe have cried out from time to time against the danger to the people of encouraging private industry in the production of death-dealing instrumentalities.

Mr. Philip Snowden, in a speech in the British Parliament during the year 1914, mercilessly exposed a condition of affairs existing in Great Britain, as bad or worse than what was shown a few weeks ago by Mr. TAVENNER on this floor in regard to the Navy League in this country. Mr. Snowden went on to show that the armament makers of Great Britain not only had carried on a systematic campaign for bigger contracts, but also showed that practically all of the armament concerns were really one and the same company. Not only that, but he further produced evidence to show that all of the different manufacturing plants for armament and munitions had ex-military officers in charge of the work.

A British paper called "Arms and Explosives," and devoted to the interests of the armament trade, contains the following statement:

> Contractors naturally are very keen to avail themselves of the services of prominent officers who have been associated with the work in which the contractors are interested. The chief thing is that they know the ropes, since the retired officer, who keeps in touch with his old comrades, is able to lessen some of these inconveniences, either by gaining early information of coming events or by securing the ear of one who would not afford like favors to a civilian. Kissing undoubtedly goes by favor, and some of the things that happen might be characterized as corruption. Still, judged by all fair tests, the result is good. The organization of facilities for supply is maintained through times of peace on an efficient and economical basis. Manufacturers do not make huge profits, and they are enabled to survive from year to year and to be on hand in the case of national emergency.

Another fact which illustrates the hypocrisy of the private manufacturers, who shout about patriotism when they are really thinking only of profits, is the fact that several of these concerns referred to by Mr. Snowden had plants before the war in foreign countries, and countries which were supposed to be the probable enemies of Great Britain. For example, Vickers, one of the great armament manufacturers of Great Britain, did business under the name of Vickers-Terni Co. in Italy, at that time allied against Great Britain. Vickers was also interested in the Whitehead Torpedo Works in Fiume, Hungary.

The armament manufacturing company known as Armstrong's, in Great Britain, did business as Armstrong-Pozzuoli on the Italian coast. Armstrong & Co., of Great Britain, and Armstrong-Pozzuoli, of Italy, were in possession of most confidential information in relation to both the Italian and British Governments, and would it not require these individuals to be more than human to avoid disclosing the facts from one to the other? Both Austria and Italy were considered as probable enemies at that time, and yet these British manufacturers were interested in manufacturing great quantities of war equipment for both of these countries. Austria has since that time become an enemy and at war with Great Britain, and there was serious doubt about Italy's attitude for some time. Nevertheless the Navy League Annual for 1911, published in England, had this to say:

> The modern naval resources of Italy for the building of warships owe their own origin in no small measure to the cooperation of British capital and resources.

Yet it was considered at that time that Italy and Great Britain were not on good terms and the British were building dreadnaughts to protect their interests in the Mediterranean against the possible aggression of Italy. The submarines and all the torpedoes used by Austria prior to 1914 were made by the Whitehead Torpedo Works, in Hungary. This same firm also had a plant at Weymouth, England. In other words, they were making torpedoes for the British navy at Weymouth and torpedoes with British capital in Hungary in order to destroy British ships. Does anyone doubt, therefore, the baneful influence of private profit in the manufacture of the instrumentalities of war? We could go on and cite many instances of the evil practices of private armament manufacturers in other nations of the world.

I call attention to the trouble the Japanese Government had with this same sort of thing. Vice Admiral Koichi Fujii, former Japanese naval attaché at Berlin, was sentenced to four and one-half years' imprisonment, charged with having received illicit commissions for influencing the allotment of naval contracts in favor of a German manufacturing concern. Capt. Sowasaki was sentenced one year for the same offense. Several Japanese contractors were arrested in connection with the military scandal, and foreigners in Japan who were involved in them were convicted and imprisoned as follows: George Blundell, an English journalist, 10 months; V. Hermann, Tokio representative of a German armament firm, 1 year; and Andrew M. Pooley, an English journalist, 2 years. A similar condition was exposed in Germany by Herr Liebknecht. Some of the facts revealed by him were these: That a German arms and armament factory, one of the greatest ordnance plants in the world, employed an agent by the name of Brandt, whose business it was to employ in his pay officers of the military department of the German Government; that Government documents of the most confidential nature found their way into the safe of Herr von Dernitz, one of the managers of the Krupp Works.

Herr von Gontard, director of the German Arms and Ammunition Factory, inspiring in the Pan-German organ—Die Post—the most violent diatribes against France; giving orders to have a French newspaper publish articles representing that the French war department was increasing its number of machine guns when it was doing nothing of the kind; first exciting French opinion by provocative matter in the German press, and then instigating a German demand for armaments by means of bellicose utterances in the French press.

Here is a letter published in Vorwarts, a German newspaper, which affords an inside glance of the business methods of a war-trafficking firm:

PERSONAL DOCUMENTS.

(Sheet 15.)

Mr. ——— ———, Paris:

(G. No. 8236. Geheim-registratur, I. e., number in register of secret documents.)

We have just wired you: "Please await in Paris our letter sent today."

The reason for this message was that we should be glad for you to get an article into one of the most widely read French newspapers—the Figaro, if possible—to the following effect:

"The French ministry of war has decided to accelerate considerably the provision of new-pattern machine guns and to order double the quantity at first intended."

Please do your utmost to secure the acceptance of an article on these lines.

Yours, faithfully,

VON GONTARD, Posegarten,
(For the German Arms and Ammunition Factory).

We have already heard discussed upon this floor the relations between the Du Pont Powder Co., which supplies the Government with most of its powder, and the United Rheinisch Westphalian Gunpowder Mills of Germany. Some years ago the Du Pont Powder Co. entered into a contract with the German company, in which it was agreed that the Du Pont Co. was to have no competition from the German company in the United States, and the Du Pont Co. agreed that every improvement upon the processes made by either company should be imparted to the other. A still more serious promise on the part of the Du Pont Co. was as follows:

Thirteenth. That the parties of the second part [the Du Ponts] will, as soon as possible, inform the party of the first part [the Germans] of each and every contract for brown powder or nitrate-of-ammonia powder received by the parties of the second part from the Government of the United States, or any other contracting party or parties, stating in detail quantity, price, time of delivery, and of all the requirements that the powder called for in such contract has to fulfill.

Yet, of course, these private concerns in every country are actuated by purely patriotic motives!

No doubt the American people, including some Members of Congress, at least, are puzzled to know what reason or argument these gamblers in human blood will be able to furnish after they realize that the people will insist on knowing why they are asked to build higher and higher their mountain of armament when they have been assured time and again that each addition would be sufficient. We might know, however, that the supporters of profits from war would have anticipated such a question and are ready with an answer.

Neitzsche, the Polish philosopher, justifies war for war's sake. Von Bernhardi makes the same argument. Lord Roberts, of Great Britain, and Harold Wyatt, the British author, in like manner justify war:

In the crash of conflict, in the horrors of battle fields piled with the dead, the dying, and the wounded, a vast ethical intention has still prevailed. Not necessarily in any given case, but absolutely certainly in the majority of cases, the triumph of the victor has been the triumph of the nobler soul of man. * * * In that great majority of instances which determines general result the issue of war has made for the ethical advantage of mankind. It must have been so; it could not be otherwise, because ethical quality has tended always to produce military efficiency.

All of these reasoning that the conflict of battle is necessary to the development of the highest moral qualities in man, and our own infallible (?) Mr. Roosevelt argues in very much the same strain. Surely the great American people are not ready to accept such a damnable doctrine. I can not believe that any sane man believes in such principles, but you know we must have a reason for justifying a business from which we make money.

With the proof clear and conclusive that the Government can manufacture everything it needs in war for a great deal less than it can purchase the same from private manufacturers, one would suppose that the Government officials at least would be in favor of manufacturing its own war munitions. But not so. The military officers of the Government have urged before committees of Congress the desirability of having war materials manufactured by private concerns, and in order to justify themselves, they say that even though it costs more in this way, it is necessary to have the additional facilities in case of emergency. But they go further than that and they have said recently that the Government should give them sufficient orders to keep their plants in operation.

Some of these military officers have apparently been very anxious that the Government should not procure its powder at too low a cost. Upon this point, in order to do justice to the industry of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TAVENNER], who is known as well for the accuracy of his statements, I read the following from one of his speeches:

FORMER EMPLOYEE OF DU PONTS ESTIMATED THEIR COST AT 21 CENTS A POUND.

Mr. Robert S. Waddell, of the United Safety Powder Co., of Louisville, Ky., who was with the Du Pont Co. as general sales agent for the United States for 21 years, and who has built several powder mills, estimated, in the hearings on the fortifications appropriation bill in 1912, page 187, that the cost to the Du Pont concern in making ordnance smokeless powder is $0.218, exclusive of selling costs, which estimate aroused Admiral Twining, Gen. Crozier, and Vice President Buckner, of the Du Pont Trust, to a high state of fury.

Testifying at the hearing on the fortifications bill, February 18, 1908, Gen. Crozier, discussing the question of a fair price to be paid the Powder Trust for powder, scoffed at the idea that powder could be manufactured for 33 cents a pound, as had been charged, as he said, "by some people who objected to what they called a private monopoly.

"A board of which Maj. Hoffer was a member"—

Stated Gen. Crozier—

"finally concluded that 67 cents would be a proper price to pay private manufacturers, and they have accepted that" (p. 82, hearings on fortifications bill, 1908).

Contrast this "proper price" of 67 cents with the fact that the Du Pont trust is now glad to receive 53 cents and that the Government is itself manufacturing powder for 34 cents.

Page 282 of the 1912 hearings contains a table supplied by Gen. Crozier, in which he fixes the cost of powder in the Army powder plant at 40 cents and in the Du Pont plant at 50 cents, exclusive of profit.

This table is valuable to the Powder Trust because it would indicate that it costs the trust 50 cents a pound to manufacture powder without any profit included. The trust is now accepting 53 cents a pound for powder. But when an effort is again made to bring about a reduction in price the representatives of the trust will be in a position to say:

"How can the Government ask for any reduction when Gen. Crozier, who is in charge of the Army powder factory, and in a position to know, has estimated that it actually costs us, net, 50 cents a pound to manufacture our product?"

As to the possibility or desirability of the Government maintaining facilities sufficient to provide the extra supply in case of war, Mr. Waddell, who has been in the powder business for a quarter of a century, testified as follows:

I believe that the time has come when the Government should make its own powder in its own works. It does not cost anything to let a plant lie idle. You can paint the machinery, and the wooden tanks do not get hurt much if you keep them full of water. There is very little about a smokeless-powder plant that would deteriorate from standing idle.

I have not referred to anyone in my remarks for the purpose of assailing him or of proving him to be worse than the ordinary man. They are like ordinary human beings, anxious to advance their own interests. I do not condemn men. I condemn the system which makes war an advantage to a few private individuals.

You ask whether or not we wish to make our country safe and defend ourselves against our enemies. I answer most emphatically, Yes! But I wish to be sure that we are not feeding fat dividends to war traffickers who are thus encouraged to prod us into a fight. [Applause.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 32 minutes.

[Mr. LANGLEY addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the Clerk to read the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws—

The name of Miles Fuller, late of Company L, Fourth Regiment Provisional Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Mary J. Fruit, widow of William L. Fruit, late of Company C, Ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Nancy Gould, widow of James D. Gould, late of Company B, Seventy-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Joseph A. Hollister, late of Company A, One hundred and forty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James Kinser, late of Company G, One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George W. Page, late of Company I, Eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John Greenamyer, late of Company H, One hundred and twenty-ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Ruth E. Hering, widow of Samuel Hering, late of Company I, Fourth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mahala Burns, former widow of John T. Montgomery, late of Company C, Fourth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Isaac M. Emley, late of Company A, One hundred and twenty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and of Company K, Eighth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James P. Barton, late of Company C, Thirty-sixth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Junius R. Clift, late of Company E, Eighth Regiment, and of Company A, Seventeenth Regiment, Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Elias Worley, late of Company K, One hundred and fiftieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Delia Anderson, former widow of Nicholas Parks, late of Company D, Thirty-third Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Samuel A. Parrish, late of Company I, One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Simeon L. Miles, alias Simeon Lorance, late of Company B, Forty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James M. Johnson, late of Company D, Thirty-fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Elizabeth Waldon, former widow of Christian Cieving, late of Company H, Fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Lucas Covert, jr., late of Company G, Sixth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Nancy A. Martin, widow of William H. Martin, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and of Company B, Thirteenth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lucy L. Laymon, widow of Stewart M. Laymon, late of Company A, Seventh Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of James Corn, late of Company B, Fifty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Emily Schwartz, widow of George Schwartz, late of Company F, Independent Battalion, New York Infantry, and of Company D, First Regiment New York Engineers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Catharine Maconaughay, helpless and dependent child of James Maconaughay, late of Company G, Two hundred and fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Andrew Watts, late of Company B, One hundred and seventy-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Christopher C. Estes, late of Companies B and A, One hundred and tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Cora E. Brooks, helpless and dependent child of Charles U. Brooks, late of Company H, Eighteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John T. Lovett, late of Company H, Eighteenth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah A. Touseul (now Cardwell), former widow of Charles J. Touseul, late of Battery H, Fourth Regiment United States Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Anna M. Jenkins, former widow of Joel N. Camp, late of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment New York Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary A. Brackett, widow of Tryon J. Brackett, late of Company A, Sixty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Marquis D. Lillie, late of Company M, First Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary Lyons, widow of John E. Lyons, late of Company K, Eighteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Margaret M. Hack, widow of George A. Hack, late of Company E, One hundred and thirty-third Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and of Companies F, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Regiments United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Ruth Ann James, former widow of Charles L. Robbins, late of Company B, Fourteenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of William C. Taylor, late of Company H, One hundred and thirty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Laura A. Peters, widow of Amos D. Peters, late of Company D, Second Regiment Nebraska Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of William H. Doll, late of Company A, One hundred and seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and of Company K, First Potomac Home Brigade Maryland Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Disia Stamper, widow of William Stamper, late of Company L, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of James R. Parker, late of Company D, Twenty-fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William D. Alexander, late of Company A, Third Regiment New Mexico Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah J. Newton, widow of Charles L. Newton, late of Company C, Thirteenth Regiment, and of Company K, Thirtieth Regiment, Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary I. Keen, widow of George W. Keen, late of Company G, Seventeenth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Boman R. Butcher, late of Company H, Second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah J. Glover, former widow of Daniel Shelley, late of Company H, One hundred and fifty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of William E. Hopkins, late of Company G, Fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary K. Dunn, widow of Francis M. Dunn, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Adlade Holland, widow of Patrick Holland, late of Company A, Thirty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Catherine A. Payne, widow of Freeman S. Payne, late of Company I, One hundred and sixty-second Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, and of Company K, Fourteenth Regiment, Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah B. Scott, widow of William G. Scott, late of Company A, First Battalion, Sixteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Jane Harris, widow of Smith A. Harris, late of Company K, Twenty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Emma R. Shattuck, widow of James H. Shattuck, late of Company G, Twenty-sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Emily E. Spencer, widow of Nimrod A. Spencer, late of Company E, Third Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Eliza J. Glover, former widow of Leander Dean, late of Company C, First Regiment Alabama Vidette Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Nancy McClellan, widow of Riley H. McClellan, late of Company B, First Regiment Alabama Vidette Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James H. Holtzman, late of Companies K and C, One hundred and fourteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Hiram H. Persell, late of Company E, Third Regiment North Carolina Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Eliza Riehl, former widow of Isaac H. Steele, late of Company G, Fifty-sixth Regiment New York National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Anna Holmes, widow of Lafayette Holmes, late of Company F, Ninety-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of William P. Morris, late of Company A, Twelfth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Arzila Wolf, helpless and dependent child of John Wolf, late of Company F, Thirty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Stillman Young, late of Battery E, First West Virginia Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Julia E. Watson, now Jones, former widow of David M. Watson, late of Company I, Seventy-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Sidney R. Tripp, late of Company I, One hundred and sixty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Elvira Russell, former widow of George Vandruff, late of Company E, Forty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Adelaide L. Curry, widow of Edgar W. Curry, late of Company L, Third Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Maria W. Wilson, widow of George E. Wilson, late of Company D, Sixth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of James L. Weirich, late of Company A, Sixty-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William F. Petty, late of Company H, Sixth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William P. Blackburn, late of Company D, Forty-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John Hanes, late of Company B, One hundredth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Friederike Potter, widow of Frederick W. Potter, alias William Potter, late a seaman in the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harriet L. Busick, former widow of Freeman Leonard, late of Company A, Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harriet L. Ferris, widow of Joseph E. Ferris, late of Company C, One hundred and thirty-third Regiment Ohio National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary A. Kane, widow of John J. Kane, late of Company D, Ninetieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Samuel Swope, late of Company D, Ninetieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary E. Merrill, widow of Rufus Merrill, late of Company D, One hundred and thirteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of George Hull, late of Company E, Ninety-seventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Ellen Carr, widow of Thomas Carr, late musician of Sixtieth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lida W. Ashton, widow of Charles L. Ashton, late of Company G, Fifty-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary A. Hawks, widow of Alfred D. Hawks, late of Company B, Denver City Home Guards, Colorado Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Clara Wilt, widow of George W. Wilt, late of Company E, One hundred and sixteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Helen M. Brown, former widow of Harvey M. Brown, late of Thirty-sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Barbara Marx, widow of Paul Marx, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Charles Clark, late of Company E, Eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sophia Anderson, former widow of Edward Z. Holbrook, late of Company B, Ninth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary C. Kitchen, widow of William N. Kitchen, late of Company I, Fifty-first Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of Nora A. Kitchen, helpless and dependent child of said William N. Kitchen, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: And provided further, That in the event of the death of Mary C. Kitchen, the name of said Nora A. Kitchen shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, at the rate of $12 per month from and after the date of death of said Mary C. Kitchen.

The name of Hiram J. Mills, who served under the name of James H. Thomas, late of Company F, Twelfth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Martha J. Curtiss, widow of Frank S. Curtiss, late of One hundred and twenty-seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Annie J. Henderson, widow of Joseph D. Henderson, late of Company H, Twelfth Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Eliza March, widow of Henry March, late of Company K, Ninety-fourth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James Gallagher, late of Company I, Fifty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Clarinda Shields, widow of William B. Shields, late of Company G, Sixth Regiment Provisional Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary E. Kirk, widow of William M. Kirk, late of Company E, Hickory County Battalion, Missouri Home Guards, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of William A. James, late of Company H, Fifty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Martha A. Crain, widow of William D. Crain, late of Company K, Eighth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Douglass Smith, late an officer's servant, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jennie Galbreath, widow of George Galbreath, late of Seventh Independent Battery, Ohio Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Aaron Hall, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and Company H, Fifty-third Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Anna Nau, widow of Joseph Nau, late of Company E, Ninth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Samuel Miller, late of Company E, One hundred and fifty-second Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Juliet Kimbrough, widow of William Kimbrough, late of Company I, Forty-fourth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Margaret B. Bradley, widow of Hugh M. Bradley, late of Company I, Third Regiment Missouri State Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Leasen E. Callen, late of Company K, Thirty-eighth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jemima Furnier, widow of William H. Furnier, late of Company F, Eighty-first Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles McMath, late of Company C, Twenty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Silas A. Wardlow, late of Company G, One hundred and seventy-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William H. Brown, late of Company F, Eighty-eighth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Lizzie Butler, widow of James F. Butler, late of Company K, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Louisa Patrick, widow of Francis M. Patrick, late of Companies I and B, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Elizabeth C. Johnson, widow of Joseph H. Johnson, late of Company H, Ninety-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah A. Haring, widow of Charles R. Haring, late of Company G, Fifteenth Regiment New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, and Company F, Second Battalion New Jersey Veteran Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of James H. Howe, late of Company C, Seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Albert Cirtwell, late of Company I, One hundred and eighty-sixth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John Brannan, late of Company A, Fortieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary A. Wright, widow of Charles H. Wright, late of Company K, Nineteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of H. Jenness Paul, late of Band, Second Brigade, Second Division Ninth Army Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Samuel W. Pyle, late of Company M, Fifth Regiment Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Julia Kibbe, widow of Converse A. Kibbe, late of Company G, Tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Millie Rowe, widow of Richard W. Rowe, late of Company H, First Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Anna M. Goeller, widow of Balthasar Goeller, late of Company F, First Regiment Delaware Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary A. Long, former widow of Ephraim Welch, late of Company C, Twenty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Samuel Steele, late of Company A, Seventy-fifth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Harriet F. Kidd, widow of Meredith H. Kidd, late of Eleventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Clara Keller, widow of Henry W. Keller, late of Company H, Twenty-seventh Regiment, and Company H, Twelfth Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving: Provided, That in the event of the death of George C. Keller, helpless and dependent child of said Henry W. Keller, the additional pension herein granted shall cease and determine: Provided further, That in the event of the death of Clara Keller the name of said George C. Keller shall be placed on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pensions laws, at the rate of $12 per month from and after the date of death of said Clara Keller.

The name of Jordan J. McCann, late of Company K, Thirty-sixth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Freeman H. Bentley, late of Company F, Thirty-fifth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Samantha March, widow of Lewis B. March, late of Company B, Forty-first Regiment, and Company G, Fifty-third Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John J. Lee, late of Company H, Sixtieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and Troop M, Fourth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William H. Williams, late of Company C, Eighty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George W. Marshall, late of Company I, One hundred and fortieth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James T. Elder, late of Company H, Forty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah A. McKenzie, widow of Charles C. McKenzie, late of Company K, Fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah Quest, widow of William C. Quest, late of Company D, First Regiment Connecticut Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Laura E. McFarland, widow of Winfield S. McFarland, late of Company C, Twenty-sixth Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Stewart Gorton, late of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Hillery A. McVicker, late of Company K, Ninth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $36 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Cornelia Mathews, widow of Jacob Mathews, late of Company I, One hundred and twenty-seventh Regiment, and Company I, Fifty-fourth Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Charles Leonard, late of Company M, First Regiment Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William Cook, late of Company F, Forty-ninth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Philip E. Robertson, late of Company B, Fourth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of David C. Woodruff, late of Company F, Eighteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Clara May Brawner, helpless and dependent child of Henry K. Brawner, late of Company F, Twenty-second Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Maggie S. Ford, former widow of Barton W. Ford, late of Company B, Forty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Samuel Reed, late of Companies F and K, Third Regiment Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Michael R. Harned, late of Company A, Thirty-third Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James P. Flaugher, late of Company D, Fortieth Regiment Kentucky Mounted Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James H. Baker, late of Company H, Thirty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Robert S. McDonald, late of Company I, Thirty-sixth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and Company H, Eighth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Elizabeth A. Marsh, widow of George M. Marsh, late of Company I, One hundred and fifty-third Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Robert Stuart, late of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Henry Grove, late of Company I, One hundred and sixty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Drafted Militia Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Aaron Freed, late of Company B, Twenty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James H. Stump, late of Hewett's Battery, First Kentucky Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Andrew J. Allen, late of Company F, Thirty-ninth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Paulina Anderson, widow of John L. Anderson, late of Company H, First Regiment Minnesota Heavy Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Thomas A. Williamson, late of the One hundred and eighty-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Levi Airy, late of the Fourth Battery, Iowa Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John W. Carmichael, late of Company H, Twenty-second Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of James Leary, now known as James O'Leary, late a landsman, U. S. S. Ohio, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John H. Moore, late of Company H, One hundred and twenty-third Regiment, and Company K, Sixty-fifth Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Albert W. Utter, late of Company C, Twelfth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Emma A. Smith, former widow of Whitman B. Smith, late of Company I, First Regiment California Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Manly R. Yardley, late of Company K, First Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sallie E. Mullin, widow of George H. Mullin, late of Company I, First Regiment Pennsylvania Reserve Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Alexander Noffsinger, late of Company H, Fifteenth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Josiah Fosnot, late of Company F, Two hundred and seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $27 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of George W. Short, late of Company H, Tenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William G. Otis, late of Company K, Thirty-ninth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah Gunsolly, former widow of John Clingersmith, late of Company I, Eighteenth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Austin Williams, late of Company A, Thirty-first Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and in Seventieth Company, Second Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Sarah E. Wilson, former widow of William H. Binkley, late of Company A, Ninety-ninth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and in Company G, Fiftieth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Louis C. T. Kramer, now pensioned as Louis Kramer, late of Company G, First Regiment Michigan Light Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary E. Roseberry, former widow of Richard B. Price, late of Company B, Thirty-ninth Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Joseph M. Thomas, late of Companies B and A, Seventy-third Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary Gardner, widow of Frank Gardner, late of Company B, One hundredth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The foregoing bill is a substitute for the following House bills referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions:

H. R. 839. Miles Fuller.
H. R. 845. Mary J. Fruit.
H. R. 931. Nancy Gold.
H. R. 932. Joseph A. Hollister.
H. R. 959. James Kinser.
H. R. 961. George W. Page.
H. R. 963. John Greenamyer.
H. R. 986. Ruth E. Hering.
H. R. 1001. Mahala Burns.
H. R. 1031. Isaac M. Emley.
H. R. 1038. James P. Barton.
H. R. 1048. Junius R. Clift.
H. R. 1052. Elias Worley.
H. R. 1244. Delia Anderson.
H. R. 1297. Samuel A. Parrish.
H. R. 1325. Simeon L. Miles.
H. R. 1326. James M. Johnson.
H. R. 1378. Elizabeth Waldon.
H. R. 1386. Lucas Covert, jr.
H. R. 1401. Nancy A. Martin.
H. R. 1402. Lucy L. Laymon.
H. R. 1406. James Corn.
H. R. 1417. Emily Schwartz.
H. R. 1461. Catharine Maconaughay.
H. R. 1482. Andrew Watts.
H. R. 1483. Christopher C. Estes.
H. R. 1487. Cora E. Brooks.
H. R. 1508. John T. Lovett.
H. R. 1513. Sarah A. Touseul.
H. R. 1594. Anna M. Jenkins.
H. R. 1598. Mary A. Brackett.
H. R. 1602. Marquis D. Lillie.
H. R. 1630. Mary Lyons.
H. R. 1639. Margaret M. Hack.
H. R. 1656. Ruth Ann James.
H. R. 1724. William C. Taylor.
H. R. 1755. Laura A. Peters.
H. R. 1796. William H. Doll.
H. R. 1805. Disia Stamper.
H. R. 1828. James R. Parker.
H. R. 1848. William D. Alexander.
H. R. 1892. Sarah J. Newton.
H. R. 1897. Mary I. Keen.
H. R. 1982. Roman R. Butcher.
H. R. 1999. Sarah J. Glover.
H. R. 2018. William E. Hopkins.
H. R. 2025. Mary K. Dunn.
H. R. 2056. Adlade Holland.
H. R. 2082. Catherine A. Payne.
H. R. 2086. Sarah B. Scott.
H. R. 2191. Jane Harris.
H. R. 2223. Emma R. Shattuck.
H. R. 2245. Emily E. Spencer.
H. R. 2251. Eliza J. Glover.
H. R. 2252. Nancy McClellan.
H. R. 2276. James H. Holtzman.
H. R. 2449. Hiram H. Persell.
H. R. 2569. Eliza Riehl.
H. R. 2570. Anna Holmes.
H. R. 2609. William P. Morris.
H. R. 2679. Arzila Wolf.
H. R. 2731. Stillman Young.
H. R. 2747. Julia E. Watson.
H. R. 2758. Sidney R. Tripp.
H. R. 2775. Elvira Russell.
H. R. 2983. Adelaide L. Curry.
H. R. 3027. Maria W. Wilson.
H. R. 3122. James L. Weirich.
H. R. 3131. William F. Petty.
H. R. 3142. William P. Blackburn.
H. R. 3143. John Haines.
H. R. 3153. Friederike Potter.
H. R. 3206. Harriet L. Busick.
H. R. 3218. Harriet L. Ferris.
H. R. 3284. Mary A. Kane.
H. R. 3420. Samuel Swope.
H. R. 3421. Mary E. Merrill.
H. R. 3763. George Hull.
H. R. 3764. Ellen Carr.
H. R. 3775. Lida W. Ashton.
H. R. 3785. Mary A. Hawks.
H. R. 3789. Clara Wilt.
H. R. 3806. Helen M. Brown.
H. R. 3821. Barbara Marx.
H. R. 3875. Charles Clark.
H. R. 3865. Sophia Anderson.
H. R. 3976. Mary C. Kitchen.
H. R. 4301. Hiram J. Mills.
H. R. 4364. Annie J. Henderson.
H. R. 4380. Martha J. Curtiss.
H. R. 4392. Eliza March.
H. R. 4539. James Gallagher.
H. R. 4546. Clarinda Shields.
H. R. 4547. Mary E. Kirk.
H. R. 4600. William A. James.
H. R. 4620. Martha A. Crain.
H. R. 4628. Douglass Smith.
H. R. 4808. Jennie Galbreath.
H. R. 4923. Aaron Hall.
H. R. 4987. Anna Nau.
H. R. 5024. Samuel Miller.
H. R. 5108. Juliet Kimbrough.
H. R. 5119. Margaret B. Bradley.
H. R. 5175. Leasen E. Callen.
H. R. 5224. Jemima Furnier.
H. R. 5235. Charles McMath.
H. R. 5242. Silas A. Wardlow.
H. R. 5284. William H. Brown.
H. R. 5332. Lizzie Butler.
H. R. 5335. Louisa Patrick.
H. R. 5343. Elizabeth C. Johnson.
H. R. 5350. Sarah A. Haring.
H. R. 5397. James H. Howe.
H. R. 5587. Albert Cirtwell.
H. R. 5660. John Brannan.
H. R. 5611. Mary A. Wright.
H. R. 5616. H. Jenness Paul.
H. R. 5704. Samuel W. Pyle.
H. R. 5720. Julia Kibbe.
H. R. 5810. Millie Rowe.
H. R. 5814. Anna M. Goeller.
H. R. 5968. Mary A. Long.
H. R. 5976. Samuel Steele.
H. R. 5983. Harriet F. Kidd.
H. R. 6163. Clara Keller.
H. R. 6245. Jordan J. McCann.
H. R. 6276. Freeman H. Bentley.
H. R. 6353. Samantha March.
H. R. 6354. John J. Lee.
H. R. 6367. William H. Williams.
H. R. 6378. George W. Marshall.
H. R. 6393. James T. Rider.
H. R. 6479. Sarah A. McKenzie.
H. R. 6581. Sarah Quest.
H. R. 6607. Laura E. McFarland.
H. R. 6635. Stewart Gorton.
H. R. 6649. Hillery A. McVicker.
H. R. 6685. Cornelia Mathews.
H. R. 6695. Charles Leonard.
H. R. 6718. William Cook.
H. R. 6941. Philip E. Robertson.
H. R. 6976. David C. Woodruff.
H. R. 6998. Clara May Brawner.
H. R. 7007. Maggie S. Ford.
H. R. 7008. Samuel Reed.
H. R. 7052. Michael R. Harned.
H. R. 7065. James P. Flaugher.
H. R. 7097. James H. Baker.
H. R. 7100. Robert S. McDonald.
H. R. 7168. Elizabeth A. Marsh.
H. R. 7171. Robert Stuart.
H. R. 7187. Henry Grove.
H. R. 7190. Aaron Freed.
H. R. 7192. James H. Stump.
H. R. 7206. Andrew J. Allen.
H. R. 7307. Paulina Anderson.
H. R. 7314. Thomas A. Williamson.
H. R. 7336. Levi Airy.
H. R. 7410. John W. Carmichael.
H. R. 7431. James Leary.
H. R. 7505. John H. Moore.
H. R. 7750. Albert W. Utter.
H. R. 7798. Emma A. Smith.
H. R. 7969. Manly R. Yardley.
H. R. 8079. Sallie E. Mullin.
H. R. 8080. Alexander Noffsinger.
H. R. 8082. Josiah Fosnot.
H. R. 8094. George W. Short.
H. R. 8305. William G. Otis.
H. R. 8414. Sarah Gunsolly.
H. R. 8419. Austin Williams.
H. R. 9029. Sarah E. Wilson.
H. R. 9073. Louis C. T. Kramer.
H. R. 9103. Mary E. Roseberry.
H. R. 9199. Joseph M. Thomas.
H. R. 9451. Mary Gardner.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the bill by striking out lines 7, 8, 9, and 10, on page 22, being the name of Mary A. Long, as she died yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 22, strike out all of lines 7, 8, 9, and 10.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. STEPHENS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a memorial address to Congress from the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Los Angeles, Cal., upon the question of preparedness on the Pacific coast.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner stated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. In the same connection the gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman to ask leave to extend and not revise. The gentleman will make sufficient revision anyway. Do not let us introduce the practice of asking to revise remarks.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Chairman, I understood that I asked leave to extend and revise.

The CHAIRMAN. That is the request submitted.

Mr. MANN. It is not necessary for the gentleman to ask permission to revise, and I think it would establish a very bad practice.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman desire to strike out the word "revise"?

Mr. DIES. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a petition and resolution from the Jacksonville branch of the National Security League advocating preparedness.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida asks leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD in the manner stated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR.

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call up now bills on the Private Calendar. In order to dispose of as many of these bills as possible, I ask unanimous consent that we go through the calendar by unanimous consent, for if we proceed to consider any of the contested claims the chances are that we will not get through the first bill that is contested.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to take up the Private Calendar and call the same by unanimous consent, passing for the time being those bills to which there is objection.

Mr. POU. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none; and the Clerk will proceed to call the bills on the Private Calendar.

CARLOS HEVIA Y REYES GAVILÁN.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the resolution (H. J. Res. 95) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Mr. Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán, a citizen of Cuba.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this joint resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he hereby is, authorized to permit Mr. Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán, a citizen of Cuba, to receive instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis: Provided, That no expense shall be caused to the United States thereby, and that the said Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán shall agree to comply with all regulations for the police and discipline of the academy, to be studious, and to give his utmost efforts to accomplish the course in the various departments of instruction, and that the said Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán shall not be admitted to the academy until he shall have passed the mental and physical examinations prescribed for candidates from the United States, and that he shall be immediately withdrawn if deficient in studies, of conduct, and so recommended by the academic board.

The joint resolution was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ELLIS P. GARTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7502) for the relief of Ellis P. Garton, administrator of the estate of H. B. Garton, deceased.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

LOUIS LANDRAM.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 1584) to carry out the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Louis Landram, administrator of William J. Landram, deceased.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

ALBERT GREENLAW.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2180) for the relief of Albert Greenlaw.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the accounts of Albert Greenlaw, postmaster at Eastport, Me., in the sum of $3,494.83, due the United States on account of post-office funds embezzled by Ernest A. Farris, assistant at the Eastport (Me.) post office during several years, ending December, 1900: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be taken as releasing any other person or persons from liability to the United States on account of said embezzlements or in any manner affecting such liabilities.

The committee amendments were read, as follows:

Page 1, line 5, strike out the figures "$3,494.83" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$3,378.02," and, page 1, line 9, after the word "hundred," insert the words "and twelve."

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

THOMAS R. MASON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 2288) for the relief of Thomas R. Mason.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Thomas R. Mason, of Dexter, Mo., the sum of $128.24 for services in carrying the mail on route No. 9683, in Kentucky, from January 1, 1861, to May 31, 1861.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, Thomas R. Mason has died since this bill was introduced. I may state now that this is a debt due on a contract for carrying the mail during the Civil War from a point in Kentucky to a point in Tennessee. The Government officials admit they have owed this money for over 50 years. It has passed the House three times, but has not passed the Senate. I desire to amend now by inserting after the second "to," in line 4, the words "the legal representative of."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I move to further amend by inserting after the word "Mason," in line 4, the words "deceased, late of."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, this is one of the bills for the carrying of mails in the Southern States at the outbreak of the war. We have passed from time to time a number of these bills in three or four or half a dozen different Congresses. It seems to me that if we are to continue to pay these claims it would be perfectly proper to authorize it by a general law on the subject. I think there may be claims outstanding on the books of the department to the extent of a hundred or a hundred and fifty or more thousand dollars. As long as we have made a precedent and stuck to it for several Congresses, and are likely to pass any of these bills that come in as special bills, the amounts being small in each case, it seems to me that Congress ought to pay them by a general act, so that the claimants shall not be put to the bother and expense of trying to push a special bill through the Congress, and that the Committee on Claims shall not be put to the trouble, bother, and expense of taking up these claims individually. They have been passed in the last few Congresses by unanimous consent. I have no objection whatever to the passing of this bill. Some one, I noticed, has introduced a general bill on the subject. I do not remember who it was, and I do not remember whether it went to the Committee on Claims or to the Committee on the Judiciary or some other committee.

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that the bill to which he refers is probably the bill introduced by Mr. ALEXANDER, and the Committee on Claims now has the bill under consideration and expects in the near future to report a bill covering all these claims.

Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I heartily agree with all that was stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], that where the Government owes money on a contract and admits it has owed it for 50 years, it does seem to me there ought to be some general legislation that will give relief without requiring the parties to come here to seek relief by special bill. This bill has passed the House three times, but never has passed the Senate. There has never been any objection to it in the House, because the Auditor for the Post Office Department has stated that the Government owed the money on the contract. About 60 days ago I received a letter from this old gentleman saying unless he got this money very soon it would do him no good; and since I have introduced this bill and had a favorable report upon it I have been notified of his death, so that these premonitions of his early death were correct. I now desire to get this bill through as early as possible for the benefit of his widow and children who survive him.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

MICHAEL F. O'HARE.

The next bill on the Private Calendar was the bill H. R. 4330, a bill for the relief of Michael F. O'Hare.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated to Michael F. O'Hare, of Tyngsboro, Mass., the sum of $200, in full compensation for loss of cow and injury to his business through negligence on the part of employees of the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Entomology, on June 11, 1911.

The committee amendment was read as follows:

In line 7, page 1, strike out the figures "$200" and insert in lieu thereof "$85."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

POSTMASTER AT KEGG, PA.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 4881) to reimburse the postmaster at Kegg, Pa., for money and stamps taken by burglars.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the next bill.

DE BARBIERI & CO., VALPARAISO, CHILE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8318) for the relief of De Barbieri & Co., of Valparaiso, Chile.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8318) for the relief of De Barbieri & Co., of Valparaiso, Chile.

Be it enacted, etc., That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,470, to pay in full claims arising out of an agreement by De Barbieri & Co., of Valparaiso, Chile, to furnish fresh meats to the U. S. S. South Dakota in June, 1910.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

JAMES STANTON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 5835) for the relief of James Stanton.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5835) for the relief of James Stanton.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to James Stanton, of Leavenworth, Kans., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,912.40, the same being for extra work performed by said James Stanton on a contract with the War Department, dated June 8, 1908, for grading, paving, curbing, and rock hauling on Grant Avenue, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.: Provided, That no part of the said sum shall be paid to the said James Stanton unless he has carried out a certain agreement under a contract dated August 27, 1907, namely: That he would keep the said road in satisfactory condition for a period of five years from the completion of the work under the last-named contract; and that in case of his refusal or failure to fulfill said agreement, any amounts which may have been expended by the United States for keeping this road in a satisfactory condition during the five-year period shall be deducted from the said sum of $1,912.40, and shall be available to reimburse the War Department for such necessary expenditures as the same are made: And provided further, That the Government does not relinquish any of the rights secured to it under the guarantee bond of the said James Stanton in the Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co., dated January 4, 1910, should the said sum of $1,912.40 prove insufficient for defraying the cost of the work necessary to place and keep the road in such satisfactory condition during the said five-year period.

Also the following committee amendment was read:

Strike out all of the remainder of the bill after the word "Kansas" on line 10, page 1.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, I move to lay the bill aside with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

UNITED STATES DRAINAGE & IRRIGATION CO.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7248) for the relief of the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7248) for the relief of the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $9,498.43, which sum is hereby appropriated, the same being payment in full for additional work performed by said United States Drainage & Irrigation Co. under its certain contract with the War Department, dated December 15, 1911, for jetty work at the mouth of Broadkill River, Del.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on laying the bill aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. POU. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bills to the House, some with amendments and some without amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bills do pass.

The motion was agreed to; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. SAUNDERS, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the committee had had under consideration sundry bills, and had directed him to report the same back to the House, some with amendments and some without amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bills do pass.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10037) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 95) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Mr. Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán, a citizen of Cuba.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2180) for the relief of Albert Greenlaw.

The SPEAKER. Is there a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2288) for the relief of Thomas R. Mason.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 4530) for the relief of Michael F. O'Hare.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8318) for the relief of De Barbieri & Co., Valparaiso, Chile.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5835) for the relief of James Stanton.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7248) for the relief of the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the several bills were passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following personal requests, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

JANUARY 28, 1916.

Mr. Moss of West Virginia requests leave of absence indefinitely, on account of illness.

JANUARY 27, 1916.

Hon. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I respectfully ask five days' leave of absence from the House, on account of important business.

Very truly, CALEB POWERS.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, these requests will be granted.

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 51 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, January 29, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. PADGETT, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 9224) providing for an increase in number of midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 83), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. ALEXANDER, from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4784) to provide for a change in the designation of the Steamboat-Inspection Service, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 84), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6918) to relieve Congress from the adjudication of private claims against the Government, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 85), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. WEBB, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the resolution (H. Res. 91) requesting the Attorney General to furnish the names and former allegiance of persons involved in alleged criminal plots, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 86), which said resolution and report were laid on the table.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8423) for the relief of Robert F. Risley; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (H. R. 6230) granting a pension to Christopher C. Hamilton; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BACHARACH: A bill (H. R. 10303) to provide for an examination, survey, and estimate of cost of an inland waterway on the Atlantic coast of the State of New Jersey, between Cape May and New York Bay, N. Y. and N. J.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. CLARK of Florida: A bill (H. R. 10304) to provide for the erection of a public building at Lake City, in the State of Florida; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HAWLEY: A bill (H. R. 10305) to grant certain lands to the State of Oregon as a public park, for the benefit and enjoyment of the people; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10306) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the sale of certain lands belonging to the Indians on the Siletz Indian Reservation, in the State of Oregon," approved May 13, 1910; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10307) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to pay and to distribute the balance now in the Treasury to the credit of the Alsea and other Indians on the Siletz Reservation; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. KENT: A bill (H. R. 10308) to provide revenue by taxing wine, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CULLOP: A bill (H. R. 10309) for the reduction of postage on first-class mail matter for local delivery; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 10310) to create a Federal land credit system, provide credit facilities for farmers, reduce interest rates on farm mortgages, encourage agriculture, promote thrift, provide a market for United States bonds, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: A bill (H. R. 10311) to provide for the enlargement, extension, and remodeling of the Federal building at Boston, Mass.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. WEBB: A bill (H. R. 10312) relating to appeals and writs of error and costs thereof; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TRIBBLE: A bill (H. R. 10313) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Greensboro, Ga.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. LEVER: A bill (H. R. 10314) to provide capital for agricultural development, to create a standard form of investment based upon farm mortgage, to equalize rates of interest upon farm loans, to furnish a market for United States bonds, to create Government depositaries and financial agents for the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. CARY: A bill (H. R. 10315) for the erection of a public building at Milwaukee, Wis.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10316) appropriating $5,000 for the improvement of that portion of National Avenue, village of West Milwaukee, Milwaukee County, Wis., abutting the grounds of the Northwestern Branch National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. BRITT: A bill (H. R. 10317) to purchase a post-office site and to build a post-office building in the city of Murphy, N. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. CROSSER: A bill (H. R. 10318) relating to liability of employers and assuring compensation for injuries or death of certain employees in the District of Columbia, providing for an industrial commission in said District and defining its duties, and providing for an appropriation to carry out the provisons of this act; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. McCULLOCH: A resolution (H. Res. 112) directing an investigation of the proposed motorization of the Rural Mail Service; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. BARKLEY: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 121) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 10319) granting a pension to Henry Pudor; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10320) granting an increase of pension to John W. Pence; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10321) granting an increase of pension to John R. Tallentire; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10322) to correct the military record of George Vansickle; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10323) for the relief of the Citizens' Building & Loan Association Co., of Newark, Ohio; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10324) for the relief of the Granville Building, Savings & Loan Co., of Granville, Ohio; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BARKLEY: A bill (H. R. 10325) granting an increase of pension to Alfred D. Cosby; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10326) granting an increase of pension to Anderson Scott; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10327) granting a pension to Malisa Sunderland; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10328) granting a pension to Boyd L. Mahon; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10329) to remove the charge of desertion from the name of Ellery P. Roberts; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10330) to remove the charge of desertion from the name of Lee Thompson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 10331) granting a pension to Oscar Fry; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10332) granting a pension to James H. Swallum; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CASEY: A bill (H. R. 10333) to place the name of Jedediah C. Paine upon the unlimited retired list of the Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 10334) for the relief of James A. Griffith and Hannibal I. Griffith; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CONRY: A bill (H. R. 10335) for the relief of S. A. Russell; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CULLOP: A bill (H. R. 10336) granting a pension to Jennie Bridwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DARROW (by request): A bill (H. R. 10337) for the relief of Mary J. Higgs; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 10338) granting an increase of pension to William S. Nail; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GLYNN: A bill (H. R. 10339) granting an increase of pension to David Cromwell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10340) granting an honorable discharge to James Crowley; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. HAMLIN (by request): A bill (H. R. 10341) granting to the National Investment & Development Co., a corporation of Warsaw and Kansas City, Mo., right, so far as the interests of the United States may be affected or concerned, to construct and maintain reservoir, dam or dams, and tunnels across and from and to the Osage River, for the development of water power at a point above the town of Warsaw, Benton County, Mo.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HAWLEY: A bill (H. R. 10342) granting a pension to Mary E. Hazelrigg; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HULBERT: A bill (H. R. 10343) granting a pension to Arthur O. Herman; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HULL of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 10344) granting an increase of pension to George W. Carter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington: A bill (H. R. 10345) granting a pension to Hannah Hagan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KEARNS: A bill (H. R. 10346) granting an increase of pension to James Sillett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10347) granting an increase of pension to Walter J. Wall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KINKAID: A bill (H. R. 10348) granting an increase of pension to Hannah F. Blood; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McANDREWS: A bill (H. R. 10349) granting an increase of pension to Allen C. Walkington; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MAGEE: A bill (H. R. 10350) for the relief of John P. Stanton; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MORGAN of Oklahoma: A bill (H. R. 10351) granting an increase of pension to James M. Blakeley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10352) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Rader; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NEELY: A bill (H. R. 10353) granting an increase of pension to Jacob J. Hare; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10354) granting an increase of pension to Jonathan E. Kidd; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10355) granting a pension to Charles A. Gailey; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NORTH: A bill (H. R. 10356) granting an increase of pension to Joseph C. Young; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10357) granting a pension to Annie North; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: A bill (H. R. 10358) granting an increase of pension to George A. Bates; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10359) granting an increase of pension to Hannah B. Allen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10360) granting a pension to Susan L. Fisher; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OVERMYER: A bill (H. R. 10361) granting an increase of pension to J. H. Burns; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10362) granting an increase of pension to Frank E. Schoner; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. PRATT: A bill (H. R. 10363) to remove the charge of desertion against James Green; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RAUCH: A bill (H. R. 10364) granting an increase of pension to Robert M. Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10365) granting a pension to Albert De Witt Walker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10366) granting a pension to John Murphy; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10367) to correct the military record of John Henry Dolchy; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10368) to correct the military record of Thomas F. Lindersmith; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10369) granting an increase of pension to Sarah E. Fried; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10370) granting a pension to Andrew C. Ross; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10371) granting an increase of pension to Oliver H. P. Meek; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SANFORD: A bill (H. R. 10372) to remove the charge of cowardice against John McNeil; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SCHALL: A bill (H. R. 10373) granting an increase of pension to F. A. Heebner; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHACKLEFORD: A bill (H. R. 10374) to correct the military record of Herman Neff and grant him an honorable discharge; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SLAYDEN: A bill (H. R. 10375) for the relief of David A. Trousdale; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Texas: A bill (H. R. 10376) granting an increase of pension to William F. Nelson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SPARKMAN: A bill (H. R. 10377) for the relief of J. M. Crumpton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TRIBBLE: A bill (H. R. 10378) granting a pension to Andrew B. Putnam; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 10379) granting a pension to Nettie E. Browning; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMAS S. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 10380) granting a pension to Manuel C. Gorton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10381) granting an increase of pension to Mary Jane Pack; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10382) granting an increase of pension to John W. Leathers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10383) granting an increase of pension to James Holderby; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Evidence to accompany House bill 938, for the relief of Sanford T. Timmons; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. AYRES: Petition of bankers and other citizens of Sedgwick, Derby, Cheney, and Galva, Kans., protesting against revenue stamps on bank checks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BRUMBAUGH: Evidence to accompany House bill 10047, a bill granting a pension to Ortha A. Glanville; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: Petitions of 100 citizens of Nashville and 200 citizens of Springfield, Tenn., favoring national prohibition; to the Committe on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: Petitions of depositors in banks of Kansas, opposing placing revenue stamps on bank checks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CARY: Memorial of the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., asking that the subject of railway-mail pay be submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an investigation and report; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of the Travelers' Protective Association of America, indorsing the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CASEY: Petition of 1,000 citziens of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., favoring national prohibition; to the Commitee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CLARK of Florida: Petitions of 100 people of High Springs and 300 of Gainesville, Fla., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DALE of New York: Petition of the Jessup & Moore Paper Co., relative to compulsory pilotage of barges; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Travelers' Protective Association, favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Department of Social Betterment of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, favoring passage of House bill 476, the workmen's bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Central Union Label Council of Greater New York, favoring passage of House bill 6871, relative to convict-labor goods; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petitions of Leslies, Underwood Typewriter Co., and Edwin H. Burr, all of New York, against reduction of mail deliveries in New York; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. DARROW: Memorial of Travelers' Protective Association of America, favoring the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Mrs. Franklin S. Edmonds and others, of Philadelphia, relative to woman-suffrage amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DYER: Petition of Local Union No. 46, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, favoring the Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of E. L. Robinson, St. Louis, Mo.; favoring the child-labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petitions of Fred A. Keller and P. W. Hampton, against censorship of motion-picture films; to the Committee on Education.

Also, petition of Missouri Cattle, Swine, and Sheep Feeders' Association, favoring a law for the standardization of agricultural products; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Koken Barbers' Supply Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against schedule B of the emergency war-tax measure; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. EGAN: Memorial of Stockton Chamber of Commerce, in favor of submitting the question of railway-mail pay to the Interstate Commerce Commission for an investigation, and report to Congress; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Joseph P. Byers, of Philadelphia, secretary committee on provision for the feeble-minded, favoring an appropriation by Congress to establish a home for the feeble-minded in the District; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of Travelers' Protective Association, favoring the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of C. E. Lindner and 30 others, of Colby; and Otto S. Olson and 24 others, of Curtiss; all in the State of Wisconsin, favoring Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of Wisconsin, against preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Methodist Episcopal Church of Belvidere, Ill., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of the Philadelphia Bourse, favoring repeal of the seamen's act; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. GARNER: Petition of Texas Staats-Verband, relative to forbidding Americans to sail on vessels belonging to warring nations; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of Travelers' Protective Association, favoring the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of Southern Medical Association of Dallas, Tex., relative to increasing medical department of the Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HILL: Petitions of V. R. Blehdon, of Buffalo; C. W. Rathgeb, of Highland, N. Y.; James Mortin, of Washington, R. I.; Joseph Jensen & Co., of Chicago, Ill.; William Skinner & Sons, of Holyoke; and Windsor Print Co., of North Adams, Mass., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HILLIARD: Memorial of Social Service Commission of South Dakota, favoring censorship of moving-picture films; to the Committee on Education.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 8423, for the relief of Robert F. Risley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petitions of Orrin W. Auman and 700 members of the Grant Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Thomas S. Young and 450 members of the Broadway Baptist Church, Roy Leslie Smith and 150 members of the Washington Park Methodist Episcopal Church, W. W. Winne and 1,500 members of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, O. W. Fifer and 500 members of the Warren Memorial Church, and L. A. Spring and 30 members of the North Denver Mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, all of Denver, Colo., urging the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution providing for national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petitions of Frank W. Bretwall and 154 citizens of Julesburg, Sedgwick County, Colo.; J. C. Hoover, pastor, and 24 members of the Englewood, Arapahoe County (Colo.), Baptist Church; Walter Raymond Loupe, pastor, and 77 members of the Englewood, Arapahoe County (Colo.), Christian Church; and Edward Nolte and 50 citizens of Platner, Washington County, Colo., urging the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution providing for national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of Travelers' Protective Association, favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: Memorial of W. A. Bryan and 50 others, of Carrollton, Ohio, favoring law misbranding articles made from leather, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petitions of 187 citizens of Steubenville and 300 citizens of Harrison, Ohio, favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HULBERT: Memorial of United Spanish War Veterans of St. Louis, Mo., favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. IGOE: Memorial of Travelers' Protective Association of America, favoring the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of Capt. Fred A. Bottger and members of Company K, First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, favoring National Guard pay bill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KETTNER: Resolutions of Canners' League of California, favoring adequate American merchant marine; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, resolutions of Canners' League of California, favoring cooperation between Federal and State Governments for rivers, harbors, and inland waterways development; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, resolution of Society Sons of Revolution in the State of California, favoring development of practicable system of national preparedness against war; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, resolution of Oakland Chamber of Commerce, favoring additional appropriations for improvements in equipment of Geodetic Survey on Pacific coast; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Petition of Commodore Council, No. 14, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Wakefield, R. I., favoring restriction of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Petition of Travelers' Protective Association, in convention at Omaha, Nebr., favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Ogdensburg, Pa., relative to increased efficiency and compensation of railroads; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. LOUD: Petition of C. H. Anschutz, of Tawas City, Mich., favoring embargo on munitions; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. McLEMORE: Petition of sundry citizens of Hill County, Tex., against any great increase of taxes for purposes of preparedness; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of American Neutrality and Peace Convention, at San Francisco, Cal., favoring an embargo on arms and ammunition; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MEEKER: Petitions of St. Louis Waiters' Union, Local No. 20, F. S. Elliott, and Robert J. Fritz, all of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the passage of the Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petitions of St. Louis Moving Picture and Projecting Machine Operators Union, Local No. 143, and Awning Workers' Union, No. 14667, of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the passage of the Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petitions of Journeymen Steamfitters and Helpers, No. 562; International Association of Pile Drivers, Local No. 43; Future City Lodge, No. 1; Badge and Lodge Paraphernalia Makers' Union, No. 9136; Soda and Mineral Water Employees' Union, No. 14797; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Local No. 1011; World's Fair Lodge, No. 390; the Order of Railway Telegraphers, Missouri Pacific Division, No. 31; G. B. B. Association of United States and Canada, No. 5; International Hod Carriers, Local Union No. 284; International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, Local No. 41; Brotherhood Railway Car Men, Mountain Lodge, No. 19; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Local No. 45; Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers, No. 204; Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, Local No. 102, all of St. Louis, Mo., praying for the passage of the Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania: Petitions of William G. Pettus and others, of Philadelphia, Pa., urging embargo on munitions of war, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, memorial of Philadelphia Board of Trade, urging passage of Senate joint resolution 60 relative to legislation bearing upon shippers, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MOTT: Petition of Travelers' Protective Association of America, favoring law relative to unfair competition; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Louis W. Carlisle Camp, No. 56, United Spanish War Veterans, of Watertown, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Louis W. Carlisle Camp, No. 56, United Spanish War Veterans, of Watertown, N. Y., favoring pensions for widows; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. OAKEY: Petition of the Williams & Carleton Co., of Hartford, Conn., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of Admiral Bunce Section, No. 42, Navy League of the United States, of Hartford, Conn., favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: Memorial of Gorham Manufacturing Co., of Providence, R. I., favoring increased appropriations for governmental work in Alaska; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, memorials of Homer Bleach & Dye Works and Union Webbing Co., in favor of House bill 702; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorials of Rev. Edward R. Evans, Annabel L. Berry, Sarah J. Eddy, Rhode Island Federation of Labor, and Albert C. Rider, of Rhode Island, favoring the Keating-Owen bill; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, memorial of Commodore Perry Council, No. 14, favoring more strict laws governing admission of foreigners to this country; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of E. J. Waters, of Providence, R. I., protesting against any embargo on arms; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Rev. George McClellan Fiske, in favor of the Keating-Owen bill; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. OVERMYER: Petitions of Ludwig Tuler and 24 citizens and J. J. Danch, of Sandusky, Ohio, and German-American Alliance, of Bellevue, Ohio, favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PARKER of New York: Petition of sundry citizens of the thirty-ninth congressional district of New York, favoring tax on mail-order houses; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCHALL: Memorial from the business men of Cambridge, Sandstone, Hinckley, Anoka, Braham, Mora, Rush City, Foreston, Lindstrom, Center City, North Branch, Pine City, Montrose, Wayzata, Long Lake, Princeton, Excelsior, Hopkins, St. Bonifacius, Maple Plain, Taylors Falls, Stanchfield, Ogilvie, Brook Park, Isanti, Rockford, Harris, Delano, Oak Park, Chisago City, Rock Creek, Buffalo, Annandale, Cokato, Dassel, Howard Lake, Waverly, Minn., favoring tax on mail-order houses; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petition of Fred Van Brunt and Edward H. Van Camp, of Long Branch, N. J., favoring embargo on war material; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of New Jersey Society Sons of American Revolution, favoring erection of national archives building; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, petition of Daughters of Liberty, Cedar Run, N. J., favoring passage of Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Stockton (Cal.) Chamber of Commerce, relative to railway-mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of New Jersey, favoring passage of Stevens-Ayres bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SNELL: Memorial of Ogdensburg Chamber of Commerce, relative to railway-mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. STINESS: Petition of Commodore Perry Council, No. 14, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Wakefield, Pa., favoring restriction of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, favoring House resolution, granting the erection of a monument in Arlington Cemetery to the nuns of the battle field; to the Committee on the Library.

Also, papers to accompany House bill 4624, granting an increase of pension to George H. Naylor; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS of Ohio: Petition of Walsh Paper Co., Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota: Petition of K. S. Ramsett, Fingal, N. Dak., and 272 other merchants, favoring Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, January 29, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we pray Thy blessing upon these Thy servants whom Thou hast in Thy providence placed in positions of great responsibility and power. There is no phase of the work committed to their hands that does not pertain to the interests of the larger life and of the higher kingdom. Thou hast a purpose and a plan in all that Thou dost require at the hands of this honorable Senate.

O God, give that clearness of discernment, that calmness of thought, that evenness of temperament, that likeness to Christ to Thy servants that they may well perform the duties committed to them, and that each day they may enjoy the blessed satisfaction of having given something of their lives to the advancement of the interests of humanity and the extension of the kingdom of God. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

LIST OF CLAIMS (S. DOC. NO. 265).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the chief clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting, pursuant to the order of the court, a list of cases referred to the Court of Claims by the United States Senate, which cases were dismissed by the court under the act of March 4, 1915, etc., which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 2180. An act for the relief of Albert Greenlaw;
H. R. 2288. An act for the relief of Thomas R. Mason;
H. R. 4530. An act for the relief of Michael F. O'Hare;
H. R. 5835. An act for the relief of James Stanton;
H. R. 7248. An act for the relief of the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co.;
H. R. 8318. An act for the relief of De Barbieri & Co., of Valparaiso, Chile; and
H. J. Res. 95. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Mr. Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán, a citizen of Cuba.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I present resolutions adopted by the Jacksonville (Fla.) Branch of the National Security League, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas Article IV, section 4, of the Federal Constitution provides "that the United States shall guarantee to every State in the Union a republican form of government and shall protect each of them from invasion"; and

Whereas statements in the annual reports of the Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, and in the reports of the military and naval heads of departments appended thereto prove that the defense of this country are inadequate and would be ineffective in the event of foreign invasion; and

Whereas an attack waged against any part of the United States would be felt with equal hardship by all citizens of the United States on account of the distributed holdings of securities, etc., and the need for requiring men for an army of defense from each State in the Union: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Jacksonville Branch of the National Security League in conference as follows, to wit:

First. We favor such an increase in our Navy that it will be second to none in the world and one that will demand the respect of all nations for our commerce and trade on the high seas, and efficient to maintain the first line of defense on both the coasts of these United States.

Second. We favor a substantial increase of our Regular Army.

Third. We favor sufficient appropriations to place our National Guard on a proportional-pay basis and provide for ample instruction for these volunteer forces; as it is our belief that only through the National Guard is it possible to train a citizen army in times of peace.

Fourth. We favor the organization of cadet companies, as contemplated in the War Department bill now under consideration, and a corps of citizen officers who can supply the needs of a volunteer army in time of need.

Fifth. We also favor the holding of student camps as conducted by the War Department last year.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to each Senator and Representative in the Congress of the United States from Florida and they, respectively, be requested by the chairman of this branch of the National Security League to favor and support the increased appropriations of Congress to establish an efficient Navy and Army and a National Guard and officer corps along the lines and views herein expressed.

I certify that the foregoing is a true copy of resolutions adopted December 20, 1915.

CROMWELL GIBBONS,
Chairman Jacksonville (Fla.) Branch National Security League.

Attest:

ERNEST METCALFE, Secretary.

Mr. GRONNA. I present resolutions adopted by the Burleigh County Farmers' Union, in convention assembled at Bismarck, N. Dak., against an increase in armaments. I ask that the resolutions be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions adopted by the Burleigh County Farmers' Union, in the quarterly convention assembled at Bismarck, N. Dak., December 10, 1915.

Whereas more than 60 per cent of all the Federal revenues are now used for war expenses, a burden that is already too heavy to be borne by the producing classes without protest: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we demand economy in all appropriations made by Congress, and that we are especially opposed to any great increase in expenditures for the Army and Navy, but approve a reasonable outlay for coast defense by submarines and other agencies proved by recent experience to be effective for that purpose; and be it further

Resolved, That we are unalterably opposed to a large standing Army and to any change in our military system tending to compulsory military service; and be it further

Resolved, That we demand that our Senators and Congressmen use their votes and influence to prevent the appropriation of any unreasonable amount of money for war preparedness and Army and Navy increases. We demand that Congress redeem all pledges made to the farmers and proceed at once to enact a rural credits law, a law against gambling in produce options on boards of trade, a law providing for national standards for grain grading and inspection, and a law creating a national bureau of markets, all of which were indorsed by the national convention of the Farmers' Union at Lincoln, Nebr., on September 8, 1915; and be it

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from North Dakota and to the local papers of Burleigh County, N. Dak., for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of this meeting.

J. F. PERKINS, Chairman,
E. A. TRYGG,
H. W. RUPP,
C. O. KELL,
H. P. KNAPPEN,
Committee on Resolutions.

Submitted by C. F. Lindsey, secretary-treasurer, Regan, N. Dak.

Mr. GRONNA presented the memorial of Nick Thinnes, of Rock Lake, N. Dak., remonstrating against an increase in armaments, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition adopted by the American Neutrality and Peace Convention, held at San Francisco, Cal., praying for an investigation by Congress of alleged violations of neutrality, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. KENYON presented memorials of sundry citizens of Sigourney, Iowa, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation limiting the free use of the mails, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. STERLING presented a memorial of the Commercial Club of Huron, S. Dak., remonstrating against a tax on gasoline, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LIPPITT presented a petition of Fred L. Sayles Co., of Pascoag, R. I., praying for the imposition of a tax on dyestuffs, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

REPORT ON WATER-POWER DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. FLETCHER. I present a resolution, being a favorable report from the Committee on Printing, and I should like to ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 87) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the report entitled "Electric Power Development in the United States and Concentration in its Ownership and Control," transmitted to the Senate by the Secretary of Agriculture on January 20, 1916, in response to Senate resolution No. 544, Sixty-third Congress, be printed as a Senate document, together with accompanying tables and illustrations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, before unanimous consent is given I desire to call the attention of the Senate to certain public documents that have been printed covering the subject matter of this report.

In the first place, I wish to say that it will cost the Government for printing this document some twenty-odd thousand dollars. The information it contains, which is claimed will be used in the discussion of the water-power bill, has been printed many times, either in this body or in the House of Representatives; volume after volume has been printed and reprinted.

I noticed in the Evening Star of January 26, 1916, the following statement:

Gifford Pinchot, president of the National Conservation Association, who is in New York, has made public through the Washington office of the association in the Munsey Building a statement drawing attention to the report on water power made to the Senate by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. Pinchot says that the report, which charges that a monopoly of control of water powers and water-power sites exists in the United States, establishes every contention as to the water-power situation made by the conservation association.

"On January 20," Mr. Pinchot says in his statement, "Secretary Houston's report was referred to the Senate Committee on Printing.

"There is grave danger that its publication will be held up until too late to affect legislation now before Congress. The revelations of the report as to the growth of monopoly in water power and the facts as to development are so damaging to the water-power interests that serious efforts will be made to smother it."

Now, Mr. President, what are the facts in relation to this matter?

On January 20, 1916, the Senate referred the report to the Committee on Printing.

On January 21, 1916, the report was received by the committee from the Secretary of the Senate.

On January 21, 1916, the report was referred to the Public Printer for an estimate, as required by law. The committee could not act upon it until it had that estimate.

On January 25, 1916, there was a meeting of the committee called to consider printing the report, but it was postponed until January 28, as a quorum could not attend. Furthermore, the Public Printer had not completed his estimate as to the cost of printing the report, and it was not in the possession of the committee.

On January 27, 1916, the estimate was received from the Public Printer. The delay in submitting the estimate was due to the fact that the report contains 220 lithographic plates, on which the Public Printer had to obtain quotations from private contractors before completing the estimate.

On January 28, 1916, a meeting of the committee was called for 10 a. m. to consider the printing of the report.

This morning, Mr. President, a report was made by the chairman of the committee and unanimous consent is asked that the report be printed.

I call this to the attention of the Senate owing to the fact that this same bulldozing method has been going on for years from this same source whenever one of their pet schemes is before Congress, and I think the public ought to know it, Mr. President.

As far as I am concerned, if the Government of the United States wants to virtually throw $21,000 away, let us order the report printed; but when I stop to consider that volume after volume has been printed upon this same subject, with cuts and diagrams and all the information that will ever be referred to in the consideration of the water-power bill, not printed once but has been printed many times——

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. THOMAS. I suppose the Senator refers to the official publications upon the subject. Is it not also true that this same information has been printed on many occasions in magazines and newspapers of the country?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, of course; but what I am speaking of now are official documents paid for by the Government.

Mr. THOMAS. But I wanted to emphasize another side of the situation, so that the Senate might understand that this information has been given to the public from private and official sources time after time within the last five or six years.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no question about it, Mr. President.

In this connection I wish to call attention to the fact that Mr. Pinchot bases his fear of the report not being printed upon the statement that the men who are opposed to conservation will prevent it. There is no basis of fact for this fear. The power bill is not conservation legislation, but legislation which robs the State of its water and gives the control of it into the hands of a bureau here at Washington. Mr. Pinchot claims that those opposed to the passage of the power bill are fearful that the information contained in this report, if printed, would show the power companies and water-power sites of the country in the hands of a monopoly, and, if so, their whole contention would be swept aside.

Mr. President, I wish to say that it is conceded by those who have studied the question and know the nature of the business that the most efficient and cheapest service can be rendered the people of any community or of any State by the concentration of small powers into one great unit. It is impossible to serve a community or a State or States, for that matter, and have a large number of small, insignificant units of power. But everyone, Mr. President, admits that when this great unit is established it should be controlled by the public utility commission of the State in which the plant is located. The price of power must be and is controlled; the distribution of power is and must be controlled by these commissions. Laws in virtually all the States have been—and, no doubt, will be—passed for this purpose, and there can be no harm come to the people of the United States in having electric energy centered in great power companies that can furnish service efficiently, cheaply, and promptly, but under the supervision of the commissions of the States.

Mr. President, I wish to insert as a part of my remarks an editorial from the San Francisco Chronicle of January 22, 1916, upon this very question. It is short:

"CONTROL" OF WATER POWER—A CONTROL WHICH PREVENTS UTILIZATION IS NOT TO BE DESIRED.

The Secretary of Agriculture is one of the members of the President's Cabinet who is reputed to possess intellectual strength. He certainly does not, and presumably can not escape from the blighting influence of the university environment from which he was taken and which incapacitates all who are long subjected to it for any useful service in the direction of affairs.

In his report on the water power of the Nation Secretary Houston shows his university-bred fear of "monopoly" of water power in his comment on the situation, which he finds to be that more than half the water power now utilized is in control of 18 corporations and one-quarter in the control of 6.

The fact is that all sources of water power which can be united by connecting wires ought to be united and under single control. In no other way can temporary deficiencies in one section be so promptly and economically supplemented from surpluses in other sections.

If unbelievers are not satisfied with the authority of the Chronicle and their own common sense, we respectfully refer them to Gifford Pinchot, whose authority no uplifter will deny, and who is a sturdy supporter of this view of the case.

But Secretary Houston, who, had he developed in a more favorable environment, would have quite probably become a vigorous man of affairs, quakes and shudders at the university-created bogie of "monopoly."

An unrestrained monopoly of a necessity would, of course, suck the lifeblood out of any community which it could get at; but when the price of service is fixed by the people served, the situation is reversed, and the danger is that the community will suck the lifeblood out of the monopolies.

Which is, in fact, the danger which threatens the American monopolies to-day.

As, however, the votes of the ignorant greatly outnumber the votes of the wise, Congress legislates to placate ignorance rather than wisdom, with the inevitable result. Ignoring the national obligation to the States, it has so legislated that no new hydroelectric power whatever is being developed on the public domain, and the monopolists which so terrify Secretary Houston are thereby protected in their monopoly—such as it is.

As this result is now too obvious to be ignored, even by university professors and Congressmen, a new law is being engineered through Congress intended to make it possible to conserve some of our coal and oil by the substitution of hydroelectric power. Whether it will have that result will only be known when possible investors have studied the bill as finally passed.

If development follows, even on a trifling scale, the administration will shout that it has unlocked the sources of hydroelectric power, trusting that the people will forget that there would have been no occasion for unlocking if the same people had not previously locked, barred, and barricaded the same sources which they now ask credit for turning loose.

I wish to say to the Senator from Florida that Mr. Gifford Pinchot has admitted that public-service corporations for the distribution of electric power are more effective and can give better and cheaper power to the people in a single large unit than in many small ones, but that it ought to be regulated by some power other than its own officers no one disputes.

Mr. President, there are a mass of illustrations, 220 of them, in this report that will have to be lithographed. The cost of printing as provided in the committee report is over $20,000. This is only for a limited number of copies, 1,345 in all, and under the law the printed report will have to go first, 220 to the Senate, 350 to the House, 500 to depository libraries of the United States, and balance to departments, and so forth. The distribution gives each Senator two and hardly one to each Representative in Congress.

I warn you if this is ordered printed it will be only the beginning of the expense to the Government of the United States.

However, I wish to say if the printing of the report would assist any Senator in determining how his vote should be cast upon the water-power bill, I would not say one word about the expense. Not one change in the bill will be made by the printing of the report.

Now, Mr. President, I shall say no more. I shall not interpose an objection at this time to the present consideration of the resolution. If the Senate wants to vote for the expenditure of money in this way, well and good; I have done my duty in calling the attention of the Senate to it. I want the Senate to vote upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida a question before that is put. What is the estimate of the cost of the publication of this report without the illustrations?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have not an estimate of the cost without the illustrations.

There is this about it, I will say to the Senator. This report was made by the Secretary of Agriculture, but it was the work of the Forest Service, the chief engineer, Mr. Merrill, having compiled it, as he had done the work of collecting the data in pursuance of a resolution offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] last year. There have been some six or eight months' hard work put upon the preparation of the data. It probably cost the department twice as much as $20,000 in actual expense. It is regarded as the most complete compilation of data on the subject of water-power development throughout the whole country, covering all the United States, that has ever been gotten together. The report is made in pursuance of that resolution calling upon the Department of Agriculture to collect the data and perform this service and make these estimates and furnish the information to Congress.

The report was referred to the Committee on Printing, as the Senator from Utah very properly has said, on the 20th of this month. There has been no delay, and there has been no excuse for anyone to suggest a criticism of delay in action on the part of the committee or anyone else, because as fast as we could we obtained what it was required by the law that we should obtain, an estimate of the cost, before we made a report upon the resolution. That estimate came in but a day or so ago, and this morning I have been authorized by the committee to make this report.

The estimated cost is $20,903.06. That includes, of course—and there was a delay perhaps of a day in getting that estimate, because we had to call upon outside parties to make the estimate on the lithographic work, which the Public Printer himself did not have in hand—the maps and drawings, some of which are colored, but they are an important part of the report. I would not think it advisable to print this report without those, because they explain and illustrate it. To print the volume of typewritten material I should think would not probably cost over one-tenth that amount, or somewhere in that neighborhood.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I have no doubt the committee has acted very promptly in the matter, and I should like very much for the report to be printed were it not for the fact that the illustrations are so costly. If the illustrations are to cost $18,000 and the printed matter is to cost but $2,000, I very much doubt the expediency of publishing both. I should be glad, however, to have all the typewritten matter published.

Mr. FLETCHER. I can not say that that difference would exist. I have not the material before me for separating the estimate. The estimate furnished to the committee was that the cost would be $20,903.06 to print the material as a public document, which would give about 1,345 copies, as I recall.

It is a very important document; there is nothing more important to this country, in my judgment, than the proper development of that great resource—the water power of the country. This covers the whole United States, the information has been carefully gathered, at enormous expense and outlay of time and effort, and I think the report ought to be printed.

Mr. STONE. May I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. FLETCHER. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] a moment ago stated that substantially all the matter embraced in this proposed print had already been published. I should like to know whether the Senator from Florida agrees to that statement?

Mr. FLETCHER. No.

Mr. STONE. If it be true, what is the need of multiplying these publications, at very great expense?

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator from Utah is in error about that, I am quite sure. There were hearings before the Public Lands Committee in 1914, I think, and some of those hearings were printed as late as two years ago; but I am sure that this material is not embodied in those hearings. I am quite positive that the material here offered to be printed is down to date, is new, and while, of course, the hearings may have in a general way gone into this question, by no means has this material ever before been printed.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to say in answer to the Senator from Florida with reference——

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I should like to ask a question. Who is recognized, Mr. President?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair recognized nobody, as for a good long time the Senate has been taking charge of itself. The Chair will, however, ask the Senator from Florida whether he will yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. FLETCHER. I will.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I thought the Senator from Florida had concluded, and I desired to be heard for a moment on this matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. FLETCHER. If the Senator desires to interrupt, I am perfectly willing to have him proceed.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I thought the Senator had finished, and I desired to be heard for a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The colloquy was going on, and the Chair was not interfering.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. I simply desire to correct the statement made by the Senator from Florida, based upon the question asked by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE].

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am interested in this proposition, and I can not hear the debate.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Missouri asked a question as to whether practically all of the information contained in the report now proposed to be printed had not already been printed, basing that question upon a statement that I had made.

I want to say to the Senator from Missouri that the illustrations have not been printed. All, no doubt, will remember that when that report was presented to the Senate there was a stack of illustrations at least 1 foot high and, I should judge, 2 feet wide and about 2 feet 6 inches long. This is what I did say: That every question that is involved in the passage of the so-called Ferris power bill that is now upon the Senate Calendar has been discussed before the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate and also before the committee of the House of Representatives. I have in my hand one of the three volumes of the hearings that were held one year ago, where every phase of the present bill now on the calendar was discussed; and the hearings are to-day in printed form.

Not only that, Mr. President, but any Senator who will take the volumes and look through them will find illustrations as to many of the contested points. I do not want it understood, however, that the published reports of the proceedings of the committee contain all the vast number of illustrations submitted with this report. There are 220 of them, and the Government Printing Office had to send out for bids for the lithographing of those exhibits before it could submit the estimated cost of the report.

I want to say that so far as the information is concerned that is contained in the report, if it had not been printed before, by all means print it; I would not hesitate a moment to advocate doing so. My only contention is, that so long as we have this information, and all that will ever be referred to in the consideration of the power bill which is now upon the calendar, and all that has been referred to by Mr. Pinchot not only in this body, but in the other House as well, it seems to me like a useless expenditure of public money to now print this report with the illustrations.

Mr. FLETCHER. I am quite sure that, although there have been hearings, as the Senator from Utah has stated, there are diagrams, drawings, illustrations, maps, plats, and other data collected and submitted with this report, which constitute a very important part of it; and without them, mere statements such as would be brought out in hearings would not properly give the information as to what is contained in this report.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have nothing further to say.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to ask the Senator a question before he leaves the floor.

Mr. FLETCHER. Very well.

Mr. NORRIS. Is it not true that this report comes before the Senate in answer to a resolution passed by the Senate?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have just so stated.

Mr. NORRIS. I did not hear the Senator, and I have come over on his side of the Chamber in order that I might hear him. If I have the right idea, this report comes before us now because we ordered the work which it embodies to be done and the facts contained in it to be gathered?

Mr. FLETCHER. Precisely.

Mr. NORRIS. And those facts and that information were gathered in pursuance of our order; they are ready to be published; and unless they are published, we can get no benefit from the research and work that has been done up to this time?

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator from Nebraska is entirely right; and, as I have already said, it has cost the Government to gather the data and information contained in the report many times more than the printing will cost. I think it is very important to print it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to say just a word. If I remember correctly, this report was made in response to a resolution which I had the honor to submit to the Senate, and I judge it contains a great deal of very important information. I do not construe the information which it contains as it has been construed by others, but I am satisfied that it contains information which would be interesting to those who may wish to discuss this question from any standpoint.

I am not able to confirm what has been said by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] that all this information is to be found elsewhere, because I have not had time to look fully into this report, as I have been endeavoring to do, but, from conversations which I have had with those who seem to know its contents. I think it a very valuable report. Does any Senator know about what it will cost to print it?

Mr. SMOOT. It will cost $21,000 to print it as a public document providing for 1,345 copies, of which 220 will go to the Senate, 350 to the House, and 500 to depositary libraries of the country. There will be two for each Senator and nearly one for each Member of the House.

Mr. FLETCHER. I find, Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me to answer that question and also the question submitted by the Senator from Colorado, which I was unable to answer a moment ago, that the cost of printing the text without the illustrations, plats, maps, and so forth, will be $7,832.24. The total cost of printing the whole thing—and the illustrations are so involved with the text as to make it almost useless to print the text without the illustrations—will be $20,903.06.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the amount which has been suggested seems a large one to incur in the printing of a document, but the subject with which we are dealing involves not only thousands, but hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars; and, in addition to that, in my judgment, it involves other questions of more moment to this country than the mere question of dollars and cents. I am very anxious myself to have the information that this report is supposed to contain. There can be no exaggeration as to the importance of the subject with which we are soon to deal and concerning which this report is made, and I feel that this information ought to be at our disposal.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the printing of the illustrations constitutes almost two-thirds of the total cost. I have never seen any great information derived from illustrations. It seems to me that if we could print the text and omit the illustrations we would get all the information that is desired and save the Government about $13,000 or $14,000.

What I was inquiring of the Senator from Florida was whether or not that could not be done and what amount of saving it would involve. As I have said, people do not acquire information to any great extent from illustrations, unless they contemplate construction work; but if they simply desire to get information on the subject intended to be covered by the resolution, namely, the desirability or undesirability of enacting the kind of legislation proposed, it seems to me it would be well to omit the illustrations and thereby save the Government that amount of money.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Florida that, so far as I am personally concerned, if the report is to be printed, it ought to be printed with the illustrations, and for this reason: The substance of the report—that is, the testimony—has already been printed time and time again, but it has not been printed with all of the illustrations.

This information, Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Idaho and also to the Senator from Florida, was not collected in answer to the resolution of the Senator from Idaho. The information was all collected before the resolution was introduced; and, of course, all the expense incurred by the Government in the collection of the material was incurred before the resolution was introduced. I will further say to the Senator that I know that to be true, because we had the subject before the Public Lands Committee, and Mr. Merrill, who collected the information, appeared before the committee day after day and had the information to submit to the committee at that time.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, there is one thing I want to say, namely, that I am not afraid of this report——

Mr. SMOOT. Nor am I.

Mr. BORAH. Because of the fact that it establishes the existence of a monopoly. If that fact is established, I want to make further inquiry as to why it is permitted to continue; and I shall be able to demonstrate, to my satisfaction at least, that this present bill will not discontinue it. I think it is worth while for us to know all that can be known about this subject. If there is a monopoly of water-power sites and of water development, and this report proves it, we shall be ready to call upon some one to proceed to get rid of this monopoly, if it is monopoly we fear. There has been much said by the advocates of the Ferris bill that one of its virtues is to prevent monopoly. There is a more effective way to get rid of monopoly, if it exists, and I want to know some of the present conditions as to monopoly.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. FLETCHER. I thought the Senator was through, but perhaps he will let me interrupt him long enough to say further that I have a letter from the chairman of the Committee on the Public Lands of the House, Mr. SCOTT FERRIS, in which he says:

> As you doubtless recall, Senator BORAH introduced a resolution last year calling for the compilation of certain data with reference to water-power development.
>
> Mr. O. C. Merrill, chief engineer, Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, has made a compilation which, to my mind, is the greatest thing ever had on the subject. He was good enough to let us have part of the data to help us in handling our water-power legislation in the House, and everyone who has observed it all is delighted with it.
>
> I want to urge you, if I may, to have the data printed.

Then he proceeds to specify that he would like to have the text of the report at once for use, the other portion to follow. That is the request coming from the other body as to the printing of this material; and, without going into the question of legislation on the subject at all, it is simply a question about what we will do with this report. I do not know how far we may have to go in connection with legislation.

Mr. BORAH. I think the report ought to be printed.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I do not know that I would object to the publication of the report if the illustrations were excluded. At the same time, so far as I can estimate its worth from what has been said about it, it seems to me its purpose is to establish what I think every man who has given much attention to the subject knows to be the fact, and that is the existence of a monopoly in the water-power development of the country. That such a monopoly exists is, in my judgment, beyond all question. The subject matter of the business is a natural monopoly, and, that being so, in my judgment, in view of material and industrial conditions, we might as well try to interfere with the operation of the law of gravitation as to interfere with the law of monopoly as applying to such a great subject as the question of the development and distribution of hydroelectric power. It is here; it has been here for a long time; and all the reports on earth, I do not think, will change that fact, nor will any legislation such as has been proposed affect it very much, if at all. So long as the business is permitted to be a private one—that is to say, one which is developed, owned, and operated by private interests—just so long the monopoly will continue.

The action of the Government in the proposed water-power bill, instead of interfering with, preventing, modifying, or destroying existing conditions, will simply add to them. The only possible remedy—and I think the public will realize it at some time—is in the public ownership of the development and distribution of electric power.

I do not think it requires a lot of illustrations to demonstrate the existence of the conditions to which the report pertains; but, at the same time, if it is desired by the Senate to print it, I am perfectly willing to see it done, provided that the illustrations, which seem to me entirely beside the purpose, are eliminated. I can not conceive what purpose the illustrations can subserve, except to secure, perhaps, a wider distribution of the document. A great many books in these days which are not worth printing receive quite a circulation because of the fact that they are handsomely illustrated. We are illustrating too many of these reports. So far as one particular report is concerned, the expense to the Government is comparatively nominal, but when duplicated and reduplicated and multiplied time after time, as is always the case when precedents are set, we are rapidly reaching the time when reports and documents published by official authority will be more attractive and perhaps more useful by reason of the illustrations they contain than by reason of the printed matter they contain.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I think the report ought to be printed, so that we can see what it contains. Undoubtedly the substantive part of it would be as valuable without the illustrations as it would be with the illustrations. It might not be as interesting, but perhaps it would be as valuable.

The admitted existence of a national water-power monopoly does not remove the difficulty of deciding the form of legislation in regard to further grants of water powers. Suppose there is a national monopoly; the methods of its formation and control, to what extent it has developed power already in private hands will all be elucidated by this report.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator to say that these illustrations are not pictures? They are maps and drawings and plans, which are so connected with the text that it would not be understood without the illustrations. They are not merely photographic pictures.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Of course, we can not pass any judgment upon the comparative value of the illustrations until we see them, and, not being printed, we have no practical opportunity to see them; but I should like to ask the Senator upon what he bases his estimate of the cost of this publication.

Mr. FLETCHER. The law requires the committee to obtain an estimate of the cost, and that is done through the Public Printer. The Public Printer has been obliged to get estimates outside of his office, because some of this work can not be done in his office; and the estimate we have is furnished to us by the Public Printer. He has made the inquiry and obtained the information.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Has the Senator any estimate of the cost of printing that part of the report, outside of the illustrations?

Mr. FLETCHER. We have estimates as to both and as to all.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I simply wanted to ask the Senator from Florida a question. I should like to ask him if he has any information or any estimate as to the time that would be required to get out this publication with these illustrations—how long it would take?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no definite information as to that. Of course, the text can be printed within a very short time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am not asking about the text. I have an idea about that. What I should like to know, Mr. President, is about how long it would take to publish this document with the illustrations included? I have had some experience along that line, and I have an idea that it will not be completed until three or four or perhaps five months, when all the legislation intended to be affected by it will have passed, if it should be passed at this session of Congress.

Mr. FLETCHER. My information is that all of it can be done inside of a month.

Mr. BANKHEAD. How does the Senator get that information? From the department?

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Printing Office.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I have noticed a great number of reports in which the maps were printed in a separate volume from the text of the report and could be considered as a separate proposition. When we see the text of the report we can then determine with some degree of intelligence the importance of the maps and appendices, and for that purpose, if for no other reason, that portion of the report ought to be printed.

Now, as to the cost of this. I suppose the Senator estimates the salaries of the employees in the Printing Office, the cost of maintaining the Printing Office, and so forth. All of that is an overhead charge which goes on just the same, whether this report is printed or not.

So far as the existence of a monopoly is concerned, and whether or not this report shows the existence of a monopoly, the question which will have to be determined in the passage of water-power legislation is what we are going to do about it if it is admitted that there is such a monopoly, whether or not the Federal Government is going to reserve some regulative control over the combination. There is an intermediate ground before we reach Government ownership. We are not necessarily going in one step to Government development and ownership of water power, which the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] says is the only alternative to private monopoly. That is a question that is involved in the bill which is coming up when the Philippine bill is disposed of.

This report undoubtedly is the result of a considerable expenditure of money in obtaining the facts which compose it, and it is perfectly useless unless it is printed. I have seen in the Literary Digest, for instance, advertisements of the General Electric Co., advertising for sale electric power in Spokane, Wash.; in Baltimore, Md.; in Washington, D. C.; and in every important city in the United States and Canada. That is conclusive proof of the existence of some central control over this kind of power. But the mere admission of this does not solve the problem. There are other questions to be decided, and the detailed information and conclusions contained in this report will throw light upon them.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I hope this report will be printed. The Senate on this occasion, as it has been on a number of other occasions, is penny-wise and pound-foolish. Here is a report which is made pursuant to a resolution heretofore adopted by the Senate that will cost the Government something like $20,000. The procurement of the information has cost more; and yet, as has been said by the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], it involves a subject that is worth millions of dollars, and I may say billions of dollars, to this country; and we hesitate now to print the data that have been secured and that can be made available and used when we come to the consideration of the Ferris bill and other measures affecting water power.

A water-power conference was held in my city a few months ago. That conference adopted a set of resolutions in opposition to the so-called Ferris bill. There were differences of opinion amongst the distinguished gentlemen who attended that conference with reference to Federal control of water-power sites and those who favored the acquisition of these power sites by the States and their control by the States under the jurisdiction of public utilities commissions. Notwithstanding the adoption of those resolutions at the water-power conference referred to in opposition to the Ferris bill or anything like it, or anything like Federal control, the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate and the Committee on the Public Lands of the House have reported out practically all that has been insisted upon with reference to Federal control of water-power sites.

That is the question involved. It is one that is going to be discussed here for weeks and months before it is finally disposed of and the issue settled. I assume that the gentlemen who oppose Federal control, like the distinguished Senator from Utah and others whom I might name, want information on this subject, and all that can be availed of. This report gives it all in such form that it is easily accessible to the Members of the Senate and those who are interested in the subject.

It is true, as the Senator from Utah has said, that much of this information has been printed from time to time, but it is scattered through hundreds of different printed reports and hearings, and it is physically impossible ever to collate it so that the Senate can have the benefit of the views of officials of the Government when we come to consider the bills on the subject. This report puts it all in such shape that the Senate can get access to the information in abbreviated form, if that be possible. The Senator from Utah would say it was not in abbreviated form, but it is, because the subject is discussed in thousands of volumes, and there are as many views of it as it is possible to find views on any subject of interest to the people of this country.

Mr. President, with reference to the question of monopoly I agree with the Senator from Idaho. If this report establishes that the water powers of this country have been monopolized, then either the Government itself has been derelict in its duty in not dissolving the monopolies or it ought to be possible for the Congress of the United States, in the light which will be furnished by these reports, to find some method of controlling them. It is the last natural resource that the people have, the last that has not been disposed of and has not been monopolized in its entirety.

It is to protect the water powers of this country that it is insisted that this report ought to be printed, no matter what it costs, so that the Senate may determine for itself whether or not there is a monopoly, whether or not the Government has been derelict in its duty, and lastly, whether or not, if it has been derelict in its duty, the Congress of the United States can not do its duty and find some method for the control of this power.

I hope the Senate is not going to balk at the expenditure of $20,000 to print a report, with the illustrations that accompany it, when there is involved in it so much money, and not only so much money but so much of interest to present and to future generations.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. In looking over the report of the hearings before the Committee on Public Lands, which I hold in my hand, I notice an illustration of the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railway. "Silver Bow Canyon: Freight train, 22 cars; total weight, 1,200 tons; two 80-ton electric locomotives." Is that necessary to give any information?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Oh, you can not say what is necessary.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Well, wait; let us take another. We have another of the same kind.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Yes; you can pick out things——

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Oh, yes; but if the Senator will permit me, you might put in any picture you pleased. We are not issuing an illustrated magazine. I am in favor of printing this report. I am agreeing with the Senator; but I do not want these things put in the report that are very expensive and are of no possible value to anybody on earth.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, there is not any question but that there may be material in these reports that would be useless.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to say that in the proposed report there are no photographs at all? Those data do not go in this report. They are not a part of the report. There are no photographs at all in it.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, Mr. President; there are. I do not want the Senator to make such a broad statement as that, because I will say that, while most of the illustrations are maps and diagrams, I am quite sure that the Senator, if he will look through, will find a few photographs.

Mr. SHAFROTH. What kind of diagrams and maps are they, please?

Mr. SMOOT. I will answer the Senator from Colorado just as soon as the Senator from Oregon concludes.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President——

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I should like to know who has the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is trusting the Senator from Oregon to take care of himself.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I have no objection to being interrupted, but I object a little to the general conversation on the outside while I am trying to say something to the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon has the floor.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. There is not any question, Mr. President, but that some illustrations and some photographs have been printed in the past, and some may be printed in this report, that are of little, if any, value; but they are a small proportion of the whole in the very nature of things. It is a little bit singular—and I mean no disrespect to my colleagues when I say it—that the gentlemen who oppose the Ferris bill or any sort of Federal control are the gentlemen on the floor of the Senate who are objecting to the printing of this report.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not want the Senator to get me mixed up with those who favor the Ferris bill.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. The Senator from Idaho is not opposing the printing of the report?

Mr. BORAH. No.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I will say to the Senator that I am not making any charges, Mr. President; but it is a fact that the gentlemen who are opposing the printing of this report are the gentlemen who have stood in opposition to any kind of Federal control.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I do.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Will not the Senator supplement that statement by saying that Senators who are opposed to the Ferris bill also are in favor of printing the report?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I have not heard of any of them yet. I hope they are.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I was one of them, Mr. President.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. The Senator from Wyoming certainly is in favor of getting all the information that it is possible to secure. He has no fear of any information coming before the Senate or elsewhere. So I hope the Senator will not go into the merits of the Ferris bill and impute to the opponents of the bill the motive of wishing to suppress information.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I am glad to know that some of the Senators who oppose the Ferris bill are favorable to printing this report.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. So far as I am personally concerned, Mr. President, the only reason why I even suggested that the report be not printed was from the fact that all of the information contained in the report, with the exception of some of the diagrams, is in print at present, and has been for the last four or five years, and I thought it was a duplication of printing.

If the Senator will yield for just a moment further, I want to say to the Senate that if this report is to be printed I hope all of it will be printed. I do not believe it would be right to print just the text of the report and let the diagrams go out.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Yes, sir.

Mr. THOMAS. I am one of the Members of this body who is opposed to what is called the Government leasing of its domain or any part of it. Now, it may be that that has something to do with my opposition to the publication of this report. I think, however, that the Senator can be charitable enough to assume, at least, that some of those who desire to have the report printed are actuated quite as much by their friendship for Government leasing measures as those who, from a sense of duty, are opposed to Government leasing measures.

So far as I am concerned, my objection is based on the fact that this is a proposed expenditure for what seems to me to be a wholly useless purpose. If the monopoly exists, it is not necessary to illustrate it by diagrams.

Mr. SMOOT. Not at all.

Mr. THOMAS. If it does not exist, diagrams will not establish that fact. Why should we expend for these, to my mind, useless illustrations thousands of dollars of the public money, especially when most of them have been published in other reports and at other times?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I want to disclaim any purpose to question the motives of any Senator. I simply call attention to the fact; that is all. I attribute to them the same purity of purpose and intent as I claim for myself. I simply call attention to that particular fact.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] continues to reiterate the statement that this matter has all been published in other documents. Assuming that some of it has been published, it has been so published that it is impossible of study by the Senate of the United States as a consecutive whole.

I have been a member of the Public Lands Committee for a good many years. A witness will come in to the committee room, Mr. Merrill, for instance. There are three or four members of the committee present, and they proceed to interrogate him and disturb his line of thought. When they have exhausted themselves three or four other members of the committee will come in and exhaust themselves, covering parts of the same subject. When the witness gets through no man can sit down and intelligently arrive at a conclusion as to what the witness meant. That is the way it is done, and this matter is scattered through various tomes filled with this and other subjects.

I hope this matter may be printed and brought before the Senate in answer to the resolution adopted here, so that the Senate may have before them when they consider the bill all the information. I wish to say to the Senate now that that bill is not going to be disposed of in a day. Some one wanted to know how long it would take to print this report. It does not make any difference if it takes three months; the bill will probably be pending before the Senate at that time, and it may not go through at all. I hope the Senate will print the report.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I am one of those who are very strenuously opposing the so-called Ferris bill. That is no reason, however, why I should object to the printing of this report. I think the Senate ought to be thoroughly educated on this subject, and when it is and the whole matter is thoroughly understood I think the Ferris bill will be defeated. I regard it as one of the most important cases of proposed legislation that will come before the Senate at the present session. It involves an entire change of the policy of the Government in dealing with its public lands. It will amount to an infringement upon the rights of the States to deal with the flow and use of the waters within the States. That is an exceedingly serious question.

I think, Mr. President, we ought to get all the information we can upon a matter as important as that, and I certainly do not object to the publication of this report if it is going to give us any information that will help us to reach right conclusions upon that question.

So far as the question of monopoly is concerned, Mr. President, of course these streams are being controlled by monopolies all over the country. Everyone knows that. The Government has been dealing with these monopolies in disposing of the public lands for purposes of that kind, and it will continue to do so even if the Ferris bill is passed. In fact, the Ferris bill has no tendencies, in my judgment, to dissolve monopolies or to hinder their operations in the future. The Ferris bill does not involve the question of monopolies, in my judgment, at all.

So this information will be of little profit, so far as the Ferris bill is concerned, respecting that particular matter; but believing that we should get all the information we can on this subject I am quite favorable to the motion to have the report printed. I am afraid it will be read by very few Senators, and probably no one else will read it, but that does not seem to be an objection to the printing of matter by Congress. Some one may get some information of value out of the report, and therefore it is proper the Senate should print it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to say a word, if this discussion is going to continue, as I offered the resolution which seems to have brought forth this report. At the time the resolution was offered there was a propaganda going on throughout the country to the effect that the Ferris bill was designed and intended to destroy a monopoly of water-power business. I felt that I should like to know what information there was at hand with reference to the existence of a monopoly and with reference to the relationship of some of those who are much in favor of the Ferris bill in reference to those monopolies. I therefore introduced the resolution. I am opposed to the Ferris bill as it is now written.

I merely wished to say this in order that there might not be a misunderstanding as to my position with reference to the Ferris bill and also with reference to publishing the report.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I rose merely to say to the Senator from Florida that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] has given notice that upon the conclusion of the bill now under consideration, the Philippine bill, he will move to take up the bill on which a report was made by the Committee on Commerce. It deals with dams across navigable streams, and that will involve the consideration, in all probability, of all these questions. Some of us believe that no other legislation coming before Congress transcends in public importance that measure and the other measure dealing with water power, and I most sincerely hope that it will be taken up at the conclusion of the consideration of the Philippine bill.

I gathered, from what the Senator said, that it will be impossible to get this report out for use in connection with the consideration of that measure if it should come up at the time that has now been suggested. I hope we shall not meet any objection to the consideration of that bill at that time upon the ground that this particular report is not then before the body. I trust that it is not intended to postpone the consideration of those important measures to await the printing of this report.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I do not rise as opposing or defending the motion. I really do not know enough about the matter to vote for or against it; but it is a question which, it seems to me, ought to be decided before the measure to which it relates is considered. I gather from what has been said here this morning that in all human probability the expenditure of this $20,000 will not in any way affect the water-power question. The Senator from Florida states that his information is to the effect that it will take at least a month. Does anyone expect to spend a month waiting for the illustrations in the printed report? Does anyone expect to spend a month upon the consideration of the water-power bill?

The Senator seems to have great faith in this report and its effect upon Members of this body. As far as my experience goes, I am convinced that the illustrations which appear in that report will not change the views of a single Senator here with reference to the existence or nonexistence of a monopoly. I think our experience in other cases will show that such a question will not be decided by illustrations appearing in publications. I have yet to see an instance where a Senator had changed his mind by what was found in illustrations.

This is a considerable item. I do not suppose there is any severer criticism leveled against this body or the other body with reference to the wasteful expenditures of public money than grows out of the continual attempt to publish reports of one sort or another. Sometimes they are obviously and palpably useless; sometimes they are of doubtful utility.

It would seem to me that we have such a case here. We are asked to spend $21,000 for the publication of a report. As I gather the situation from the statements which have been made here, the report does not come in answer to the resolution of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], but it simply collates information that was in existence and had been gathered by the Government long before the Senator from Idaho tendered his resolution. That is my understanding of it. It is true that the Senator from Idaho offered a resolution, and in response to that resolution these illustrations and this text appear, but the information was in the possession of various agents and officers of the Government long before. It had been laid before the Public Lands Committee of the Senate, had been printed in their hearings, had been laid before the corresponding committee on the other side, and had been printed in their hearings, and, I understand, is easy of access to any man who is sufficiently interested in the subject.

It seems to me to be rather a doubtful proposition that we shall spend $21,000 to gather up in convenient form this information. Students and advocates of it who have sufficient interest in the subject will go to the various publications and obtain the information they want. There is no trouble about that. Other Members who are not interested in the subject will not read it, no matter how beautiful the illustrations may be.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. HUGHES. With pleasure.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Can the Senator from New Jersey refer to any document or source of information showing what proportion of water-power sites in the United States is in private ownership and giving the names of the companies and corporations that own and control them?

Mr. HUGHES. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD will show it. The Senator from Washington said a while ago that the water power of the country is under the control of the Hydro-Electric Co., and that it was advertising the sale of hydroelectric power in Washington, Baltimore, and various cities of the country. That is probably true. I have no doubt the Senator would not say that if it was not true. The Senator is convinced; that fact of itself is sufficient to demonstrate something; and all the illustrations the committees can lay before him will not change his mind about it.

Mr. POINDEXTER. No; I do not think it will change the mind of the Senator from New Jersey either, but that is an entirely different question from the one I asked the Senator. That is only one phase of this resolution. One question that will come up in the consideration of the bill is that it is urged by a great many people that the water powers ought to be developed and that if a liberal law is passed, when the Government relinquishes all the power of regulation to private companies private companies will invest their capital in these water-power sites and develop them, and it will add to the prosperity of the country. It would be quite interesting to know in that connection what proportion of the water-power sites have already passed out of the hands of the Government and are in the hands of private companies without any reserved power of control or regulation by the Government. Also, it would be interesting to know what proportion of those privately held have been developed.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] informs me that he can give the Senator that information in present publications already paid for by the Government.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, if the Senator from New Jersey will yield——

Mr. HUGHES. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. The question asked by the Senator from Washington can be answered in detail not only as to the horsepower that is owned by every company but as to the director of every company, and not only the director of every company, but showing in how many companies each individual director is, if in any other power company of the United States, and diagrams showing the interlocking directorates of the different companies. All have been printed before, as I stated.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator from Utah speaks out of the abundance of his knowledge on this subject. He is a member of the Committee on Public Lands, as I was at one time. I am no longer a member of the committee, but I attended a great many of the hearings, and I know there must be a great pile of data in the possession of that committee already printed. I can not think of any possible thing in connection with this whole question that is not now in print. What I am trying to do is to save the Government the useless expenditure of $21,000.

Mr. President, I should like to ask what is the parliamentary status? Is there a motion pending?

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is no motion pending. The Chair has not yet had an opportunity to ask the Senate whether it gives unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution. The Chair has been trying to ask that for an hour. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. HUGHES. I object, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It goes to the calendar. Reports of committees are in order.

ASSISTANT APPRAISERS OF MERCHANDISE.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 2730) to fix the compensation of assistant appraisers of merchandise, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 96) thereon.

GEORGE H. HERVEY.

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 3344) to authorize George H. Hervey, of Pensacola, Fla., to construct and operate an electric railway line on the Fort Barrancas Military Reservation, Fla., and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 95) thereon.

Mr. BRYAN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in the Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were, in line 6, after the word "military," to strike out "reservation" and insert "reservations," and in the same line, after the words "Fort Barrancas," to insert "and Fort McRee," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of the United States is hereby given to George H. Hervey, of Pensacola, Fla., to locate, construct, maintain, and operate a line of electric railway on the military reservations of Fort Barrancas and Fort McRee, in Escambia County, State of Florida, upon such location and under such regulations and conditions as shall be approved by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize George H. Hervey, of Pensacola, Fla., to construct and operate an electric railway line on the Fort Barrancas and Fort McRee Military Reservations, Fla., and for other purposes."

EMPLOYMENT OF STENOGRAPHER.

Mr. SHAFROTH, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution No. 85, to authorize the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico to employ a stenographer to take testimony, etc., reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. THOMAS:

A bill (S. 4059) authorizing suits to be brought by any State or States against the United States of America; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HUGHES:

A bill (S. 4060) to limit the effect of the regulation of interstate commerce between the States in goods, wares, and merchandise wholly or in part manufactured, mined, or produced by convict labor or in any prison or reformatory; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

A bill (S. 4061) providing for the refund of duties collected on hot-rolled flat-steel wire rods, about 3 inches in width and one-eighth of an inch in thickness, under the act of Congress approved June 24, 1897, and under the act of Congress approved August 5, 1909, imported subsequently to June 4, 1908, and prior to October 3, 1913; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. CATRON:

A bill (S. 4062) granting a pension to Harry S. Comrey; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS:

A bill (S. 4063) authorizing the replacement of a bridge across the Republican River near Fort Riley, Kans., under the direction of the Secretary of War; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND:

A bill (S. 4064) granting a pension to William H. Houston; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BANKHEAD:

A bill (S. 4065) for the relief of Rittenhouse Moore; and

A bill (S. 4066) to satisfy the findings of the Court of Claims in the claim of William Moseley, administrator of Temperance Moseley, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 4067) to establish a fish hatchery in the State of Alabama; to the Committee on Fisheries.

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 4068) for the relief of Mary E. Boyd (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CHAMBERLAIN:

A bill (S. 4069) to protect the dignity and honor of the uniform of the United States; and

A bill (S. 4070) to provide for the utilization of the Forest Service personnel for military purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution and ask that it be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 91) creating a joint subcommittee from the membership of the Committees on Military Affairs and Naval Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives to investigate the conditions relating to the national defense and the necessity of further legislation relating thereto, and defining the powers and duties of such subcommittee, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Committees on Military Affairs and Naval Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives, through a joint subcommittee of 10 Senators and 10 Representatives, who shall be selected by said committees, respectively, 5 by each, are hereby appointed to investigate—

(a) The general subject of the national defense.

(b) The efficiency of the present organization of the Army and Navy and the increase of such efficiency.

(c) The advisability of compulsory service.

(d) The relation of the State Militia to the national defense.

(e) The advisability of creating a council of national defense, and its composition.

(f) The increase of the military and naval schools for training officers and utilization for this purpose of the schools of agriculture and mechanic arts created under the Morrill Act.

(g) National cooperation with the States in school training, involving the fundamental idea of the use of arms for the maintenance of civil order, both domestic and international, and not for conquest, and the method to be adopted for the inculcation of such idea.

(h) The construction, equipment, and personnel of auxiliary ships for the Navy to be used in war in aid of the fighting ships and in peace for establishing routes of commerce and mail to foreign countries.

(i) The necessary cost of the national defense covering a period of five years, and including in this the extent and size of such organization of the national defense as will be covered by an annual expenditure of $300,000,000, $350,000,000, $400,000,000, $450,000,000, and $500,000,000, respectively, for a period of five years, commencing July 1, 1916, with authority to sit during the recess of Congress and with power to summon witnesses, to appoint necessary experts, clerks, and stenographers, and to do whatever is necessary for a full and comprehensive examination and study of the subject, and report to Congress as expeditiously as may be; that the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as is necessary to carry out the purposes of this resolution and to pay the necessary expenses of the subcommittee and its members, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. Said appropriation shall be immediately available and shall be paid out on the audit and order of the chairman or acting chairman of said subcommittee, which audit and order shall be conclusive and binding upon all departments as to the correctness of the accounts of such subcommittee.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I would like to make a brief statement in connection with that joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. NEWLANDS. The President has called the attention of Congress to the question of preparedness. There are now four committees, two of the House of Representatives and two of the Senate—the Committees on Military Affairs and the Committees on Naval Affairs—engaged in the consideration of the question of the national defense. Four separate hearings are being had, at which the various witnesses appear in rotation, the same witness appearing before two or more committees. The country is confused with these various hearings; the newspapers themselves are not able to keep track of them, and the country is not being informed of their progress.

The purpose of this joint resolution is to coordinate all four of these committees—the Committees on Military Affairs of both Houses and the Committees on Naval Affairs of both Houses—through a subcommittee to be appointed from each, with a view to having one hearing and making a report, which can be submitted to the respective committees and then action taken upon the subject. My idea is that this will very much expedite the orderly progress of this matter. The national defense is a unit, and the Army and Navy are merely divisions of that unit. They should be considered together and not separately. An increased expense in the one should involve a diminished expense in the other.

I ask that the joint resolution may lie upon the table, in the hope that the chairmen of the committees referred to will favor it, and in the further hope that it may then be immediately adopted.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want to make a statement in answer to the last statement which was made by the Senator from Nevada. I understand that this is a joint resolution.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Nevada understands full well that such a resolution can not be immediately considered, but must be referred to a committee. In order that the Senator may be informed, I will say that if he asks for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution I shall object, because, under the rules, a joint resolution has to go to a committee.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I am not asking for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution. I have asked that it lie on the table. I shall bring it up next Monday, in the hope that the committees will cooperate in the immediate adoption of the resolution. It is a matter for next Monday.

Mr. SMOOT. If the joint resolution is brought up on next Monday it will have to go to a committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the resolution lying on the table? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CENTRAL HEATING, LIGHTING, AND POWER PLANT.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I introduce a joint resolution and ask that it be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 92) relative to the construction on the site selected of the central heating, lighting, and power plant authorized by the provisions of the sundry civil appropriations act approved June 23, 1913, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That inasmuch as the plans adopted for the construction of the central heating, lighting, and power plant authorized by the provision of the sundry civil appropriations act approved June 23, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 25), on the site selected raise serious questions affecting the appearance of the city of Washington and the desirability of erecting said plant according to said plans, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to submit these plans to Congress, together with all reports from commissions, architects, engineers, and others who have been consulted in connection therewith; and that no work upon the construction of said plant shall be commenced until plans therefor shall have been approved by the President of the United States.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution. I desire to say that it is very much feared by the Commission of Fine Arts that the erection of the structure referred to in the joint resolution, according to present plans, will be exceedingly unsightly, and that it is quite possible that it may be something of a nuisance. It is proposed to construct this immense heating and lighting plant in the neighborhood of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, near the Mall. I am told that its smokestacks will be four in number and that they will be 195 feet in height. It seems to me very important that we should get the report of the Commission of Fine Arts on this subject, and determine whether or not the height of these smokestacks can not be diminished and the unsightliness of the building modified.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have no possible objection to the joint resolution; on the contrary, I sympathize with it; but I think the Senator from Nevada had better make it either a concurrent resolution or a Senate resolution, because under the rules the joint resolution would have to go to a committee.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I have put this in the form of a joint resolution because it directs the holding up of the construction of this building until the report asked for is made. I assumed that it would have to be a joint resolution in order to do that, as the building is being constructed under an appropriation made in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. LODGE. Is not that matter covered by the urgent deficiency bill now on our tables? There is a long amendment in that bill in regard to the matter.

Mr. SMOOT. That is an additional amendment.

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes; that is an additional appropriation.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I simply want an opportunity for the Art Commission to make a thorough inquiry and report upon this subject, with a view to the preservation of the beauty of the Mall.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator from Nevada yield to me?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. Let me suggest to the Senator that he withdraw the joint resolution at this time for the reason that there is an item concerning this building in the urgent deficiency bill, which is now on the calendar. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has already given notice that he intends to ask that that bill be taken up on Monday, and I suggest that the Senator from Nevada might consult with the chairman of that committee before asking for the consideration of the joint resolution. There is, as I have stated, an item contained in the appropriation bill providing for extending the limit of cost of the construction of the plant referred to in the Senator's joint resolution. The plant, as I remember, is to be located at Fourteenth and B Streets. While I am in sympathy with the joint resolution itself, being a member of the Appropriations Committee I should feel obliged, in the absence of the chairman of that committee, to make an objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution, even if it were a Senate resolution. If the Senator from Nevada will take the matter up with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN], I think perhaps he can come to some arrangement with him.

Mr. OVERMAN. I desire to say that this resolution has reference only to furnishing an additional building with heat, to wit, the Red Cross Building and one of the Navy buildings. I think that is the only purpose of the additional appropriation provided for in the bill. It does not affect the location of the plant or the manner of its erection.

Mr. SMOOT. But it affects the size of the plant.

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes; the size of the plant is affected.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator from Nevada will permit me, his joint resolution would be in order as an amendment to the urgent deficiency bill on Monday.

Mr. SMOOT. It would go out on a point of order.

Mr. LODGE. It would not go out on a point of order, if the Senator will excuse me. It is not legislation and proposes to make no appropriation; it involves no expense even. It only asks for certain orders to hold up this work.

Mr. OVERMAN. The committee amendment itself would go out on a point of order.

Mr. LODGE. The main amendment of the committee?

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. If the committee reports it, it does not make any difference whether the item is estimated for or not. The joint resolution offered by the Senator from Nevada, unless I am very much mistaken——

Mr. OVERMAN. If it is new legislation, it would go out on a point of order.

Mr. LODGE. It would be entirely in order as an amendment, because it is a mere direction as to the expenditure of an appropriation and asks for certain papers.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the Senator is wrong in his statement. If the committee reports new legislation, is not that subject to a point of order? Suppose our committee should report new legislation?

Mr. LODGE. Of course new general legislation would be subject to a point of order under our rules, but this is not general legislation. The resolution of the Senator from Nevada, as I understand, puts a limitation on an expenditure, and such a proposal has always been held to be in order.

Mr. OVERMAN. I agree with the Senator. I merely wanted to correct the statement of the Senator, as I understood him, that anything the committee put on is not subject to a point of order. I will say that there is one exception to that general statement, and that is where new general legislation has been added.

Mr. LODGE. If it is general legislation, certainly. I was not going into that, but this case, I think, does not come under that rule. I feel very sure that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will be glad to take up this matter with the Senator from Nevada, and I think that is the quickest way of reaching the result. The joint resolution, at all events, could lie on the table until Monday and we could see what we could do in connection with the appropriation bill.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Very well; I will ask that the joint resolution lie on the table until Monday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will lie on the table and be printed.

AMENDMENT TO DISTRICT APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $90,000 for the improvement of Sixteenth Street NW., from Montague Street to Alaska Avenue, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the District of Columbia appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS.

Mr. JONES submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 651) for the allowance of certain claims reported by the Court of Claims, which was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his clerks, announced that the President had on January 28, 1916, approved and signed the following act:

S. 1773. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Tug Fork of the Big Sandy River at or near Warfield, Ky., and Kermit, W. Va.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Claims:

H. R. 2288. An act for the relief of Thomas R. Mason;

H. R. 4530. An act for the relief of Michael F. O'Hare;

H. R. 5835. An act for the relief of James Stanton;

H. R. 7248. An act for the relief of the United States Drainage & Irrigation Co.; and

H. R. 8318. An act for the relief of De Barbieri & Co., of Valparaiso, Chile.

H. R. 2180. An act for the relief of Albert Greenlaw was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

H. J. Res. 95. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Mr. Carlos Hevia y Reyes Gavilán, a citizen of Cuba, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask unanimous consent that Order of Business No. 33, being Senate joint resolution No. 60, be taken up.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I think we are entitled to dispose of the cases on the calendar as they stand in order. I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada how long it will require to dispose of this joint resolution?

Mr. LODGE. It will take some time.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will say to the Senator that this joint resolution has been under consideration, I think, at three sessions during the morning hour, but is yet undisposed of. I know of but two Senators who desire to discuss it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. LODGE. I object. It will take some time to consider the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Then the regular order will be proceeded with.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business No. 33, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 60) creating a joint subcommittee from the membership of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to investigate the conditions relating to interstate and foreign commerce, and the necessity of further legislation relating thereto, and defining the powers and duties of such subcommittee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate joint resolution 60.

Mr. SMOOT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Hardwick	Myers	Smoot
Bankhead	Hollis	Nelson	Sterling
Borah	Hughes	Newlands	Stone
Brandegee	Husting	Norris	Sutherland
Broussard	Jones	Oliver	Swanson
Bryan	Kenyon	Overman	Thomas
Catron	La Follette	Page	Tillman
Chamberlain	Lane	Poindexter	Townsend
Chilton	Lee, Md.	Shafroth	Vardaman
Clark, Wyo.	Lippitt	Sheppard	Wadsworth
Colt	Lodge	Shields	Walsh
Curtis	McCumber	Simmons	Warren
Dillingham	McLean	Smith, Ariz.	Weeks
Fletcher	Martin, Va.	Smith, Ga.	Works
Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Md.

Mr. CHILTON. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. GOFF] is absent from the Senate on account of illness.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH], who is absent, is paired with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. I desire this announcement to stand on all votes to-day.

Mr. BANKHEAD. My colleague [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is unavoidably absent from the Senate. He has a pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. HARDING]. I make this announcement for the day.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am requested to state that the senior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] is absent on official business. He is paired with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

Mr. STONE. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. REED] has been called from the city on important business and will not be present to-day. I ask that this announcement stand for the day.

I also wish to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is detained at home by sickness, and I will ask that this announcement stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-nine Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada to proceed to the consideration of Senate joint resolution 60.

Mr. SMOOT. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator to withhold that request for a moment. The Senator from Nevada is willing to give way in order that the Senate may take up the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, as I understand from him. I ask that that bill may now have the consideration of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9416) making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and prior years, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I ask that the formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with and that the bill be read for amendment, the committee amendments to be first considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, at the top of page 2, to insert:

LINCOLN MEMORIAL COMMISSION.

For improvements in and additions to the Lincoln Memorial, and for masonry steps and approaches and terrace wall, not heretofore provided for, and for each and every purpose connected therewith, $263,000, to remain available until expended, and the limit of cost of the said Lincoln Memorial is hereby increased from $2,000,000 to $2,594,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 7, to insert:

ARLINGTON MEMORIAL BRIDGE COMMISSION.

To enable the commission created by section 23 of the public buildings act approved March 4, 1913, to investigate and report to Congress a suitable design for a memorial bridge across the Potomac River from the city of Washington to a point at or near the Arlington estate in the State of Virginia, together with such surveys and estimates of cost as they may deem advisable, $25,000, to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 17, to insert:

BUREAU OF EFFICIENCY.

For investigating duplication of statistical and other work in the various branches of the Government service, $1,200: Provided, That hereafter the Division of Efficiency of the Civil Service Commission shall be an independent establishment and shall be known as the Bureau of Efficiency; and the officers and employees of the said division shall be transferred to the Bureau of Efficiency without reappointment, and the records and papers pertaining to the work of the said division and the furniture, equipment, and supplies that have been purchased for it shall be transferred to the said bureau: And provided further, That the duties relating to efficiency ratings imposed upon the Civil Service Commission by section 4 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved August 23, 1912, and the duty of investigating the administrative needs of the service relating to personnel in the several executive departments and independent establishments, imposed on the Civil Service Commission by the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved March 4, 1913, are transferred to the Bureau of Efficiency.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill as to the part of the bill now under consideration, relating to the Bureau of Efficiency. Is it intended to be the effect of this amendment to put all the present employees of the bureau under the civil service, so as to make them permanent employees?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It has no relation whatever to the civil service. It makes no change in the existing law. It simply makes this an independent bureau, but all the rules of the civil service that apply now will continue to apply. It does not change the law in that respect at all.

This bureau has done splendid service. It has saved the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars at a very small relative cost, and this is to give it a more permanent status. To be perfectly frank, there is some friction in the bureau as now organized, and it is intended to remove that.

I have made careful inquiry, and I find that the bureau has done splendid service. This simply makes it an independent bureau instead of a bureau subordinate to the Civil Service Commission; but it does not change the civil-service status of a single employee—not one.

Mr. STONE. My inquiry was not intended to elicit the opinion of the Senator, though I am glad to have it, on the merits of the proposition as a whole. My attention was attracted to this language:

And the officers and employees of the said division shall be transferred to the Bureau of Efficiency without reappointment—

And so forth.

I am told that there are some persons now employed in the service of the Bureau of Efficiency who are not within the civil service, and the information I sought was whether the adoption of this amendment would, in effect, cover them into the civil service.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It will not. It does not change their status in any respect.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator, also, that there are very few employees doing this work. They all have to be very technical men, as the Senator knows.

Mr. STONE. Yes; I think that is true. I will ask both the Senators, or the chairman of the committee especially, since what the Senator from Utah has just stated is true, as I believe it to be, why would it not be very well to amend this amendment so as to cover these employees, efficient men already employed and already performing satisfactory service, into the service permanently?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I think we had better not open the doors to a wide field of discussion about the civil-service matter. This amendment does not change the status of these employees at all, and I very much hope it will be allowed to go, because I believe it is an important measure for the benefit of the service. I hope that we will not go into the question of the civil service in respect to it.

Mr. STONE. Of course if it is going to provoke any discussion, or if the Senator seriously fears that it would, I will not press it.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do; and I feel that the language of any such amendment ought to be carefully prepared. It is a matter that I would not myself be ready to dispose of at this time.

Mr. STONE. I yield entirely to the judgment of the Senator in regard to the matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 14, to insert:

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

For necessary traveling expenses, including those of examiners acting under the direction of the commission, and for expenses of examinations and investigations held elsewhere than at Washington, and attendance at meetings of public officials, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, after line 20, to insert:

For field examiners at the rate of $1,500 per annum each, for work in connection with members of local boards and other necessary work as directed by the commission, $300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of State," on page 4, after line 7, to insert:

Division of Mexican Affairs: For additional clerical services for the Division of Mexican Affairs, to be expended in the discretion of the Secretary of State, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and the Secretary read to the bottom of page 8, the last item read being:

Cody, Wyo., post office: For commencement, $500.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Virginia with reference to some of the appropriations for the commencement of post-office buildings. This bill, as I understand, is an urgent deficiency bill. How does it happen that appropriations are made to commence public buildings under an urgent deficiency bill? Has an act been passed for the building?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. These appropriations are all routine estimates from the department. Not a single thing is done, except to appropriate for pending work that has already been authorized. The department is proceeding to carry out the orders of Congress, and it lacks the money. There is a deficiency.

Mr. KENYON. Are there certain limits of time, under those acts, within which commencement of the building must be made?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I think not. I do not think it is usual to put in any limit of time. Perhaps it ought to be done; but there is no limit of time as to the commencement of the work under these appropriations made by Congress.

Mr. KENYON. I do not understand how the commencement of a building can be an urgent deficiency.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, may I make a statement to the Senator in that connection?

Mr. KENYON. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. The first thing in arranging for a public building, after the law is passed authorizing the building and the limit of cost, is to draw the plans; but before that there is the examination of the site, the borings, etc., to know the character of the soil, subsoil, and so forth, as to the foundation, and how they are to arrange for foundation material, and also for the grading of the land on the site; this before the plans are made. Those small appropriations, some of them only $500, comprehend the starting of the building.

Mr. KENYON. It does not mean the actual physical starting of the building, but merely the preparation of the plans?

Mr. WARREN. That and the plans, and in some cases the continuation of the building where it needs protection, and so forth.

Mr. KENYON. But will the Senator tell me why that is placed in an urgent deficiency bill?

Mr. WARREN. It is so that their office force may be employed on plans, and so that their engineers may be in the field, and not all have to be laid off and wait until such time as we pass the regular appropriation bills.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Treasury Department," subhend "Public buildings, construction, sites, and rent," on page 17, line 6, after "$600,000," to insert:

Provided, That so much of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes," approved June 23, 1913 (38 Stats., 25), as authorizes the construction of a central heating, lighting, and power plant in the city of Washington, D. C., be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to add to the buildings already enumerated in said act to be furnished with heat, light, and power the Johnson-Walker Building (known as the Navy Annex), the Interior Department Office Building, the Lincoln Memorial, and the Women's Memorial Building (Red Cross Building), and the limit of cost for said plant is hereby increased from $1,494,104 to $1,669,104, and the limit of $35,000 therein fixed for the employment of technical services in connection with the plans and specifications and construction of said plant is hereby increased to not exceeding $60,000 and made available for the employment of technical and clerical services for said purposes.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from Virginia to an amendment which I offer to come at the end of the appropriation regarding the central heating, lighting, and power plant in Washington, near the Mall.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add, at the end of the committee amendment as proposed in the bill, on page 18, line 2, after the word "purposes," the following:

Provided, That no work upon the construction of said plant shall be commenced until the plans therefor shall have been submitted to the National Fine Arts Commission for their approval and approved by the President of the United States.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, it is impossible to give intelligent consideration to a proposition like that, presented as it is. I suggest, and I hope it will be satisfactory to the Senator, that it be permitted to go on the bill, with a view to the investigation of the matter.

For instance, the amendment says "that no work * * * shall be commenced," and so forth. The work is already commenced. It is progressing now. The language might be changed, however. If there is anything in the plans which mars the beauty of the city it ought not to be done. I would be very willing for the Fine Arts Commission to be consulted, and I think it is well enough for that amendment to go on to afford opportunity for investigation.

I say that because if it should develop that there is no necessity for the amendment, and we did not persistently demand its retention, I want the Senator to understand it. I am as anxious as he is that no mistake shall be made, and I am very willing to have the amendment go on in order that it may be carefully investigated.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state, Mr. President, that that is entirely satisfactory to me. My only solicitude is to avoid unsightliness in the neighborhood of the Mall; and I have no doubt that the matter can be disposed of satisfactorily.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It will have careful investigation. I am as anxious as the Senator is to avoid any unsightly structure.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment stated again.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again state the amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add, at the end of the committee amendment, which comes on page 18, line 2, after the word "purposes," the following words:

Provided, That no work upon the construction of said plant shall be commenced until the plans therefor shall have been submitted to the National Fine Arts Commission for their approval and approved by the President of the United States.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Has not the work been already started on this plant?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It has, Mr. President; and therefore I said that we could not perfect this amendment now, but that I was willing to have it go on the bill in order that the conference committee might give it careful attention; and if anything is necessary along this line proper languag will be provided.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Very well. It seems to me the amendment ought not to be adopted in that form.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, in the meantime is the work to be discontinued?

Mr. NEWLANDS. As I understand, the substantial work has not been commenced. There has been some work done with reference to excavation, but I do not think anything has been done relating to the construction of the building. At all events, as the Senator from Virginia suggests, the amendment can be properly shaped.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, it strikes me that if the Senator from Nevada would amend the resolution so as to provide that the plans shall be submitted to the National Fine Arts Commission for the purpose of suggesting changes, and such changes as they may suggest shall be adopted, with the approval of the President, the work can go right along.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator that, as I understand the amendment, that is substantially what it does. If it does not do that, and if any change of phraseology is necessary, it will be perfected in conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest that there is a general statute on the subject providing that these public buildings shall not be erected until they have been submitted to this commission.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, within an hour or two I have received for my consideration in relation to this item a statement which is rather startling in its nature, particularly as to what the ultimate cost of the undertaking will be; and, further, that it is the intention to carry steam through pipes under the streets of the city from one building to the other at a pressure of 270 pounds for furnishing power for the operation of elevators and heating the buildings. I do not know whether there is any truth in the statement or not.

I had hoped that the matter could go over until Monday, but I shall not interpose any objection to its consideration and passage now, knowing that between now and the time the item shall be considered in conference I can get additional information. If there is any vital objection, and if the assertions contained in the statement submitted to me are correct, then, of course, I know that the conferees will take it under consideration.

Therefore I shall not object to the consideration of the matter at this time.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The Senator can rest assured that the conferees will be glad to have the data which he may get and give them careful consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands.

Mr. McLEAN obtained the floor.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The chairman of the committee is not here. I do not know what his wishes are.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for the present, and when the chairman of the committee comes in we will hear what he has to say. We had just as well finish the appropriation bill.

Mr. McLEAN. The chairman of the committee told me that he would be absent for a few minutes and would soon return. I shall occupy only a very few moments.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I have sent half a dozen messengers to look for the chairman of the Philippine Committee without being able to find him. Under the circumstances I hope the Senator from Connecticut will defer his remarks for the present.

Mr. McLEAN. I will state to the Senator from Virginia that I was about to proceed with the knowledge of the chairman of the Committee on the Philippines, but if the matter before the Senate is not to take all the afternoon, I have no objection to yielding for the present.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I am sure the appropriation bill will be finished in a very few moments.

Mr. McLEAN. Very well.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to laying aside the unfinished business temporarily and proceeding with the consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill? The Chair hears none.

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Public buildings, repairs and equipment," on page 19, line 10, after "nineteen hundred and sixteen," to strike out "$25,000" and insert "$50,000," so as to make the clause read:

Repairs and preservation: For repairs and preservation of all completed and occupied public buildings and the grounds thereof, including the same objects specified under this head in the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1916, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead, "Collecting internal revenue," on page 20, after line 8, to insert:

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue is authorized to reopen and allow claims for taxes for the recovery of which suits are pending and which would be allowable under the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of McCoach, collector, against Minehill & Schuylkill Haven Railroad Co.; and there is hereby appropriated for the payment of such claims a total sum not to exceed $300,000, this appropriation to be available for the payment of such of the aforesaid claims as are not payable out of moneys heretofore appropriated and available during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, for the payment of claims.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 9, to insert:

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING.

The limitation in the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1916 as to the number of delivered sheets of United States currency to be executed is hereby increased from 82,000,000 to 90,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 15, to insert:

For engravers' and printers' materials and other materials, except distinctive paper, including the same objects specified under this head in the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1916, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to transfer $120,000 from other appropriations made for the fiscal year 1916, as follows: From "Salaries of all necessary employees, other than plate printers and plate printers' assistants," $75,000, and from "Wages of plate printers," $45,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead, "Public Health Service," on page 22, after line 5, to insert:

For special studies of and demonstration work in rural sanitation, including personal service, $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations if he thinks $50,000 is sufficient to meet the emergency just now?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I call the Senator's attention to the fact that this is intended to run only until the 30th of June. We had before us the Surgeon General, in charge of the Public Health Service, and we concluded, after hearing all he had to say, that $50,000, in addition to what has heretofore been appropriated, will meet the necessities until the end of the present fiscal year.

Mr. VARDAMAN. All I desire is that this service shall not be crippled. It is just in the infancy of its great work, and it was my understanding that the department had most earnestly asked for $100,000.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator that that recommendation was made, but it was intended to go beyond the 30th of June.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I am perfectly willing, after what the Senator says, that the appropriation shall remain as proposed by the committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The Surgeon General appeared before us, and we are satisfied that this appropriation will answer until the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. SMOOT. It is perfectly satisfactory to the Public Health Service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "District of Columbia," on page 22, after line 22, to insert:

Publication of notices in condemnation cases: The provision contained in the urgent deficiency act for the fiscal year 1913, approved October 22, 1913, regarding notice by publication in condemnation cases for the opening, extension, widening, or straightening of streets, avenues, roads, highways, alleys, or minor streets in the District of Columbia is hereby repealed, and section 491c of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, reenacted so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 491c. The said court shall cause public notice of not less than 20 days to be given of the institution of such proceeding, by advertisement in three daily newspapers published in the District of Columbia, which notice shall warn and require all persons having any interest in the proceeding to appear in court at a day to be named in said notice and to continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits by the jury herein provided for; and in addition to such public notice said court shall cause a copy of said notice to be served by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, or his deputies, upon such owners of the land to be condemned as can be found by said marshal, or his deputies, within the District of Columbia and upon the tenants and occupants of the same. The said court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for any person interested in the proceedings who may be under disability."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 24, after line 4, to insert:

Public schools: For additional amount necessary for construction of an eight-room addition, including an assembly hall, to the Powell School, $9,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Navy Department," on page 25, after line 18, to insert:

For rental of additional quarters for the Navy Department, $1,250.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. My attention has been called to the wisdom of inserting a few words there. In line 20, after the figures "$1,250," I move to amend by adding "or so much thereof as may be necessary."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of the Interior," at the top of page 28, to insert:

NATIONAL PARKS.

There is appropriated from the several appropriations for protection, improvement, and management, etc., of the various national parks, including the Hot Springs Reservation, as well as from the revenues from privileges, etc., in the national parks and the Hot Springs Reservation, such sum or sums as the Secretary of the Interior in his judgment may deem necessary, to be expended in employment of the superintendent of national parks and not exceeding four other competent persons in the District of Columbia and in the field, and other necessary expenses in connection with the administration of the national parks and the Hot Springs Reservation, including expenses of travel incident to the transferring of employees from one park to another and of park supervisors in conferring with the superintendent of national parks; a detailed statement of such expenditures to be submitted to Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading was continued to line 2 on page 29.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I move to strike out lines 3, 4, and 5 on page 29, in the following words:

For payment of limited indemnity for the loss of pieces of domestic registered matter, first, third, and fourth classes, fiscal year 1914, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 10 on page 29.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I move that the period at the end of line 10 be stricken out and to insert in lieu thereof a semicolon, and after line 10 to insert "1914, $5,000."

I will say, Mr. President, that I move this little alteration in pursuance of a letter received from the Postmaster General, in order that this appropriation may be applicable to pay for insured mail as well as the classes of mail provided for already in the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I ask that the communication, which I send to the desk, from the Postmaster General be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the communication was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., January 29, 1916.

Hon. THOMAS S. MARTIN,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: My attention has been called to the provisions of page 23, lines 3, 4, and 5, of H. R. 9416, as passed by the House of Representatives, making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and prior years. The lines in question read as follows:

"For payment of limited indemnity for the loss of pieces of domestic registered matter, first, third, and fourth classes, fiscal year 1914, $5,000."

The purpose of this deficiency item is to pay claims for indemnity arising on account of the loss of insured mail as well as registered mail. On January 1, 1913, the privilege to register fourth-class mail was withdrawn, as at that time the law was placed into effect providing for the insurance of fourth-class or parcel-post mail, as contemplated by the act of August 24, 1912. Therefore, during the fiscal year 1914 the department paid indemnity for the loss of registered, insured, and collect-on-delivery mail. Authority was granted in the deficiency appropriation act approved July 29, 1914, for the payment of limited indemnity for lost insured and collect-on-delivery mail out of the appropriation for the fiscal year 1914 by the following provision:

"For payment of limited indemnity for lost insured and collect-on-delivery mail, $35,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $60,000 for 'payment of limited indemnity for the loss of pieces of registered matter, first, third, and fourth classes,' for the fiscal year 1914."

As the total amount appropriated by this act (approved July 29, 1914) has been entirely exhausted, it is thought that the provision in the pending deficiency appropriation act (H. R. 9416) will make the funds available for payment of indemnity for lost registered mail only. For the fiscal years 1915 and 1916 there has been only one annual appropriation out of which to pay claims for indemnity for both registered and insured mail, but both classes of mail have been stipulated.

Under these circumstances I beg to request the following amendment to the act in question: That lines 3, 4, and 5 on page 23 be stricken out and that between the present lines 10 and 11 a line be inserted reading "1914, $5,000."

Unless this amendment is made, it is not believed that the appropriation will be available for the payment of claims for lost insured and collect-on-delivery mail.

Respectfully,

A. S. BURLESON,
Postmaster General.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of Agriculture," subhead "Bureau of Plant Industry," on page 30, after line 21, to insert:

For the emergency caused by the infectious nature and continued spread of the destructive disease of pine trees known as the white pine blister rust, by conducting such investigations of the nature and means of communication of the disease, and by applying such methods of eradication or control of the disease as in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture may be necessary, $20,000; and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to pay such expense and employ such persons and means, and to cooperate with such authorities of the States concerned, organizations, or individuals, as he may deem necessary to accomplish such purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, after line 7, to insert:

BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY.

To meet the emergency caused by the prevalance and continued spread of rabies in wolves, coyotes, and other predatory wild animals, which is being communicated by them to stock and other domestic animals, on the public lands, national forests, and elsewhere, in the Western and Northwestern States, by the destruction of such wild animals, $75,000; and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to incur such expense and to employ such persons and means, as, in his judgment, may be necessary to enable him to carry out the purposes of this appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Department of Commerce," subhead "Coast and Geodetic Survey," on page 33, after line 1, to insert:

For clerk to the superintendent, at the rate of $1,800 per annum, from February 1 to June 30, 1916, both dates inclusive, $750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Fisheries," on page 33, line 10, after the date "nineteen hundred and sixteen," to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500," so as to make the clause read:

Maintenance of vessels: For maintenance of vessels and launches, including the same objects specified under this head in the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1916, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Legislative," on page 35, after line 3, to insert:

SENATE.

The Secretary of the Senate is authorized and directed to pay to Mary Meyer, niece of Jacob C. Donaldson, deceased, late a skilled laborer in the Senate Library, the amount of salary due him for the month of December, 1915.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 35, after line 9, to insert:

Senate Office Building: For maintenance, miscellaneous items and supplies, and for all necessary personal and other services for the care and operation of the Senate Office Building, under the direction and supervision of the Senate Committee on Rules, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Government Printing Office," subhead "Printing and binding," on page 35, after line 22, to insert:

Holidays: To enable the Public Printer to comply with the provisions of the law granting holidays and the Executive order granting half holidays with pay to the employees of the Government Printing Office for the fiscal years that follow:

Nineteen hundred and sixteen, $27,305.93;
Nineteen hundred and fifteen, $270.22.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, after line 4, to insert:

Leaves of absence: To enable the Public Printer to comply with the provisions of the law granting leave to employees of the Government Printing Office, $48,866.76, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, after line 17, to insert:

For printing and binding for the Court of Claims, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Judgments, United States courts," on page 37, line 2, after the word "sixty-three," to insert "and Senate Document No. 253," so as to make the clause read:

For payment of the final judgments and decrees, including costs of suits, which have been rendered under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," certified to Congress at its present session by the Attorney General in House Document No. 563 and Senate Document No. 253, and which have not been appealed, namely.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 4, after the words "Treasury Department," to strike out "$744" and insert "$1,097," so as to make the clause read:

Under the Treasury Department, $1,097.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 5, after the words "War Department," to strike out "$1,060.53" and insert "$5,714.42," so as to make the clause read:

Under the War Department, $5,714.42.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 7, after the words "In all," to strike out "$2,388.28" and insert "$7,395.17," so as to make the clause read:

In all, $7,395.17; together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest on the respective judgments at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date thereof until the time this appropriation is made.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Judgments, Court of Claims," on page 37, line 14, after the number "566," to insert "and Senate Document No. 252," so as to make the clause read:

For the payment of the judgments rendered by the Court of Claims, reported to Congress at its present session in House Document No. 566 and Senate Document No. 252, namely.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 16, after the words "Treasury Department," to strike out "$52,986.35" and insert "$52,988.23," so as to make the clause read:

Under the Treasury Department, $52,988.23.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 18, after the words "War Department," to strike out "$67,115.23" and insert "$87,645.05," so as to make the clause read:

Under the War Department, $87,645.05.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 19, after the words "Navy Department," to strike out "$90,244.77," and insert "$97,373.74," so as to make the clause read:

Under the Navy Department, $97,373.74.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, after line 20, to insert:

Under the Department of Agriculture, $34.45.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, line 22, after the words "In all," to strike out "$210,411.06," and insert "$238,106.18," so as to make the clause read:

In all, $238,106.18.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Claims allowed by the Auditor for the State and other departments," on page 50, after line 18, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 3. That for the payment of the following claims, certified to be due by the several accounting officers of the Treasury Department under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, and under appropriations heretofore treated as permanent, being for the service of the fiscal year 1913 and other years, unless otherwise stated, and which have been certified to Congress under section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884, as fully set forth in Senate Document No. 255, reported to Congress at its present session, there is appropriated as follows:

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE AUDITOR FOR THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

For refunding taxes illegally collected, $28,406.30.
For payment of judgments against internal-revenue officers, $2,985.95.
For pay of crews, miscellaneous expenses, etc., Life-Saving Service, $17.77.
For Life-Saving Service, $600.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE AUDITOR FOR THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

For pay, etc., of the Army, $5,412.54.
For extra-duty pay to enlisted men as clerks at Army division and department headquarters, $369.60.
For mileage to officers and contract surgeons, $28.10.
For regular supplies, Quartermaster's Department, $81.88.
For incidental expenses, Quartermaster's Department, $5,592.65.
For barracks and quarters, $44.40.
For transportation of the Army and its supplies, $69.15.
For headstones for graves of soldiers, $1.66.
For raising four additional regiments, $46.35.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE AUDITOR FOR THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

For pay of the Navy, $757.52.
For pay, miscellaneous, $127.12.
For pay, Marine Corps, $66.60.
For transportation, Bureau of Navigation, $536.09.
For maintenance, Bureau of Yards and Docks, $65.20.
For freight, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, $4.
For construction and repair, Bureau of Construction and Repair, $204.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE AUDITOR FOR THE INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

For purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915, $969.96.
For purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1914, $80.73.
For purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 70 cents.
For Indian school, Fort Bidwell, Cal., repairs and improvements, 1915, $15.36.
For Army pensions, 10 cents.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY THE AUDITOR FOR THE STATE AND OTHER DEPARTMENTS.

For contingent expenses, Executive Office, 1914, 88 cents.
For salaries of vice consuls (act of Feb. 5, 1915), 1915, $79.17.
For allowance for clerks at consulates, $80.
For relief and protection of American seamen, 1915, $594.06.
For contingent expenses, Department of Commerce and Labor, $7.84.
For expenses of regulating immigration, $144.25.
For fees of commissioners, United States courts, 1915, $82.20.
For fees of jurors, United States courts, $51.
For support of prisoners, United States courts, $1.30.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This completes the committee amendments.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 6, after line 9, insert:

To pay the subscription of the United States to the International Geodetic Association for the years 1915 and 1916, $3,000.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator from California that the committee did not allow that item, but speaking for myself personally I am by no means certain that it ought not to be allowed. I am very willing that it shall go into the bill and have careful investigation in conference. I am not at all satisfied with the action of the committee in not allowing it.

Mr. WORKS. The matter was in the special charge of my colleague [Mr. PHELAN], and not knowing that the bill was to come up to-day my colleague is absent from the Senate. I am presenting it on his account. I greatly appreciate the fact that the chairman of the committee will allow it to go in the bill, its merit to be determined hereafter.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It certainly shall have careful consideration.

Mr. WORKS. In connection with the amendment I should like to have printed a letter which I received from the Superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, giving the particulars and the reasons why the appropriation should be made, and also a statement in connection with it signed by other persons interested in having the appropriation made. With that leave I shall submit it.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY,
Washington, January 18, 1916.

Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: Regarding the matter of the International Geodetic Association, and its work at the latitude station located at Ukiah, Cal., and my promise yesterday to furnish you with data in connection with the emergency appropriation relative to this observatory, I beg to submit the following:

THE UKIAH OBSERVATORY.

For many years the determination of latitude was very much complicated by the shifting of the earth's axis of rotation. The motion of the earth's axis is a very irregular one and does not follow any known law.

In order that this subject might be studied and the law of the shifting of the axis be discovered, the International Geodetic Association, in 1899, established five stations on the thirty-ninth parallel of latitude as equally spaced as possible around the globe. Two of these stations were located in the United States, one at Gaithersburg, Md., and the other at Ukiah, Cal.

At each of these stations, except Gaithersburg, continuous observations have been made. There are many astronomers throughout the world who are continuously using the results obtained at these latitude stations to correct their observations, and it is of the greatest importance to them to have the latitude work continued without interruption for an indefinite period.

On September 14, 1915, Dr. F. R. Helmert, director of the central bureau of the International Geodetic Association, whose office is at Potsdam, Germany, wrote me a letter of which the following is a partial translation:

"Your letter of August 19 has to-day been received. The Ukiah observation book for July has also come to hand. * * * It is to be hoped that Japan and Italy, as well as Russia, will maintain their stations at Mizusawa, Carloforte, and Tschardjui. If they support those stations, they will not be expected to pay their yearly quota, for the support of these observatories would balance the yearly contribution to the association. With the American stations the situation is different. The United States has paid no quota during the year 1914, and it was necessary, for that reason, to discontinue the observations at Gaithersburg, Md. Because of the scarcity of money on account of the war we must also eventually close Ukiah. In 1915 only a few quotas were received, and in 1916 it is certain that nothing more will be paid. * * * Permit me to make the request on you that everything possible be done to continue the work of the international latitude service in North America."

It will be seen from this that one of the two stations in the United States was closed because of our failure to pay our part of the expenses of the International Geodetic Association, and it will also be seen that the observations at Ukiah must be discontinued unless we resume payment of our quota.

There is attached to this letter a table showing the amount of money spent in the United States each year for the maintenance of the observatories at Gaithersburg and Ukiah since the beginning of the work in 1899. The total amount shown in the table is about $65,000. During the time that the latitude work was going on in the United States we paid into the treasury of the International Geodetic Association only $24,000.

This shows that the association spent over twice as much in the United States as we paid into the treasury. If the United States resumes the payment of its quota, it is reasonably certain that the central bureau will continue the work at Ukiah and it is possible that, after the close of the European war, it may also resume observations at Gaithersburg.

It is because few, if any, of the nations now at war will be able to pay their quotas into the treasury of the association while the war is in progress that $2,500 has been asked for in the urgent deficiency bill with which to maintain the observatory at Ukiah until the International Geodetic Association finds it possible to resume its support after peace has been declared. There is also an item of $3,000 in the same bill to be used in paying our quota to the association for the two years 1914 and 1915.

As it costs about $1,700 to pay the expenses of the Ukiah station for a year, the sum requested in the bill—$2,500—will continue the work for about 18 months.

The accompanying statement shows that the International Geodetic Association has spent much more money in the United States than we have contributed to its treasury, and therefore we should feel it a duty to make up the arrears in our promised contribution. Even if the association had spent nothing in this country, we should still feel it to our advantage to maintain our membership and pay our quota.

The work of the association is of great importance to every civilized nation, for there are many world-wide problems with which only an international association can deal. The problems come under this head. As long as people are interested in the search for truth they will wish to know the exact shape and size of the earth, partly from a desire to know the facts in the case and partly because such exact information is of advantage in conducting scientific and astronomic investigations. The figure of the earth can only be determined with a great degree of accuracy when the geodetic observations of many nations are combined, and it is necessary that some international association should assemble the results and solve the problems.

There are other operations of the association the results of which have more obvious value. One is the coordination of the geodetic results of the surveys of each of two contiguous nations, which enables them to give to points on their common boundary the same geographic positions and elevations on the maps of the two countries. Such an agreement of maps would obviate many disputes in regard to boundaries which might otherwise occur.

Another problem which it is impossible for any one nation to solve is the derivation of a formula which will give the value of the intensity of gravity at any latitude. The gravity observations are made by many nations, but one central bureau must coordinate all the results.

MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION.

Although the United States did not contribute to the International Geodetic Association in 1914, the permanent secretary of the association invited the United States representative, Dr. O. H. Tittmann, to vote on the question of whether or not the association should continue in force for another 10 years the previously adopted convention and w ether or not there should be any alterations in this convention when the present one expires on December 31, 1916. The authority for Dr. Tittmann's reply to the permanent secretary was given in a letter of which the following is a copy:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 22, 1914.

Hon. WM. C REDFIELD,
Secretary of Commerce.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I find that I have not answered your inquiry of November 24. The appropriation asked for as our share of the permanent advisory committee of the International Geodetic Association is so small that I heartily agree with you in the opinion that we should continue our membership, and that our representatives should be advised to so vote. I shall be glad to join with you in recommending action to Congress.

Very truly, yours, W. J. BRYAN.

Upon receipt of this letter Dr. Tittmann wrote to the permanent secretary of the association that the United States voted to continue the convention without change for another 10 years.

From this it will be seen that Dr. Tittmann was empowered by the Secretary of State to vote for the continuation of an international agreement among practically all of the civilized nations of the world. In spite of the authority vested in Dr. Tittmann and in spite of his action in voting to continue the convention of the association for another 10-year period, an action which should have the strength of a treaty, our Congress has failed to appropriate money for our quota. This, of course, places the United States in a very awkward and embarrassing position.

Upon Dr. Tittmann's resignation last spring as a member of the permanent committee of the International Geodetic Association the question of his successor arose, and I recommended that Mr. William Bowie, at the present time Chief of the Division of Geodesy of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, be designated as a member of the permanent commission of the association in succession to Dr. Tittmann. In a letter, dated June 12, 1915, the Secretary of State ad interim, Hon. Robert Lansing, wrote in part as follows:

"In reply I have the honor to say that it does not appear from the act making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, that Congress has made any provision for the continuance during the fiscal year of membership by the United States in the International Geodetic Association. This department would not, therefore, seem to be in a position to comply with your request."

It is my urgent desire that Congress appropriate money for the continuation of the work at Ukiah during the progress of the European war, and that it will also appropriate sufficient funds to pay our arrears in dues to the association for the two years 1914 and 1915.

As the representative of the United States has always been a member of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, this bureau feels particularly humiliated because of our failure to meet our obligations.

There is transmitted herewith a photostat copy of a letter, dated December 3, 1915, signed by several prominent astronomers of the Pacific coast and indorsed by the presidents of the University of California and of Leland Stanford Junior University. An original copy of this letter was sent by Dr. Campbell, of the Lick Observatory, to you and the other Senator and Representatives from California. It is an urgent plea to Congress to provide funds for the support of the Ukiah Observatory:

The table mentioned in the third paragraph of the second page of this letter, showing the amount of money paid by the United States to the International Geodetic Association and the amount expended by the association in the United States, follows:

Fiscal year.	United States quota.	Expended in the United States.
		Marks.
1899	$1,500	2,812
1900	1,500	17,350
1901	1,500	18,051
1902	1,500	18,060
1903	1,500	17,000
1904	1,500	17,000
1905	1,500	17,000
1906	1,500	18,000
1907	1,500	16,000
1908	1,500	17,000
1909	1,500	17,000
1910	1,500	17,000
1911	1,500	17,000
1912	1,500	17,000
1913	1,500	17,000
1914	1,500	17,000
1915		9,000
1916
	24,000	269,273
		.24
		1077092
		538546
		$64,625.52
Cost of zenith tube		2,500.00
		65,125.52

There is an apparent discrepancy between this table and the quotation from Dr. Helmert's letter, but not a real one, for the amounts of the United States quota given in the table are for fiscal years, and, therefore, the 1914 quota, as mentioned in the table, was paid to Dr. Helmert during the calendar year 1913. Dr. Helmert is correct in his statement that during the (calendar) year 1914 and again in 1915 no funds were received from the United States.

If the above information is not clear to you, please let me know, and I will gladly furnish you any additional details.

I am, respectfully, yours,

E. LESTER JONES, Superintendent.

MOUNT HAMILTON, CAL., December 3, 1915.

DEAR SIR: We respectfully call your attention to the problem of the International Latitude Observatory at Ukiah, Cal. In effect, that observatory was maintained by the United States Government from early in 1899 to the end of 1913, on the basis of congressional appropriations contributed through the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey to the International Geodetic Association, the latter administered from headquarers at Potsdam, Germany. Although the United States Government was pledged to lend its further support, in so far as the Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Department of Commerce could make such a pledge, the Congress in 1913 failed to continue the appropriations ($1,500 per annum) of the preceding 14 years. The Ukiah Observatory has been supported during the years 1914 and 1915 on funds appropriated by all the leading countries of the world except the United States, notwithstanding the existence of war conditions in those countries. The funds from foreign countries are available to maintain the Ukiah Observatory until April or May, 1916; these funds will then cease to come. We feel that the maintenance of the Ukiah Observatory by Congress is a debt and an obligation of honor. With the United States at peace and all other leading countries which support the international association at war, our obligation seems to be accentuated.

The International Geodetic Association is an organization composed of the geodetic survey departments of the leading national Governments. The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey is a member. The association's purpose is to promote the solution of those problems of the earth, such as the earth's size, shape, gravitational power, etc., which demand that observations be made in many widely distributed countries and which therefore require international cooperation.

In the eighties it was discovered that the latitudes (and to a small degree the longitudes) of all points on the earth are constantly changing. The earth as a whole "wabbles" a little as it rotates on its axis. This affects all precision surveys of the earth more or less seriously. To determine the amount of the changes, the law of the changes, and, if possible, the reasons for the changes, the International Geodetic Association established in 1898–99 four special observatories, distributed as uniformly as practicable around the earth on the same parallel of latitude, north 39° 8′—one observatory in Maryland, one at Ukiah, Cal., one in Japan, and one in Sardinia (Italy). Later the Russian Government established a similar observatory in Turkestan in latitude 39° 8′, and considerably later, the Cincinnati Observatory, happening to have the same latitude, 39° 8′, voluntarily and at its own expense, assumed a share in the work. (It is absolutely necessary that all these observatories be on the same parallel of latitude so that they can observe the same stars in their zeniths.)

For lack of funds the observatory in Maryland has first been discontinued. The closing of the Ukiah Observatory would deal a terrible blow to the plans, because it occupies a strong strategic position in longitude. The circuit of the earth in latitude north 39° 8′ and the international latitude observatories on that circuit are represented in the accompanying figure.

(Figure omitted.)

You will see that, without the Ukiah station, the Cincinnati station would be alone in five-eighths of the circuit of the globe, with Japan, Turkestan, and Sardinia relatively close together in the remaining three-eighths of the circuit, and that the three-eighths from Cincinnati to Japan would be wholly unoccupied. The solution of the international latitude problem on the basis of observatories in Japan, Turkestan, Sardinia, and Cincinnati is entirely analogous to the building of a great circular tower upon a foundation consisting of four piers, distributed irregularly on a circle, as Japan, Turkestan, Sardinia, and Cincinnati are located in the above sketch. An observing station on the Pacific coast of the United States, in latitude 39° 8′—that is, at Ukiah—is demanded in order to give a satisfactory support to the international structure.

The motion of the earth, involving variations of latitudes, has not gone through a complete cycle of change since these international observatories were established, and the observations should be continued at least until the variations become predictable. We respectfully request your support of an item in the urgent deficiency appropriation bill for the maintenance of the Ukiah international latitude station, to be applied as the Superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey considers most desirable and efficient.

Yours, respectfully,

W. W. CAMPBELL,
Director of the Lick Observatory, University of California.
A. O. LEUSCHNER,
Director Students' Observatory and Professor of Astronomy, University of California.
SIDNEY D. TOWNLEY,
Professor in Leland Stanford Junior University, in Charge of Astronomical Instruction.

We approve of the foregoing.

BENJ. IDE WHEELER,
President University of California.
J. C. BRANNER,
President Leland Stanford Junior University.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment submitted by the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS] is agreed to.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee, inasmuch as I was not able to be present at the meeting of the committee, how the second item on page 2 happens to come into an urgent deficiency appropriation bill—an item of $25,000 for the Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It comes in the deficiency bill, Mr. President, because the expenditure was authorized by Congress, and the money has not been appropriated. There is a deficiency of money to carry out the instruction of Congress. A commission of three was created, of which the President is one, with instructions to make an investigation as to a suitable design for a memorial bridge. The money has not been appropriated and the commission ask that they be given the money to carry out the instruction of Congress. It is manifestly a deficiency under existing law.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I think I recognize the desirability of a bridge in this locality, but I have wondered if, with the condition of our national finances at the present time, it has been a good thing to insert this item of $25,000 in the bill. I understand, of course, how desirable it is to the Senator from Virginia, and how important, perhaps, it is to the city of Washington that such a bridge should be constructed at some time, and if we had the money, if we were not trying to economize to meet some conditions which are an absolute necessity, I should not even raise the question as to the propriety of the appropriation. However, I still feel that it was a mistake at this time to put this item into an urgent deficiency bill, when at least it is a matter that would not suffer if it were postponed to a time when we would know where the money is coming from to meet the expenses of the Government.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I do not like to object to appropriations; I know it is unpopular; but I should like to ask the chairman about the appropriation for a post-office building at Binghamton, N. Y. This bill carries $100,000 for a site for a post office in a city that, according to the census of 1910, has 48,000 people. It seems to me that is a tremendous amount of money to pay for a site. Why should the site be provided for in the urgent deficiency bill I can not just get through my head.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, the purchase of these sites and the erection of these buildings was authorized, and work has been proceeding more rapidly in recent days than formerly. It has gotten to a point now where the Secretary of the Treasury needs the money for these purposes. The items here appropriating money for post-office sites and post-office buildings are within the limit already authorized, and were duly estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury and asked for as urgently necessary.

He is ready to go on with the work. He has a force in the architect's office, and he wants to proceed with the work Congress ordered him to do. He lacks the money. The money is a deficiency for a purpose for which Congress has authorized the work to be done. He estimates for it. There is not an item here that was put on at the instance of any Senator; it was done purely on the certificate from the Secretary of the Treasury that these amounts are urgently needed, and they are appropriated accordingly.

Mr. KENYON. I am not going to take any time on it. I assume the Federal court is held at Binghamton, N. Y. It does seem to me to spend $100,000 for a site for a post office in a town of 48,000 is, to say the least, pretty strong.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. If the Senator will excuse me for a moment, I will say I have no doubt there is not a dollar provided here except what was authorized. I have no doubt the Secretary of the Treasury has contracted for the purchase of this property in pursuance of the act of Congress, and it is an absolute liability on the Government just as much as the coupons on its bonds. He was authorized to make this purchase; he has contracted for the property, and he needs the money to pay for the property.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. VARDAMAN. How much money has been appropriated for the construction of the building?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do not recall the amount appropriated, but it is within the limit, I think, provided by the act of Congress. There is not a single dollar appropriated here except in accordance with previous legislation.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The Senator does not know the amount of money that has been appropriated for the construction of the post-office building?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I can look it up. I can not carry those figures in my mind.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I have not surrendered the floor. Has the Senator any information in his records about the courthouse at Binghamton, as to what courts are held there?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator that I have no information in respect to that subject.

Mr. KENYON. I simply want, Mr. President, in a mild way to raise an objection to providing for Federal buildings in an urgent deficiency appropriation bill. There are here some 13 pages of appropriations for public buildings, many of them for the commencement of public buildings and some of them in towns of less than a thousand people. The Senator from Utah predicted some time ago that the urgent deficiency bills would amount to $20,000,000 this session. I think he was rather criticized and laughed at about it, but it is apparent now that they will go vastly beyond that sum, perhaps to $25,000,000 or $30,000,000. It is because in the future I myself may object to some of these appropriations that I simply did not want to sit quietly and have them go by without a protest.

Mr. BRYAN. I will state that the Treasury Department and the Post Office Department, acting together, have declined to spend any money for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building in a town of less than 5,000 people, and also in towns which have not $15,000 of receipts per annum.

Mr. KENYON. I desire to understand the Senator.

Mr. BRYAN. Notwithstanding that the act of Congress authorized the construction of buildings in towns of smaller population.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

Mr. KENYON. Just one moment. Does the Senator from Florida say that the Secretary of the Treasury has refused to commence the construction of buildings in towns of less than 5,000 people?

Mr. BRYAN. That is my understanding, and I got it authoritatively from the department.

Mr. KENYON. I venture to say there are at least 10 provisions in this bill for the erection of buildings in towns of less than 5,000 population.

Mr. HARDWICK. Will the Senator from Iowa yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. KENYON. Certainly.

Mr. HARDWICK. I merely wanted to correct the statement made by the Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN]. On the contrary, I know where acts of Congress have authorized buildings in towns of less than 5,000 inhabitants and having less than $10,000 receipts. The sites for such buildings at least have been purchased in some instances. For that matter, with the permission of the Senator, I will say, if he still yields to me, that I do not see how the Secretary of the Treasury could possibly have the right not to carry out a law after it had been passed by Congress. I am not criticizing him for doing it. The responsibility is on Congress for making such appropriations.

Mr. BRYAN. I agree with the Senator in his last statement; but I know that what I have stated has been the attitude taken by the department. It has been publicly stated that the department would not erect a public building in a city of less than 5,000 population or in which the post-office receipts do not amount to $15,000 annually. That is a contested point between the legislative branch and the executive branch of the Government. A speech was made in the House of Representatives only a few days ago taking the position that the Treasury Department had no right to refuse to carry out the will of Congress which authorized the construction of public buildings in towns of less than 5,000 people and having less than $10,000 receipts annually.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not know who has the floor.

Mr. BRYAN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HARDWICK. I merely want to say to the Senator that no matter where he got his information, surely, from my own knowledge, I know he is mistaken in his statement of facts.

Mr. BRYAN. I got it from the department.

Mr. HARDWICK. I do not care who gave the information to the Senator. I know of instances in my own State where there are cities of less than 5,000 people and with less than $10,000 receipts, where appropriations have at least been made for the purchase of sites for public buildings.

Mr. BRYAN. It may be that I am mistaken as to the attitude of the department with reference to the purchase of sites for public buildings; but does the Senator from Georgia know whether such buildings have been erected?

Mr. HARDWICK. I think so, in cases where they have less than that number of population, but I do not know as to the receipts.

Mr. BRYAN. Then, I understand it may be a question of whether they can make the Secretary of the Treasury believe that they have more people than they really have.

Mr. HARDWICK. Of course, the people we have there are pretty fine. There is no trouble about their quality, even though we have not the quantity.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida what is the population of De Land, Fla.? According to the census of 1910 the population was 2,812.

Mr. BRYAN. What are the annual receipts?

Mr. KENYON. I have no statement as to the receipts; but this bill makes an appropriation of $12,000 for the commencement of a building there.

Mr. BRYAN. I imagine it comes under the rule as to towns where the receipts are above $15,000.

Mr. KENYON. Even though the town may be below 5,000 population, if the receipts exceed $15,000, the Treasury Department will go ahead with the work? I simply want to say that there are appropriations scattered all through this bill for the commencement of public buildings in towns of less than 5,000 population.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I wish merely again to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that, as to these buildings, it may be that Congress acted unwisely; but the buildings have been authorized by law. The time to object was when they were proposed to be authorized; but after the Secretary of the Treasury has been authorized and directed to acquire sites and to construct buildings it is too late to say that the towns were too small and that the receipts were too small to justify that course. There is not a dollar appropriated in this bill except in pursuance of previous legislation by Congress—not one dollar.

Mr. KENYON. I realize that that is true. I regret that I did not have an opportunity to object to them when the provisions were under consideration; but I am going to object now, and I am going to keep on objecting whenever an appropriation is presented here for a public building in a town of less than a thousand people. I think it is not a proper way to spend the public money, especially in times of financial distress such as we just now have.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Virigina a question in relation to the appropriation for Binghamton, which is $100,000. I noticed a moment ago that great care was taken to insert after an item appropriating $1,250 the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary." If it was important to add those words there, why would it not be well to add them here?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I have no objection, Mr. President, to having those words added. I move that the language suggested by the Senator from Washington be inserted at the point to which he refers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 8, line 2, after the sum "$100,000," it is proposed to insert "or so much thereof as may be necessary," so as to read—

Binghamton, N. Y., post office, courthouse, etc.: For site, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the unfinished business.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. President, my observations will be brief, as usual.

Before the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] offered his amendment or substitute I felt, and I think a majority of the Senate felt, that this important matter would be disposed of wisely and honorably and satisfactorily by the enactment of the bill as it came from the committee. The bill was drawn with great care. It met the views of the President and all those now in authority in the Philippine Islands. It has been under consideration and subject to criticism for two years. The committee heard many witnesses whose opinions were entitled to great credit because of their long experience in the islands and their study of the problem which faces us there. If my recollection is correct, not a single witness believed that the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands could maintain a stable and just government now or at any time within four years.

Gen. McIntyre, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, in his testimony before the committee stated the case very clearly, as it seems to me. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] asked him this question:

Is it your opinion that if these people are turned loose to work out their own salvation they will maintain a stable government there and become more and more educated and civilized and competent to take care of themselves?

Gen. McINTYRE. Well, the theory of this bill is that at this time they are not.

Senator REED. I say, is it your opinion that they will, if they are given the right to govern themselves—will they develop along the right lines?

Gen. McINTYRE. Do you mean if they were given independence to-day?

Senator REED. Oh, no; in a reasonable time.

Gen. McINTYRE. Well, I think that would have to be studied very carefully at the time, Senator REED. My disposition is to think that that is somewhat in the future.

There were Senators on the committee who wanted the United States to be relieved of all responsibility in the islands as soon as possible; but I think those Senators felt that we could not abandon now a plain duty to a people whose guardianship we had solemnly assumed. The bill received the unanimous support of the Democrats on the committee, and I think the Republican opposition was mainly directed to the preamble.

From the first the effort of the committee was to get at the wise and safe thing to do in a nonpartisan spirit, and I think the Democratic members of the committee deserve great credit for the wise and impartial way in which they accomplished their work.

But now, Mr. President, the wind has changed, and I think it is blowing from a very dangerous quarter. As soon as I could I submitted the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas to two men in high authority in the military and naval service of the United States. Both of them agreed that for us to retain responsibilities in the islands of any name or nature in conjunction with other nations would be a dangerous thing to do.

Gov. Martin, in his statement before the committee upon this question, gave the following answer in response to this question by the chairman:

Suppose we had an international agreement with Japan, Germany, and Great Britain to maintain the independence of the Philippine Islands, do you think the Philippine Islands would still be a difficulty in case of war or likely to provoke a war?

Mr. MARTIN. I asked that question in Manila not long ago of a gentleman whose opinion I wanted. There were some foreign sailors in Manila who were on what we call the Luneta. That is an open field. It runs between the sea and the city. It is territory that is reclaimed from the sea. He said, "I would expect within a few months some drunken sailors would get into a riot or a fight with some Filipinos on the Luneta, and that that nation would say the Filipino people have violated the terms of the neutrality agreement." I am not opposing neutrality. I am only saying that if I were in charge of it when we leave the islands I would leave under such conditions that we would not be in danger of becoming involved in war.

At another place the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] asked this question:

What is your suggestion with relation to any protectorate or any agreement with other nations with respect to the neutrality of the Philippines?

Mr. MARTIN. I would do anything I could for the benefit of the Philippine Islands, but when we leave I would leave bag and baggage.

Mr. President, it has seemed to me that great benefit would result to the United States by reason of our possession of the Philippine Islands if we could say to the world some day, "We once took a weak people, gave them strength, and let them go." Nobody knows now whether this is possible or not. But if the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas is adopted, or any amendment that gives the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands their independence within the next four years, we may safely conclude that the American lives which have been sacrificed in the islands and the money which has been expended there will go for naught; the most interesting experiment in history, the most laudable and honorable in history, will fail. And what may be much worse, if we quit now the world will say that we quit to save money or because we were afraid to remain.

I regret that the party responsible for this legislation, the framers and proposers of the committee report, have so suddenly changed their position, and I am wondering if history is again to repeat itself and a wise and safe disposition of a most important question is to be abandoned because the party responsible for this bill, at some time in the past, made promises to do an unwise and an unsafe thing.

It is true that the bill as reported by the committee is not in accord with Democratic platform promises. The first time I read the bill after it was referred to the committee it seemed to me that it was in direct harmony with Republican promises and pledges to the Filipinos and directly contrary to Democratic pledges.

President McKinley, in 1900, in Chicago, said:

The War with Spain was undertaken, not that the United States should increase its territory, but that oppression at our very doors should be stopped. This noble sentiment must continue to animate us and we must give to the world the full demonstration of the sincerity of our purpose.

If President McKinley meant anything in 1900, he meant precisely what the committee bill means. Step by step we must do our best to prepare the Filipinos for independence, and when prepared, or after they have had a fair and reasonable chance to prepare, we may honorably let them go. I was congratulating myself that the Democratic Party had abandoned its mistaken views expressed in 1900, and I hoped that nothing would be found in any Democratic platform that would compel the majority to turn from the path of safety and wisdom.

It is true that in 1900 the Democratic platform denounced our occupation of the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico as an act of criminal aggression and Democratic orators accused President McKinley of imperialistic ambitions, but now a Democratic President and those in authority in the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico can not find words strong enough to express their approval of the work done there. I might say, in passing, that if the same high purposes had been accorded to President McKinley in 1900 that are accorded to him now many precious lives would have been saved.

President Wilson, in his message to Congress in 1913, in discussing this matter, referring to our island possessions, said:

These are all matters of vital domestic concern, and besides them, outside the charmed circle of our own national life in which our affections command us, as well as our consciences, there stand out our obligations toward our territories oversea. Here we are trustees. Porto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippines, are ours, indeed, but not ours to do what we please with. Such territories, once regarded as mere possessions, are no longer to be selfishly exploited; they are part of the domain of public conscience and of serviceable and enlightened statesmanship. We must administer them for the people who live in them and with the same sense of responsibility to them as toward our own people in our domestic affairs. No doubt we shall successfully enough bind Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands to ourselves by ties of justice and interest and affection, but the performance of our duty toward the Philippines is a more difficult and debatable matter. We can satisfy the obligations of generous justice toward the people of Porto Rico by giving them the ample and familiar rights and privileges accorded our own citizens in our own Territories and our obligations toward the people of Hawaii by perfecting the provisions for self-government already granted them, but in the Philippines we must go further. We must hold steadily in view their ultimate independence, and we must move toward the time of that independence as steadily as the way can be cleared and the foundations thoughtfully and permanently laid.

Acting under the authority conferred upon the President by Congress, I have already accorded the people of the islands a majority in both houses of their legislative body by appointing five instead of four native citizens to the membership of the commission. I believe that in this way we shall make proof of their capacity in counsel and their sense of responsibility in the exercise of political power, and that the success of this step will be sure to clear our view for the steps which are to follow. Step by step we should extend and perfect the system of self-government in the islands, making test of them and modifying them as experience discloses their successes and their failures; that we should more and more put under the control of the native citizens of the archipelago the essential instruments of their life, their local instrumentalities of government, their schools, all the common interests of their communities, and so by counsel and experience set up a government which all the world will see to be suitable to a people whose affairs are under their own control. At last, I hope and believe, we are beginning to gain the confidence of the Filipino peoples. By their counsel and experience, rather than by our own, we shall learn how best to serve them and how soon it will be possible and wise to withdraw our supervision. Let us once find the path and set out with firm and confident tread upon it and we shall not wander from it or linger upon it.

I had hoped that this vindication of the Republican control of the islands and our purposes in going there and our purpose in remaining there was as sincere as it is well deserved.

Of course I could not forget that in 1900 the same platform that denounced our occupation of the Philippine Islands and Porto Rico as an act of criminal aggression also denounced the gold standard, and that the candidate of the Democratic Party in 1900 had two missions in life, one to free the Philippine islanders and one to free silver and save mankind from crucifixion upon a cross of gold. Fortunately he failed in both. We all agree to that now. Certainly we all agree that it was fortunate that he failed in his determination to abolish the gold standard. This is evidenced by the fact that the Democratic Party in the last campaign claimed all the credit for the wise protection thrown around the gold standard in the new Federal banking act. But I tremble when I recall the fact that the Federal reserve act was greatly marred, and I think largely deprived of its ultimate usefulness, because somebody at the eleventh hour discovered a plank in the Democratic platform which compelled Democratic Senators to vote against a single central bank, a system that would have been free from the domination of political appointees, and which would probably have done business enough to pay running expenses. I was sorry, and I think a great many Democrats were sorry, that the Democratic platform stood in the way of a single-bank system, admitted by all economists to be the best system.

But, Mr. President, not only on the Philippine question and the money question but on many other important questions we find the Democratic Party entering the Republican sanctuary to scoff but later on indicating that they would be glad to remain and join in the hymns did not some Democratic convention creed prohibit it.

I think it may fairly be said that such has been the rule with regard to the treatment of Republican policies by the Democratic Party. First, violent denunciation, than painful uncertainty and symptoms of remorse, then quiet imitation, and then proud adoption if its platforms would permit. The tariff question, by far the most important of all, may be said to be an exception, but even now there are ominous signs that the Democratic Party will claim all the rewards for the discovery of the tariff-commission idea, with all that it promises for the protection of our industrial independence.

But how may we hope that after the new Democratic commission has been created and the Democratic orators in the North have promised protection, as they always do; after the Democratic tariff commission and the Democratic orators have done their election-day duty—how can we hope that the Democratic platforms declaring protection to be unconstitutional, unjust, and undemocratic will not in the future, as in the past, recall and rebind Democracy to the fatal policy of a "tariff for revenue only."

Mr. President, I do not say that this unwise change of front on the part of the majority with regard to the pending measure, this abandonment of a unanimous committee report, is due to a sudden revival of a lost love for platform promises, but I do say that the Clarke amendment is in harmony with Democratic promises and the committee bill is not, and that no other reason of any force has been assigned for this sudden reversion to Democratic platform promises.

It has been urged that we may as well quit the Philippines now as 20 or 30 years from now because it is the edict of history and experience that an ignorant and untrained people can not learn the art of self-government from the bottom up in anything less than centuries of time. My answer is that history presents no experiment that is not the precise opposite of the one we are trying in the Philippines. The South American countries which have been cited as examples for our discouragment all obtained their independence from a despot, and history tells us that the leaders in these new republics either could not maintain order at all or they themselves endeavored to set up Republican despotisms, which are the worst variety known. The South American countries were compelled to learn the art of self-control in the school of assassination and war and hatred, and of course it took centuries, but it does not follow that it would take centuries for the Filipinos to learn to maintain order and good will where peace and good will only are taught. It generally takes a long time for boys of any race to learn good habits where only bad habits are taught, and a very short time for them to learn good habits where only good habits are taught. It is the universal opinion that the Filipinos are not a warlike people.

On the contrary, they are by instinct lovers of peace, and they are quick to adopt wise customs and habits.

Gen. Gordon—"Chinese Gordon," as he is called—speaks thus of the Philippine troops who formed a part of his forces in the China war:

> They are a fine, sturdy body of fellows, faithful and long suffering, bearing hardships without murmurs, plucky and never losing heart in defeat, and considerably superior to the Japanese.

I think Gen. Gordon was a fair judge of human nature in the East.

Sir John Browning, who was consul general at Manilla for a great many years, a most impartial witness and whose testimony is indorsed by Dean Worcester, said with regard to the Filipinos:

> Rarely is an intertropical people a satisfactory one to eye or mind. But this can not be said of the Philippine Malay, who, in bodily formation and mental characteristics alike, may fairly claim a place, not among the middle ones merely, but among the higher names inscribed upon the world's national scale. He is characterized by a concentrated, never-absent self-respect; an habitual self-restraint in word and deed, very rarely broken, except when extreme provocation induces the transitory but fatal frenzy known as "amuck"; an inbred courtesy, equally diffused through all classes, high or low; by unfailing decorum, prudence, caution, quiet, cheerfulness, ready hospitality, and a correct though not inventive taste. His family is a pleasing sight—much subordination and little constraint; unison in gradation; liberty, not license; orderly children, respected parents; women subject but not oppressed; men ruling but not despotic; reverence with kindness; obedience in affection—these form a lovable picture by no means rare in the villages of the eastern isles.

And, again, Ramon Lala, himself of native birth, in his recent work on the Philippines, says:

> All the people are born musicians; even little boys and girls of 5 or 6 years of age play the harp, the guitar, or the piano as if by instinct, while their elders show a proficiency that, when their opportunities are considered, is truly astonishing.

We are told what men are fit for who have no music in their souls. I do not see why we may not expect a capacity for peace and a love of justice in a people who have nothing but music in their souls.

It is my belief that a very few years more would be sufficient to save the Filipinos from themselves. It is possible that they could succeed if abandoned now, but it is doubtful. Ten to 15 years more, however, would, in my opinion, give them a start that they would maintain. Ten to 15 years more of generous treatment on our part would find them with a generation of mature men whose influence would leaven the whole lump. The experiment up to date has met with unexpected success. Certainly we need not quit now because we fear the experiment will fail.

Another reason assigned in support of the substitute is that the Filipinos have an inalienable right to liberty—an inalienable right to work out their own salvation. The word "liberty" is an attractive word, but we know that there are as many kinds of liberty as there are liquids, and their effect upon the human system is about as varied. And we know that the price of the only kind of liberty worth having is sacrifice and bondage to the law. The Mexicans are enjoying the kind that we may give to the Filipinos if the Clarke amendment is adopted. The Mexicans are now exercising their inalienable right to work out their own salvation in the school of murder, arson, and rapine. It can not be done. Where both sides are wrong, both sides must stop and cool off before either side can learn anything worth knowing. Two cutthroats fighting over a stolen purse are not learning the art of self-control. When we substituted our sovereignty for that of Spain, we became morally obligated to keep the peace, and we are not depriving the Filipinos of their inalienable rights when we are honestly trying to teach them how to save their inalienable rights.

Still another reason assigned for the immediate abandonment of the islands is that the retention of the islands constitutes a grave military danger. We took possession of the Hawaiian Islands and Guam Island because they would be of great strategic value in the event of war. Guam is nearer to Tokyo than Tokyo is to Manila. If Japan should desire to make us trouble in the Philippines, our fleet operating from Guam would be nearer to Japan's heart than she would be to the tip end of our tail.

Let us reverse the situation. It is a poor rule that will not work both ways. Suppose that Japan owned 100,000 square miles of land on the Mexican coast and the Hawaiian Islands and another island midway between San Francisco and Honolulu. Would we consider those possessions by Japan a grave military weakness for Japan? If so, why are we struck dumb with terror every time it is hinted that Japan is trying to get a naval station on the coast of Mexico?

The fact is we are afraid of Japan. Japan knows it and enjoys the situation. I give Japan credit for possessing ordinary common sense. And, furthermore, no nation in history has a better record for keeping her word than Japan. She is now helping her English ally because she agreed to. Japan feels that she should be treated as an equal by us because she is in some ways our superior. There is an economic reason why the Japanese should not be allowed to come to this country, and if our statesmen on the Pacific coast would treat that question with tact and fairness I think it could be settled quickly and satisfactorily to all parties.

When the Japanese cruiser Asama was in the Pacific trying to help England overhaul a German cruiser she ran aground in Turtle Bay. The Sacramento press closed its eyes to the truth and announced to the world in red ink and large type that Japan had captured Turtle Bay, mined the approaches to the harbor, and landed 4,000 Japanese soldiers under the convoy of five of her largest battleships. It was, of course, untrue. But it is true that the Pacific coast did not think that Japan was getting land 7,000 miles away for the purpose of acquiring a military weakness.

How can we expect that Japan will respect us or fail to have all the fun she can at our expense if we persist in lying about her and her purposes? If we ever have a war with Japan, it will be due to our assumed superiority and that particular kind of pride which "goeth before a fall."

Mr. President, when this war is over Christian civilization must take an inventory of its assets, and if these assets are to include other things than oppression and hatred and greed, the United States must help furnish them. If the world ever expects to be led out of the wilderness of ignorance and cruelty the United States must point the way. To-day we are hated by the world. We are the international partner who is taking all the profits and sharing none of the losses. Our flag is a rag in Mexico and a dollar sign in Europe. This is unjust to us. We know it is unjust, but there is only one way in which we can establish our innocence. We have been preaching peace and good will to all men for 2,000 years. We must show our faith by our works or take down our sign. We have put our hands to this plow in the Philippine Islands, and we can not turn our back upon it now and escape the consequences. Our mission in the Philippines calls for courage, generosity, and unselfish devotion to the right as God gives us to see the right. If we remain steadfast we will light a candle in the East that will never go out.

Let us quit taking counsel of our fears and be Americans and do our duty. Japan is now at war with several great military powers. She will certainly wait until she knows the result of that war before she begins one that would mean disaster to her in the end. She does not like us, because she thinks we have been caustic and boorish in our treatment of her; but she knows that, provincial and impolite as we may seem to be, we would fight to the last ditch and cripple her for good if she forced us to defend our national integrity.

There is no good reason why we should abandon the greatest and grandest philanthropy in history through fear that Japan or any other nation will interfere with us. We may easily invite ridicule and hostile demonstrations if we leave this great and noble work half done because we are afraid somebody else with an ignoble purpose will make us trouble. And we can excite the admiration and support of the world by taking the position that nothing will frighten us away from a righteous cause.

I am for peace and I am for having all the tools necessary to defend peace, but when I try to look into the future I see nothing but wars and rumors of wars as long as a national conscience is admitted to be an impossibility. If we pass this bill as it came from the committee we will demonstrate to the world the sincerity of our purposes in the Philippines, and we will clearly indicate to the world that we have renounced the doctrine that "might makes right." We will set an example that other nations must follow some time if humanity ever expects to rescue itself from the fangs of war and injustice.

If the President has changed his mind and is now advocating the Clarke amendment because he has inside information that the retention of the islands will hazard our peace with other nations, the Committee on Foreign Relations should be informed, and that committee should take the matter in hand in conjunction with the Committee on the Philippines and a substitute should be prepared that will meet the situation safely and quickly.

If the President is simply following the lead of those Senators who are for the Clarke substitute because it is historically democratic, I desire to say that this is a most inopportune time for such a radical change of front. International conditions are now such that any attempt to operate the provisions in the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas, in so far as they seek to secure the assistance of other nations, will be fruitless.

If the substitute is adopted, and disturbances should arise in the islands at any time within the four-year period, other nations would be much more likely to interfere than if we leave things as they now are. If this substitute should be adopted, it would be very easy for any foreign nation to start an insurrection in the islands. Ten thousand dollars would do it. The different factions would probably invite assistance from the outside. The United States, resenting the ingratitude manifested by the inhabitants of the islands, would probably be compelled to interfere, and a deplorable condition would be possible.

I thoroughly agree with Gov. Martin and others who are, and have been, in a position to wisely analyze the situation. When we quit we should quit "bag and baggage," and the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa, which gives the Filipinos independence after they have voted in favor of it, which, of course, they would do immediately, is far preferable to the substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

If we are going to cross this bridge now, let us cross it and be sure that it is safe while we are on it, and not try to jump a river the opposite shores of which are invisible.

Right in line with the Clarke amendment is the prohibition amendment, which was hastily and, I think, unwisely adopted the other day. That amendment excepts native drinks and permits their use. It was admitted that native drinks contain much more alcohol than those imported. It is very clear to me that the gentlemen interested in the traffic will change the labels on the bottles from "whisky" to "vino," and the amendment will be a dead letter. Some slight adulterations may be necessary to enable the supreme court of the islands to arrive at a satisfactory distinction between native drinks and imported drinks, but the sole effect of the amendment will be to deprive the Philippine treasury of $2,000,000 a year in revenues.

The intentions of the Senators who voted for the prohibitory amendment were of the best, and the intentions of those advocating the Clarke substitute for the committee bill may be of the best; but when we are dealing with matters which affect the vital interests of 8,000,000 people we should know what we are doing, and if we do not know, we should either find out or let well enough alone.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I should like to have printed certain amendments which I propose to offer to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey in the chair). Without objection, that course will be pursued.

The amendments submitted by Mr. HITCHCOCK are as follows:

Amendments intended to be proposed by Mr. HITCHCOCK to the amendment proposed by Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas to the bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands, viz:

Page 1, on line 9, after the word "government," insert the words "republican in form."

Page 1, on line 10, after the word "thereof," insert the words "by peaceful means."

Page 2, on line 3, strike out "date of the approval of" and insert the words "first meeting of the legislature provided for in."

Page 2, on line 9, after the word "doing," insert the words "or that the interests of the United States so require."

Page 2, line 5, after the word "at," insert the words "any time before."

Page 3, line 3, after the word "States," insert the words "and of other countries."

Page 3, line 7, strike out the word "shall" and insert the word "may."

Page 3, line 10, after the word "Philippines," add the following: "The President shall also require the Philippine Government so recognized and established to assume all of the obligations in the Philippines incurred by the United States under the treaty of Paris.

Page 3, line 11, strike out the words "immediately upon" and insert "within four years after."

Page 3, line 24, strike out the last word and all the remainder of the proposed amendment.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Bankhead	Harding	Martine, N. J.	Stone
Brandegee	Hitchcock	Myers	Sutherland
Bryan	Hollis	Nelson	Swanson
Catron	Husting	Norris	Tillman
Chilton	Jones	Overman	Townsend
Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Page	Vardaman
Colt	La Follette	Poindexter	Wadsworth
Cummins	Lane	Shafroth	Walsh
Curtis	Lee, Md.	Sheppard	Weeks
Dillingham	Lewis	Smith, Ga.
Fletcher	McCumber	Smoot
Gore	McLean	Sterling

Mr. CHILTON. My colleague [Mr. GOFF] is detained from the Senate on account of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-five Senators have responded to their names. There is not a quorum present. The Secretary will call the names of absent Senators.

Mr. McCUMBER. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 3 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, January 31, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, January 29, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We wait upon Thee, our Father in heaven, in the sacred attitude of prayer, for inspiration and guidance that with clear vision, high ideals, and patriotic endeavors the work of the hour may be well pleasing in Thy sight and redound to the good of our beloved country. Our minds instinctively turn to-day to one of our martyred Presidents, whose untimely death cast a gloom of sorrow and regret throughout the land. A patriot, a soldier, a statesman, may his work live and ever be an inspiration to men of every creed, of every party, of every calling in life. Blessed be his memory.

And, O God, our heavenly Father, we pray that our President may be protected from violence and the dangers which attend him on his mission throughout the country, that he may return in safety to take up the great problems which confront us and bring them to a happy solution. And Thy name shall be praised forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported the bill (H. R. 10383) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917 (H. Rept. 87), which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] reserves all points of order on the bill.

PERSONAL STATEMENT.

Mr. SCHALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHALL. My friends, I am feeling pretty proud this morning, because through your kindness I now have a page who devotes himself to my personal service. During a recess of the Immigration Committee, whose sessions I have been attending continuously since Wednesday, I was startled when Mrs. Schall read to me in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD that the House had passed a resolution pertaining to me, by which I have been given the services of a page. The thoughtful, big-hearted gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HUMPHREYS], unsolicited and unexpected by me, offered this resolution, and the kindly spirited leader of our side [Mr. MANN] assisted in securing unanimous consent for its consideration, so that I now have the privilege of the services of this page; and I want to say to you gentlemen that I am deeply grateful, because this is only another manifestation of the courtesy and consideration which I have received from everyone since I have been here. To the blind man work is his pleasure. Whatever extends his usefulness widens his enjoyment. By giving me the means of doing more work you have expanded my pleasure, and released me from bondage, and given me a freedom which expands my heart. The helping hands stretched out to me along the way and the cheering voices which come to me from the dark are the inspirations which make bright the otherwise gray days and give me a renewed zest and make life worth the fight. Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth. I have often wished that He had not loved me quite so much; but you know Robert Louis Stevenson says that so long as a man has a friend he is not useless; and I find that I have many friends in this House, and through their kindness in giving me the services of this page they have con-

bined to augment my usefulness. I want to thank you, gentlemen, and perhaps I may be permitted to say to my friends with full pride that—

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud;
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody but unbowed,
And all the menace of the years
Finds and shall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate;
I am the captain of my soul.

[Applause.]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 3144. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Pend Oreille River, between the towns of Metaline and Metaline Falls, in the State of Washington.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, bill of the following title:

H. R. 8235. An act to provide for the maintenance of the United States section of International High Commission.

SENATE BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill and joint resolution of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 3144. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Pend Oreille River, between the towns of Metaline and Metaline Falls, in the State of Washington; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. J. Res. 86. Joint resolution for repair and rebuilding of the levee at Yuma, Ariz.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

PORTO RICO.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for the island of Porto Rico may be given a privileged status. I want to say, if I may be permitted, that this is practically the bill which was unanimously reported from the Committee on Insular Affairs in the Sixty-third Congress, and that it was found impossible to get consideration for it in the House in that Congress. We have again reported this bill unanimously, and the committee are very desirous that it shall be passed by the House before the anticipated congestion comes, because it is exceedingly important to the people of Porto Rico that this bill be passed.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wish to say that I hope no one on this side will object. This bill does not involve any questions except purely those which relate to the administrative government of Porto Rico. As the chairman of the committee has said, the bill is reported unanimously. It has been considered without partisanship. While, of course, there may be some changes made in it upon the floor of the House, there is nothing in it that will, in my judgment, embarrass the progress of business or in any way raise any political question.

Let me say further that the matters in the bill have been so well discussed and thrashed out in the consideration of the bill by the committee, in the last Congress and in this Congress, that, in my judgment, it will take very little time in the House. I hope there will be no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that this bill be given a privileged status. Of course that would have to yield to appropriation bills, revenue bills, and things of that sort. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, let us understand just what the expression "privileged status" means. I think the usual request has been to give a bill the status of a bill reported from a committee which has the right to report at any time, with the understanding that it will not interfere with appropriation bills.

The SPEAKER. The Chair added the condition that it should not interfere with appropriation bills or revenue bills, so there could be no mistake about it.

Mr. JONES. Even if we had the right to do so, it is not the purpose of the committee to interfere with the consideration of appropriation bills. We will certainly not call up the bill without first conferring with gentlemen who have charge of appropriation measures, because we would not want, in any event, to antagonize any measure of that sort.

The SPEAKER. Of course the exception includes Calendar Wednesday and also the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

Mr. MANN. The usual request is to give a bill the privilege of a bill reported from a committee which has the right to report at any time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not want this bill or any other bill to get in ahead of revenue bills or appropriation bills, so far as the Chair is individually concerned.

Mr. MANN. I think it is quite safe to say that the House would not take up this bill ahead of any such bill.

Mr. JONES. I certainly will not ask that it be taken up ahead of any such bill, and we only ask that it be made privileged under the rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 9533) to provide a civil government for the island of Porto Rico be given the status of bills reported from committees having the right to report and call up bills at any time. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the speeches to be delivered to-day under special orders have been concluded the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] be allowed 45 minutes to address the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] may have 45 minutes in which to address the House. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD Secretary Lansing's last note to Great Britain covering the question of seizure of mails and parcel post and the tentative reply of Great Britain thereto; also an editorial opinion in the London Evening Mail on the question of neutral rights.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a note of the Secretary of State to Great Britain on the seizure of the mails and also the tentative note from Great Britain to our Government, and an editorial comment on the matter in the London Mail. Is there objection?

Mr. BARNHART. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Ohio if he will please eliminate the printing of the editorial.

Mr. FESS. If it is necessary for me to have the request granted, I will.

Mr. BARNHART. I will say that the custom of printing newspaper editorials of all sorts and magazine extracts in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of late years made the RECORD so voluminous that there has been a diligent effort on the part of the Printing Committee and House leaders to eliminate as much of such matter as possible. While I dislike to object, I believe I shall have to do so if the editorial is to accompany the notes. I have no objection to the others. The gentleman can get the editorial in in the way of extension of remarks, and there are other ways by which he can get in the newspaper extract.

Mr. FESS. My only desire at this time is to link up with our controversy an opinion which I think is very specific in the London Evening Mail. Of course I will withdraw that if the gentleman is inclined to object to it, but I think the matter ought to be in the RECORD.

Mr. BARNHART. The only difficulty about the matter is that if this is permitted probably to-morrow some other Member may be on the floor asking for unanimous consent to print an editorial in opposition, and then some other Member another, and so it will go. I think the gentleman from Ohio can see the difficulty.

Mr. FESS. Would the gentleman from Indiana object if I made the request to extend remarks in which I will include these articles?

Mr. BARNHART. I should have no objection to the gentleman extending his remarks. A Member of the House has that right, but I should object to extending remarks for the mere purpose of including a newspaper editorial.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I will change the request so that I may extend my remarks, and include in my remarks the Secretary of State's note to Great Britain, Great Britain's reply, and this editorial, which is an English editorial. I would not ask it if it was an American editorial.

Mr. BARNHART. I object.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on the conclusion of the other special orders already entered for to-day the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RICKETTS] have leave to address the House for 40 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the remarks of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RICKETTS] may address the House for 40 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PREPAREDNESS.

The SPEAKER. Under the special order for to-day the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed 10 additional minutes. I do not know that I shall want to use it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that his time be extended from 20 to 30 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday last the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], seized with sudden war hysteria, made a remarkable speech on the propaganda of preparedness. In his remarks he conjured up a terrible dread of an attack upon our country by some foe across the waters, and said that the conflict in Europe would probably last many years while the opposing forces are rapidly destroying one another. If his latter remark is true and the warring nations are being destroyed by this terrible conflict, common sense refutes his fear of danger to our people from invading European armies. This attack against us will not come. England desires our friendship and Germany wishes to retain it. Both these warring nations will not abandon their land and homes to cross the ocean and attack America. Each well knows that this course would leave either country open to attack and ravage by the other while engaged in war here with America. No one really believes that those countries, now becoming exhausted, their armies and navies being reduced to a minimum, are planning to attack us. In the present conflict those countries are crippling and destroying their resources for more than half a century, and must for that period remain helpless to menace us with war.

AGAINST A LARGE STANDING ARMY.

The gentleman, reaching the height of his hysteria, cries out for an Army of 250,000, 300,000—aye, for half a million men. Let me say democracy does not want such an Army and will not tolerate this demand. In my judgment, such plans of militarism have no sanction in the minds and hearts of our people. True, they demand a force for adequate defense. Who will oppose a small addition to the Regular Army for use in times of peace? We should all stand ready to develop the National Guard. Who will object to adequate methods of training officers and providing reserve officers?

Mr. Speaker, I declare myself opposed to this plan of the leader of the Republican Party in the House for a large standing Army, entailing the expenditure of billions of dollars. Democracy has never tolerated this doctrine of militarism thus pressed by the gentleman from Illinois. The Democratic Party never will embrace his wild proposal. It is abhorrent to the ideals of democracy and the genius of our republican institutions. In a recent speech by the distinguished Representative, Mr. DAVIS of Texas, who through a lifetime has defended the rights of the taxpayers and toilers, he foresaw and forewarned the people of the designs of the Republican leaders and war traffickers to burden the country with a stupendous military program.

Mr. Speaker, it is a fact that the Republican leaders and war trust masters are most ambitious for an era of militarism of vast proportions. It is natural for the Republican leaders to feel kindly toward the great trusts. They are the children of the Republican household. They were nurtured and fed by that party till they have become giants. They seek now to praise the President and the party in power while they betray it into the hands of the war traffickers as they magnify the stocks of their friends and allies profiting by their actions. They design to destroy democracy and return to the rule of the trusts.

AMERICA MUST BE NEUTRAL.

Mr. Speaker, this country has confidence in the integrity of purpose and patriotism of the President. It believes he is truly seeking the ways of peace. More than a year ago he warned all Americans to remain neutral in the awful contest across the seas. His warning was wise, and all who love this country should heed it, and I believe most Americans have heeded it. All Americans of whatever race, descent, and extraction should occupy a position of neutrality, but the gentleman from Illinois sounds a discordant note, and his remarks gravely imperil neutrality. Recently the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] undertook to array us against Germany and paraded that Empire before us as an immediate menace and danger to America. In an unwarrantable attack against German-Americans he sought to destroy our thoughts and acts of neutrality. Let us hope that we have heard the last of this and other deplorable and inexcusable assaults by Representatives against the German-American citizens.

FOR AN EMBARGO ON ARMS AND AMMUNITION.

And now comes the great Republican leader, Mr. MANN, and in deliberate and measured words shouts in our ears: "I have much more fear, in the end, of war with England than I have of war with Germany!" Ah, Mr. Speaker, what does his fear, if true, portend? It means that this country, realizing its duty, should place an embargo on the exportation of arms and ammunition and prevent their shipment beyond our limits. I am ready to vote for it to-day, and if the gentleman from Illinois speaks with authority, we should hasten the hour. If we must fight England, let us keep our arms and ammunition at home. [Applause.] Stop the exportation of this deadly traffic, amounting to millions and billions of dollars. If England is to attack us, it is treason to further strengthen her forces from our factories. If he prophesies rightly, must America sit idly by while the J. Pierpont Morgan Syndicate, the money changers, the war trust masters, and their ramifying institutions equip England with modern arms and guns and billions of dollars with which to turn and destroy us as a Republic? No, Mr. Speaker; a thousand times no! Rather let us quickly pass an embargo act. Inexorable logic points the way and forces us to that conclusion. Let us stop the shipment of arms and ammunition to England by proper embargo, restrain the flow of our millions of money to them, and thus diminish their power to destroy us, if we must fight them, as the gentleman from Illinois thinks.

THE PROPOSED BILLION-DOLLAR LOAN TO THE ALLIES.

Mr. Speaker, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, Senator JAS. HAMILTON LEWIS, was right when he protested against the billion-dollar loan to the allies. He said it was unneutral and unwise, and thus took a brave, patriotic, and justifiable stand. I commended him then and congratulate him now on his glorious American spirit. The loan was scaled to half a billion dollars, and I am proud to note that the Morgan Syndicate met difficulties and the loan went below par and was far from being a success. The money and credit of the American people should never be used for such an unholy purpose. In supreme degree such acts are unneutral. By them our citizens become stockholders in that bloody carnival of war, and are thus interested, prejudiced, and made partisans for the warring allies of Europe. It is an unjustifiable thing for Americans to do. And if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is right, having supplied them with money, allowed the War Trust masters to furnish them guns and ammunition, now England is to cross the ocean and fight us with our own resources. If such be the case, the J. Pierpont Morgan Syndicate, the money trust and the war trust masters, have committed a crime against their own country by equipping and supplying an enemy to advance on us. Let this miserable traffic cease. We should no longer fill the maw of the war trust, but pray and hope for peace across the waters.

OUR RIGHTS AS A NATION TO TRADE WITH BELLIGERENTS IN COTTON AND FOODSTUFFS.

And at this point permit me to say that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] are right in their contentions, resolutions, and bills touching our rights as a neutral nation to trade with belligerents in cotton and foodstuffs, and I shall heartily support their measures. By her orders in council, her embargoes, interference with our mails, and unlawful acts England has injured our legitimate commerce in cotton and foodstuffs, and we should find a way by retaliatory enactment and otherwise to require her to vacate those proceedings and restore our lawful trade and respect our rights. It is the duty of Congress to move by resolution or law and furnish relief to our farmers and producers, whose rights have been unjustly and illegally violated by England. By my voice and vote I am ready to assert our cause and defend it through the authority of the American Congress. Let us begin by hastening a bill to prohibit the exportation of arms and ammunition in addition to what the patriotic Senators from Georgia and Oklahoma are endeavoring to accomplish. Yes, Mr. Speaker, let us hurry the passage of the ship-purchase bill. Our farmers want cotton ships and want them now. Their cargoes are tied up and held in our home ports. We should release them and furnish our country a merchant marine to hasten this commerce abroad. The golden opportunity is here, and we should embrace it by the immediate enactment of the Alexander ship-purchase bill and furnish an abundance of cotton ships and vessels for all kinds of lawful commerce.

OUR GERMAN-AMERICAN CITIZENS.

Mr. Speaker, to-day permit me to state my refusal to join in the invidious acrimony indulged in by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] and those acting with him against our German-American citizens. Coming from a State where many men of German birth and descent reside, I am justified in bearing testimony on the floor of this House to their worth. Having resided amongst them, keeping in communication with them, and knowing their ambitions and ideals, I do not hesitate to commend their loyalty and patriotism. It is not strange that their hearts are thrilled and torn with passion and feelings of grief and emotion when their minds go across the waters to contemplate the horrors of bloody battle fields in Europe. They think and dream of their ancestral homes and the kindred left there as the souls of their people are wafted to eternity on the smoke of the bloody battle grounds. Mr. Speaker, is it strange that their minds dwell on these things and that their hearts are there with their kindred? And thus we may view the natives and descendants of any race of people from any land. In our hearts we must make just allowance for their thoughts, emotions, and actions. I shall not now or hereafter sympathize with these attacks on the German-Americans of our country, but repel them.

Mr. Speaker, by the votes of Texas constituencies two great German-Americans sat as Representatives on this floor, Hon. Gustave Schleicher and Hon. Rudolph Kleberg. They reflected credit upon the imperial State of Texas and brought honor to that Commonwealth. Their people mingled their blood with Texan-Americans and produced a noble strain of manhood. We are proud of that commingled blood, and I assert to-day that there is no nobler type of citizenship anywhere than the German-Americans of Texas. In business they are models of honor, industry, and success; in farm life their homes become the charm and admiration of the countryside. As law-abiding citizens they are unsurpassed and perhaps unequaled by any race of people. Inhabiting vast areas of Texas, richer than the Valley of the Nile and more beautiful than the Vale of Cashmere, they have made my native State blossom as the rose. They have brought wealth, happiness, contentment, and unbounded prosperity to our people.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois, the leader of his party in the House, proclaims that he has "much more fear, in the end, of war with England than of war with Germany." Let us pray that it may not come with England or with any country, but if it must come from England or any other foe, when our towns are bombarded and our land invaded you will find the German-Americans under our flag in the very front of battle locking arms and joining step with native Americans, with the Irish, the Dane, the Bohemian, the Italian, the Swede, the Jew, and those of English ancestry as well. [Applause.] Texas will furnish 50,000 German-American youths to save our honor and preserve our country. They will be found intensely loyal in the service of America. If war with England or any other nation must come, in common with all Americans the German-Americans will proudly carry the honor of their country into battle and contribute to repeat our victories of Kings Mountain, New Orleans, and many bloody fields of battle when the crest of England was laid low by our arms. [Applause.]

AGAINST STAMP TAXES AND FOR INCREASING THE INCOME TAX.

Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Illinois and those acting with him are to force upon this country a vast standing army and the hateful doctrine of militarism, we must take account of the method of raising the money by taxation to meet their demands. As for me, I am against odious stamp taxes and think they should be repealed and should not be repeated. [Applause on the Republican side.] Further excise taxes at this time should be eschewed, and we should quickly amend our income-tax laws and extend their provisions and lay the burdens of taxation and great preparedness programs upon the backs of the wealthy. Now will you applaud? When gentlemen on that side of the aisle are brought face to face with a provision to increase the income tax they are as silent as the tomb. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The Democratic Party is entitled to the confidence and support of the country for passing an income-tax measure which has been held constitutional by the Supreme Court and is now in full flower of efficiency and should be utilized to supply the needs of the Treasury. If $80,000,000 from this source is insufficient to meet our present demands, let us double the tax and treble it and force those who enjoy the benefits of good government to contribute their just share of the burden.

And, again, Mr. Speaker, I would levy a tax on the manufacturers of arms and munitions of war, who ship enormous quantities of their products abroad. Their wealth is increased; they are prospering beyond computation and gathering billions of gains, and should immediately bear their part of the increased taxes. They are making immense profits. Mr. Speaker, the way is open, the income-tax law is valid under the Constitution, and in this generation we should turn our thoughts to the consumer, the producer, and overburdened taxpayer and lift the load from his shoulders and place it upon those who are coining billions in war profits, who are piling their wealth to mountain heights, in many instances with ill-gotten gains, and go forward as a great Republic perpetuating equality before the law for every man. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GARD). Under the special order the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOSS] is recognized for 40 minutes.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, seventy-three years ago to-day William McKinley was born in the little village of Niles in the State of Ohio. He remained there until he was about 11 years of age and then moved with his parents to Poland, in the same State, where, as his mother once said, there were better educational advantages for the children. He entered Allegheny College, and when the war broke out—then but 18 years of age—enlisted as a private soldier. He was promoted several times during the war, and at its close returned home with the commission of a brevet major "for gallant and meritorious services at the Battles of Obequan, Cedar Creek, and Fishers Hill." This commission was signed by Abraham Lincoln about one month before his death. Maj. McKinley then took up the study of law. For a time he was in the law school at Albany, N. Y., and later, returning to his native State, was admitted to the bar, and began the practice of law in the city of Canton, which remained his home until his death. He was elected prosecuting attorney of Stark County in 1871, but was defeated for reelection in 1873. In 1876 he was first elected to Congress. In 1880 he was made a member of the Committee on Ways and Means, taking the place of Gen. Garfield, who at that time had just been elected President. In 1889 he became the chairman of that great committee which drafted the McKinley tariff law. In 1890 he was defeated for Congress and in 1891 he was elected governor of Ohio. In 1893 he was reelected. In 1896 he was elected President of the United States. In 1900 he was reelected. On the 6th day of September, 1901, while attending the exposition at Buffalo, he was shot by an assassin, and there lingered between life and death until the 14th, when he died. This briefly is a sketch of his life.

AN INSPIRING CAREER.

His was an inspiring career. Every phase of it has something worthy of emulation and hope to American youth and manhood.

It would be pleasant to retrace the steps of his early boyhood and picture the American home from which he sprang; his early school life and the building of character; his participation in the debates, where he acquired that simplicity and directness of speech which, with a well-modulated voice and a strong earnestness and fervency of expression, made him later one of the most impressive orators of his time. I would like to dwell upon his career as a soldier; the brilliant achievements upon the field; that dramatic incident when, in the flame of battle, amid flying shot and bursting shell, he bore the order of his colonel, afterwards President of the United States, to a distant regiment. And then, too, when Sheridan, on his immortal ride down the valley of the Shenandoah, found him rallying his men, the first to meet him and state definitely the military situation. I would like to relate his struggles as a young lawyer waiting for clients, and later his success at the bar, and his ability as a prosecutor before the courts of Stark County. I would like to speak of him as the citizen, loyal and true, and then as the man, his gentleness and his many amiable traits of character, and particularly his constant devotion to the invalid partner of his joys and sorrows. But time would fail me to speak of the many interesting sides of his life, and so I pass on to his national career.

From 1876 down to the day of his death he was in public life, as a Member of Congress, as governor of his State, and as President of the United States. For twenty-five years he stood in the blaze of the fierce light of public criticism, and there never was a whisper of suspicion as to his integrity, his honor, or character. [Applause.]

HIS INDUSTRY.

McKinley was industrious and concentrated all of his faculties to a given purpose. When he first entered public life he threw his whole soul and energy into it. He made it his business not only to be a good Member of Congress but to be the best Member of Congress that he knew how, and it is this difference between doing a thing well and doing a thing the best you know how that makes the difference between the ordinarily successful man and the eminently successful man. The extra effort which is applied in the latter case has laid the foundation for the great characters in history.

CONCENTRATION OF ENERGIES.

Then, too, the proper concentration of efforts along a given line of action is infinitely better than the diffusion of energies over a whole field of labor, some of which may be profitable and some unprofitable.

McKinley, in one of his speeches, said:

Labor is the only key to opportunity. You are all here to do something—to work out a destiny, to discover the forces of nature and make them serve men's uses and God's purposes.

McKinley while in Congress directed his efforts largely in one direction. He sought to do something, and he found that something to be the mastery of a great political principle which he believed meant more for the happiness of the American people than anything else—protection to American industries. [Applause.] He applied himself day and night to that one thing until he became the master of this great idea.

THE MASTER OF A GREAT PRINCIPLE.

Some of his critics have said that he was a man of one idea, and that was the argument which was frequently used against him when he was nominated for President of the United States and in the campaign following. But it is better to be a master of one thing than to be a master of none. It is better, as Josh Billings once said, "to known less than so many things that ain't so." The men who have been great in history have been masters of an idea. It is written in the Holy Writ that if one is faithful over a few things he will be made ruler over many things. McKinley became a master of the great principle of protection, and linked his personality interchangeably with it, so that when the people of this country beheld him they saw, as it were, in him the principle for which he stood. When the dark hour of financial disaster, want, misery, and unhappiness came the people called unto this man as their only Moses to lead them out of the wilderness, and the master of one idea became the ruler of many. [Applause.] But some of his critics said: "Well, wait; you will find that he only knows one thing." And yet McKinley had acquired an ability to so concentrate his whole self upon the thing immediately before him that to every great emergency during his administration he proved himself more than equal.

The master of the tariff became the master of the currency and the Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy, the master mind of a war between this country and Spain.

POLITICAL HONESTY.

Another characteristic of McKinley was his political honesty. He was honest in his speech; he was honest in his action—he made the one square with the other.

One of the most striking incidents in American political life occurred in the Republican national convention in 1888, held in the city of Chicago. He had come to that convention as a delegate from the State of Ohio, instructed to cast his vote for John Sherman for President. When Sherman's success seemed impossible of realization some of McKinley's friends began to vote for him. Immediately he arose, and, standing upon a chair in the convention, made this speech, so typical of the man:

Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention, I am here as one of the chosen representatives of my State. I am here by resolution of the State Republican convention, passed without a single dissenting voice, commanding me to cast my vote for John Sherman for President and to use every worthy endeavor for his nomination. I accepted the trust because my heart and judgment were in accord with the letter and spirit and purpose of that resolution. It has pleased certain delegates to cast their votes for me as President. I am not insensible to the honor they would do me, but in the presence of the duty resting upon me I can not remain silent with honor. I can not consistently with the wish of the State whose credentials I bear, and which has trusted me; I can not with honorable fidelity to John Sherman, who has trusted me in his cause and with his confidence; I can not consistently with my own views of personal integrity consent, or seem to consent, to permit my name to be used as a candidate before this convention. I would not respect myself if I could find it in my heart to do so or permit to be done that which could even be ground for anyone to suspect that I wavered in my loyalty to Ohio or my devotion to the chief of her choice and the chief of mine. I do not request—I demand—that no delegate who would not cast reflection upon me shall cast a ballot for me.

[Applause.]

After McKinley made that short speech the eyes of the country became riveted upon him. Here was a type of a public man of which the country had seen too little, and from that hour he grew in popular esteem. The people had marked the man.

HIS LOYALTY TO PARTY PRINCIPLES.

Another characteristic of McKinley was his unflinching loyalty to party principle. When other men wavered he did not. When the McKinley bill became a law and the following election brought his party to defeat, loud and angry were the criticisms all over the country against him and the measure for which he stood. But his only reply was that the people had not had time to understand the McKinley law, but they would see in it their salvation. McKinley at this time, in one of his speeches, said:

The friends of protection should not now falter. The fight is only begun. If temporarily lost, it is not to be given up. Courage was never more needed and never more expected by the people from the Representatives than now. It is the demand of the hour and the requirement of the situation.

He was loyal to the principle which he believed to be true, in defeat as well as in victory. The strongest test that comes to men is the test of loyalty to principle when seemingly engulfed in disaster, but the man who courageously stands by his guns will some day become the hero of the hour.

HIS TRUST IN THE PEOPLE.

McKinley was not only true to himself, but he was true to the people. It might be said of him, as he once said of Lincoln, that "he was of the people, for the people, but never above the people." In his speech upon the life of that great man (and does he not draw a picture even of himself) he said:

What were the traits of character which made Abraham Lincoln prophet and master, without a rival, in the greatest crisis of our history? What gave him such mighty power? To me the answer is simple—Lincoln had sublime faith in the people. He walked with and among them. He recognized the importance and power of an enlightened public sentiment and was guided by it.

HIS AMERICANISM.

McKinley was, above all things, an American. [Applause.] His whole life breathed the broad, true spirit of sterling Americanism; he was the product of the American home and was always true to it. He was the product of the American school and believed that education was one of the foundation stones of the Republic. He proved his title as an American patriot in the fierce blaze of war. He was the advocate, as I have said before, of protection to American industries. In a speech, delivered in Boston, he said:

Let England take care of herself; let France look after her interests; let Germany take care of her own people; but let Americans look after America.

[Applause.]

He believed in an Army and a Navy strong enough to protect American interests and American citizens on land and sea wherever they might be. [Applause.] In his last speech at Buffalo, in referring to our merchant marine, he said:

We must encourage our merchant marine; we must have more ships; they must be under the American flag, built, manned, and owned by Americans.

[Applause.]

He further declared in favor of building an Isthmian Canal to connect the two oceans, and also the construction of a cable to the Orient. He realized that the Spanish-American War had opened the door of enlarged responsibilities for us as a Nation; that it had made us a world power whether we liked it or not, and his great speech at Buffalo was undoubtedly his conception of the course which our Ship of State should sail on the larger sea of international opportunity.

FAITH IN GOD EXEMPLIFIED IN LIFE AND DEATH.

McKinley was a man of faith. He had faith in himself, faith in the people, and, above all, faith in God. He believed that nations as well as individuals were but the instruments of the Almighty's power and purpose. He believed that men were raised up in great national emergencies to meet the problems of the hour. He sought by earnest living and Christian prayer to keep himself so close to his Maker as to be ever receptive to the gentle droppings of Divine Will.

Great in life but magnificent in death. What artist in all the world can ever picture this Christian's death? When the assassin had accomplished his murderous intent his hand was raised to stay the angry people, and, with compassion for the wretch, he murmured, "Don't hurt him; God help him." And then the solicitude for his wife, "Don't tell her." And then, a week later, that last "Good-by—good-by, all; God's will, not ours, be done." Such a death immeasurably advanced the cause of Christianity.

HIS GREAT WORK.

He died just at the height of his career. He initiated policies on more important questions during his administration than any President since Lincoln, and he saw more of them accomplished; he saw the great doctrine which he had advocated all of his life become the law of the land; he saw the gold standard permanently established; he saw our country on a firmer financial basis and enjoying greater prosperity than it had ever known before; he saw our flag raised over Hawaii; he saw our Army and Navy victorious on the land and the sea; he saw Spanish tyranny stricken down on the island of Cuba and a new Republic come forth; he saw Porto Rico annexed to this country and the Philippines ours—ours not for conquest but ours to hold as a sacred trust, for civilization, for liberty, and independence [applause]; he saw our Army lead the allied forces on to Pekin and place our flag first above its walls. When international greed would have strangled the Chinaman and dismembered his Empire, he saw American justice, tempered with American mercy, call a halt, and he saw American diplomacy turn the allied forces back again. [Applause.] In the full tide of American prosperity, when American art, science, and industry were at their best, and when the American name was honored and respected the world over as never before, just at that time our President died; died in the fullness of his strength of mind and heart and soul; died when it seemed that everything called unto him to live and to enjoy; died under a Providence that is greater than our own, which only the Christian faith is able to reconcile to the human heart.

When McKinley fell the Nation wept. No President was ever nearer to the hearts of the people. There was no partyism in our national sorrow. While one great party claimed him as its own, yet his great career had long since overleaped the bounds of partisanship. There was no sectionalism in our national grief. When Lincoln died, at the close of the Civil War, time had not sufficed to unite the North and the South and but half the Nation mourned him; but when McKinley died all sections of our common country paid reverence and homage to him who had been the personal embodiment of reconciliation and reunion. At the hour of his funeral, for five full minutes all the activities of the land were hushed to silence. No greater tribute was ever paid to man.

The years have swiftly passed. Many more will come and go. Generation will follow generation, but in the far-off distant future when the recording angel of history, in the clear light of impartial truth, comes to write the names of those who wrought mightily for their country and their fellow men she will place high on the scroll of eternal fame the name of George Washington, the father of the Republic, and then beneath she will write the name of our martyred Lincoln, the preserver of the American Union, and then, dipping her pen once more in the blood of martyrdom, will inscribe the name of William McKinley, the beloved of Presidents, whose life and character through all the ages will be the synonym of the purest and highest Christian statesmanship. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. By special order the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] was to have been recognized next, but an arrangement has been made whereby the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] is to come next. Is there objection to the recognition of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. VENABLE] at this time.

There was no objection.

Mr. VENABLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to address this House with considerable diffidence, because I have heard that it was a tradition of this body that young Members, like children, should be seen and not heard. But on yesterday, when I heard a most excellent speech from the gentleman from Texas, attacking, at least, if not directly, by innuendo, the fundamental necessity of preparedness as enunciated by the President, the leader of the party, and when I saw, furthermore, that no member of his own party rose to his defense, but that it remained for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], not of his political faith, very gallantly to couch his lance in defense and enter the lists, I said to myself: "Since I am a recent recruit from the body of the people, I will seek an opportunity to express to this House what I believe to be the thoughts and the ideas of at least a majority of the people of the fifth congressional district of Mississippi upon this question."

I think there has been much confusion of thought and much confusion of exposition by reason of the fact that in the discussion of this subject there have been linked together several unrelated subject matters. The necessity of preparedness is one question; the sources from which we are to get the revenue to carry a preparedness program into effect is another. The subject matters that shall be taxed is a question that is totally unrelated to the question of whether a necessity exists at all for further preparation on the part of this Government to protect itself in case of war. I think that in the discussion of these questions and in their decision, if not on the floor of this House at least in our own minds, we should consider them in their due order.

If we decide that there is no necessity for further preparation on the part of this Government to maintain American institutions and American rights, then the question of how the taxes shall be raised or should be raised becomes purely academic and theoretical. If, on the other hand, we do decide that a wise public policy, patriotism, and common sense and a learning of the lessons of the current events of the day demand that this country should make further preparation, then there will arise for decision by this body the question as to how the revenue is to be raised.

Personally I am in hearty accord with the position taken by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] in his speech yesterday in that I think that money should be raised by taxing those things and those people who are best able to bear the burden. I think it is fundamentally just and right. I know it is the only practical method of carrying out the patriotic idea of putting this country in a state of so-called preparedness.

As I understand it, the gentleman from Texas spoke fundamentally on the question of whether or not there be any necessity whatsoever of any further increase in the armament of this country, and to that I shall address my remarks. As I understand the views as I have heard them expressed since I have been in Washington, gentlemen differ about this question for several reasons. Some hold to the position that no further preparation is necessary because this Government is already sufficiently prepared.

Others hold that no further preparation is necessary, because there will not be and can not be any war with any European country, advancing as an argument for that position that those countries will be exhausted when the present struggle is over, and hence they say any further preparation on the part of the Government would be a useless expenditure of public money and a useless burden placed on the shoulders of the taxpayers of the country. I am of the opinion that further preparation is absolutely necessary. I realize the fact that this is not a partisan question. I realize the fact that this is a question which presents itself to the patriotic heart of the Members of this body and to the patriotism of the citizenship of all this broad land. But I regret exceedingly to learn that while some of we Democrats are constantly saying that we do not doubt the intelligence and the patriotism of the present leader of our party, yet we, by our speeches and our insinuations and by reiterating the statement that the idea of "preparedness" is a propaganda of the great ammunition forces of the country and the great moneyed trusts and multimillionaires, thereby connect together in the minds of the American public the actions of the President with the actions of the forces seeking their own self-aggrandizement. The one is a denial of the other, a misrepresentation, unconsciously I know, of the position of the President, but one, to my mind, much to be regretted. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, my time is limited, and I must mention very briefly the considerations which lead me to the belief that further preparation is absolutely necessary on the part of the Government. I think there is a fundamental principle as a primary premise, and that is that every Government worthy of the name exists solely and alone for the purpose of protecting its citizens in their lives, their liberties, and in the possession and enjoyment of their property. No Government which does not do that can be worthy of the name, and any Government which refuses to do so in a proper case as against aggressions of foreign Governments simply abrogates all functions of government in that specific instance and denies any excuse for its existence. [Applause.] That, I believe, is a fundamental principle that will be agreed to by both sides of the House.

Understand, I do not mean that because some bandits totally unconnected with the Mexican government happened to kill several American citizens that that means that we should declare war upon Mexico. I am talking about aggressions by foreign Governments and not aggressions by individuals which were against the laws of their own country. But what I have stated, broadly speaking, as I understand it, is the fundamental principle of all government. That is the reason that government exists; that is the only excuse, as I understand it, for its existence. How can a Government do that, if that be true? There are several possible ways. One is to be prepared, if necessary, to use force in the vindication and the rights of its citizens and its institutions. Another is by persuasion through diplomatic negotiations, by the warfare of wits and reason rather than the warfare of armies and navies. Sometimes the one succeeds; sometimes the battle is won on the battle field of diplomacy, but sometimes that fails. If all men were reasonable, if all men were "moderns" in the sense that they had reached the point of the highest ethical culture, if all men were amenable to reason, if all men had "modern" consciences and a due regard for right and law, with power of moral perception to enable them to see the shadowy line that sometimes exists between what is right and true and what is wrong and false, all the battles and conflicts between individuals as well as nations could be settled by that method. But, unfortunately, while men of the present age all live in the modern time and are moderns in a sense, you can hardly find an audience composed of several hundred men where you do not find different stages of intellectual and ethical culture, reaching from the stone age to the present. You have men to-day in American life, gigantic industrial forces they are, who have the ethical sense of a "Blue Beard" or a "Robin Hood." In almost any social assembly in Washington to-day of any size, if you could analyze the minds and ethical senses of those individuals, you would find cases of atavism, where, ethically considered, some gentlemen are living in the stone age instead of the present time, and they use the methods of the stone age in their business and in their government.

That is the actual situation, as I see it, in the world to-day. Now, you can not reason with a man unless he will reason with you. It is not possible to reason with a man and show him the right and expect anything unless at the same time that man is willing to do the right when once he sees it.

Now, what is true of individuals is true of nations. Nations do not always, unfortunately, decide their controversies on the basis of what is right and what is wrong. Most of the wars that are caused in the world are caused for financial and commercial aggrandizement, or possibly the glory of some reigning dynasty. And when a country comes in contact with forces like that, which essentially is unreasoning, that country can not accomplish its purpose and defend its rights in the name of diplomacy, because you can not reason with a man or a nation that is not willing to reason, and you can not settle disputes with a man or a nation which is not ethically willing to do what is right after the right has been decided. Hence, there come times in the history of all nations when an appeal to force or a threat to appeal to force is sometimes necessary; not always the actual appeal but the threatened appeal, the ability to appeal; for the reason that when you are dealing with a nation which does not care anything about the right, which does not care anything about reason, you must then defend your right by an appeal to some agency for which that nation has respect. [Applause.] So every nation—I lay it down as a fundamental proposition—must make some preparation to provide for those times in its history when an appeal to reason and an appeal to ethical standards are unavailing, and when the only thing that will avail is an appeal to force, either actually used or threatened. The founders of our Government and the various administrations that have followed one after another in its history have recognized this principle. Hence, we have an Army and we have a Navy. I think the use of the word "preparedness" or "unpreparedness" is an unfortunate use of terms. Every one is in favor of being prepared; no one is in favor of being unprepared. If unpreparedness be a virtue, then the more unprepared we are the better it will be, and the logical thing to do is to take our Navy out into the midst of the ocean and sink it and disband this Army we now have and be totally unprepared and entirely virtuous. [Applause.] But no one contends for anything of this character. As a matter of fact, we are in favor of being prepared. That is not where the difference lies. The difference lies in this: That some say we are prepared enough already. Others say we are not prepared but that we have no need for preparation; we will have no war, and hence preparation is unnecessary. Still others say our preparation is not sufficient.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if it be a true and fundamental principle that this Government and other governments must make some preparation in the event of the contingencies arising when an appeal to reason and ethical standards will not avail, it follows logically that the preparation must be adequate in view of conditions. Now, are we sufficiently prepared? Do you know personally? No. Is there any Member of this House who knows personally? No. Is there any Member of this House who has spent as much as a week investigating the forces that this country has at its disposal? No.

Mr. DIES. Oh, Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman overstates that. There are many who have spent many months studying practically this very question.

Mr. QUIN. And I desire to say that I have studied the subject constantly for three years, and spent many months on it.

Mr. VENABLE. If these are exceptions, I am very glad to hear them. [Applause.] I have spoken of the general body of this House, and my statement is but a statement of individual opinion, and if I have done the gentlemen an injustice, I most humbly apologize. Taking the body of this House as a whole, with men on other committees, engaging themselves day after day and hour after hour in the consideration of other governmental matters, as a matter of fact they do not know anything about the Army and about the Navy of this country.

Mr. DIES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VENABLE. My time is very limited, sir; I would like to yield to the gentleman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. VENABLE. They know but very little about the actual fighting and physical condition of this country. They do not know what industrial forces can be organized, and we must remember when wars come hereafter they will be wars of millions of men and millions of money. The European war has taught one lesson, and it has taught it thoroughly, that hereafter when nations go to war they are going to war by millions. No nation hereafter, a first-class power, will go to war except with the understanding that all of its resources, industrial, social, economic, and moral, shall be put behind the movement, because science has so endowed the art of killing that any nation which does not do that can not possibly survive.

Now, we Congressmen know nothing about it. I say we do not. I think it would take years of study—with all due respect to the magnificent talents of the gentleman who asked me to yield—to know much about the question, for I am not speaking of knowing a thing from magazine articles and the opinion of some other man, but I am talking about knowing the thing itself, not simply the opinion of this man and that man, but going to the original sources and knowing the actual thing as it actually is. No; the only means of knowing the present "preparedness" of this Nation are the men, the patriotic citizens, those gallant gentlemen who are soldiers and sailors by profession, who have devoted their lives to the service of this country, who daily and hourly declare in their uniforms and by the flash of their scabbards that if necessary they are willing to lay down their lives in defense of American property and American institutions. Upon their judgment we must perforce rely, and they say from their technical, accurate experience that we are not prepared to meet any first-class power of Europe.

Now, why be prepared? Is it wise to make this preparation? What is the purpose of it? I have heard arguments which said it would commit us to a policy of militarism; that soon we will be plunging into war; that the psychological effect of preparation would be such; that now, being peaceful and liberty-loving, we will then become warlike in spirit and, like Alexander, dream dreams of worlds on worlds to conquer. Sufficient preparation is the best guaranty of peace. [Applause.] That is the purpose of the fundamental idea of the President. He calls upon the country to make reasonable preparation, and he does not say that you have to adopt exactly his program. His cry is for reasonable preparation. It is for the President to suggest and Congress to enact, but he calls upon this country not as a partisan, not appealing to party, but to patriotism, calling upon Democrats and Republicans alike, as all Americans worshiping at a common altar of American institutions, to make some adequate preparation, not for the purposes of war but in order that we may have peace. [Applause.]

Now, is that true? Will it have that effect? Mr. Speaker, it has been my pleasure during my lifetime to be intimately and personally acquainted with two dogs. One of them was a little rat terrier who had a little tail curled over his back like a little corkscrew. That little dog's life was one long sad wail of misery. He was kicked by every man he met and whipped by every dog he ran across. I knew another dog, a magnificent gentleman of his race. His magnificent head reared itself above his shoulders as the head of a lion. He was thewed and sinewed like a gladiator, and his curved forelegs and staunch haunches spoke of tremendous strength. He lived his life respected by dogs and men. [Laughter and applause.] I owned him for five years, and I caressed him when I felt like kicking him. [Laughter.] Why? He was a prince of the house royal, a gladiator of his kind, and he was "prepared." [Applause.] As a result of that he lived his life in peace, unwhipped by any dog, and not having any dog to whip, admired of mankind, and caressed by all, and finally sank to sleep with all his institutions intact [laughter] and his personal and property rights thoroughly respected. [Laughter.]

The answer to the question of whether or not preparedness makes for peace is one of psychology. What is true of dogs is true of men. These gentlemen are from various parts of the Union, some from large cities and some from small villages. It used to be down in my country, in Mississippi, that sometimes there lived in a community two men who were known as "fighting characters," who took a pride in having whipped nearly everybody in the entire community, but the first case is to be recorded on the pages of American history where two fighters in the same community ever fought one another. They had a wholesome respect for one another's prowess. They knew what it meant, and as a result they were always for peace and for adjusting their differences on a reasonable basis.

Is it true among nations? China, poor old China, gets her coat tail kicked whenever anyone has the inclination. Maybe that is a slander on the Chinaman, because I recollect now he does not wear a coat. [Laughter.] Whenever any country wants a port in China they take it. Has not that been the history of that country? But whoever took a German port or an English port? Why? Because those countries were prepared to defend the integrity of their territory, and as a result of it they have never been called upon to do so.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have heard much about the cost and expense. While I think the classes that should pay this cost of "preparedness"—since they get the most protection, since they have the most at stake, since they would lose the most if war should come—are those who are of wealth, upon whom fortune has smiled, who can pay the tax without reducing their standard of living, without causing suffering in the restriction of their mode of life in anywise whatever. Yet even though we had to pay, all of us, a little money, taking us in the aggregate, we would not know we had paid it. It is much better to spend a few dollars than to spend much blood. [Applause.]

Now, as I understand it, the great argument against any increase in the Army or the Navy is that it will create a great military spirit, if that is what I understand gentlemen to mean by militarism. Mr. Speaker, that question was answered nineteen hundred years ago by the greatest Teacher that the world has ever seen. He enunciated a great principle of life when He said: "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

Mr. Speaker, it is not the martial music nor marching of tens of thousands of troops; it is not the roar of cannon; it is not the bugle call; it is not the military airs wafted on the breeze that creates a military spirit; it is the "thinking of men." I grant if we armed this country with thoughts of aggression; I grant you that if we played martial music while having in our minds and hearts the idea of taking territory and attaining military glory; I grant you that if as we drilled and heard the bugle call and martial airs we marched to the tune of this martial music dreaming dreams of conquest and of placing our heels upon the necks of subject peoples, we would cultivate in ourselves a military spirit, not because of the drilling but because of the thinking. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." But if, on the contrary, we listen to the martial music and the bugle call and we march in serried ranks upon the drill grounds of this Nation dreaming dreams, not of conquest, not of war, but thinking thoughts of home and fireside and peace and liberty, thinking thoughts of defense, thinking thoughts that we are doing this for the purpose of defending our homes and our firesides, thinking thoughts that we are doing this to prepare ourselves not for aggression but for defense, preparing ourselves not for conquest, but, if necessary, if need should come, to defend our homes, our firesides, our institutions, and our right to work out our own destiny in the history of the world, untrammeled by foreign powers, then instead of having inculcated in us a military spirit we will become more liberty loving. [Applause.] No man who has made up his mind that he is willing to die for liberty would ever be the man to take liberty from his fellows. [Applause.]

No man who has dedicated his life, his thoughts, and his desires to the defense of his own home and fireside will be the invader of the home and fireside of another. You have a large Navy now, comparatively speaking. Do you think the existence of that Navy has cultivated any military spirit in the American people? It has not; and yet, if we are logical, if a large Navy will cultivate it, then a smaller Navy would necessarily cultivate it—to a less extent, but still cultivate it. There have been a half million young men of this country who have been trained and drilled in the National Guard. I have been a member of it during my life. I have marched 12 or 15 or 20 miles a day sometimes, and had a pack on my back weighing 90 pounds. I have drilled; I have fought sham battles; I have gone into camp; I have listened to martial music. Half a million of us have done the same thing. Have you heard the National Guard declare that we should declare war upon somebody in order that the National Guard might have glory? No; and why? Because the central idea and purpose of the National Guard has been home defense; and while we drilled, and while we tried to equip ourselves, and while we listened to the roar of the cannon and the rattle of the machine guns there was burning in our minds the idea that we were training ourselves for the defense of home and fireside and country in order that we might have peace and the opportunity to work out our own destiny in the history of the world. [Applause.] And instead of cultivating in us a military spirit there has been cultivated in us a love of our country.

As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

Mr. Speaker, I come from an old-fashioned State. They still read Burns and Scott and the romances of the past. There is a degree of romanticism among my people. They are not wealthy in this world's goods, comparatively speaking, but they are pure-blooded Americans. They have never espoused a cause in their lives that they have not been willing to lay down everything for, as they have demonstrated on a thousand battle fields. When they look upon the flag that floats from the dome of this Capitol, they see in that flag a statement of the fact that behind them, protecting them, over them, and sheltering them stands the great American Nation, and they love that flag now because it symbolizes to them their Government. They are not wealthy according to the standards of other States, but I want to say that I believe I voice the sentiment of that country and the people of my State when I say that I believe that if this Congress should decide, after deliberation and with all the facts before them, that this country needs further and other preparation, you will find the Mississippians standing squarely behind the Democratic administration. [Applause.] And one thing I do know, and that is that they believe that we have in the White House the greatest President we have had since the time of Thomas Jefferson [applause on the Democratic side], and I do know that the people down there, and I believe in the South generally, expect their Representatives here to hold up his hands. [Prolonged applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the temporary absence of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], who has the next allotment of time, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RICKETTS] for 20 minutes.

Mr. RICKETTS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TAXATION.

Mr. RICKETTS. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, for 40 days I have attended the sessions of this House and have answered to every roll call and listened to the many able addresses that have been delivered upon the floor of the House, touching the merits and demerits of the questions which have been brought to the attention of the House.

At the opening session of this House our distinguished and esteemed Speaker, Mr. CLARK, whom we all, universally, respect and admire for his fairness and scholarly attainments, in accepting the high honor which the majority of this House conferred upon him, said to the House that he "hoped this Congress would be a working Congress and not a talking Congress." He evidently had in mind at the time the great responsibilities that were resting upon us in our individual and collective capacity. He certainly clearly understood the critical condition of the affairs of this Nation, and the enormity of the great problems and questions with which this Congress would have to deal in providing for our present and future necessities.

Probably no Congress in years has had to do or to deal with questions that were of such vital importance to this Government, to the people of this Nation, and to our institutions. That the affairs of this Nation are in a critical condition can not be successfully denied. The facts are supported and sustained by departmental and documentary evidence, and are conclusive.

Now, it is not my purpose to criticize, personally, any person connected with the present administration. I clearly understand that political parties are necessary to good government, and I further clearly understand the wide difference of opinion between the two great parties of to-day with reference to the methods and principles upon which the affairs of this Government must be managed and directed, and with this knowledge at hand I have only in view, at this time, to present to this House some facts and figures which, in my judgment, will in a measure tend at least to support my contention with reference to the methods proposed for raising revenue by the present administration.

An important part of President Wilson's message to Congress on December 7 last dealt with the present state of the Treasury, and of the fiscal problems which the next year will probably disclose. The President said:

> Assuming that the taxes imposed by the emergency revenue act and the present duty on sugar are to be discontinued, the deficit in the general fund of the Treasury on the 30th day of June, 1917, will be nearly $235,000,000. Adding $50,000,000 for a safe working balance for the Treasury and $12,000,000 to meet the usual deficiency estimates, the total deficit would rise to $297,000,000.

How to raise sufficient revenue to meet the ordinary expense of the Government and the extraordinary expenses of the proposed plans of "preparedness" is the fiscal problem which presented itself to the President. The President's suggestions were that, "All of the present taxes or their equivalents" be continued. That is, that the present customs duty on sugar be retained and the emergency revenue act be reenacted. In addition to this, retain all other revenue acts now in force. But, this plan, as the President pointed out, will still leave "a total deficit of some $112,000,000."

He asked, "How shall we obtain this new revenue of $112,000,000?" He opposed the issuing of bonds for the purpose, because, as he said, "Borrowing is shortsighted finance." Mr. Speaker, if "shortsighted finance" had not gotten in its deadly work when the Underwood-Simmons tariff law was passed the revenues of this Government would have been ample and the recent report of the Secretary of the Treasury would have shown a surplus instead of a deficit. [Applause.]

The President says that "We should pay as we go." We, the people, have been unable so far, during this administration, to "pay as we go," and now new forms of taxation are proposed, or, rather, suggested, in order to relieve us of the present financial embarrassment. With 61.6 per cent of all imports entering our ports absolutely free of duty; with the average ad valorem rate of duty on total imports only 12.8 per cent; and with $41,000,000 less of revenue from customs duties than we had in 1910, the President calmly advises Congress that "The new bills should be paid by internal taxation." He suggested that we draw the greater part of the needed revenue from income taxes, by lowering the present limits of exemption and the figures at which the surtax should begin to be imposed, and by increasing the surtax itself.

He intimated that there are many additional sources of revenue that can be resorted to, apparently forgetting for the moment that if there are numerous sources of revenue in this country it is because industries have been fostered and built up by a protective tariff.

Forms of taxation recommended are: The tax of 1 cent per gallon on gasoline and naphtha, 50 cents per horsepower on automobiles and internal-explosion engines, a stamp tax on bank checks, 25 cents per ton on pig iron and on fabricated iron and steel.

I can not agree with the plan proposed by the President. I will vote against any measure that may be presented to this House or to this Congress that even tends to increase the present burden of direct taxation upon the American people. There are other ways and means by which this revenue, so essential at this time, may be raised that will not in any way tend to increase the burden of direct taxation. The American people to-day are groaning under the great burden of taxation, and, so far as I am concerned, I shall not cast a vote for a measure that will even tend to increse that burden.

Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic Party, believed in reducing internal taxation and that as much of our revenue as possible should be raised from customs duties. In Jefferson's time 83 per cent of the revenues of the Government was raised by customs duties. To-day less than 39 per cent of the revenues are so raised.

To place a direct tax on automobiles per horsepower is unjust and unfair. The automobile has come to stay, and is a necessity. At the time of its incipiency the automobile was more ornamental than useful, being frail and unreliable, but time has improved it until to-day it is one of the most rapid and economical means of transit and is being used by men in all stations in life. To the rich and poor alike it is advantageous and useful in numerous and various ways.

In nearly all, if not quite all, of the States of this Union a license tax is imposed upon owners of automobiles. The owner is required to pay an annual personal tax, according to its real value. He must, of course, pay for repairs and power—gasoline or electricity—and should the plans of the present administration, or the recommendations of the present administration be carried out, he will be required to pay in addition 50 cents per horsepower as an additional direct tax. In the congressional district that I have the honor to represent, there are about 6,000 registered automobiles, as shown by the records of the auditor of State, the average horsepower of which is at least 30. Now, a direct tax of 50 cents per horsepower would mean $15 per year that each and every owner of an automobile in my congressional district must pay as a direct tax for the purpose of raising revenue with which to liquidate the current expenses incident to the running of this Government. In my district alone the automobile owners would be required to pay the sum of $90,000 annually, to say nothing of the tax of 1 cent per gallon on gasoline. On the farms, where automobiles, tractors, and power machines of all kinds are found, this direct-tax proposal to tax automobiles and gasoline would be just about as welcome as a black frost in June.

In addition to the present war tax, if the tax program, as suggested and recommended in the message of the President, should be executed by Congress, it is estimated that in my State—Ohio—the taxpayers would be required to pay annually $9,834,921, and that tax would be distributed as follows: Bank checks, $2,500,000; automobiles, $2,772,790; pig iron, $1,320,856; steel, $2,352,668; and gasoline, $888,607. This estimate was arrived at by taking the figures of the United States Bureau of Commerce for the iron and steel production in Ohio; the statistics of State Automobile Registrar Walker on the horsepower of automobiles; the figures of clearing-house associations on bank checks; and the report of State oil inspectors on gasoline inspection.

The bank clearings for the eight largest cities in the State of Ohio totaled $3,263,391,813 in the year 1914. Bank officials say that this represents about one-third of the face value of checks issued each year, as many are cashed in the bank upon which they are drawn, while smaller Ohio cities, having no clearing-house associations, are not included in the above estimate. Taking $10,000,000,000 as the total clearings, the number of checks was arrived at by dividing the sum by 40. Bankers in several cities, after watching the business for a day, agreed that the face value of checks average $40. This makes 250,000,000 checks a year's output. Although the President does not stipulate the amount of the tax on bank checks, it is believed and this estimate is made upon the assumption that the tax will be 1 cent for each check.

The tax of 50 cents per horsepower on automobiles, motor cycles, and internal-explosion engines was not hard at which to arrive. Registrar Walker estimated that the average horsepower of 182,000 automobiles in Ohio is 30. Although some machines are 90 horsepower, one-third of the total number are of the make which has but 22-horsepower engines, while motor cycles average 4 horsepower.

The pig-iron production in Ohio was 5,283,426 tons in the year 1914, according to the Government statistics. At 25 cents per ton, the revenue would be $1,320,856. The last annual figures on steel production gives the total as 4,705,337 tons, which includes steel made by all processes—Bessemer, open-hearth, basic, acid, and crucible. At 25 cents per ton, this would net a tax of $2,353,668.

Ohio is hit particularly hard by the tax on steel and iron ore, as its location midway between the iron ore and coking-coal fields, its natural deposits of crude oil and natural gas, and the excellent transportation facilities afforded make Ohio one of the leading States in this industry.

The report of the State oil inspector shows 1,393,883 barrels, or 71,088,033 gallons, of gasoline and naphtha were inspected in 1914 before being sold. At 1 cent per gallon, the tax on this would be $710,880; but the output of gasoline and naphtha in Ohio for the year 1915 is nearly 25 per cent larger than it was in the year 1914, and consequently the revenue would be, in fact, $888,607.

This, of course, is an estimate, approximately correct, and these figures show just how the taxpayers of my State and of the congressional district which I have the honor to represent would be affected in dollars and cents. Think of this enormous additional burden being placed upon the taxpayers of this Nation for the sole purpose of raising revenue in order to carry out the program and plans of the present administration.

I desire here to quote from the speech made in the United States Senate by FRANCIS G. NEWLANDS, of Nevada, on January 11, 1916, in which he said:

> Mr. President, the Democratic Party, after nearly three years of power, is about to enter upon a presidential campaign, in which its acts of legislation and administration will be up for criticism or commendation. The Democratic Party is within a year of an election which will determine whether its lease of power shall continue or end. We have the time and the power before the next election to do every beneficial thing we ought to do and to undo every mistaken thing we ought not to have done. It is a time for mutual candor and counsel and for efficiency of methods in devising and carrying out a definite legislative program.

And after reviewing what this administration has done in the way of legislation, and after clearly admitting the inefficiency of the Underwood-Simmons tariff law with reference to the production of revenue, and that the apparent prosperity of this country was wholly and entirely due to the great war now raging in the Eastern Hemisphere, and after admitting that were it not for the revenue secured to this country by reason of the exports of war materials, munitions, and provisions to the belligerent countries this country would be suffering from general business depression, and after admitting that "if that war soon comes to a close and the manufacture of munitions ends, and, added to this source of unemployment, our markets, now protected by the war from invasion, are overwhelmed with the cheap products of the nations just emerging from the war and eager to get back their gold, we may have not only an aggravated industrial depression to meet, but a financial condition fruitful of paralyzing caution." And, after suggesting the many things at are to be done by this Congress in carrying out the administration program, he says:

But where is the money to come from? My answer is additional taxation. This country is not bankrupt. It will readily respond to intelligent taxation which will be spent in a general way for the welfare of the country, and particularly if a large part of the additional taxation is for public works, which will secure employment during a period of depression. Regarding taxation, I am glad to observe that the administration favors the continuance of the existing sugar tax. The duty on sugar has always been a revenue duty. There has never been a period in the history of this Republic that a sugar duty has not existed, except during McKinley's administration, when a bounty was substituted for a tax. This will prevent our revenues from being depleted to the extent of $30,000,000 more, as is threatened by existing legislation.

I most heartily commend Senator NEWLANDS for his frank admission made in that speech. These admissions, coming from a Democratic Senator of most excellent character, whose integrity is above reproach and whose every word is as pure as gold, is certainly conclusive proof that the present administration's program has been a most complete failure.

In this same speech the Senator, in the second paragraph from the bottom of page 11, again suggests that—

The second method of increasing our revenues is to extend the area of our income tax. All incomes of single men below $3,000 and of married men below $4,000 are now exempt. The limit should be reduced to $2,000 or $1,500, and from this source fifty or sixty million dollars more revenue annually can be derived.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is true that all incomes over and above $3,000 and $4,000, respectively, are now taxable under the income-tax law. This is another method of direct taxation legislated by the present administration. To this law I am also opposed. The exemption is entirely too low. It is the man with the ordinary income, the comparatively poor man, who suffers by reason of this law. The rich man, who is able to cover up or hide away his money, escapes the operation of this law, and the burden falls upon the man who is able to earn only an ordinary salary. Every Member of this House has had a taste of the income tax. You know what it means to have your congressional incomes tolled. Please keep in mind that this is another method of direct taxation about which I am talking.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915, shows that—

The total receipts from personal income tax were $41,046,162.09, an increase of $12,792,627.24 over the preceding year. The total receipts from corporation income tax for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915, were $39,144,531.71, a decrease of $3,983,208.18. The increase in the personal income-tax receipts was due, in a great measure, to the fact that the collections for the fiscal year 1915 were for a period of 12 months, whereas the collections for the fiscal year 1914 was for 10 months, and also to the further fact that the administration of the law is now working more smoothly.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in commenting upon this law, on page 17 of his report, says:

Many inaccurate returns are made, some deliberately and some ignorantly, and there are, without doubt, wholesale evasions of the law throughout the country.

This statement bears out my contention that the burden of the income tax is more largely borne by the man of ordinary wealth and limited means than by the rich.

In this same report, at pages 20 and 21, the Secretary says:

With the restoration of peace in Europe the customs duties collected under existing laws will gradually increase as imports from the countries now at war are gradually restored to a normal basis. How long this process will take, no one can say, nor can anyone predict when the European war will end. Our obvious duty in the meantime is to provide the revenue of the Government from sources affected as little as possible by foreign war or external disturbances. This we can readily do, as stated in another part of this report, without imposing heavy burdens upon the people of the country.

It will be observed that the Secretary of the Treasury does not suggest where in this report the remedy that he suggests can be found, but by an examination of the report you will find his recommendation on page 51, and I quote him from this page:

It is evident that the emergency revenue measure and the existing duty on raw sugar can be continued with advantage.

This being done, we now have to consider the new forms of taxation which must be resorted to for the purpose of providing the additional revenues required, the major part of which is needed to carry out the large program for national defense.

I shall have something to say on the question of "national defense" possibly later on in this session, but I do not care to mix my subjects here. I am now endeavoring to discuss internal taxation, or direct taxation, and the effect thereof upon the taxpayers of this Nation.

And, again, the Secretary says:

The total amount so required for the year 1917 is $112,806,394.22, including $25,000,000 of expenditures for the Panama Canal in each of the years 1916 and 1917.

And, again quoting from this report, the Secretary says:

With the return of peace in Europe the revenues from customs will undoubtedly increase again, and in time a large part of the customs revenues lost in the fiscal year 1915 will be restored.

But what about the customs revenues lost in the year ending August 1, 1914, when the Underwood-Simmons tariff law had been in full force and effect for about a year, and before the war had broken out? In that year the loss of revenues amounted to more than $260,000,000, and this was before the war had been declared or had begun in Europe, or before the effect of the war could have been felt in this country.

Further quoting the Secretary, he says:

The entire amount of the deficiency, estimated on the basis hereinbefore stated, for the fiscal year 1917, amounting to $112,806,394.22 (which includes payment of Panama Canal expenditures for 1916 and 1917 from the general fund, and provides for the maintenance of a general fund working balance in the Treasury of $50,000,000) can easily be raised by internal taxation without appreciable burdens upon the American people.

[Applause.]

This rank and reckless statement of the Secretary of the Treasury and conclusion of his will not be accepted by the American taxpayers as even tending toward the truth. The present methods of internal taxation are most obnoxious and distasteful to the American taxpayer without adding thereto additional tax burdens.

We have only to take the report of the Secretary of the Treasury to ascertain that during the last fiscal year, ending June 30, 1915, individuals paid income taxes to the amount of $41,046,162.09. It was no small sum to be paid by the individual taxpayers for the purpose of creating revenue. Under the emergency revenue act, or war tax in time of peace, in this same report, it is shown that the people paid the sum of $52,069,126.29. This is another example of raising revenue by the present administration—through direct or internal taxation. The corporations of the country paid an income tax of $39,155,596.77.

Under the present plan of the administration, it is proposed or suggested to place a tax of 1 cent per gallon on gasoline and naphtha, which will amount, approximately, to $10,000,000 per year; a tax of 50 cents per horsepower on automobiles and internal-explosion engines, which will amount, approximately, to $15,000,000; a stamp tax on bank checks, which will amount to approximately $18,000,000 per year; a tax of 25 cents per ton on pig iron, which will amount to approximately $10,000,000 per year; and a tax of 25 cents per ton on fabricated iron and steel, which will amount to approximately $10,000,000 per year.

The emergency or war tax in time of peace is to be continued for another year, or until January, 1917, which will mean the payment of approximately $52,069,126.29; and the individual income tax will, of course, be continued, which will, approximately, reach the sum of $50,000,000; and all of these sums, amounting to $245,270,885.15, are to be raised by internal or direct taxation upon the American taxpayers.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS). Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICKETTS. Certainly.

Mr. FESS. I would like to ask the gentleman from Ohio if he has made an estimate as to the amount of the tax now raised by the direct method instead of the indirect method in per cent? What per cent of the revenues of the country are direct and what per cent are indirect?

Mr. RICKETTS. I have, and I will come to that directly.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield right there?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICKETTS. Yes.

Mr. EMERSON. Does not the gentleman think that if we were to have a protective-tariff policy all of these revenues could be raised under the present condition of our imports by a protective tariff and not by direct taxation?

Mr. RICKETTS. I most certainly do; and I think I shall be able to prove that fact by the figures that I have collated. And I want to say to Members of this House that I have taken some time and some interest in searching the reports as to commerce and the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury, and have gone over to the Library of Congress and considered all these matters seriously, and the result is no guess of mine as to the figures that I am presenting to this House. I think it is important that the House should know all about it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. RICKETTS. Certainly.

Mr. BORLAND. In response to the inquiry of the gentleman's colleague from Ohio [Mr. EMERSON] the gentleman's answer was that all these taxes could be raised by a protective tariff, rather than by an income tax. But in that case the poorer people would pay the bulk of the tax, would they not, whereas in the case of the income tax it is the substantial people who pay?

Mr. RICKETTS. Oh, I know it is the claim of the gentleman's side of the House that the man who buys the foreign goods pays the tariff. I understand that clearly. In other words, that the Republican Party taxes the people without their knowledge and the Democratic Party taxes the people without their consent. [Applause and laughter.]

I want to say further, in answer to the gentleman's question, that if his party is right in its theory that the consumer pays the tax, I want him to answer this question: He knows and I know that the Democratic Party condemned the Payne-Aldrich tariff law in one of the planks of its platform adopted at Baltimore in the convention of 1912. They said in that platform that the high cost of living was due to the iniquitous Payne-Aldrich tariff law; that the high cost of living of the people must be reduced; and that if the Democratic Party was successful it would give them a tariff law that would relieve them of that burden and that you would reduce the high cost of living. Now, you gave them the Underwood-Simmons tariff law, and, of course, the American consumer is not to-day paying the duty that he was paying. Then I want to know why it is that the high cost of living to the laboring class of people and the people generally in the United States has not been reduced one single cent, but, on the contrary, has advanced. [Applause on the Republican side.] In the fall of 1914 I said to the people of my congressional district—to 5,000 people in the city of Lancaster, Ohio, a large percentage of whom were Democrats—that if any man present could name one single article used for domestic purposes that he could purchase more cheaply under the Underwood-Simmons tariff law than he could under the Payne-Aldrich law I would willingly leave the platform and yield to him for his statement. Not a single, solitary man was able to name one article that could be so purchased. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. RAGSDALE. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. RICKETTS. Oh, certainly.

Mr. RAGSDALE. The gentleman has stated that under the protective tariff you would derive a sufficient sum of money to meet all of the expenditures that are now proposed.

Mr. RICKETTS. No, sir.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I understood you to say that.

Mr. RICKETTS. I take it for granted that you are including preparedness, and the extravagant appropriations that are to be made during this Congress?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Well, aside from preparedness.

Mr. RICKETTS. Aside from preparedness and the extravagant appropriations that in all probability will be made by the majority side of this House in this session, I say that a protective-tariff revenue would be sufficient. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. RAGSDALE. Why, then, was it that when your party was in power in time of peace and prosperity they found it necessary to issue bonds, even to dig the Panama Canal? [Cries of "Oh!" on the Republican side.]

Mr. RICKETTS. That was certainly an emergency.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICKETTS. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Is it not true that we paid $232,000,000 out of current revenues, for which it was unnecessary to issue bonds?

Mr. RICKETTS. Certainly.

Mr. FESS. Out of the $375,000,000 bond issue that was authorized there was only $132,000,000 issued, because we paid the other out of current revenues.

Mr. RAGSDALE. But you authorized the other, and did sell a part of them instead of taking it all out of the fund derived from your protective tariff.

Mr. FORDNEY. If the gentleman will permit me, that statement is not correct. I hope the gentleman from Ohio will permit this interruption.

Mr. RICKETTS. Certainly.

Mr. FORDNEY. There was an authorization of $375,000,000, the proceeds to be used for the construction of the Panama Canal. Of those bonds there were sold $134,000,000, and they were sold at a premium of some $4,000,000, so that a total of $138,000,000 was realized. The sum of $191,000,000 over and above the proceeds of those bonds was paid out of the general fund, and there never was a year when any bonds were sold, but that there was a larger amount of money paid out of the general fund for that purpose than was received from the sale of the bonds. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. RAGSDALE. Will the gentleman tell me, then——

Mr. RICKETTS. I must decline to yield further as my time is limited. I do not want to be discourteous.

In the years 1914 and 1915, ending June 30, 1915, the amount of taxes paid by the individual taxpayers under the income law was the sum of $76,064,259.75, and yet the Secretary would have you believe that this amount of internal taxation was paid by the American taxpayer for revenue purposes without any appreciable burden. It is high time that the American taxpayer wake up and study carefully and consistently the question of raising revenues with which to defray the expenses of this Government. If he stands idly by and gives this matter no personal attention, it will not be long until the burdens of internal taxation will be absolutely unbearable and beyond his ability to meet.

Every taxpayer owes it to himself, to his neighbor, and to his fellowman to analyze for himself and ascertain just who it is that is now paying the revenue in this great country of which we are so proud and of which the American loves to boast.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS). The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. How much more time does the gentleman want?

Mr. RICKETTS. I should like to have 15 or 20 minutes more.

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio may proceed for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Ohio be extended 15 minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Speaker, although the gentleman would not yield to me even for a question, I will not object.

Mr. RICKETTS. I thank the gentleman. The total revenue collected for the year ending June 30, 1915, exclusive of postal revenue, was $720,399,782.58; of this amount $209,786,672.21 was collected from customs duties and $415,559,646 was collected as internal revenue or as a direct tax.

Now, the total amount expended by this administration for this particular period of time was $777,840,292.33, this being an expenditure of $57,442,509.77 more than the receipts.

Now, what is the trouble? A careful analysis of the foregoing figures will disclose that the present administration last year spent $57,000,000 more than it actually had on hand to disburse, and the major portion, or 61 per cent, of the amount expended was raised by internal revenue or by a direct tax upon the people. I am unequivocally against this policy. It is not good business, and it is my conviction that the business of this Government should be conducted upon a strictly business basis. Will anyone in good faith contend that the methods thus used and proposed are businesslike in their character? Would you conduct your private business in this manner?

Now, what are the methods that have been used and that are proposed? The appropriations for the last three years have been constantly increased each and every year, as shown by the following table:

Appropriations for the years 1913–1915.

1913	$988,353,340
1914	1,057,605,694
1915	1,089,408,777

During all of these years the Democratic Party has had control of Congress, and has been in the majority in Congress.

It is proposed this year to appropriate the enormous sum of $1,127,284,191.63. This is certainly an unnecessary and lavish appropriation of the people's money, and, as a representative of the people of my congressional district, I can not allow myself to stand here silent and make no protest against it.

During a 10-month period under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law the balance of trade in our favor amounted to more than $606,000,000. During the corresponding 10 months under the Underwood-Simons tariff law, and before the war, the balance in our favor was $345,000,000 only. A loss of $260,000,000, or $26,000,000 per month. That was a loss of $1,000,000 per day for every working day in each month, covering a period of 10 months, and this period was before the outbreak of the war in Europe.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. RICKETTS. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Was there not a period during the first seven months when the balance of trade was against us instead of in favor of us?

Mr. RICKETTS. As to the month, I have not investigated. I can not answer that now.

Mr. FESS. For the month of April, 1914, the balance of trade was against us.

Mr. RICKETTS. I accept the gentleman's statement as to that.

This deficit was made up in a large measure by the income-tax law, which was passed in March, 1913, the provisions of which imposed an income tax, or a direct tax, upon the people of this Nation who should earn, if married, more than $4,000, or, if unmarried, more than $3,000 annually.

That distinguished and highly esteemed Democrat, Hon. CLAUDE KITCHIN, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said in his defense of the Democratic tariff law, recently published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

It will be conceded by all fair-minded men, the Republicans and Democrats alike, that the just and proper way to judge and assess the value and virtue of the Underwood Act is to consider the effect of its operation from its passage on October 3, 1913, to August 1, 1914, the time of the outbreak of the European war.

I have just shown by the figures above that, during the time referred to by the gentleman of the Ways and Means Committee the balance of trade against us was $265,000,000, or $26,000,000 per month, or an average of $1,000,000 a day for every working day, and I am herewith submitting a table that shows exactly what the exports and imports were during this time in each of the corresponding years:

Merchandise.	10 months ended July 31—
	1913 (Republican peace period).	1914 (Democratic peace period).
Imports into United States:
Free of duty	$821,608,167	$988,187,549
Dutiable	682,218,836	617,617,233
Total imports	1,503,827,003	1,605,804,782
Exports from United States:
Domestic	2,078,500,810	1,921,538,131
Foreign	31,965,829	30,040,165
Total exports	2,110,466,639	1,951,578,296
Excess of exports	606,639,636	345,773,514

A careful examination of these figures will disclose clearly that the Underwood-Simmons tariff law had proved a failure so far as producing revenue is concerned, prior to the outbreak of the war in Europe, and in order to meet this deficit we have the substitutes that they call the "emergency-tax" law and the "income-tax" law, both of which are a direct tax upon the people of this Nation; and I do not care what the politics of any constituent of mine may be, it is only fair for me to present to him the exact situation as it exists here at this time. I said before, and I reiterate now, that the principle of direct taxation or internal taxation is absolutely wrong.

It is now proposed to reduce the exemption, under the income-tax law, to both married and single men, making the exemption of the married man $2,000 and the exemption of the single man $1,500. This will catch the mechanic, the engineer, the professional man, the physician, the dentist, the minister of the Gospel, the professor, the lecturer, the merchant, and the railroad employee, and quite a large number of men laboring in coal and oil fields, all of whom are comparatively poor men, and who are by this method charged with double taxation on what they are able to earn, and it tends to impoverish them and to take from them that which they have earned by honest toil and persistent effort, and of which, in many instances, they are deeply in need. Besides, it tends to discourage those who are inclined to save their money by frugal living and constant effort and invest it in property. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The President suggests that we pay as we go, and under the present program we are asked to contract an indebtedness that we shall not be able to pay for a period of at least five years, and it should be kept constantly in mind that if we should do this about 61 per cent of this indebtedness will have to be paid by internal taxation, or a direct tax, upon the American people. I am, therefore, opposed to the principles of direct taxation, and shall vote against the same whenever and wherever I have an opportunity so to do.

The great question with the present administration seems to be, How can we raise the money? The question as to reducing expenses and saving money does not seem to be of much importance to it.

This attitude impels me to refer to the "economy" plank of the Democratic Party platform adopted at Baltimore in 1912, which reads as follows:

We denounce the profligate waste of the money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation through the lavish appropriations of recent Republican Congresses, which have kept taxes high and reduced the purchasing power of the people's toil. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government and a reduction in the number of useless offices, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people.

What offices have been eliminated?

No reverence or respect has been paid to this plank in the Baltimore platform since March 4, 1913, the beginning of this administration.

The total appropriations of the first Democratic Congress were, in round numbers, about $2,200,000,000, or $113,000,000 larger than its predecessor, and about $197,000,000 larger than the last Republican Congress, whose "profligate waste of money through lavish appropriations" was so soundly denounced by the national Democratic platform.

The appropriations for 1914 would have been $43,000,000 higher than they were had the Republican minority in the Senate not fought the iniquitous river and harbor bill, which carried large sums for the "improvement" of small creeks and unnavigable rivers in the South, and compelled its reduction by $43,000,000 before permitting it to become a law.

In 1915 the appropriations would have been $11,593,000 more than for 1914 had the Post Office and Indian bills not failed to pass.

Does this appeal to you as economical on the part of this administration? No, no; it is not economy. It is "profligate waste," a reckless disbursement of the finances of the American people. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Further comment is unnecessary, but I do want to call the attention of this House to a speech delivered by one of the most able and conscientious workers in Congress, Mr. FITZGERALD, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who, in a speech delivered in Congress, said:

We charged the Republicans for 12 years of my service in the House under Republican administration with being grossly extravagant and reckless in the expenditure of the public money. I believed that charge to be true. I believed that my party when placed in power would demonstrate that the charges we had made in good faith were true. We are entitled to the help and support of the Members on this side of the House in honest efforts to carry out the pledges of the Democratic Party and in our attempts to show that what we charged in order to get into power were true. We have not had that support. Our Democratic colleagues have not given that support to us thus far during this session of Congress. They have unnecessarily piled up public expenditures until the Democratic Party is becoming the laughingstock of the country.

No more able and conscientious Congressman ever graced a seat on the Democratic side of this House. He was objecting to the extravagant appropriations that were about to be made, fully appreciating that the extravagance proposed by his party would eventually subject it to severe criticism by the American people, and would ultimately result in its complete overthrow; and I concede that he was correct in his conclusions. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Let me suggest here and now to the Members of this House that too much time is spent on the floor of this Chamber in extracting oxygen from the air and not enough time spent by us in studying economy and the ways and means by which the practice of raising revenue by internal or direct taxation on the American people may be eliminated. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The proper method of raising revenue is the tariff duty upon a protective basis. It will not be done by the Underwood law. That law is a dismal disappointment, even to its proponents. Its failure is conceded by the President in his request to suspend its operation upon the item of sugar. I shall vote to suspend its operation on sugar. I am heartily in accord with this notion of the President as to the method of raising revenue, and I ask him to suspend its operation on wool, and thereby raise $21,970,499.81; upon lumber, and thereby raise a revenue of $1,962,560.16; and upon agricultural products, fruits, and so forth. In this way abundant revenue will be raised and, as I said before, no one will feel the burden, and especially will the taxpayer be relieved and American industries and American labor will be stimulated and encouraged.

The revenue under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law for the year ending June 30, 1913, on cattle, lumber, eggs, fruit, sheep, horses, hay, sugar, and wool is shown by the following table, to wit:

Cattle	$1,764,659.58
Lumber	1,962,560.16
Eggs	63,588.28
Fruit	5,364,220.19
Sheep	13,909.50
Horses	79,330.25
Hay	621,526.98
Wool	21,970,499.81
Sugar	53,134,243.63

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's time has again expired.

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 10 minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Ohio may be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICKETTS. Under the Underwood-Simmons tariff law these articles are imported into the United States practically free of duty, and the Government loses in revenue the sum of $84,974,538.38 annually.

The claim is made that because of the loss of customs duties on imports, due to a great falling off of imports during the European war, is the sole reason of continuing the emergency war tax measure and for the proposed increased taxation of the American people. This claim is absurd, as the following facts will substantiate:

For the 10 months of the fiscal year 1915, ending the last of April, our total imports were $6,000,000 less than they were for the same months of 1912, when a protective tariff was in force. The reports of the Department of Commerce for this period of time show tariff imports amount to $1,516,000,000. For the same months in 1912, under the Payne-Aldrich law, the imports were $1,522,000,000. So the record for 10 months shows that total imports, in spite of the war, were almost as large as they were during the corresponding months of the last fiscal year of the Payne-Aldrich law.

These important figures give an excellent opportunity to compare some of the features of the Underwood-Simmons law with those of the Payne-Aldrich law.

In 1912, for the period mentioned, 53.5 per cent of the total imports were free of duty; in 1915, 61.6 per cent of all imports were free of duty, and only 38.4 per cent of our imports paid any duty at all. The average ad valorem rate of duty in 1912 was a little over 18 per cent. In 1915 it was only 12.8 per cent.

In 1912, $1,522,000,000 worth of imports paid into the United States Treasury in customs duties $285,000,000; in 1915, $1,516,000,000 worth of imports paid into the Treasury only $191,000,000 in duties. With the Payne-Aldrich rate of duty in force in 1915, instead of the Underwood-Simmons rate, the Government would have received nearly $100,000,000 more in revenue from customs duties, a deficit would have been avoided, and the so-called "war tax" would have been unnecessary, and we would not have had to resort to an "income tax."

If it had not been for the European war, industrial distress in the United States would have assumed alarming proportions. The war did not shut off all imports, but it greatly curtailed them. It has been stated in the report of the Secretary of Commerce that imports for 11 months of the fiscal year 1915 were $1,516,000,000. For the same months in 1914, before the outbreak of the war, imports were $1,736,000,000.

If the war had not intervened, the distress which marked the year 1914 as one of the most trying years in the industrial history of the country would have resulted in a Nation-wide calamity in the year 1915.

When in the course of time the war shall end we will find, if the Underwood-Simmons law remains in force, that we are as unprepared for the pursuits of peace as our present military organization leaves us unprepared for the stern business of war. The door of the past is locked and bolted. We can not undo the mischief that has been done, but we can do our part to prevent the repetition of such mischief in the future.

In conclusion let me say that I again here and now reiterate that the principle of direct taxation of the American people for the purpose of raising revenue with which to meet the financial demands of this Government is absolutely wrong, and I am unalterably and forever opposed to this method of raising revenue.

Why not revise the Underwood-Simmons tariff law so that it will meet the conditions that prevail and produce the revenue needed, and why not repeal the income-tax and the emergency-tax laws and relieve the American people from the bondage of direct taxation?

CHILD LABOR.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, with the consent of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], that I may proceed for two minutes to correct a statement in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, if I may have the attention of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RICKETTS], I want to say that in an extension of his remarks in the RECORD, which appears on page 1845, I call attention that about the middle of the second column the gentleman says:

> It has been said on the floor of this House by a gentleman from Georgia, who has the honor of representing a district in his State, that children 11 years old, both white and black, are being worked 13 hours per day in the cotton and knitting factories of North Carolina; that in some instances white children going to work pass colored children going to school; that the conditions surrounding the children who are thus required to toil day after day are anything but favorable. And in this State of North Carolina there is no such a thing as factory inspection.

The gentleman did not name the gentleman from Georgia to whom he attributes these remarks, and while I do not wish to be understood as making any apology to anybody from any section of the country for what I really did say, which the gentleman will find in the RECORD, on page 1761, I do want to say that if the gentleman referred to me, and I presume he did, because I was the only one from Georgia in favor of this bill who took the opposite side, that he must have got his information from some one other than myself. I made no such statement. As a matter of fact, I am sure the gentleman would not find the conditions in North Carolina that he portrayed in his speech, because I think the cotton mills there have found the labor of the negro children very unprofitable. I say this in justice to the State of North Carolina, and under their law now in existence they could not work a child under 12 years old. Their hours are 11 hours and not 13. I made no such statement as the gentleman attributed to me. He was in error. Such a statement might have been made by others on the floor of the House.

MARKETING OF FARM PRODUCTS.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent, with the consent of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], that I may address the House for two minutes on the subject of the marketing of farm products.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to address the House for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, at the meeting of the Southern Commercial Congress in the city of Muskogee, Okla., in my district, held from April 26 to 30, 1915, among other addresses delivered on that occasion was a speech by Hon. WILLIAM S. GOODWIN, of the seventh congressional district of Arkansas, upon the subject of Marketing or the Distribution of Farm Products.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, no question is of more immediate and pressing importance than the solution of a proper distribution of farm products. Much has been done to teach the American people how to produce, but Congress thus far has done but little to find a market for that which is grown upon the farm, and, as we know, many hundreds of millions of dollars worth of products go to waste annually for a lack of marketing facilities.

For the past year Mr. GOODWIN has been actively engaged in an effort to solve this problem, and a bill introduced by him at the last session of Congress has received general indorsement by the great agricultural people and their organizations throughout the country.

On account of Mr. GOODWIN's active interest in an effort to solve this vexing question he was chosen by the managers of the Southern Commercial Congress, that great organization that is doing so much to develop the South agriculturally and commercially, to deliver the address referred to and which I ask may be published herewith in an extension of my remarks upon this occasion. The address of Mr. GOODWIN follows:

MARKETING FARM PRODUCTS.

[An address by Hon. WILLIAM S. GOODWIN, Member of Congress from Arkansas, at the Sixth Annual Convention of the Southern Commercial Congress, Muskogee, Okla., Apr. 26 to 30, 1915.]

Mr. President, ladies, and gentlemen, the pleasure to me is very great to be privileged to address this splendid gathering of the builders of the new South, whose purpose is so finely expressed in the motto of your great organization, "A Greater Nation through a Greater South." Since it was organized in 1908 the Southern Commercial Congress has speedily moved forward, with splendid achievement following splendid achievement to the accomplishment of this high resolve.

From the northernmost New England State of Maine to the North Pacific Commonwealth of Washington the people of the North as well as we of the South have been richly benefited by your activities, thus making the Nation your debtor for having already produced a greater financial freedom, a sounder commercial and a better agricultural development, and creating, finally, a broader and more sympathetic national understanding.

You have succeeded as an organization because all your work for a greater South is based on a recognition of the fact that the solid, enduring foundation on which a greater commercial South must be built is a greater agricultural South. And so the prosperity of the farmer thus far has been and, I venture to assert, always will be a matter of prime concern with you and occupy a leading place in your councils.

It is because of this interest in and devotion to a greater and more prosperous agriculture that I was invited to briefly outline to you the purpose and scope of the National Marketing Committee and the stupendous work for the advancement of agriculture it has undertaken.

The acknowledged obstacle in the way of the development of a better agriculture and the building up all through the South, as, indeed, elsewhere, of prosperous farming communities is the enormous wastes in handling and distributing farm products. These wastes are due to many causes, all of which by the adoption of more scientific methods in gathering, grading, standardizing, warehousing, together with a national cooperative system in quest of markets, can be eliminated or greatly reduced. These wastes, taking the Nation as a whole, run into billions of dollars annually; and the saving of even a small part of this enormous amount means not only a tremendous increase in the prosperity of the producers but, necessarily, a corresponding gain in commerce and manufacturing.

The farmers of this country produce annually a crop for which they receive $9,600,000,000, and for which, it is said, the ultimate consumer pays $27,000,000,000; or, to express it in this wise, the American farmer to-day is doing business on a 35-cent dollar and the consumer of his products pays 100 cents for the same amount of agricultural products for which the producer receives but 35 cents. Owing to the lack of some central directing intelligence there is an enormous amount of waste, especially in perishable products. At times 100 cars of fruit or vegetables are sent to a market which can consume but 10, and 10 are sent to a market that can use 100. Foodstuffs are shipped for long distances, only to be reshipped and consumed in the vicinity in which they were grown. Our storage and transportation facilities are first swamped, then starved; markets are unsteady and demoralized; produce is allowed to waste and rot in the fields and consumers are compelled to pay exorbitant prices.

There have been times when corn has been burned for fuel here in Oklahoma, when your coal-mines were closed for want of orders of miners, while oil from your wells flowed like water in your branches and hungry workingmen in idleness, begging for bread, were walking the streets of near-by cities, and the railroads were threatened with bankruptcy for want of traffic, and all simultaneously. Surely this is an unhealthy and unwarranted condition. Any system of distribution which permits one peck of potatoes to rot while one hungry man goes unfed is an obsolete and inadequate system. You farmers, who fail to receive an adequate price for your crops; you consumers, who pay your hard-earned dollar for products for which the farmer receives but 35 cents; and you employers of labor—none, none need to be told there is something wrong with our present methods when the high cost of living alone reduces the workingmen's wage and ofttime devours his income.

Under the present manner of marketing the producer receives too little, hence he seeks to lessen his losses by producing less; the consumer pays too much, and tries to cut down his expenses by consuming less; the railroads, having less to transport, charge more to make up for the loss of tonnage; the dealer charges a larger profit to make up for the smaller sale; and here we go round and round in a vicious circle, getting nowhere, the circle growing more vicious all the while.

Permit me to say just here, Mr. President, that neither the railroads nor the commission men nor the wholesalers nor the retailers should be charged with all the blame. Both the producer and consumer are entitled to their share of it. The producer needs to be taught the best manner, place, and time to market his crop; how to classify, arrange, grade, and pack it to meet the requirements of the trade; and the consumer needs to be taught better purchasing methods and to distinguish between high prices and expensive service.

If we as a Nation were pioneers in the work of attempting to scientifically systematize the handling and marketing of farm products, the practicability of our plans might be questioned; but, far from being pioneers, investigation shows that we are a quarter of a century behind the methods employed in Europe. In Germany, in particular, the system of handling and distributing farm products is carried to such perfection that investigators are unanimous in testifying that the foundation on which the commercial and military greatness of the German Empire is built is her wonderful system of handling and distributing farm products for the benefit and protection of her producers.

The supreme importance of improving the methods of marketing farm products has long been recognized, but efforts in that direction have been isolated and without definiteness of plan considering the subject as a whole. To Mr. David Lubin, that great man whose life is dedicated to the cause of agricultural betterment, the United States delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, Italy, is due the idea that we should study the German system with the view of adapting it to American conditions and of organizing to secure its adoption in this country. When he was in America last year many conferences were held with him in Washington and the question thoroughly considered. Finally, before Mr. Lubin left Washington last fall, a special meeting of certain Senators and Representatives in Congress, representatives of farm organizations, and members of the farm press was held, and the national marketing committee was organized. Your president, Senator FLETCHER, who is never so happy as when doing good and great things, was elected president of the committee. Its first vice president is William T. Creasy, for many years the head of the great grange organization of Pennsylvania and at present secretary of the National Dairy Union. The second vice president is that well-known westerner of large commercial and agricultural enterprises and magnificent public service, Congressman WILLIAM KENT, of California. Our secretary and managing director is that tireless, able, and loyal representative of organized farmers, George P. Hampton, of New York, a man of the highest standing as a student of the problems of distribution. On its executive board, of which I have the honor to be a member, is a man for whose executive and constructive ability all of us have the highest admiration, your own able managing director, Dr. Clarence J. Owens. Associated with us on this board are P. D. NORTON, of North Dakota, and J. A. Falconer, of Washington, both Members of the Sixty-third Congress, whose consistent activity in furthering agricultural interests especially is reflected by their record; also former United States Senator Obadiah Gardner, of Maine, the great grange builder of that State, and now chairman of the International Joint Commission; C. B. Kegley, the master of the Washington State Grange and president of the Rural Credit League of America; H. S. Mobley, the president of the Farmers' Union of Arkansas, and others of the ablest executives of the leading farm organizations.

The purpose of the national marketing committee is set forth in its prospectus, from which I quote:

1. To create an enlightened public opinion concerning the waste and unnecessary expense in handling and distributing farm products; and to assist in bringing before the country the information secured by the Federal Office of Markets and other National and State agencies.

2. To promote and foster proper marketing organizations and methods, to encourage and secure the standardization of agricultural products, to secure proper warehouse systems, to promote expert marketing services in the several States, to secure uniformity in methods by States in inaugurating investigational and demonstrational work in marketing, and to secure changes in Federal and State laws to these ends.

3. To secure, either through appointment by the President or by act of Congress, the establishment of a national marketing commission.

In the development of this program, resolutions were prepared and introduced in the United States Senate by Senator FLETCHER and in the House of Representatives by myself. These resolutions provide for the establishment of a national marketing commission by act of Congress.

The proposed legislation has received the indorsement of the legislative committee of the National Farmers' Union, representatives of various granges and farm organizations, the Farmers' Union of Arkansas and California, a half million people in California aside from the Farmers' Union of that State, and by many of the great farm journals throughout the country, as well as boards of trade and commercial organizations. Throughout the Pacific Coast States, where cooperative marketing is better developed than in other sections, the plan has received the most enthusiastic indorsement by agricultural and consumers' organizations generally.

This spring, promptly upon the adjournment of Congress, the committee took hold of the plan of securing the appointment by the President of an advisory marketing commission. A number of conferences were held with the Secretary of Agriculture, who showed an appreciative understanding of the need of such a commission; the matter was discussed by the Cabinet, and on April 16 a conference was had with the President. The press dispatches of the following day and since have informed the public that the appointment of such an advisory body is being most favorably considered by the President and his advisers.

This shows the widespread concern in the need and the keen interest taken in the plans to meet that need. No movement was ever taken hold of more spontaneously or with greater enthusiasm by the producers. This interest and enthusiasm has developed since the middle of last September and is most encouraging evidence of what can be accomplished when the nation-wide campaign of education planned by our committee is in full operation.

Gentlemen of the Southern Commercial Congress, I have thus briefly outlined to you the plan and scope of the work of the national marketing committee. It has a special work to do in eliminating the untold wastes in distribution which in every move toward its accomplishment means an enormous increase in the prosperity and consequent purchasing power of our own people and an expansion of the home market for American manufactures and dwarfs into comparative insignificance the possibilities of the foreign markets, as important as these are and as heartily as all of us favor the extension of our foreign trade.

You will be called on to consider, and rightly so, the development of our foreign commerce and to participate in movements to secure a larger share to our merchants and manufacturers of the markets of South America, of Asia, Africa, and Europe. Germany, last year, supplied $341,000,000 of the exports to Russia, and a great part of that business can be ours if we put forth the proper efforts. This question of capturing the world's markets is worthy of the most careful study and determined effort. I shall do all I can, as will you, to encourage and speed forward such undertaking, but I feel that I would fall short of my duty here did I not utter a word of caution and point out to you not only the far greater market right at your very door which the national marketing committee is organized to assist in opening up, but to impress upon you the stability and permanence of this enlargement of the home market and the absolute certainty it offers of belonging to our own farmers, merchants, and manufacturers for all time. This certainty may not apply to foreign markets, no matter how attractive or desirable they may be. In commerce between nations no fact is more clearly established than that the final settlement of all exchanges must be in the products of the trading nations. We sell manufactured goods to Russia. What has Russia to give in return? Mainly farm products. We have small need for these. But England and France have large demands. Germany and Austria, the most nearly self-sustaining of the large European States, also import considerable food supplies. Therefore, when peace is restored the irresistible logic of hard economic conditions will inevitably swing Russian imports from those nations that can most profitably accept Russia's agricultural exports in return.

You business men of our beloved South, whatever else you do, don't neglect the opportunity the national marketing committee offers you to increase the prosperity of our producers, thus building a solid, enduring foundation on which home markets can be enlarged, and enlarged again and again. The problems of economic distribution must be solved that there may be an end to the waste between the farm and the table, to the advantage of both producer and consumer. The opportunity is here. The national marketing committee will help this Congress create a greater Nation through a greater South. The South is well represented on its executive board. The officers of your own great organization, gentlemen of the congress, are leaders in the movement, thus insuring perfect harmony and coordination of these two large undertakings. And more than that, gentlemen, affirmative action taken by you in this will be the keynote for similar action by commercial, agricultural, and consumers' organizations throughout the entire United States. I do not speak for myself alone, but for the national marketing committee and for the commercial and farm organizations already affiliated with it. The committee will hold a meeting in Muskogee at the close of this convention, and may I not hope that this congress, so preeminently representative of the South, will give its approval to the work already accomplished and by suitable action give strength and encouragement to the work ahead? May I not even hope that every one of you gentlemen, whose devotion to the ideal of a greater Nation through a great South is shown by your presence here, will join with us and on your return home make the national marketing committee and its plans known and aid in making your community the center of an affiliated activity, earnestly determined that this great purpose shall be speedily consummated?

A TARIFF COMMISSION.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the order of the House, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] is recognized for 40 minutes.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, for more than half a century the tariff has been the football of partisan politics in this country. In fact it has furnished the stock in trade of speakers for national office in both parties, and has even been employed by candidates for purely local offices whose views on the tariff could not by the remotest possibility have any bearing upon their qualifications for the position they sought.

I presume no man was ever elected to this House, or even became seriously a candidate for Congress, who did not have his stock speech on the subject of the tariff. We have just listened to one of those old-fashioned, stand-pat, Republican, rock-bottomed, copper-riveted speeches about the blessings of the tariff, in which it was unquestionably demonstrated that money could be extracted from the American people by means of a tariff without anyone's feeling it at all, and that, therefore, it was greatly better than any possible form of direct taxation where the taxpayer could see how much he paid in his tax bill.

I have heard those arguments ever since I was a boy. I think that I made my first, last, and only tariff speech on the floor of this House two weeks after I became a Member, and, unless I was charged as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means with some special concern in making a tariff bill, I do not know any occasion that would induce me to make a tariff speech. I remember the first time that I went down to Panama our old friend, Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky, was civil governor, and he told us this story. He said when he was a young lawyer in Kentucky he had a very high ambition to become a candidate for Congress. Therefore he loaded himself up with all of the great issues of the day and prepared some magnificent speeches, but, for some reason or other, he never found a fitting and appropriate occasion on which to deliver these speeches. He never could get himself before the people in the capacity of a candidate for Congress. He sought all kinds of public occasions and public gatherings, but never happened to get started exactly right. He said on one occasion he noticed in the paper that there was going to be a hanging down in the county seat; so, conjecturing correctly that there would be a very large crowd down there, he went down. Sure enough, there was the gallows in the square of the courthouse and around it five or six thousand people. He stationed himself right under the corner of the gallows.

When the sheriff brought the condemned out and stood him on the gallows he turned to the condemned and said, "Now, this is the last chance that you will have to speak any words to your fellow citizens, and I will give you time now to do so." The poor fellow shook his head and said that he did not believe he had anything to say. The sheriff said, "Now, Jim, I have known you since you were a boy and I am disposed to be as liberal with you as my duties will permit, and if you have anything to say I will give you 10 minutes now in which to make your last speech." The fellow said he was much obliged, but that he did not believe he would say anything at that time. By that time Joe Blackburn was climbing up the corner of the gallows and he said, "Hold on. If my friend here does not want to use the time allotted to him, and he will yield it to me, I would like to address my fellow citizens of Nelson County upon the subject of the tariff." The condemned turned to the sheriff and said, "Mr. Sheriff, go ahead with the hanging, for I would rather be hung and in hell than listen to Joe Blackburn talk about the tariff." [Laughter.]

The politicians have always taken themselves seriously, but the saving sense of humor of the American press has pointed out so frequently the absurdity of a candidate for constable or coroner lathering himself into a foam over the iniquities of a tariff that we are at length in danger of regarding the tariff as the stock joke of politics. The truth is that the tariff lies at the base of our whole fiscal system. The Federal Constitution gives the General Government power to sustain itself by two forms of taxation; duties on imports, and excises, or internal revenue. The exercise of its taxing power by the Federal Government must inevitably have a far-reaching influence upon the business conditions and prosperity of the country. The tariff, whether viewed as a means of raising revenue for the Federal Government, or for its incidental effect upon industrial conditions, is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, question of internal policy, but is purely a business question. The time has come to take the tariff out of politics and politics out of the tariff. This can only be done by the creation of a nonpartisan tariff commission clothed with sufficient powers to aid in the construction of a scientific revenue law.

The methods which we have pursued in the construction and enactment of tariff laws in the past have been the most unscientific, illogical, and wasteful that can be imagined. Every general revision of the tariff and even the agitation in preparation for a general revision have caused widespread business disturbance. Where nothing is certain but uncertainty business men can not adjust their affairs, invest their capital, or enlarge their enterprises. The most conservative and sound among them will curtail in every possible way their business activities until the uncertainty is turned into some form of certainty, and this causes idleness of capital, idleness of workers, and a diminished industrial power throughout the country. But bad as conditions are which precede a general revision of the tariff, the revision itself is a very carnival of confusion. Milton must have been thinking of a general revision of the tariff when he wrote:

> Chaos umpire sits, and by decision more embroils the fray by which it reigns.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. What do you want of a tariff commission if you do not propose to revise the tariff?

Mr. BORLAND. If the gentleman will bear with me, I will show him what we want with it. I think a tariff commission can suggest changes from time to time and prevent a general revision.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman says his party does not propose to revise the tariff?

Mr. BORLAND. I want to emphasize the danger that the gentleman and his party are now threatening the country with, and that is another general revision, which would simply mean a question of bargain and sale as to who should get the advantages out of a tariff law. Yet the gentleman's party is deliberately threatening the country with another general revision.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. We had a tariff board or tariff commission in every sense when the gentleman's party came into power, and you abolished it. Why do you want another?

Mr. BORLAND. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken. We never had a tariff board, and I will show him why. And the gentleman was distinctly opposed to it and fought the tariff commission in the Sixty-first Congress.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman permit me to again interrupt him?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman is just as near right on that as he is on any statement. I was always in favor of it and am now.

Mr. BORLAND. In favor of a tariff commission?

Mr. FORDNEY. A tariff board or a tariff commission or whatever you may call it, a committee to collect information for the benefit of Congress in framing a tariff law.

Mr. BORLAND. I am glad to welcome the gentleman to our ranks.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. BARNHART. The gentleman from Michigan probably would not insist that he is in favor of the kind of nonpartisan tariff board or commission that would be appointed by a partisan President?

Mr. BORLAND. Why, of course not.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman from Indiana and myself are perfectly familiar with what the gentleman from Michigan is talking about. Some gentlemen were appointed by President Taft under a clause in the Payne-Aldrich bill giving him power to determine whether nations were discriminating against us and to enforce the maximum and minimum clause. That board, so called, was to report to the President and nobody else, and the gentleman is calling that, and has called it in the past, a tariff commission. It is as far removed from a tariff commission as it could possibly be, and it is only an imposition upon the business public when you call that a tariff commission.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman permit me?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. The law itself provided that the tariff board should gather information and submit the same to the President.

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; to the President.

Mr. FORDNEY. And the President in turn submitted it to Congress.

Mr. BORLAND. Oh, no; there is no such provision in the law.

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes——

Mr. BORLAND. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the law provided no such thing.

Mr. FORDNEY. Pardon me, my friend, if the gentleman will permit me——

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; I will permit the gentleman.

Mr. FORDNEY. The President did submit to Congress each and every report made by the tariff board——

Mr. BORLAND. But the law did not compel him.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me state the question—each and every report made by that board, and the gentleman's party declined to use that information when it framed the Underwood tariff law, from a nonpartisan board, consisting of two Democrats and three Republicans.

Mr. BORLAND. The President submitted only what he saw fit.

Mr. FORDNEY. He submitted all of the reports the board made.

Mr. BORLAND. Not a bit was under the control of Congress, but under the control of a partisan President.

Mr. FORDNEY. Every word reported by that tariff board was reported to Congress. I have a copy of those reports, and the gentleman can get them.

Mr. BARNHART. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY. I will yield, although I am not making the speech.

Mr. BORLAND. I will yield.

Mr. BARNHART. Was there anything in that law that required the President of the United States to report to Congress what the tariff commission reported to him?

Mr. FORDNEY. Whether it was in the law or not, the President did do so.

Mr. BARNHART. But I am just asking for information. Was there anything——

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not think the language is in the law compelling him to submit the board's findings to Congress, but he did submit them.

Mr. BORLAND. I can say the law did not compel him.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not think it did——

Mr. BORLAND. Of course——

Mr. FORDNEY (continuing). But the President did make reports of what was reported to him.

Mr. BORLAND. It was for the information of the President, and what the President did with that was entirely within his own volition, and the amount of information laid before the board was entirely within the control of the board and the President.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Congress had no power over it. Yes, I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. For just a brief statement of the facts.

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The tariff law gave to the President certain power, and an item in the sundry civil bill was reported to the House by the Committee on Appropriations a good deal broader than the power given in the tariff law. I happened to be Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union at the time, and a point of order was made upon the item in the sundry civil bill to create a tariff board, and I sustained the point of order. There was no provision of law for it. An amendment was then offered again for another provision to create a tariff board, and another point of order was made, and, as I recall, again sustained. I then, I think, probably indicated in rendering the decision what would be in order, and that item went into the bill, and thereby the tariff board was created, so far as the law provided for it.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman has concluded——

Mr. MANN. I have.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a brief observation?

Mr. BORLAND. Certainly.

Mr. BARNHART. That is the difficulty about a tariff-commission enactment which enables the President to name all the members of the board—it does not quiet the general apprehension in the country that politics is engaged in the formation of tariff bills. When this one tariff board was appointed, as I remember, three members of the Republican Party were named who were good, stiff, high-tariff protectionists, and the members credited to the Democratic Party were composed of one excellent gentleman, a former Member of Congress, who had been thoroughly discredited by his party in his own district because he had stood with the Republicans for high protection, and the other a veterinary surgeon, of somewhere, who declared that he had not voted the Democratic ticket since 1892. These two represented, or misrepresented, the Democrats on that tariff commission, and the same might be true if a Democratic President were to appoint a tariff commission. The danger of it is that if you do not have a bipartisan tariff commission you will be left exactly where we were under the Taft commission, with the party in power doubting what the commission has done for those numerically opposed to it and business suffering the same old doubt and hesitancy.

Mr. BORLAND. I hope to show the House further the difference between the so-called Tariff Board and what is now proposed.

I have served in Congress during two general revisions of the tariff and hope never to see another general revision in this country. These revisions were framed upon opposing theories, but the incidental confusion was almost as great in producing a tariff for revenue as a tariff designed for protection. In this respect, however, the tariff for protection is a shade worse than the other, for during the construction of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law business men were not only agitated on the subject of what duty should be levied upon the goods which they produced, but were further distressed and alarmed for fear that by ignorance or craft some jokers would be slipped into the bill which would injuriously affect them by discrimination against their products or by increasing the cost of production or conferring some unjust advantage upon competing lines of business. The proposal to levy a tariff upon zinc ore not only agitated the miner, but was desperately fought at one time by the smelters and at another time by the manufacturers of brass goods and galvanized cornices. No business man felt safe in attending strictly to his own business, but was dragged, willingly or unwillingly, into the political maelstrom by what he feared might be a lurking danger to his commercial life.

I favored a tariff commission at that time. I favored it again when the Democrats had carried the National Congress in 1910, and I voted for the bill which then passed Congress, and I favor it more at the present time in view of the world-wide changes which we can all see are impending in commercial affairs. To-day the American business men are almost a unit in demanding a nonpartisan tariff commission. Such a commission is not only necessary to the construction of a tariff which is avowedly designed for the purpose of protection, but it is even more necessary to the proper formation of one which shall be a steady and scientific source of revenue.

Unfortunately in the creation of such a commission we have very little to guide us at the present time for the reason that no commission exists in this country or any other which fits the present conception of the American business world. When Germany was engaged in constructing the tariff of 1902 the first step was the appointment of a commission of 30 members, 5 of whom were representatives of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, 5 of the Central Association of Manufacturers, 5 of the German Agrarian Association, and the remaining 15 appointed by the chancellor. No attempt was made to secure a nonpartisan membership on this commission. It engaged in the collection of statistics upon the cost and facilities for production of the various commodities in Germany, including the cost of raw material, whether agricultural or mineral, and the factors which entered into the extension of German trade into foreign countries. After their data were collected they worked in conjunction with the federal council upon the formation of schedules, classifications, and rates. The tentative law thus prepared was submitted to the study of the various States and free cities comprising the German Empire, and after more than two years' of work and various modifications, after ample information and opportunity for discussion, the revenue law was adopted. Possibly this is the nearest approach to the really scientific construction of a tariff law.

France, in December, 1907, referred its present tariff law to the local councils in the various Provinces. In 1914 Great Britain was on the point of entering upon a tariff revision and appointed a commission consisting of 60 representatives of important industries. According to Mr. Chamberlain, the author of the tariff-reform program, the three main objects were: First, to stimulate industry and invention by giving it greater security; second, to defend the commerce of the country against unfair competition; and, third, to place the Government in a position to deal on more equal terms with foreign nations.

In our own country a tariff commission was created under the act of 1882, with rather vague and general powers. Like many other temporary commissions created by Congress, this commission made a voluminous report after the usual expenditure of time and money, but no official sanction was attached to this report and no particular use was made of it. When Congress was about to enter upon the revision of the tariff which resulted in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, a proposal was made by the progressive element of the Republican Party to create a tariff commission. The Republican leaders indignantly and forcibly rejected this proposal and proceeded to construct the bill in the same old way. Washington was filled with alleged experts, business representatives, and many self-confessed and possibly pretended lobbyists, who spent their time in inducing business men to believe that in some way they could secure them special advantages in the proposed law or protect them against acts of threatened discrimination. Business men swarmed to the Capitol in large numbers in an attempt either to secure advantages which they believed, or pretended to believe, were necessary for their business, or to see that they got a fair deal in the distribution of favors. It was jokingly said at that time that most of the business houses of the country were left in charge of the office boy and the office cat, the head of the firm and most of his principal subordinates being engaged in dangling around the hearings of the Ways and Means Committee. The testimony given at these hearings would astonish, shock, and confuse the ordinary observer. It consisted in a mass of unreliable hearsay, much of which was doubtless honestly believed by its propounders, but which was flatly contradictory in character and without the slightest attempt at justification in fact. The bill as finally constructed and passed by the House of Representatives was entirely rewritten in the Senate, as a result, it is claimed, of various compromises and trades which were almost exclusively in the hands of a single Senator. The methods and results so shocked the country that the demand for a nonpartisan tariff commission gained substantial headway among business men. The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill contained a clause providing for a maximum and minimum tariff, and giving the President power to enforce the maximum against any country found to be discriminating against American products. Under this provision he was authorized to employ certain persons.

The language of the bill was—

To secure information to assist the President in the discharge of the duties imposed upon him by this section, and the officers of the Government in the administration of the customs law, the President is hereby authorized to employ such persons as may be required.

Under this authority President Taft appointed a board alleged to be experts, but who were clearly partisan in character from the very nature of their employment, and who were utterly without either the power or warrant of law to perform any act except to aid in the enforcement of the maximum and minimum tariff. It was soon found that this particular provision was unenforceable, and thereupon an attempt was made to turn this body into a tariff commission, it being naturally anxious to perpetuate itself. The impression was given to the business public that it was, in fact, a tariff commission when nothing could have been further from the truth.

In January, 1911, however, the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives unanimously reported a bill to create a tariff commission and to give it proper powers and duties. This bill passed the House of Representatives, was amended in the Senate, and filibustered to death on the last day of the session, March 4, 1911.

Mind you, in January, 1911, the Ways and Means Committee unanimously reported this bill to create a tariff commission. That was after the November election of 1910, when the Democrats had carried the House for the first time in 16 years. Up to that time the majority of the Ways and Means Committee, which was Republican and headed by the distinguished gentleman from New York, the late Mr. Payne, had never brought in a bill for the creation of a tariff commission, but in January, 1911, after the people had spoken at the polls in November, 1910, the Ways and Means Committee brought in a bill for the creation of a tariff commission.

When the Democrats were coming into power there was a strong disposition in certain quarters that we should have a tariff commission.

The Underwood tariff bill was constructed in the special session of 1913, having the immediate advantage of all of the prior hearings quite recent in date and the ample discussion and analysis of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. To some extent the same agitation preceded and accompanied the drafting of the Underwood law, although, as it was not constructed upon the theory of giving special advantages and privileges to particular businesses, a large factor in the agitation was eliminated. During the 10 months that the Underwood law was in operation preceding the outbreak of the war in Europe its results as a revenue producer were satisfactory, and no glaring mistakes were found in its schedules even by those most bitterly opposed to it.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I wanted to know what are the factors that enter into tariff legislation that you want a commission to study.

Mr. BORLAND. It depends, as the gentleman knows, on the theory of the tariff law. If we abide by the Constitution and raise revenue by the tariff, there are certain factors that enter into it. If we seek to use that revenue law as a means of discouraging the free interchange of commodities, there is a certain other set of conditions that enters it.

Mr. FESS. That is precisely what I wanted to know. Is it your idea that the tariff commission should take into consideration the factors of the cost of labor in Europe?

Mr. BORLAND. I would not limit the tariff commission to factors which I regard as important in the construction of a revenue law, I concede that to the gentleman. I would not regard it as a nonpartisan tariff commission if it were limited. The original tariff commission law was to ascertain the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. That is the sole element, apparently, that the Republican theory of tariff demands.

Mr. FESS. Not the sole. It is one of the chief elements.

Mr. BORLAND. It is one of the chief elements. But I would not limit it to my own theory of tariff, because if I did it would not be a nonpartisan tariff commission. I want to assure the gentleman that I am trying to argue for a real nonpartisan commission.

Mr. FESS. It has been said on your side of the House that the element of cost of production does not enter into tariff legislation. We think it does. Now, would your tariff commission that you want created take into consideration that element that you say does not enter into legislation on the tariff question?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Would you take it in?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes, personally. If you are asking for my personal view.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. As the Constitution does not permit any body of men to make our tariff laws except the Congress of the United States, what power would you confer upon the tariff commission except to gather information upon which Congress might base its candid opinion in fixing rates in a tariff law?

Mr. BORLAND. Well, I was about to discuss that, I will say to the gentleman from Michigan. The suggestion at the present time does not proceed further than the collection of information, reliable data, governing these subjects, but I am not so sure that this is the full limit of power that Congress can confer upon a commission. I think that Congress might constitutionally go further, but there is no such suggestion now before the public. The suggestion at present is limited to the collection of data and report to Congress to permit Congress exclusively to make the schedules.

Mr. FESS. Would the gentleman yield there? Here is a statement that was given out yesterday as to what the commission was expected to do, and I wanted an explanation of this one paragraph:

To determine the relations between the rates of duties on raw materials and rates on finished or partially finished products.

I think the element of labor enters there.

Mr. BORLAND. I will tell you what enters there. There was an agitation before the election of 1908, a very strong agitation, in New England for a tariff reform, and governors of States were elected there upon the tariff-reform wave. This was a very remarkable thing, but when we came to analyze tariff reform in New England it was limited to this, that the duty should be taken off of raw material and put a little bit higher on the finished product. That was the tariff reform demanded by New England. If you take the duty off of raw material you are adding automatically to the duty on the finished product. If you are going to have a tariff at all you must have a tariff graduated up from the raw material to the partially finished product, and on up to the complete product for consumption. That is what that means, and there is not a worse joker in a tariff bill than taking the duty off the raw material and leaving it upon the finished product. I can only think of one thing worse, and that is taking it off the finished product and leaving it on the raw material. One is just as unscientific as the other and perhaps as defenseless.

Mr. FORDNEY. If the gentleman will permit, that is just exactly what is in the Underwood law now. It puts the finished products from Canada on the free list and duty on the raw material.

I do not want to take too much of your time, but will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. I would like to read just what Mr. Taft said about the make-up of the tariff board, in answer to what the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART] said.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman has been so long on the Committee on Ways and Means and is such a distinguished leader on his side that I am glad to be courteous to him, but I may have to ask for a little additional time.

Mr. FORDNEY. I thank the gentleman. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART] spoke of the make-up of the tariff board by Mr. Taft. Here is what Mr. Taft said about it. I take this from the Republican campaign text-book:

I put at the head of this board Prof. Henry C. Emery, upon the recommendation of the presidents of a number of universities who were consulted. Mr. Alvin Sanders was the editor of the Breeders' Gazette, a man of the highest standing, who had devoted his life to the study of the agricultural interests of this country, while Mr. Reynolds has been for years an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Mr. Roosevelt, in charge of customs, and had become very familiar with the operation of the existing tariff and its construction. To these three I added Prof. Page, of the University of California, and then of the University of Virginia, a well-known economist, with the same general standing as that of Prof. Emery; and Mr. W. M. Howard, a former Democratic Congressman from Georgia and admittedly one of the ablest and fairest Members of the half dozen Congresses in which he served. The make-up of the board insures nonpartisan action. The truth is that, with the exception of Mr. Howard and Mr. Reynolds, the board may be said to have no political affiliations at all.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BORLAND. I feel now that I ought to yield to my friend from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART].

Mr. BARNHART. I listened to the reading of the report of former President Taft very attentively, and I agree with the statement of the former President therein that one of the members of that board was a former prominent Member of this House and that he was a man of great ability; but, somehow, he got out of line with his party on the tariff question to such an extent that after he had the nomination by the party in his home district the people arose—and they were practically all Democrats down there—and nominated an independent and overwhelmingly defeated the Member of Congress. That is my recollection. Then the President put him on as a representative of the Democratic Party on the tariff commission.

It will be observed that in his reference to this Virginia professor Mr. Taft says he put him on because of his ability. I think he makes no reference to his politics, and I simply called attention to that, not to criticize former President Taft, but to show the fact and the possibility that no President elected by any political party can name a tariff commission that is going to be satisfactory to the opposition, and tariff agitation will go on and on as it ever has. If you give each party representation on a tariff commission, by their own selection, they will have to abide by the results they get in the commission's reports.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman from Missouri permit me to answer?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FORDNEY. In all sincerity, if the tariff board or tariff commission is permitted or expected to do more than gather information and submit it to the Congress, how is it possible to obtain a nonpartisan board? The gentleman as a Democrat sincerely and conscientiously believes in free trade or a low tariff. I as a Republican believe in a protective tariff. The gentleman and I each have our views. If you are a Democrat or a Republican, you must have an opinion or you are an imbecile. How is it possible to create a nonpartisan tariff board and select it from the two great parties?

Mr. BARNHART. I believe I have not used the word "nonpartisan." If I did, I should have said "a bipartisan board." I believe the agitation of a tariff commission comes very largely from business men of the United States who misunderstand what they are talking about.

I received some letters this morning from business men, saying that they were gratified that I had introduced at the beginning of this Congress a bipartisan tariff commission bill, and saying that they hoped it would go further and take the tariff entirely out of the hands of Congress and out of the power of politics, so that business could go on without interruption. But that can not be done under the Constitution of the United States, and it ought not to be done, for the reason that the people elect their Representatives every two years to levy taxes and make appropriations, and that gives the people the opportunity of regulating their own affairs every two years. That is the theory upon which the Constitution of the United States was founded, as I understand it. But so long as one political party, or two, for that matter, feel that they have no representation on the tariff board or tariff commission, a doubt is going to prevail in the minds of such party that the other side is not dealing squarely with them.

Mr. FORDNEY. I agree with the gentleman, and I thank him.

Mr. BORLAND. I will say, in that connection, Mr. Speaker, that I believe that even under a partisan tariff board, if it existed and was clothed with sufficient power, a great deal of information could be gathered and a great deal of difficulty could be eliminated in the formation of a tariff. I do not believe a man's views on the tariff ought to color his reports on facts which he ascertains; and, while I am arguing for a nonpartisan board, I feel that a board could be constituted, even of a partisan character, that could honestly and fairly and fully report the facts, so that I would not feel, not having given the tariff board any further powers in the last analysis, that their political complexion would be absolutely fatal to their usefulness.

It is apparent that even in times of peace when the world conditions of commerce are normal, the factors entering into the formation of tariff schedules change with more or less rapidity. New enterprises are formed and grow into commanding proportions, new sources of raw material and new methods of adapting existing material are discovered; new and improved means of transportation are opened; new markets are created. There is a constant shifting of the courses of capital, labor, and raw material, a constant improvement both in mechanical devices and in methods of marketing. A rate of duty which would have one effect to-day may have a totally different effect in a year. A duty which would be negligible under some circumstances may by continued reduction of the margin of profit become prohibitive. A rate which would produce a substantial revenue at one stage of the world's commerce may by successive changes result in no revenue at all. So that, even if it could be relieved from all of the disgusting incidents of greed and politics a general revision of the tariff when more than 4,000 schedules are changed at the same time is the most unscientific, unsatisfactory, and disastrous method that could possibly be devised. It is both burdensome and unnecessary. A permanent tariff commission should be engaged in the constant study of all of the factors which effect the levying of duties, and these factors are as diverse as those which enter into every phase of commercial life from the individual success of a single merchant to the commercial dominance of a nation. Such a commission should have full power to gather the necessary information and should give a fair opportunity to all business men liable to be affected, either favorably or adversely, to be heard.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for 20 minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. BORLAND. I have heard men time after time gravely and vociferously argue upon this floor about an alleged difference in the cost of labor in this country and in foreign countries that they have named—countries they have never been in—where the information they invoked was purely hearsay. They assumed that was the sole factor entering into the question of making a tariff bill. As a matter of fact there are many factors entering into the construction of a tariff bill. Often the duty exceeds the total cost of labor entering into the production of the article. We know that in most articles the vital question is not only that of labor, but of raw material, of fuel, of overhead charges, and of selling cost. I could name article after article where the selling cost is the largest percentage of the whole ultimate price.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Would not the element of cost in fuel and selling cost and other items you mention be labor?

Mr. BORLAND. No; not necessarily. How much is the percentage of selling cost in automobiles? It runs up to nearly 70 per cent in many cases. What does that include? It includes full page advertisements in the magazines; it includes exhibitions at shows; it includes joy rides for prospective customers, and it includes plate-glass windows on prominent streets. A little of it is labor, and much of it is commission. Everything on earth is figured in that selling cost.

Mr. FESS. How much of the fuel cost is labor?

Mr. BORLAND. When you speak of labor, you speak of the labor specific to that item. If you have a mind to make that kind of a sweeping classification, of course you can trace every cost down to labor, except interest and profits.

Mr. FESS. I thought you would lead us to believe that labor has not anything to do with this.

Mr. BORLAND. I thought I tried to make myself clear about that. Perhaps I was unfortunate. When I speak of labor and raw material I speak of leather coming in as raw material, and by the labor I mean the labor used in turning the leather into shoes. Of course we understand that the leather could not have been produced without labor. So there is a labor cost in the leather and also a labor cost in the cow, but the leather is the raw material as far as that particular factory is concerned.

Changes should be made from time to time in the revenue laws as necessity appears, not by any method of bargain and trade or as the reward of or punishment for political action, but upon reasons affecting the commercial development of the country. The advantages of a tariff law constructed under such auspices should be first a scientific classification of schedules to avoid confusion in administering the customs laws and to simplify the law and aid the business men in understanding it; second, an adjustment of rates in accordance with the revenue to be raised and the results to be accomplished; third, a strengthening of the National Government in the intelligent promotion of foreign trade; fourth, adequate provision for the construction and change of commercial treaties.

I believe that a tariff commission is necessary even from the standpoint of one who believes in the fiction of protection, but it is more necessary in the successful construction of a bill to provide revenue.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. The gentleman said a moment ago that the rates should be adjusted in accordance with the revenue to be raised and the results to be accomplished. What results other than revenue are to be accomplished under the theory of a Democratic tariff for revenue only?

Mr. BORLAND. I will say to the gentleman that a great many results can be accomplished.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. If it is a tariff for revenue only—and you have used the word "only" in your platform—if you levy a tariff for the purposes of revenue only, for what other results do you levy it? Does the gentleman mean protection to American industry?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; you can put it that way if you choose, from the standpoint of a protective tariff.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Then you must strike out the "only" from your platform.

Mr. BORLAND. I will try to answer the gentleman fairly. I am not a protectionist; but when I speak of the possibilities of a tariff board I do not eliminate that factor, so that when the gentleman smiles and sits down he has not quite got my answer. He asked me if in the results obtained I meant protection. That is what a Republican would mean in voting for a tariff board.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit another interruption?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. The gentleman said a moment ago that we should levy the duties with a view to securing revenue and other results.

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. What other results are to be secured under a Democratic tariff when the Democratic platform declares that it shall be levied for revenue only?

Mr. BORLAND. I will answer the gentleman. I said "other results," as far as the Republicans are concerned, would mean protection. As far as the Democrats are concerned, the gentleman asks me whether there would be other results. Unquestionably there would, and nobody except a man who is talking about the tariff in a purely superficial political sense on the stump would pretend that there is not. No revenue duty can be levied——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin again rose.

Mr. BORLAND. Just a moment. Let me finish my answer. No revenue duty can be levied without having some effect of incidental protection. You can not levy any duty for any purpose that it does not have some effect on the question of protection. And if the gentleman will pardon me, he has asked what other results would follow, and I think I have a right to answer his question in my own way. There is another result. If you have a choice of two or more commodities upon which you may levy a duty, a great question of policy would arise as to which you would choose, even from a revenue standpoint.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says that I have asked whether other results would follow. I did not ask that. I asked an interpretation of the gentleman's own statement when he spoke of the rates which he said should be levied with a view to securing revenue and with an eye to other results. What are the other results to secure which a Democratic tariff is levied? If it must be for purposes of revenue only, then there must be no looking for other results. The Democratic Party has repeatedly declared that a tariff levied for any other purpose than to secure revenue—that is, for the protection of American industry—violates the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. BORLAND. Now, I think I have answered the gentleman's question, but if I have not made it clear to him I will. I have learned by experience here in this House, in the last seven years, that even in levying a revenue tariff it is impossible to eliminate all incidental protection.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is true; but——

Mr. BORLAND. Now, will the gentleman just pardon me——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I want to say that the gentleman has not answered my question. Of course there is incidental protection, but do you levy it for that purpose?

Mr. BORLAND. No.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. You levy it for revenue only, but you said a moment ago that it should be levied with a view to securing revenue, and with an eye to the other results.

Mr. BORLAND. The other results; yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is, you levy it for two purposes—for revenue purposes and for the other results. What are the other results? That is my question.

Mr. BORLAND. Now, let me answer the gentleman's question again. If I believed in protection as a theory, I might seek to lay even a revenue duty so as to produce the highest possible amount of protection; but if I were distinctly opposed to protection, as I am, and desired to eliminate it as far as possible from a revenue law, I might have another set of results in mind; but I can not eliminate that result entirely, and neither can the gentleman. Nobody can construct a tariff law, and nobody ever did construct a tariff law, that did not have some incidental effect upon particular lines of business. If there is any Democrat who believes that can be done, all he has got to do is to give the matter a little more study. I have no doubt that men, before they come to this House and when they are on the stump running for constable or coroner, will get out and talk about there being no protection in a tariff law; but no tariff law can be framed which will not give some incidental protection. We are talking now as a matter of scientific study.

Mr. SIMS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. SIMS. The gentleman refers to the question of policy, and asks whether we should levy a revenue duty on one thing or another.

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. SIMS. Does the gentleman mean that any tariff board is to report to this House upon a question of policy?

Mr. BORLAND. No; but I will say what I do mean. We might have a very grave doubt in our minds as to the levying of a duty on wool or sugar. We might find that the revenue produced might be equal, but when we ascertained what the result would be from the facts reported by the tariff board, we might resolve that doubt in favor of one or the other.

Mr. SIMS. Is it not the policy of the tariff for revenue only to get the greatest amount of revenue with the least protection, and is it not the policy of the protectionists to get the greatest amount of protection with the least revenue, and does it take a board to let us know what that means?

Mr. BORLAND No; but I will tell the gentleman why I favor a tariff board. I have seen duties levied on articles, under a Republican tariff law at least, where there was absolutely no necessity for protection, no chance for protection, where they were entirely prohibitive in character and intended to be so.

Mr. SIMS. And would have been if we had 40 tariff boards?

Mr. BORLAND. No, they would not. If they had been the public would have had ample information as to what that political party was doing.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. I will.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman has stated that in the tariff for revenue only there is a purpose of incidental protection. If you are going to put me out of life by drowning me, all that is necessary is to put me one-half an inch under water, and I will drown as quickly as if I were 10 feet under water, for you shut off my breath and I am gone. Now, as the labor cost in production in any article, no matter what it is, is at least 90 per cent of the total cost, and when our labor cost is double in this country what it is in any other country in the world, unless you give enough protection to our industries to make up the difference in cost of labor between here and abroad, you will put the man out of business in this country unless he can get his labor as cheaply as they get it in other countries. Is that not right?

Mr. BORLAND. No; if that were true, or if any part of it was true, we would not be able to sell any goods outside of our own country. We would have to erect a Chinese wall around our country to keep the commercial pirates from getting in here. The fact that we are able to sell abroad demonstrates one of two things—either that the manufacturer is paying less for labor and raw material than he ought to in view of the protection he claims and therefore is able to compete with the foreign competitor in a foreign market or else he is deceiving the American people as to the conditions in foreign countries and that labor cost is not so cheap and conditions are not so poor for labor in the foreign countries that we have got to erect a tariff wall to keep their products out of the country. If what the gentleman says is so, it follows by inevitable logic that we can not go outside of this country and sell in competition with those countries. The minute that we enter the markets of the world we do it on one of two bases—either that the man who demands protection of these goods has lied about the conditions abroad that he had to compete with or he is paying an unjust low scale of wages and for raw material in this country. That is the inevitable logic of facts as to what the protected manufacturer does to labor in this country.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. Does not the gentleman think that the price of labor must take into consideration the element of efficiency?

Mr. BORLAND. Unquestionably. Figuring out the cost of goods the criterion is not the price paid for labor but the units produced. If the factory turns out more units of product, even though it pays higher wages, the cost is correspondingly less. If wages were any criterion, why do you not go to Hindustan and make linoleum and oilcloth where the jute is raised? Why do you bring it here for our workmen, if they are not superior? Why do you not go there where they pay 18 cents a day on the Ganges? You would not bring all of the jute from Hindustan here if it was only a question of 18 cents a day wages. But you do bring it here and pay $2.50 and $3 a day for labor. Why? Because our workmen are more able to make the goods and you are able to put the goods down in the foreign markets in competition with the goods of other countries.

Mr. FORDNEY. Was not this done under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law?

Mr. BORLAND. Of course, goods were sold cheaper abroad than at home.

Mr. FORDNEY. Let me finish my question. Was it not true that there was a protective tariff on these goods we produced, jute and everything else?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; I suppose that is true.

Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman may be right in some of his theories; I do not say that he is not. Prior to the war in Europe, Germany sold abroad her fabricated steel as low as $18 a ton, and yet she sold to her own people in Germany that same fabricated steel for $30 a ton. She dumped her surplus abroad, crushing out of existence her competitors.

Mr. BORLAND. Well, I am going to take the statement of the gentleman from Michigan as being absolutely correct. Then, upon what basis do the German manufacturers pay wages; on the basis of $18 a ton, or on the basis of $30 a ton?

Mr. FORDNEY. It was shown by the testimony furnished the Ways and Means Committee that the German scale of wages, although her labor is the most efficient in the world, is less by one-half than that paid in the steel mills of the United States.

Mr. BORLAND. The wage scale then was fixed on a basis of a sale at $18 a ton outside of Germany. Therefore the price of $30 at home did not put a nickel into the pockets of the German workmen.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not contend that it did.

Mr. BORLAND. But that is the contention of the gentleman's party, that part of this tariff goes into the pockets of the workingman.

Mr. FORDNEY. I do not know what their actual cost per ton is, but I do know what the actual cost per ton in this country is, and that the cost of labor in the production of a ton of steel in the United States is 80 per cent of its total cost.

Mr. BORLAND. Can we not compete with Germany in the production of steel?

Mr. FORDNEY. No; and we do not. The testimony given by Mr. Schwab under oath was to the effect that there had not been one pound of steel rails sold by any American steel manufacturer in any steel-producing country in the world in 10 years, except a little that was sold in northwestern Canada, and that steel brought to the American manufacturer $2 per ton above the price that it was sold for in the United States.

Mr. BORLAND. Is the gentleman confessing now that he makes a tariff on the testimony of Mr. Schwab? That is exactly what we want a tariff commission for.

Mr. FORDNEY. I would take his word under oath as quickly as I would that of anyone else.

Mr. BORLAND. Is it not a fact that American steel is sold abroad?

Mr. FORDNEY. Can the gentleman give me any reason why I should not believe Mr. Schwab under oath?

Mr. BORLAND. I can; and that is that the facts are to be ascertained entirely from nonprejudiced and disinterested sources.

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, be fair.

Mr. BORLAND. I am sincere about that. I do not think the sworn statement of a manufacturer is the only evidence.

Mr. FORDNEY. I will tell my friend that I am just enough of a Christian believer that I will believe any man under oath until it can be proven that he is a falsifier.

Mr. BORLAND. Then it would be necessary to prove that he is a liar.

Mr. FORDNEY. Can the gentleman prove that Mr. Schwab was mistaken when he made that statement? If so, I want him to prove it to me.

Mr. BORLAND. My Christianity leads me to hear both sides before I judge, and not to accept an ex parte statement of an interested witness.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I want to state the other side.

Mr. BORLAND. But I will have to have more time.

Mr. RAINEY. I will ask unanimous consent for five minutes more.

Mr. BORLAND. Make it 15.

Mr. RAINEY. Make it 15 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I must reserve the right to object. We have some reports from the Committee on Printing that are of importance to the House, and I doubt whether we can settle the whole tariff question this afternoon.

Mr. RAINEY. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Missouri may proceed for five minutes.

Mr. MANN. I have no objection for five minutes.

Mr. BORLAND. I would like to have the five minutes for myself.

Mr. MANN. But we gave the gentleman 15 minutes and he would not use it. We have horse books and cow books that are of much more importance to the House than an academic discussion of the tariff, which no one will agree with on either side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman from Missouri may be extended for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes.

Mr. RAINEY. I want to say to my friend from Michigan that if Mr. Schwab did make a statement of that kind—I do not remember it—the proof can be easily ascertained that he was stating what was not true. At that time there was a world trust in steel prices, an agreement throughout the world that the steel-producing countries would not interfere with each other; that no American steel was to be sold in Germany and no German fabricated steel in the United States. They divided up between them the debatable ground in the countries of South America and Africa, where there were no steel industries.

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, the gentleman is wrong in that.

Mr. RAINEY. I think not.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman furnish some evidence of that combination or trust that he speaks of? I never heard of it except from the lips of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY].

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, I must decline to yield further.

As to the powers of such a commission, the suggestion goes no further than that it be clothed with power to ascertain and determine the facts upon which the schedules should be based. The present method of determining the facts by hearings before the committees of Congress at rare intervals is bound to be burdensome, unscientific, and unsatisfactory. The cost of such a commission would be saved to the American business man in time, expense, and gain of productive power. There are two factors in the present situation of the civilized world which make imperative the creation of such a commission at this time. The first is the existence of the European war and the second is the necessity for the expansion of American foreign commerce. No economist doubts that immediately after the conclusion of peace in Europe each of the great nations must begin a reconstruction of its entire fiscal policy, and especially that with relation to tariff duties.

It is freely predicted that the clash of arms will be followed by a commercial warfare in which the ammunition will be legislation authorizing or encouraging commercial reprisals. Wisdom dictates that among our other plans of preparedness we should be prepared for this commercial struggle. Commercial treaties the world over must all be recast. Commercial discriminations must be expected and relentless competition encouraged by national power may easily become the settled policy of nations which find their industries impoverished by the long struggle. Not only will the neutral markets of the world be the prey of these forces but even our own markets will be attacked. There may be no open door in China, and, in fact, no open door anywhere that any nation has the power to close. The doors of national trade may open only to the skillfully constructed key of a commercial treaty, and such a treaty must be founded upon an intelligent grasp of the commercial and industrial possibilities of the country which offers it and the country to which it is offered. We in America are woefully deficient not only in our grasp of foreign trade conditions but even of our own commercial possibilities. Our long adherence to the protective tariff has made us provincial and for more than two generations limited the bulk of our foreign trade to exports of raw material which we sold at highly competitive prices.

This leads to the second thought, which is that, even if the war had not come but certainly in view of the present world situation, America must prepare to expand her foreign commerce. The babes in the woods were not more helpless than we have been in the past in writing commercial treaties. I may be mistaken, but I do not know of a single commercial treaty in which we have not been placed at a disadvantage. In the last decade American trade has undergone a great change. From an exporter of raw material we have become an exporter of manufactured goods. Manufactured goods are upon a different basis of competition from raw material. Foreign nations would always take our cotton and our wheat at some price, but no nation will buy our manufactured goods unless we not only meet our competitors in quality and price but cultivate some of the arts of salesmanship. The neutral markets of the world lie ready for our enterprise, but we can not blindly and blunderingly erect a tariff wall around our country keeping out the products of all other nations and expect them to come and buy our goods when we buy nothing from them.

International trade is reciprocal; even a line of steamers or other transportation facilities must have a load each way. If we expect South America to buy from us, we must be prepared to take some of their products at prices and under conditions which are attractive to them. The great question, therefore, affecting the future of American prosperity in securing a foreign trade in neutral markets is what products of foreign countries can we safely take. What can we use in this country to the advantage of our own capital and our own labor and what may we give in exchange of the output of our own industries. It is an economic loss for us to send abroad wheat in competition with some of the South American countries when with our supply of fuel, capital, and labor we could manufacture the wheat into flour or, better still, into packed biscuits and breadstuffs and sell it to many of the same South American countries. If we take the rubber, hardwood, and forest products of South America, are we not providing the raw material upon which to use our capital and our labor, and can not we sell to them furniture, pianos, automobiles, belting, mining machinery, and other products of our factories?

It is not suggested at this time that the tariff commission should be given the power to fix rates or even to suggest them. Congress has exclusive power of legislation and is charged by the Federal Constitution with levying taxes, including duties upon imports. There are some who urge that the tariff commission is unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative power which Congress can not make. No such charge can be leveled against the suggested plan. In fact, the plan could go much further and still be within the constitutional powers of Congress. It would be possible for Congress to prescribe a series of alternative rates or a maximum and minimum schedule of rates and confer power upon the commission, upon the ascertainment of certain facts, to put in force or to suspend from operation certain portions of the law. This is now well settled by the decision of the Supreme Court. A provision which occurred in the McKinley tariff law of 1890, authorizing the President to suspend the free admission of sugar when he deemed the United States discriminated against by any country, was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States in Field against Clark (143 U. S., 649–692), Lamar and Fuller dissenting.

The Congress may not delegate its purely legislative power to a commission, but having laid down the general rules of action under which a commission shall proceed it may require of that commission the application of such rules to particular situations and the investigation of facts with a view to making orders in a particular matter within the rules laid down by the Congress (I. C. C. v. Goodrich Transit Co., 224 U. S., 194–214; K. C. S. Ry. v. U. S., 231 U. S., 423–443.)

It would seem that Congress might enact a standard schedule of tariff rates and provide for the increase or reduction of rates according to a sliding scale depending either on revenue receipts on or the rates of imports to domestic consumption, or on some other principle, while delegating to a commission the work of determining the facts and applying the law to them. The orders of a tariff commission would be reviewable by the courts on questions of law only, not on questions of fact. They would be analogous in this respect to regulations of the Treasury Department under the present tariff law, or to tariff provisions contingent upon the determination of certain facts by the President as was provided in the Payne-Aldrich law.

I know that the proposal to establish a permanent tariff commission and take the tariff out of politics will come as a distinct shock to some gentlemen who think that the tariff is the only bond of party unity and must be preserved as a partisan issue. However, the time has gone by when the American business public will tolerate that brand of politics. Business men, large or small, throughout the country to-day are demanding a tariff commission. The cry is let there be light, and any statesman or politician who opposes a nonpartisan tariff commission lays himself under the suspicion of playing politics with a great business question. The present session of Congress will, I believe, pass a bill providing for such a commission, and in so doing will place another star in the diadem of Democracy as an exponent of progressive American Government. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

DISEASES OF THE HORSE.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 13 (H. Rept. 88).

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 100,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of the Horse, the same to be first revised and brought to date under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, 70,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 30,000 for the use of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

SPECIAL REPORT ON DISEASES OF CATTLE.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer another privileged resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 14 (H. Rept. 89).

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 100,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of Cattle, the same to be first revised and brought to date under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, 70,000 copies for use of the House of Representatives and 30,000 copies for use of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

REPORT OF ALASKAN ENGINEERING COMMISSION.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 11 (H. Rept. 91).

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the reports of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, in two volumes, for the period from March 12, 1914, to December 31, 1915, inclusive, together with accompanying maps, charts, and profiles, be printed as a House document, and that 5,000 additional copies be printed, of which 2,000 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 1,500 copies for the use of the Senate, and 1,500 copies for the use of the commission.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana what this report will cost?

Mr. BARNHART. The Clerk has the report of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Printing having had under consideration the House concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 11) providing for the printing of 5,000 copies of the reports of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, reports the same back to the House with the recommendation that the resolution be agreed to. The estimated cost will be $7,851.39. The unencumbered balance of the allotment for printing and binding for Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, is $789,378.26.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire if this report has been printed by the department?

Mr. BARNHART. It has not.

Mr. FOSTER. Then may I inquire what particular advantage there will be in getting this report printed at this time as a House document?

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HOUSTON], who is the author of the bill.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, in response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Illinois I want to say that the act providing for the construction of the Alaska Railway provided that the agents and officers appointed by the President to build and construct that railroad should make an annual report of their doings in the premises, of their work, to the President of the United States, and that report should be submitted to Congress annually, and oftener if it was required by the President. This is an annual report made, and it is a showing that it is important that every Member of the House should see and also every Member of the Senate. It is carrying out a law which involves a new work in a new field on which the Government has embarked. It fully sets forth what has been accomplished already, and it will acquaint the Members of Congress as to what has been done with the money that Congress has appropriated for this purpose. And I think it very important, in order that Congress may understand thoroughly what has been done in this great enterprise, that this report be put in the hands of Congress.

Mr. FOSTER. Can the gentleman inform the House in reference to the maps which it is stated shall be printed in this report? What kind of maps are they, and how many of them, and what is likely to be the cost of printing?

Mr. MANN. It can not be very large if the whole amount is $7,800.

Mr. HOUSTON. I can not give the exact proportion, but it provides for the printing of maps, charts, and profiles in such forms that will be serviceable. Now, it is very important, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois, that we have those maps and these charts, because it will be impossible to understand thoroughly what they are doing and what work is accomplished, and its character without these maps and charts in order to get the location and geographical situation in order to give a clear conception of just what has been done.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOUSTON. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I take it this first report shows the line of road they have purchased up there, and also as far as they have got the line of the continuation of that road?

Mr. HOUSTON. Yes, sir. This report shows that. It shows the road, and it shows the condition of the road they purchased; it states fully as to the purchase of that road just what it cost, and so forth. It states also the cost of construction of the road that has been built beyond the end of its line that has been bought.

Mr. MANN. What is the total limit of cost of this Alaska road?

Mr. HOUSTON. Thirty-five million dollars.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I want to say—I think my colleague anticipated something what I was going to say when he interrupted with his question—I want to say this: That this road is to cost $35,000,000 and the commission has to report to Congress the first annual report that is to be made, I do not know whether we ought each year to print a report of this kind or not, but I do believe that at least at this time we should know something of what is being done and I shall not object under those circumstances.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I want to offer an amendment to the resolution. I move to amend by striking out the word "two," in line 8, and insert the word "three" instead; and by striking out the words "five hundred," in lines 9 and 10; and by striking out the words "five hundred," in line 11, thereby allowing 3,000 to the House, 1,000 to the Senate, and 1,000 to the commission.

Mr. MANN. Would not the gentleman be willing to increase the number from 5,000 to 6,000 and give that additional number to the House without interfering with the balance? This is one of the most interesting things that the Government has ever undertaken, something akin to the construction of the Panama Canal.

I am very sure that there are many people in the country—engineers, librarians, and so forth—very much interested in a report like this. It never will be reprinted. I think the department ought to have 1,500 copies, and as the resolution provided for 2,000 copies for the House and 1,500 for the Senate, and we are at least entitled to twice the number the Senate has, I think we ought to increase our number to 3,000, and even then each Member will receive a very small quota of a document that in many places will be very greatly in demand.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask to withdraw the amendment and offer the following instead:

Amend by inserting the word "six" instead of "five" in line 7.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

There was no objection.

Mr. BARNHART. And also by inserting the word "three" instead of "two," in line 8, and by striking out "five hundred" in line 11.

Mr. MANN. You do not have to strike out anything.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the resolution reported as amended, so that we will know exactly what it is.

The SPEAKER. We will have the amendment read first, and then we will have the whole thing read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 7, strike out the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six."

Page 1, line 8, strike out the word "two" and insert in lieu thereof the word "three."

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the resolution with the amendments included.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 11.

Resolved, etc., That the reports of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, in two volumes, for the period from March 12, 1914, to December 31, 1915, inclusive, together with accompanying maps, charts, and profiles, be printed as a House Document, and that 6,000 additional copies be printed, of which 3,000 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 1,500 for the use of the Senate, and 1,500 copies for the use of the commission.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

MEDICO-MILITARY ASPECTS OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 12 (H. Rept. 92).

Resolved, etc., That there be printed and bound 10,000 copies of the Report on the Medico-Military Aspects of the European War by Surg. A. M. Fauntleroy, United States Navy, 6,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 3,000 for the use of the Senate and an additional 1,000 copies for the use of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy Department.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART] if the department has the money for printing these reports; and, if so, why the necessity for coming to the House and printing them out of the amount appropriated for the printing for Congress?

Mr. BARNHART. This is out of the usual work of the Navy Department, because it will not be used for the Navy Department alone, but for the benefit of the War Department and for the benefit of the people of the country generally. I thought of that phase of the situation, but it seemed to me that this is an exceptional case, and I believe that at this time, when we are talking so much of preparation and the great necessity of getting ready, we can not have too much information, inasmuch as it is as inexpensive as this seems to be.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, I will say to the gentleman from Indiana that I think it is an important document and ought to be printed. The only thing is that we get the departments in the habit of coming to Congress and having a lot of printing done.

Mr. MANN. The department did not ask for this.

Mr. FOSTER. I did not mean that, possibly, but I mean it is done by Congress out of an appropriation allowed it for printing instead of the amount that was appropriated to the department for printing. However, I am not going to object to this.

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the chairman of the committee what rule his committee follows in the apportionment of volumes for the use of the Members of the House and those of the Senate? This resolution, I notice, is reported as introduced by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. EDMONDS], granting to the House only twice the number allotted to the Senate, whereas our membership is more than four times as large.

Mr. BARNHART. In reply to the gentleman I will say that the usual proportion is 70 to 30, and if he desires to offer an amendment in that proportion, it will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will it be satisfactory to make it 8 to 2?

Mr. MANN. The usual proportion ever since I have been here has been 2 to 1.

Mr. BARNHART. Two to one.

Mr. STAFFORD. The usual proportion ever since the gentleman has been here has been 2 to 1, but the membership of the House has been changing more greatly than the membership of the Senate.

Mr. MANN. I am not so sure there has been so much difference since I have been here.

Mr. STAFFORD. The membership when the gentleman came here was 356, and now it is 435.

Another matter I would like to direct the attention of the gentleman to is as to whether the resolution as introduced provides for the printing of 10,000 or 11,000 copies. I direct his attention to the phraseology in next to the last line, which says, "And an additional 1,000 copies"; there being in the body of the resolution provision made for the distribution of 9,000, and an additional 1,000 for the use of the Navy Department.

Mr. BARNHART. I think in order to make it perfect the word "additional" should be stricken out, and if there is no objection, I shall ask that it be done.

Mr. STAFFORD. What is the suggestion as to the distribution, because I really think the House ought to have a larger quota than the 2 to 1?

Mr. BARNHART. I am just submitting to the gentleman that if he wants to offer an amendment I will not offer any objection, but this is the proportion the gentleman used in writing the bill. He evidently had made some investigation, and it is a document that will be of nation-wide importance, and doubtless all called for, however it may be distributed. If they can not get them from a Member of the House, they can get them from a Senator.

Mr. STAFFORD. I will not in this instance offer an amendment, but I do hope that when gentlemen introduce resolutions in the future they will bear in mind the fact of the larger membership of the House and the demand upon Members for documents.

Mr. MANN. The Senate and the House do not always agree about these things. The Senate passed some resolutions the other day for a horse book and a cattle book, and they proposed to take, I will not say most of them, but about half of them. Now, the House is sending over a proposition to the Senate, and we in turn are trying to "hog" it. Ever since I have been here my experience has been that once in a while such a resolution gets in inadvertently, but if it is important the House gets two-thirds and the Senate one-third.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the other resolutions we are getting more than two-thirds.

Mr. MANN. That has not passed the Senate yet. They have taken nearly half themselves.

Mr. BARNHART. The committee just wanted to show a strong front.

The SPEAKER. Does any gentleman offer another amendment?

Mr. BARNHART. I did not know that unanimous consent had been granted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the words "an additional," in line 7.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7 of the resolution strike out the words "an additional."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPORT OF INVESTIGATION OF CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I send to the Clerk's desk a privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 80 (H. Rept. 93).

Resolution for printing 10,000 copies of the report of the investigation of the Interstate Commerce Commission of the financial affairs of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co.

Resolved, That there be printed 10,000 copies of the report of the investigation of the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to the financial transactions, history, and operation of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., being No. 6834 of the docket of said commission.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. BARNHART, from the Committee on Printing, makes the following report (to accompany H. Res. 80):

The Committee on Printing, having had under consideration the House resolution (H. Res. 80) providing for the printing of 10,000 copies of the report of the investigation of the Interstate Commerce Commission of the financial affairs of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., reports the same back to the House with the recommendation that the resolution be agreed to.

The estimated cost will be $107.92.

The unencumbered balance of the allotment for printing and binding for Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, is $787,378.26.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. Yes; I yield.

Mr. FOSTER. In the urgent deficiency bill there was given the Interstate Commerce Commission $10,000 for additional printing. It seems to me that this is a case purely of Congress providing out of its appropriation for printing a document that comes from the Interstate Commerce Commission; and, so far as I am concerned at this time, in view of the fact that we have appropriated $10,000 as an urgent deficiency for the Interstate Commerce Commission, unless it is shown that this amount to print these reports on the Rock Island Railroad investigation is a proper thing, I could not this afternoon permit this to go through without some further explanation.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. BARNHART. Yes; I yield.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I was in hope of inducing the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER] to withdraw any objection he might have.

Mr. FOSTER. I shall be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. It is not the Interstate Commerce Commission that is asking for the printing of the report of this investigation. This report was printed in the same manner as the report of other decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission. There were something like three or four thousand copies printed originally, which were sent to its mailing list and Members of Congress and used up in that manner, until only about 150 copies remained, being used in the ordinary and customary manner of the Interstate Commerce Commission. There was a good deal of demand for the report, and, although I wrote down at once for some twenty copies of the report, I was unable to obtain them.

The importance of having the report printed lies in this, that it is an official record condensed of the evidence taken before the Interstate Commerce Commission showing the most gigantic robberies ever committed on any corporation engaged in interstate commerce. It shows facts utterly unbelievable. If a man went out on the stump or stated it on the floor of this House he would not be believed if he was not backed up by the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission after proper investigation and hearings on both sides in relation to the matter.

In the further consideration of the matters before this House there undoubtedly will come bills for issuance of securities, bills for the control of corporation carriers in interstate commerce, bills in relation to holding companies, especially involved in this investigation, and other matters which may all be combined in one bill or may be brought before this House by several bills. The Members of the House, I am satisfied, and the country at large want to absolutely know what are the real facts in the case, and it is impossible that they should be informed unless we have some such method as this. The amount involved is trifling; it is less than $100. I think that the committee states the cost is $101, but I had supposed it would only cost $75. If we can not get 10,000 copies printed, I would take 5,000. This is of the highest importance, and the report should be printed. I know, when I went before the Committee on Interstate Commerce and stated to them that the reports which were being issued by the directors of that company at that time were not within $10,000,000 of being correct, that there had been stolen between seven and eigth million dollars out of the treasury of the company, they looked at me with incredulity.

Mr. ADAMSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I yield.

Mr. ADAMSON. I understand from the gentleman that he is asking for a print here because it is impossible to secure the print from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ADAMSON. I remember that the gentleman applied to me, and I advised him to introduce a resolution and have it referred to the Committee on Printing. I take great pleasure in stating for the benefit of the gentleman from Illinois that if it had come within my jurisdiction I should have recognized the necessity and advised the printing.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman that I have had a communication from two Senators asking if there would be a favorable report on this resolution, and if not, they would introduce it in the Senate, so that it makes little difference whether it is printed here or not, except that if it is printed here the Members of the House will have the use of it.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I wish to say that the Senate has ordered 10,000 copies of the investigation of the New Haven Railroad printed and 1,000 additional for some special purpose, making a total of 11,000 in all, and of the two this is the more important.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I want to ask the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] if this is the subject about which he made a speech in the House some time ago?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The same subject on which I made the speech in the House.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Then permit me to say that I heard that speech, in which the gentleman narrated in detail frauds of corporate management which, as he said, were almost unbelievable. I believed that they had been perpetrated because many of the things the gentleman stated in great detail as a part of his own personal knowledge and experience. This report being the result of the investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a subject so important to the shippers of the West and to the Congress of the United States in perfecting the legislation it is expected to enact, I sincerely hope that the report will be printed and made accessible.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARNHART. I yield.

Mr. FOSTER. I fully agree with all the gentleman from Iowa and the gentleman from Wisconsin have said. In my judgment, there has been no greater fraud committed on the American people than the looting of the Rock Island Railroad. It has been a scandal and a disgrace to the business world. They ruined the great Rock Island Railroad that ran through a section of the Western States. This road at one time was the finest in Illinois. But a lot of men got hold of that property and stole from it until there came the great crash, which has brought such a disastrous result to it. There is no question about that. The only thing to which I wish to call the attention of the House at this time is that not many days ago we gave an additional appropriation for printing, which can be used by the Interstate Commerce Commission for this very purpose. We gave them $10,000.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. FOSTER. Just a moment. It seems to me that under circumstances of this kind the resolution ought not to pass; and while I agree with all that gentlemen have said, and while I would agree to more than they have said—because I have known something about the management of the Rock Island Railroad—yet I do not believe this is a proper way to get these reports printed. It should be done by the Interstate Commerce Commission. One day we give this commission $10,000, and they have charge of these matters and can print these reports if they will and if they are of such great importance, as I know they are.

Mr. ADAMSON. If my friend from Illinois will yield, I wish to say to him that the resolution for an investigation came to our committee. We had exhaustive hearings, and developed things as bad or worse than gentlemen have intimated here this afternoon. To show the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER] that I have the question of economy at heart as much as he has, I will state to him that our committee suggested to the Interstate Commerce Commission that instead of duplicating the expense by having a long and expensive special investigation they expedite the investigation of this railroad in their physical valuation proceedings. They agreed with us, and did that. They have made the investigation and have printed the ordinary quota of this report—as many copies as they ever print in ordinary cases. Now they have taken the position that they ought not to print any more. The amount allowed them in the urgent deficiency bill is to cover the expense of their ordinary printing, and they absolutely refuse to print a larger number of copies of the reoprt. So the only remedy of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] was to come to the House and ask us to print, for the benefit of Members, the necessary copies which the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to print. The expense is very small in comparison with the amount that our committee saved to the Government by refusing a special investigation and adopting the other expedient. So I think the gentleman from Illinois ought not to object.

Mr. FOSTER. That situation came up and the gentleman managed it the way he states, which I think was a wise thing to do. We have this evidence, which is valuable to the House. But that is not the question I am discussing. There are a thousand things that are valuable to the House, and yet it seems to me there is a right way to get at them. I am not saying a thing in the world against the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BARNHART] for bringing in this report, because I think he did what he believed to be the right thing to do, and he is careful as to expenditures for printing. I do not like to object to these things that the House thinks necessary.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. FOSTER. In just a moment. Let me finish what I am going to say and then I shall be through. I wish to say this, that I am not going to make any serious objection to the passage of this resolution, as I might do at this time by raising the point of no quorum, at this late hour in the evening, when there are so few Members here, and so prevent the passage of the resolution to-night. But, so far as I am concerned, in the future, unless a very exceptional reason can be shown, when Congress makes an appropriation for printing, as it has done in this case, and then gives an additional $10,000 in an urgent deficiency appropriation bill—and I do not know how much more will be appropriated in the general deficiency bill—I shall object to every one of these resolutions going through and shall do whatever I can to defeat them.

Mr. BARNHART. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the remarks just made by the gentleman from Illinois, with which I agree in a general way, I want to state for the information of the gentleman and for the information of the House, that the Committee on Printing has been as diligent as possible in attempting to prevent the reporting of resolutions of the kind to which the gentleman from Illinois refers. The chairman of the Printing Committee has from time to time objected to unanimous consent for resolutions providing for the printing of reports for departments when such resolutions have been offered on the floor of the House. But here comes a little report, the cost of printing of which will be inconsequential, a report which is important for the information of the country, which the committee believes the Interstate Commerce Commission probably would not distribute as well as the Members of the House, and therefore we decided to report favorably the resolution, and I hope that the resolution will pass.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 47 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday, January 31, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting list of cases which were dismissed by the court under the act of March 4, 1915 (H. Doc. No. 630); to the Committee on War Claims and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, submitting facts relating to estimates of appropriations (p. 806, Book of Estimates for 1917) for printing and binding for the Treasury Department (H. Doc. No. 631); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of Labor, transmitting draft of a proposed joint resolution authorizing the Department of Labor to edit and publish certain studies turned over to said department by the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations (H. Doc. No. 632); to the Committee on Printing and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, reporting that the Navy Department has considered, ascertained, and adjusted and determined that $155.06 is due G. W. Webber and J. H. Thomas for damages for which a vessel of the Navy was responsible (H. Doc. No. 633); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of War submitting supplemental estimate of appropriation required for the service of the War Department for barracks and quarters, Philippine Islands, repair and restoration of buildings destroyed by storms (H. Doc. No. 634); to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. DENT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the resolution (S. J. Res. 76) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan 1,000 tents and 1,000 cots for the use of the encampment of the United Confederate Veterans, to be held at Birmingham, Ala., in May, 1916, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 90), which said resolution and report were referred to the House Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3415) granting a pension to Maggie Barron; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 4361) granting an increase of pension to Michael Nolan; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 2779) granting a pension to John R. Malone; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BURNETT: A bill (H. R. 10384) to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 10385) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917; to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. FLOOD: A bill (H. R. 10386) to tax munitions of war; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. McCRACKEN: A bill (H. R. 10387) for the improvement of the Columbia River to the mouth of Snake River within the States of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho; for the improvement of the Snake River to Pittsburg Landing, on said river; and for the improvement of the Clearwater River from its mouth to Orofino, in the State of Idaho; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10388) permitting railroad companies to grant half-fare rates over their lines to Union soldiers of the Civil War; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KINKAID (by request): A bill (H. R. 10389) to provide for pensions for surviving soldiers of the Civil War, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HADLEY: A bill (H. R. 10390) to provide for the giving of notice of suits and proceedings in courts of the United States affecting the title to real property; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: A bill (H. R. 10391) prescribing the procedure in the courts of the United States in actions at law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10392) in relation to the service of process by United States marshals; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ALEXANDER: A bill (H. R. 10393) to redistribute jurisdiction of the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of Agriculture over the protection of fur-bearing animals in Alaska, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. HERNANDEZ: A bill (H. R. 10394) providing for cooperation with the State of New Mexico in the construction of roads within the national forests, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10395) making appropriation for the repair and preservation of the Rio Grande in certain counties in the State of New Mexico, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 10396) to provide for the purchase of a site and for the establishment of a naval and aviation academy on the Pacific coast of the United States within 150 miles of San Francisco, and making an appropriation therefor; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RAKER: A bill (H. R. 10397) to prohibit the importation and use of opium for other than medicinal purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10398) to provide for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other benefits and purposes in connection therewith; to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

By Mr. SMITH of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 10399) authorizing postmasters to give information as to addresses of patrons of their office in certain cases; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 10400) to provide for the advancement of funds to survey, construct, and maintain roads and trails within any State or the Territory of Alaska within which national forests are located; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10401) to regulate the use of public lands of the United States in certain counties in Colorado, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DILL: A bill (H. R. 10402) granting a service pension to certain defined veterans of the Civil War; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAGSDALE: A bill (H. R. 10403) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Dillon, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. REILLY: A bill (H. R. 10404) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a public building at Two Rivers, in the State of Wisconsin; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. RUBEY: A bill (H. R. 10405) for securing the uniform grading of grain, preventing deception in transactions in grain, and regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. REILLY: A bill (H. R. 10406) providing for the purchase of a site and the erection thereon of a public building at Menasha, in the State of Wisconsin; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 10407) providing for the erection of a suitable memorial to John Fitch; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. RAGSDALE: A bill (H. R. 10408) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Conway, Horry County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10409) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Hartsville, Darlington County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10410) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Kingstree, Williamsburg County, S. C.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. VAN DYKE: A bill (H. R. 10411) to establish a fish-cultural station in the county of Koochiching, in the State of Minnesota; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. DYER: A bill (H. R. 10412) creating an Army reserve; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ASWELL: A bill (H. R. 10413) to appropriate $150,000 for the improvement of navigation on Red River in Louisiana and Arkansas; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. LOBECK: A bill (H. R. 10414) to create a board of accountancy for the District of Columbia, and other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. HOWELL: A bill (H. R. 10415) to provide for the purchase of a site and for the establishment of a military aviation academy within the State of Utah, and making an appropriation therefor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10416) granting to the State of Utah the Fort Duchesne Reservation for its use as a branch agricultural college; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CURRY: A bill (H. R. 10417) creating and establishing a commission to be known as the Merchant Marine Commission, prescribing its duties and powers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. HAYES: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 122) amending the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. CARY: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 123) authorizing the Sergeants at Arms of the House and Senate to supply each Member of Congress with an identification insignia; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. VAN DYKE: Resolution (H. Res. 113) taxing munitions of war, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: Memorial of Legislature of State of Rhode Island, urging upon the Congress of the United States the duty of adequately increasing the naval and military forces of this Government; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STINESS: Memorial of Legislature of Rhode Island, urging upon the Congress of the United States the duty of adequately increasing the naval and military forces of this Government; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Memorial urging upon the Congress of the United States the duty of adequately increasing the military and naval forces of this Government; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ADAIR: A bill (H. R. 10418) granting an increase of pension to George Huffman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: A bill (H. R. 10419) granting an increase of pension to Matilda Leach; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUCHANAN of Texas: A bill (H. R. 10420) for the relief of the legal representatives of O. M. Roberts; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURGESS: A bill (H. R. 10421) for the relief of A. J. Hodges, T. W. Hodges, and C. C. Hodges; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURKE: A bill (H. R. 10422) granting an increase of pension to Janet Lamoreux; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10423) granting a pension to Marietta Brewer; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CANTRILL: A bill (H. R. 10424) for the relief of the legal representatives of Samuel Waldrop; to the Committee on War Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10425) granting a pension to Pollock T. Harbold; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. COPLEY: A bill (H. R. 10426) for the relief of B. S. Pearsall; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DAVENPORT: A bill (H. R. 10427) to reimburse William Blair for losses and damages sustained by him by the negligent dipping of his cattle by the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DENT: A bill (H. R. 10428) granting a pension to Susan A. Johnson; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10429) granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Johnson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DEWALT: A bill (H. R. 10430) to remove the charge of desertion from the record of Joseph Houser; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DICKINSON: A bill (H. R. 10431) granting a pension to Ellen J. Lehew; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DILL: A bill (H. R. 10432) granting a pension to Frank B. Norris; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. DOOLITTLE: A bill (H. R. 10433) granting a pension to Mary B. Chatfield; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOUGHTON: A bill (H. R. 10434) for the relief of the estate of Absa Sherrill; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 10435) granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Birley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 10436) granting an increase of pension to Alonzo Fiero; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GANDY: A bill (H. R. 10437) to correct the military record of Lewis Ludwig; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GRIFFIN: A bill (H. R. 10438) for the relief of Philip A. Hertz; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HAMILL: A bill (H. R. 10439) granting a pension to Alicia J. Flynn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAMLIN: A bill (H. R. 10440) granting an increase of pension to Francis M. Harlan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10441) for the relief of T. M. Marsh; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HELVERING: A bill (H. R. 10442) granting an increase of pension to Jane Shaw; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10443) granting an increase of pension to James W. Campbell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOLLINGSWORTH: A bill (H. R. 10444) granting an increase of pension to Margaret B. Kerr; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOWELL: A bill (H. R. 10445) granting an increase of pension to Matilda C. Boulden; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. IGOE: A bill (H. R. 10446) to restore the name of Mrs. C. A. Bennett to the pension roll; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KING: A bill (H. R. 10447) granting a pension to Alice A. Masters; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LANGLEY: A bill (H. R. 10448) granting an increase of pension to Mary H. Atkinson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10449) granting a pension to Allen E. Gabbard; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10450) granting an increase of pension to Mourning Sizemore; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10451) granting an increase of pension to Emeline Senters; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10452) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Allen; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LITTLEPAGE: A bill (H. R. 10453) granting an increase of pension to Spencer Philipps; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10454) granting an increase of pension to Charles T. Howard; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LOUD: A bill (H. R. 10455) granting a pension to Mary P. E. Hale; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McKENZIE: A bill (H. R. 10456) granting a pension to Emma J. De Yoe Bassett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MONDELL: A bill (H. R. 10457) granting an increase of pension to Edwin Freeman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. OGLESBY: A bill (H. R. 10458) granting a pension to William A. M. Streeter, alias Henry Stanley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAGSDALE: A bill (H. R. 10459) to carry into effect the findings of the Court of Claims in the claim of Beaverdam Baptist Church, Marlboro County, S. C.; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. REILLY: A bill (H. R. 10460) granting a pension to Sarah J. Challoner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10461) to remove the charge of desertion against Joseph Scharbonaugh; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RIORDAN: A bill (H. R. 10462) granting a pension to Henry Padoult; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10463) for the relief of Clarence F. Birkett; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. RUBEY: A bill (H. R. 10464) granting a pension to Julia A. Dugan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10465) granting an increase of pension to William H. Surridge; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10466) granting an increase of pension to Martin V. Trapp; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10467) granting an increase of pension to Orlando D. Rowe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10468) granting a pension to Augustus Thompson; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10469) granting a pension to George M. Laquey; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10470) for the relief of Michael Feeler; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. RUSSELL of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 10471) granting an increase of pension to Ezra A. Bristol; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10472) granting an increase of pension to Amanda M. Eaton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10473) granting a pension to Cab Acuff; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10474) for the relief of Andrew J. Sutton, alias Sedney; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10475) granting an increase of pension to Gambriella Ware; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SHOUSE: A bill (H. R. 10476) granting an increase of pension to Martha E. Williams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Idaho: A bill (H. R. 10477) granting an increase of pension to Thomas Donohoe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEELE of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 10478) granting a pension to Carrie H. Moffatt; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TAGUE: A bill (H. R. 10479) granting a pension to George G. Spurr, jr.; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. VAN DYKE: A bill (H. R. 10480) granting a pension to Gertrude H. Bird; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10481) granting a pension to Anna Wehle; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. THOMAS S. WILLIAMS: A bill (H. R. 10482) granting an increase of pension to Abel Longworth; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 10483) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Fields; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of Woman's Christian Temperance Union of St. Louis, urging the adoption of national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also (by request), memorial of Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, urging that the railway mail pay controversy be referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also (by request), memorial of Travelers' Protective Association, indorsing the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ALLEN: Petitions of John Schaab and 450,000 other citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, favoring embargo on munitions of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, protesting against increase of tax on beer, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Evidence to accompany the bill (H. R. 9144) for relief of John Irvin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, evidence to accompany House bill 10321, for relief of John R. Tallentire; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURKE: Petition of Better Sox Knitting Mills, of Fort Atkinson, Wis., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of directors of Fox Lake Public Library and members of Randolph (Wis.) Public Library, protesting against the Ayres bill (H. R. 4715); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: Petition of depositors in banks of Kansas, against revenue stamps on bank checks; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CHARLES: Petitions of Hon. John K. Stewart, of Amsterdam, and United States Silk Co., of Gloversville, N. Y., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CURRY: Resolutions by the Church Federation of Sacramento, Cal., favoring bills creating a national play bureau and appropriation for its maintenance, and creating the Grand Canyon, Mount Baker, and Sequoia National Parks; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, resolutions by the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, in the State of California, favoring the development of a practicable system of national preparedness against war and a system of military training for all able-bodied male pupils under the age of 18 years in our public schools; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DALE of Vermont: Petition of Fitzgerald (Vt.) Paper Co., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., relative to railway-mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, relative to erection of statue to nuns on battlefield; to the Committee on the Library.

Also, petition of Edgar F. Luckenbach, of New York, relative to bill to amend section 4444, United States Revised Statutes, relating to regulation of steam vessels; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Kings County (N. Y.) Pharmaceutical Society, favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Kingston (N. Y.) Local, No. 251, favoring passage of workmen's compensation bill (H. R. 476); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of United Spanish War Veterans, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DEWALT: Petitions of Mohnton Knitting Mill, Allentown Silk Co., James H. Wagner Co., Stony Creek Mills, Louis Kraemer & Co., all of Pennsylvania, favoring tax on dyestuff; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DYER: Memorial of Cigar Makers' Union No. 44, of St. Louis, in favor of the Keating-Owen bill; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, memorial of William McKinley Camp, No. 33, of West Hoboken, N. J., in favor of House bill 54; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, memorial of United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Kingston Local, No. 251, favoring the workingmen's compensation bill—H. R. 476; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, memorial of Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., favoring submitting the question of railway mail pay to the Interstate Commerce Commission for investigation and report to Congress; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of United Spanish War Veterans, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of Corporal William White Camp, No. 4, of Denver, Colo., in favor of House bill 54; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. EAGAN: Petition of Chamber of Commerce, Sacramento, Cal., relative to railway mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of American Association for Labor Legislation, New York, favoring House bill 476, workmen's bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Travelers' Protective Association, favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. EMERSON: Petition of grape growers of twenty-second district of Ohio, against the Overmyer bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of United Spanish War Veterans, St. Louis, Mo., favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce, Sacramento, Cal., relative to railway mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. FARR: Petition of Miss F. Roos, corresponding secretary of the City Improvement Association, favoring the enactment of the Keating-Owen child-labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Mrs. R. P. Gleason, president of Century Club, Scranton, Pa., favoring child-labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petitions of N. K. Younis, M. E. Comerford, L. A. De Groff, and L. A. Larrell, of Scranton, Pa., against censorship of motion-picture films; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. FLYNN: Memorial of Travelers' Protective Association of America, favoring the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of United Spanish War Veterans, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., relative to railway mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Central Union Labor Council of Greater New York, favoring passage of House bill 6871, relative to convict-labor goods; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of independent retail merchants of Kings County, in favor of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Edgar F. Luckenbach, of New York, favoring bill for regulation of steam vessels; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Department of Betterment, of Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, favoring passage of House bill 476, workmen's compensation law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Woman's Republican Club of New York, favoring Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of women of Seventy-six Chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of the Theatrical Protective Union of New York, protesting against tax on theaters; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Hins & Frond Co., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of piano manufacturers of New York, favoring passage of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of Pacific Fisheries Society, of Portland, Oreg., relative to appropriation for commercial fisheries of the Pacific coast; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of citizens of Ransom, Ill., favoring tax on mail-order houses; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Free Methodist Church, Belvidere, Ill., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. FARR: Petition of sundry citizens of Scranton, Pa., against Burnett immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Petition of Association of Eastern Foresters, favoring reenactment of the Weeks law relative to forests of New England; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Ladies' Auxiliary Ancient Order of Hibernians of America, of Holyoke and Revere, Mass., relative to erection of monument in memory of the nuns of the battle field; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. GARRETT: Petition of 25 people of Kenton County, Tenn., for national constitutional prohibition amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of Methodist Episcopal Church of Kenton, Tenn., for national constitutional prohibition amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of citizens of the State of Tennessee, favoring enactment of a law prohibiting the sale of whisky in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. GORDON: Memorial of J. R. Johnson, protesting against censorship of motion-picture films; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. GREENE of Vermont: Petition of Bennington Hosiery Co., favoring tax on dyestuffs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HASTINGS: Petition of Western Implement, Vehicle & Hardware Association, relative to sisal fiber output in Yucatan; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HAY: Petitions of 538 people of Dayton, Va., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HAYES: Memorial of Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce, for an emergency appropriation for construction of Government railroad in Alaska; to the Committee on the Territories.

Also, memorial of Chamber of Commerce of Santa Cruz, relative to congestion of freight at ocean docks; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOWELL: Papers to accompany bill for relief of Matilda C. Boulden; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. IGOE: Memorial of Robert Lansing, St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects, protesting against House bill 743; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Petitions of John O. Feeney, of Providence; and Hope Council, No. 398, Knights of Columbus, favoring passage of House bill 4699, to make October 12 of each year a legal holiday in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of Universal Winding Co., protesting against Dietrick amendment to the Army appropriation bill; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KINKAID: Petition of citizens of Comstock, Nebr., favoring House joint resolution for congress of neutral nations to promote peace; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petitions of citizens of Boelus and St. Libory, Nebr., against preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. LAFEAN: Petition of United Spanish War Veterans, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petitions of Watertown Chamber of Commerce and Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., relative to railway mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. LOUD: Papers to accompany bill for the relief of Charles W. Van Valkenburg; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McKENZIE: Petitions of 350 people of Polo, Ill., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MILLER of Delaware: Memorial of board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington, Del., favoring passage of House bill 9673, relative to compulsory pilotage of barges; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. MORIN (by request): Memorial of McFarland Lumber Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., and Howard L. Neff, of Philadelphia, in favor of the Small bill in reference to pilotage of barges; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also (by request), memorial of James H. Martin and H. C. Deasdorf, of Pittsburgh, against preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also (by request), memorial of Edward A. Pumely, of New York, favoring a change of international law in reference to freedom of the seas; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also (by request), memorial of United Spanish War Veterans, of St. Louis, favoring preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also (by request), memorial of Joseph P. Byers, of Philadelphia, favoring establishment of a home for feeble-minded persons in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also (by request), memorial of Travelers' Protective Association, of Omaha, Nebr., and American Fair Trade League, in favor of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also (by request), memorial of John B. Andrews, A. A. for L. L., in favor of House bill 476; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also (by request), memorial of National Pipe and Supplies Association, in favor of the Stevens bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of Pennsylvania Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also (by request), memorial of J. W. Brooker, in favor of changing the pension laws; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also (by request), memorial of Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento, Cal., in favor of submitting the railway mail pay controversy to the Interstate Commerce Commission; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. PRATT: Petition of 75 people of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Painted Post, N. Y., favoring national constitutional prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, petition of 50 people of the First Baptist Church of Painted Post, N. Y., favoring national constitutional prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ROWE: Petition of Stockton Chamber of Commerce, relative to railway mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of Henry Street Settlement, New York, favoring the child-labor bill; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. SANFORD: Papers to accompany House bill 10195, granting an increase of pension to Merritt D. En Earl; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCULLY: Memorial of J. H. Layton, Asbury Park; M. L. Pyle, Bradley Beach; P. M. Tague, Asbury Park; L. T. Bennett, Jamesburg; and W. M. Appleby & Son, Old Bridge, all in the State of New Jersey, favoring Stevens-Ayres bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Richard J. Gmen, Long Branch, N. J., favoring resolution ordering embargo upon further shipments of war material; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. SNELL: Petition of Mrs. W. F. Roberts, Mrs. W. H. Harrington, Mrs. Ella McCay, Mrs. Clara M. Wilson, Mrs. Mabel Brannock, Mrs. Annie Jenkins, Mrs. E. B. Hay, Mrs. M. Trimble, Mrs. M. E. Taylor, Lottie Allen, Miss Eveline Delameter, Mrs. R. M. Hinckley, all of Saranac Lake, N. Y., in behalf of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, favoring censorship of motion pictures; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. SNYDER: Petitions of Woman's Christian Temperance Association, in Rome and Westmoreland, N. Y., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STEELE of Iowa: Petition of 502 people of Storm Lake, Iowa, for a national constitutional prohibition amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. STINESS: Memorial of New England Shoe and Leather Association, favoring a nonpartisan tariff commission; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Hope Council, No. 398, Knights of Columbus, of Providence, R. I., favoring the bill making Columbus Day a legal holiday in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of United Spanish War Veterans, favoring national preparedness and an adequate national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Universal Winding Co., of Providence, R. I., protesting against abolishing the Taylor system in Government establishments; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of Providence, R. I., favoring extension of the appropriation to continue the purchase of Federal forest reserves in New England; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. STEENERSON: Petition of citizens of Minnesota, favoring House joint resolution 81, for embargo on munitions of war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: Petitions of sundry citizens of Pasadena, Los Angeles, and Intercollegiate Socialist Society of Los Angeles, Cal., against preparedness; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of Stockton (Cal.) Chamber of Commerce, relative to railway-mail pay; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, memorial of Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Club of Oakland, Cal., favoring appropriation for two new vessels, for carrying on work of surveying Pacific coast; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of Pauline Ames, of Pasadena, Cal., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. TINKHAM: Petition of Christopher F. Sweeney, of Boston, Mass., asking for the impeachment of Judge George A. Carpenter, of the United States district court of northern Illinois, eastern division; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota: Petition of Rev. W. C. Lyon and others, of Valley City, N. Dak., favoring national prohibition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

MONDAY, January 31, 1916.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, millions of hearts turn to Thee day by day in the confident expectation that Thou wilt keep our Nation in safety and in peace. We thank Thee that the heart of the people still beats true to its ancient ideals. We thank Thee for the moral heroism of the people that answer to the challenge of spiritual supremacy. We pray that we may still keep true to those great spiritual revelations that Thou hast made to men and understand that the highest honor lies in the higher realm of life. Do Thou guide us this day and keep us true to the precepts of Thy word. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

REPORT OF GEORGETOWN GAS LIGHT CO. (S. DOC. NO. 266).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the Georgetown Gas Light Co. for the year ended December 31, 1915, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

EAST WASHINGTON HEIGHTS TRACTION CO. (S. DOC. NO. 267).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the annual report of the East Washington Heights Traction Railroad Co. for the year ended December 31, 1915, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 10037) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing for the printing or the reports of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, in two volumes, for the period from March 12, 1914, to December 31, 1915, inclusive, etc., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing for the printing and binding of 10,000 copies of the report of the medico-military aspects of the European war, by Surg. A. M. Fauntleroy, United States Navy, etc., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing for the printing and binding of 100,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of the Horse, etc., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing for the printing and binding of 100,000 copies of the special report on the diseases of cattle, etc., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a memorial to the Congress of the United States from the Corby Co., a yeast manufactory in the District of Columbia. The Chair is in doubt as to the proper disposition of the memorial and will therefore order it to lie on the table.

Mr. WORKS. I have a telegram from William Bayard Hale, of New York, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Telegram.]

NEW YORK, January 30, 1916.

Senator WORKS,
Bellevue Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

If the President does not know, as he declared at Cleveland, what any day, yes, or hour, may bring forth, can Congress be too quick in taking action to prepare for crisis? First step would necessarily be to keep ammunition and war supplies at home. If peril of which the President warns country is from direction of England or Japan, we are criminally foolish to continue shipping ammunition to allies. If it is from Germany that peril threatens, it would be absolutely averted if exportation of ammunition to Germany enemies were stopped. In either case, therefore, our own safety and best interests demand immediate embargo on ammunition. If the President feels crisis so imminent as to necessitate dramatic appeal to the people, does it not lie upon Congress to take instant action to conserve the Nation's military resources by forbidding exportation?

WILLIAM BAYARD HALE,
362 Riverside Drive.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland. I present a resolution adopted by the House of Delegates of the General Assembly of the State of Maryland, which I ask may be read.

There being no objection, the resolution was read and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, as follows:

Whereas the Congress of the United States is engaged in the discussion of ways and means necessary to place and keep the United States of America in its proper position among the first powers of the world; and

Whereas the passage of H. R. 7617 of the House of Representatives of the United States, hereinafter referred to, may result in the construction of one or more post roads through the State of Maryland, much to the benefit of the citizens and taxpayers thereof: Therefore be it

Resolved by the members of the House of the General Assembly of Maryland, That the United States Senators and Members of Congress from this State be, and are hereby, urged and requested to aid and cooperate in the passage by Congress of H. R. 7617, known as the rural post roads bill:

Further resolved, That the chief clerk of this house be, and he is hereby, instructed to send a copy of this resolution to each United States Senator and Member of the House of Representatives from this State.

Mr. MYERS. I present a petition signed by the teacher and pupils of the Spring Hill School, Polson, Mont., for an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the Flathead reclamation project in that State. I ask that the petition be printed in the RECORD, together with the name of the teacher of the school, and that it be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the President and Congress of the United States:

We the undersigned members of the Spring Hill Schoolhouse do respectfully petition the President and Congress of the United States that an appropriation of at least $1,000,000 be granted by this session of Congress for work on the Flathead irrigation project for the ensuing year. It is quite essential that a substantial appropriation be made for this purpose so that the work may be expedited and an early completion of the project be assured.

We most earnestly urge that the settlers and Indians holding land under this project get the appropriation they are asking for.

Respectfully submitted.

GRACE GADARD, Teacher
(And many others).

Mr. GALLINGER presented the petition of Jeannette Mathew Lord, of Hanover, N. H., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit interstate commerce in the products of child labor, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented the petition of E. E. Wells, of Lebanon Springs, N. Y., praying for a continuation of the appropriations for the purchase of forest reserves in the Appalachian Mountains, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WADSWORTH presented a petition of Joseph Wild & Co., of New York City, N. Y., and a petition of the Nassau Felt Mills, of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the imposition of a duty on dyestuffs, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SHIVELY presented a petition of 600 citizens of Elkhart, Ind., and a petition of 400 citizens of Plainfield, Ind., praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a petition of Kent Chapter, Michigan Society Sons of the American Revolution, of Grand Rapids, Mich., praying for an appropriation for the construction of a national archives building in Washington, D. C., which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

He also presented a petition of Grand Traverse Grange, No. 379, Patrons of Husbandry, of Traverse City, Mich., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide Government inspection of the quantity and quality of fruit at shipping point, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of the Minnesota Historical Society, praying that an appropriation be made for the construction of a national archives building at Washington, D. C., which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. LANE presented a telegram, in the nature of a petition, from the City Council of Portland, Oreg., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the disposition of certain land grants in the Bull Run Reserve, Oreg., which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. KENYON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Dyersville, Iowa, praying for the placing of an embargo on munitions of war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. McLEAN presented a petition of Lady Sherman Council, No. 15, Sons and Daughters of Liberty, of Shelton, Conn., praying for the enactment of legislation to further restrict immigration, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a memorial of the Connecticut Retail Wine, Liquor & Beer Dealers' Association, of New Haven, Conn., remonstrating against an increase in the tax on intoxicating liquors, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of the German-American Alliance of New Haven, Conn., remonstrating against the seizures of American mail by the British Government, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of Admiral Bunce Section, Navy League of the United States, of Hartford, Conn., praying for an increase in armaments, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Finance, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 53) for the relief of the Eldredge Bros. Live Stock Co., a corporation (Rept. No. 98); and

A bill (S. 54) to provide for the refunding of certain moneys illegally assessed and collected in the district of Utah (Rept. No. 99).

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I wish to present a favorable report from the Committee on Education and Labor upon the bill (S. 703) to provide for the promotion of vocational education; to provide for cooperation with the States in the promotion of such education in agriculture and the trades and industries; to provide for cooperation with the States in the preparation of teachers of vocational subjects; and to appropriate money and regulate its expenditure; and I submit a report (No. 97) thereon.

In this connection I wish to call attention to the fact that in the report we express especially our appreciation of the splendid work that has been done for this measure by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

DEVELOPMENT OF WATER POWER.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I desire to submit the views of the minority (S. Rept. 66, pt. 2) on the bill (H. R. 408) to provide for the development of water power and the use of public lands in relation thereto, and for other purposes, which I ask may be received and printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be printed.

REPORT ON AERONAUTICS.

Mr. FLETCHER. From the Committee on Printing I report back favorably, with amendments, Senate resolution 44 to provide for the printing of the appendices to the report of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

The amendments were, in line 1, before the word "Report," to strike out the words "appendices to the," and in line 4, after the word "document," to insert a comma and the words "together with the accompanying appendices and illustrations," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the report of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, transmitted with the President's message of December 15, 1915, be printed as a Senate document, together with the accompanying appendices and illustrations.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. DILLINGHAM:

A bill (S. 4071) to establish the University of the United States; to the Committee on the University of the United States.

By Mr. FALL:

A bill (S. 4072) authorizing the State of New Mexico to convey to the United States lands in the national forests in said State and select other lands therefor; and

A bill (S. 4073) granting certain lands within the State of New Mexico to said State for specific purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands.

A bill (S. 4074) granting a pension to Miguel Archuleta (with accompanying paper);

A bill (S. 4075) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Messer (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4076) granting a pension to John C. Wolters (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. TOWNSEND:

A bill (S. 4077) granting a pension to Charles H. Craddock (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4078) granting a pension to Herman L. Shank (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROBINSON:

A bill (S. 4079) for the relief of William Ramsey and others; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 4080) granting a pension to Einer Bjarnson (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4081) granting a pension to Charles Groves (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CHILTON:

A bill (S. 4082) for the relief of the heirs of J. A. Reece; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 4083) granting a pension to A. J. Holden; and

A bill (S. 4084) granting a pension to Augusta P. Marrs; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RANSDELL:

A bill (S. 4085) to establish a Coast Guard station on the coast of Louisiana, in the vicinity of Barataria Bay; to the Committee on Commerce.

A bill (S. 4086) to provide for the care and treatment of persons afflicted with leprosy, and to prevent the spread of leprosy in the United States; to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

By Mr. CHAMBERLAIN:

A bill (S. 4087) for the relief of James L. McCulloch; and

A bill (S. 4088) to provide for the exchange with the State of Oregon of certain school lands and indemnity rights within the national forests of that State for an equal area of national-forest land; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. POMERENE:

A bill (S. 4089) granting an increase of pension to Henry Collett (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GALLINGER:

A bill (S. 4090) granting an increase of pension to Diantha K. Dickey (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 4091) granting a pension to Virginia R. Coates (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McLEAN:

A bill (S. 4092) granting an increase of pension to Margaret A. Bugbey (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LEE of Maryland:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 93) authorizing the erection on the public grounds in the city of Washington, D. C., of a statue of James Buchanan, a former President of the United States; to the Committee on the Library.

OIL AND GAS LANDS.

Mr. PHELAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 406) to authorize the exploration for and disposition of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SUTHERLAND submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,683.96 to reimburse the board of education of Boxelder County, Utah, for the education of 23 Indian pupils at the Waskakie School, Boxelder County, during the school year 1913–1914, intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 10385), which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

ADDRESS BY HON. PAUL M. WARBURG.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a public document the speech of Hon. Paul M. Warburg, delivered before the New York Credit Men's Association, in New York City, on the evening of January 25, 1916. I ask that the address be referred to the Committee on Printing with a view to its publication.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The address will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

H. R. 10037. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

REPORTS OF THE ALASKAN ENGINEERING COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 610, PT. 2).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (No. 11) of the House of Representatives, which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the reports of the Alaskan Engineering Commission, in two volumes, for the period from March 12, 1914, to December 31, 1915, inclusive, together with accompanying maps, charts, and profiles, be printed as a House document and that 6,000 additional copies be printed, of which 3,000 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 1,500 copies for the use of the Senate, and 1,500 copies for the use of the commission.

MEDICO-MILITARY ASPECTS OF EUROPEAN WAR.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (No. 12) of the House of Representatives, which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound 10,000 copies of the Report on the Medico-Military Aspects of the European War, by Surg. A. M. Fauntleroy, United States Navy, 6,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 3,000 for the use of the Senate and 1,000 copies for the use of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery of the Navy Department.

REPORT ON DISEASES OF THE HORSE.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (No. 13) of the House of Representatives, which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 100,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of the Horse, the same to be first revised and brought to date under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, 70,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 30,000 for the use of the Senate.

REPORT ON DISEASES OF CATTLE.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (No. 14) of the House of Representatives, which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed and bound in cloth 100,000 copies of the Special Report on the Diseases of Cattle, the same to be first revised and brought to date under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, 70,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives and 30,000 copies for the use of the Senate.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS—EMPLOYMENT OF STENOGRAPHERS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, Senate resolution 74, authorizing the Senate Committee on Public Lands at any time during the session, or any subcommittee thereof, to have hearings and have the hearings taken down by a stenographer, as it may see fit, is on the calendar. I ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution. The services may be needed at any time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of Senate resolution 74?

Mr. SMOOT. In this connection, I wish to ask the Senator from Montana if he will allow me to include all similar resolutions on the calendar authorizing committees of the Senate to employ stenographers?

Mr. MYERS. I have no objection whatever.

Mr. SMOOT. There are quite a number of them on the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 74, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Public Lands, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 69, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Indian Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 73, which had been reported from the Committee on Education and Labor with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Education and Labor, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 63, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Naval Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I should like to inquire whether there is a limitation as to the price to be paid per printed page?

The VICE PRESIDENT. One dollar per printed page.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That clause is in all the substitutes, I understand?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is in all of them. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 46, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Woman Suffrage, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider Senate resolution 49, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

That the Committee on Appropriations, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-fourth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WALSH. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate resolution 43, which is a resolution introduced by myself some time ago, providing for an investigation into the freight congestion at the port of New York.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I move to substitute for that a motion to take up Senate joint resolution 60, Order of Business 33, which has been under consideration for some time. It is a joint resolution creating a joint subcommittee from the membership of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce and the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to investigate the conditions relating to interstate and foreign commerce and the necessity of further legislation relating thereto, and defining the powers and duties of such subcommittee.

I will state, Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. A motion to amend the motion of the Senator from Montana is not in order. The only question before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from Montana to proceed to the consideration of Senate resolution 43, and that must be voted on.

Mr. SMOOT. Unanimous consent was not given.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; it is a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, of course the motion is not debatable, and I do not undertake to debate it. I should like to know what is the subject matter of the resolution in order to vote intelligently.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is Senate resolution 43, for the appointment of a committee to investigate and inquire into the causes of the existing freight blockade and embargoes on the trunk-line railroads entering into the port of New York. The question is on the motion to take up the resolution.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 12, noes 22.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion is lost.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2520.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is the first bill on the calendar, and it is the regular order.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I ask the Senator to withhold his motion until I get a unanimous-consent agreement, if possible, concerning the unfinished business.

I ask unanimous consent that beginning to-morrow all speeches on the Philippine government bill, and amendments thereto, shall be limited to 10 minutes each.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I demand the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, in view of that objection, I must state now that I shall take every proper parliamentary method to press the bill to an early vote. I certainly have been as easy-going as possible——

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, that is not the regular order. I have asked for the regular order. I do not think the Senator ought to be allowed to make a speech after the regular order has been demanded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the calendar under Rule VIII.

LANDS IN NEVADA.

The bill (S. 2520) granting to the State of Nevada 7,000,000 acres of land in said State for the use and benefit of the public schools of Nevada and the State University of the State of Nevada was announced as first in order on the calendar.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that go over, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah objects to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. I imagine that the Senator's objection is made on the ground that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] desires to speak on the bill. I want to say to the Senator from Utah that I have seen the Senator from New Mexico since the last objection was made by the Senator from Utah, and the Senator from New Mexico stated that he had no further objection to the bill coming up, and that he did not intend to speak on it.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, Mr. President, I shall not object to its consideration; but I want to speak on the bill itself, and I might as well do so now as at any other time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be, and are hereby, granted to the State of Nevada 7,000,000 acres of land in said State for the use and benefit of the public schools of Nevada and the State university of the State of Nevada.

SEC. 2. That the lands herein granted shall be selected by the State authorities of said State from any unappropriated nonmineral public land in said State in quantities not less than the smallest legal subdivision; and when selected in conformity with the terms of this act the same shall be duly certified to said State by the Commissioner of the General Land Office and approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Upon such certification the title to such land shall be deemed to have vested in the State of Nevada as of the date of selection.

SEC. 3. That the land herein granted shall be disposed of under such laws, rules, and regulations as may now or hereafter be prescribed by the Legislature of the State of Nevada not inconsistent herewith: Provided, That any citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase not more than 640 acres and not less than 40 acres of such land.

SEC. 4. That the proceeds arising from the use, disposal, or sale of said lands, or any part thereof, shall be for the use and benefit of the public schools of Nevada and the State university of the State of Nevada in the following proportion, to wit: Eighty per cent of such proceeds for the use and benefit of the public schools of Nevada and 20 per cent of such proceeds for the use and benefit of the State university of the State of Nevada.

SEC. 5. That the proceeds of such sale shall be placed in a special fund for the sole use and benefit of the public schools of Nevada and the State university of the State of Nevada, and whenever there are $20,000 in the fund such moneys shall be immediately invested in interest-bearing bonds, notes, or securities of the United States, the State of Nevada, or any other State of the Union, or of any county in the State of Nevada, subject to the supervision and approval of the State board of revenue.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the bill in order to perfect it before its consideration is proceeded with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is in order.

Mr. PITTMAN. In section 3, page 2, line 7, after the words "disposed of," I move to insert "to citizens of the United States by sale to the highest bidder at public auction upon due notice"; and at the end of the section I move also to add the words "under the terms and in the manner provided in this bill."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, it seems to me that that is an unwise provision to put into the law. If the lands shall be sold in that way, they will be forced upon the market; and it occurs to me that in a great many instances they will be apt to bring a very small price.

Mr. PITTMAN. It is my intention to also offer a further amendment to the bill limiting the price to $1.25 an acre.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is, that no land shall be sold for less than $1.25 an acre?

Mr. PITTMAN. That no land shall be sold for less than $1.25 an acre. I will insert the amendment at the same point at which I have proposed my first amendment, though I had intended to offer it in another place. I move to add to my amendment the words "and at not less than $1.25 an acre."

Mr. WALSH. I desire to inquire of the Senator from Nevada if he thinks the limitation on the price which he has offered is sufficiently high? When the four States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington were admitted to the Union they got the usual grants of land. By the provisions of the acts of admission they were prohibited from disposing of any of those lands at less than $10 an acre. That act was passed in the year 1889, now nearly 27 years ago. The grant has been handled with very wise economy, so that the grant to our university has produced for the State—and only about one-half of it has been disposed of—something over $16 per acre.

Now, it occurs to me that Nevada would be placed at a most decided disadvantage by this proposition. I do not now recall what limit was placed in the enabling act admitting the State of Utah or of Idaho, but my recollection is that the same limitation was placed in those acts.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. As I recall, there was no limitation in the enabling act admitting Utah, but I think personally that it was a very unfortunate thing that there was not such limitation.

Mr. SMOOT. There was, however, a limitation of $10 per acre in Idaho.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I decline to yield until I answer the question of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. Then I shall be very glad to yield for any other statement or for any other question.

The conditions in the State of Montana are entirely different from the conditions in the State of Nevada. The climatic conditions are entirely different, in the first place, as is shown by the Geological Survey and by the Department of Agriculture. The rainfall in Montana is much greater than it is in the State of Nevada. The number of flowing streams in Montana is much greater than in the State of Nevada. The State of Nevada unfortunately has a very limited quantity of water. The best land in that State has been selected heretofore. In fact, as I had occasion once before to state to this body, most of the land in the State at the present time is only valuable for grazing purposes, unless through the aid of private capital we are enabled to develop our unknown supplies of subsurface water.

It is true that some of this land may be worth more than $1.25 an acre. The State will undoubtedly make rules and regulations governing the sale of this land. I have included in the bill a provision for a sale at public auction, because there is nothing that determines the value of land so much as competitive bidding. While a great deal of this land may be worth more than $1.25 an acre, I am afraid that a large quantity of it will only be worth $1.25 an acre or less, so far as that is concerned.

The State is as sincerely interested in this matter as is this Congress. If the State can be protected in the disposal of that land until it has an opportunity to legislate with regard to it, then no Member of this body need fear that the State of Nevada is going to sacrifice its public domain. I want to say that I have absolute confidence in the ability and integrity of the people of the State of Nevada. I am satisfied that they know more concerning the value of the public lands in that State than any Member of this body knows, and therefore I do not think it is right for us, without any knowledge of the character of the land, without any knowledge of the conditions in that State, to attempt to impose a condition upon them that may make this grant absolutely useless.

It seems to me that when you put a minimum of $1.25 an acre on the land and, in addition to that, provide that when there is an application under this bill to purchase 640 acres, those 640 acres shall be put up at public auction on due notice, there is little chance of a man getting 640 acres for less than its value. That is my theory of it, and I hope that it will be left in this way, because I should dislike very much to find that probably half of this land was only fit for grazing land and was only worth $1.25 an acre, and that there should be a limit put on it under which we could not sell it.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Montana whether the limitation to which he referred was in the Federal act making the grant to Montana or in the State legislation of Montana?

Mr. WALSH. It was in the Federal act making the grant. It is in the enabling act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, there is another matter in this connection that I desire to suggest to the Senator from Nevada, which will perhaps be of more particular interest to him.

The grant is of land nonmineral in character, and only land so classified at the time of the selection will pass by virtue of the grant; yet we all know that in the case of many acres of these lands it is subsequently discovered that they are mineral in character. The State of Montana, for instance, has acquired a large area of lands which were in fact nonmineral at the time they were selected. The title has passed to the State, but it has since been discovered that many of these lands are mineral in character, and we have endeavored in our State to give a preference right to those who make discoveries upon these lands, the same as is granted to those who make discoveries upon the general body of the public domain. Under the provision of the amendment which the Senator now proposes, his State will be without power to do that, because the lands must be put up for sale at public auction, and they must go to the one who bids the highest. The result will be that, if a prospector goes on this body of State land and after laborious effort discovers a body of valuable minerals, he can not acquire title to the land; but the State must put it up for sale at public auction; and some man who is richer in the world's goods than he is gets away with the result of his enterprise and his energy. I have no doubt in the world that many acres of these lands that are now classified as agricultural and are agricultural, or rather nonmineral, will be found to contain valuable deposits of nonmetallic minerals, such as potash and other deposits of that character. I should think the Senator would like to preserve to the prospectors of his State the opportunity to locate those lands substantially as lands upon the public domain are located.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, this bill preserves any rights that a prospector might have. The bill goes on further and provides for the selection of 7,000,000 acres of land. After that is done a citizen of the United States may make a selection of 640 acres; and when the selection of that land is made its mineral character is determined. If it is mineral in character it is not subject to the grant; if it is not found to be mineral in character at that time, there is no prospector on there with any mining rights and no prospector can be injured. If subsequent to the purchase of this ground it is determined to be mineral ground, the discovery is due to the man who purchases and not to any prospector.

This bill goes on further and provides that the land may be sold, subject to such rules, regulations, and laws as the legislature may make, with a limitation that it shall not be sold for less than $1.25 an acre, that there shall not be over 640 acres sold to any one person, that it shall be sold to citizens of the United States, and that it shall be sold at public auction to the highest bidder whenever an application for a certain tract is made. It does not mean that this whole body of 7,000,000 acres of land is to be put up at public auction and sold; it simply means that when a selection of 640 acres is made by a citizen of the United States, before he or she shall be allowed to purchase it it shall be advertised and he shall be compelled to pay the competitive price for those 640 acres.

If a prospector has discovered mineral on that ground, it is not subject to selection. If there are some undiscovered minerals in that ground, the purchaser acquires them; but if a purchaser could never acquire any ground by reason of the fact that there might be some undiscovered minerals under it, it would be practically impossible for us to ever operate in our public-land States.

I have just as much interest for the prospector as has the Senator from Montana; and if I could conceive in any way that any prospector in our State was going to be injured by any provision of this bill I would gladly remedy it, just as the Senator from Montana would; but I do not see that it affects the prospector at all.

So far as the possibility of obtaining mineral land under this bill is concerned, I want to say that in my opinion it is negligible. The minerals in our State are found in the mountains of our State; they are not found in the valleys. The mountains of our State to-day are nearly every one of them in a timber reserve, and none of the land under this bill can be selected from a timber reserve.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I listened to the reading of the amendment, and at the present moment I am not in harmony with the amendment. It occurs to me that the section as drawn and in the bill is preferable to the section as it would be if amended. Certainly, if the State is to be trusted with these lands, it seems to me the legislature of the State is the proper body to deal with them; and it seems to me this is a limitation on the legislature that ought not to be in the bill. I very much prefer the bill as it was originally drawn and reported from the committee.

Mr. PITTMAN. It was my intention, in drawing the bill, to leave the matter entirely to the management of the State authorities—the legislature, in other words. I find, however, that there is upon the statute books of the State of Nevada at the present time a law which is active in futuro, under which this 7,000,000 acres of land might be taken possession of and disposed of before the legislature could again meet. The amendment that I have placed there would protect the land until the next meeting of the legislature, because there would be no provision except for its sale at public auction.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, could not that be remedied by making the operation of the act take place at some future date?

Mr. PITTMAN. It could be done, yes; but instead of delaying this matter for a year, until the legislature can meet, I would prefer that, at least, we work under the old law, which simply provides a system of selection and sale, by imposing upon that statutory law the limitation as to price and as to competitive bidding.

I do not think this competitive system of purchase is objectionable to any of the people of my State. It is a matter that has been discussed there for years. Every one in the State realizes that we made a mistake in the disposal of the 2,000,000 acres of land that we have heretofore received from the United States. We made a mistake in the method. We know we could have gotten more; and I may say to the Senator that unless I had been satisfied that the competitive system of fixing the price of land was satisfactory to the people in our State I would not have offered the amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I desire to ask a question of the Senator from Nevada, if he will yield to me. Is it the purpose of the bill to allow an alien, or a corporation not a citizen of the United States, to purchase land in any quantity?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; it is not.

Mr. CUMMINS. That would be the effect of the bill as it is now written.

Mr. PITTMAN. If it is, I should like to have the Senator correct it.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator will observe that the proviso of section 3 is as follows:

Provided, That any citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase not more than 640 acres and not less than 40 acres of such land.

I assume that that means that no citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase more than 640 acres, but there is no limitation or restriction upon the right of the State to sell to an alien, or a corporation not a citizen of the United States, any amount.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will state to the Senator that that portion of this bill is contained in nearly every other grant in all the States, and I assumed that it had had a legal construction. The language is not original in this bill. It is copied from the prior grants.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Iowa perhaps has not heard the pending amendment.

Mr. CUMMINS. No; I have heard the pending amendment only so far as it relates to the notice and auction.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will restate the pending amendment.

The SECRETARY. Section 3 reads:

That the land herein granted shall be disposed of—

After the word "of," it is proposed to insert—

To citizens of the United States, by sale to the highest bidder at public auction, upon due notice, and at not less than $1.25 per acre.

Mr. CUMMINS. The amendment would correct the defect that I thought was plainly obvious in the proviso, although it seems to me the proviso ought to be changed so as to read "that no citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase more than 640 acres," instead of saying "that any citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase not more than 640 acres." It is not true that any citizen is entitled to purchase 640 acres. It could not be true.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. I will state to the Senator from Iowa that the land, if granted to the State under this bill, will not be subject to the land laws of the United States, and therefore it could be that any citizen of the United States shall be entitled to purchase any specified quantity. But what I wanted particularly to call the Senator's attention to was that the bill does not prohibit 20 different citizens of the United States from buying 640 acres of land each, and immediately transferring their purchases to any citizen of the United States or to any corporation.

Mr. CUMMINS. Certainly not; but the future consolidation of the land was not in my mind when I made the objection. I did not know anything about that; but it was plain to me that there was no limitation in the bill as reported, except as against a citizen, and of course it is not true that any citizen is entitled to buy 640 acres, because we have something like 100,000,000 citizens, and there are only 7,000,000 acres of this land. I assume that it was meant that no citizen shall buy more than 640 acres.

Mr. PITTMAN. As I stated to the Senator, I never gave any careful consideration to this part of the proviso, as it had been included in the original draft of the bill, and has been in operation for some 25 or 30 years, and I imagined that its construction was understood. I would suggest this amendment to that proviso:

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is an amendment pending now.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will say to the Senator from Iowa that I will correct that with an amendment later.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair must inquire whether this debate is to proceed under the five-minute rule, or whether the Senate will just set the rule aside and permit discussion ad libitum. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Nevada a question. I understand that this bill is a proposition to turn over 7,000,000 acres of Government land to the State of Nevada, the proceeds of the sale of the land to be used for specific purposes. That is the purpose of the bill, is it not?

Mr. PITTMAN. That is the purpose of the bill.

Mr. WEEKS. Is there any reason why similar legislation should not apply to every State where there are Government lands?

Mr. PITTMAN. It has been done already, and in about three times the quantity that this bill asks for.

Mr. WEEKS. Is there any reason why the Government should turn over to the State of Nevada, we will say, the equivalent of $7,000,000, which would not apply to its turning that amount of money over to any State for educational purposes?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes, sir; there is every reason, which I will endeavor to explain a little bit farther along in my remarks on this bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I might as well say what I have to say on this bill now as at any other time.

The Senators will notice in the report the statement that the object of the bill is—

To grant to the State of Nevada sufficient lands to make up a deficiency in the land grants heretofore made to the State under the policies and practices of the Government. The bill simply seeks to have the State of Nevada, with regard to the public lands within its borders, treated with the same justice that has been meted out to the other public-land States.

In the same report, Mr. President, on page 2, are given the grants in acres to Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

The Senator has just made the statement that if the grant of 7,000,000 acres were made to Nevada at this time, it would not be equal to the grant to any other State, and that all other States had been granted three times as much. Of course, I think the Senator spoke hurriedly, without due consideration.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think I said approximately three times as much had been granted to the other States.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator will notice that as to some of the States named here that statement would not be accurate. For instance, Washington was granted 3,000,000 acres; Wyoming, 4,000,000 acres; Oregon, 4,000,000 acres; South Dakota, 3,000,000 acres; and I could go on with all of the other States, but it is not necessary.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for one moment?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, sir.

Mr. FALL. In this same table there is shown as a donation to the State of New Mexico something like 12,000,000 acres. That is not entirely correct. It is, however, only following along the general plan of bookkeeping or memorandom making in the Department of the Interior. As a matter of fact, the direct appropriations to New Mexico were less than one-third that amount.

As it happened, in New Mexico there were numerous Spanish land grants which had been confirmed by the Congress of the United States long prior to the admission of the State, and long before the State had any voice on the floor of this branch of Congress, and only a voice in the House. In lieu of the school sections upon those Spanish grants, and in lieu of the school sections embraced in Indian reserves and other reserves, certain lands were granted to New Mexico; the usual State grants being certain designated sections in the townships, going to all the States equally, and not included in this table with reference to the other States as are the direct donations. But in the case of New Mexico and Arizona, both, the department here has included not only the donations but also the lieu-land selections. But it is just as absolutely incorrect, as showing a comparison of the donations of land, as are all the methods of bookkeeping and all the other statements of the Department of the Interior, as far as I have been able to discover by a pretty thorough research of the reports of the department.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to ask him a question before he sits down?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield for a question.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Do I understand the Senator to say that the Department of the Interior has included certain lands twice over? For instance, where sections 16 and 36 are included in a reserve, is that counted as 1,280 acres, and in addition to that 1,280 acres outside?

Mr. FALL. No; I do not mean that. The Senator misunderstood me. What I mean is that in this tabulation, which is taken from a tabulation of the Department of the Interior, they are shown as donations to the State.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. But I understand that that is true of all the other States.

Mr. FALL. No; I think not.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. For instance, I understand that the school lands are included in each of these States.

Mr. FALL. No; not in many of them which I have examined. In many of them the tabulation does not include the school lands at all.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, just let me interrupt there. The tabulation that we have here was made under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office at my request and contains every form of disposal to the State of public lands. I do not care in what form it was, whether it was lieu-land selection or not. Then there is a system of percentages worked out as to the amount of the public lands that the States have acquired in proportion to the total area of the States.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Then, if the Senator will allow me, my impression was correct that in each one of these States the table includes the so-called school sections.

Mr. PITTMAN. It does.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. That is what I understood, and for that reason I asked the question.

Mr. FALL. I do not so understand.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think the Senator is mistaken, because I have investigated that since, and it is the statement they gave me.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Members of the Senate now will look on page 2 of the report, they will find the amount of acres granted to each of the States. The State of Colorado received 4,000,000 acres, the State of Idaho 3,000,000, the State of Montana 5,000,000, the State of Nebraska 3,000,000. Far be it from me to try to withhold from the State of Nevada anything that would place her on an equal footing with other States; but I do not believe it is the proper and right thing to pass a bill granting her lands far exceeding that of every other State in the way of land grants, which this bill will do if it passes, granting 7,000,000 acres.

Not only that, Mr. President; the bill itself gives privileges to the State in the selection of the land that no other State in the Union has had. I call attention to section 2:

> The lands herein granted shall be selected by the State authorities of said State from any unappropriated nonmineral public land in said State in quantities not less than the smallest legal subdivision.

The Senator made the statement a while ago that they could not select timbered lands under this bill. Mr. President, they can select timbered lands under this bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator undoubtedly does not intend to misconstrue the bill there; but it says, "Unappropriated public lands," and God knows everything in our State that has got a sagebrush on it has been put in a forest reserve.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I did not say anything about the forest reserves; and I want to say to the Senator here that all the lands that are prohibited from being selected by the State under this bill are nonmineral lands. Again, in that same section, it says:

> Upon such certification the title to such land shall be deemed to have vested in the State of Nevada as of the date of selection.

Mr. President, the school lands granted to the State of Utah and to all of the other Western States are lands in place. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that certain of these school lands have been sold by the State of Utah to individuals 10 or more years ago, and no one suspected that there were minerals in them; and to-day in the courts of the United States there are suits brought by the United States claiming that those lands never should have passed to the State, and the Government is trying to recover them after they have been developed by individuals who purchased the land from the State.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does the Senator know any way by which we can prevent a suit from being brought? Can the Senator suggest any language?

Mr. SMOOT. I know that this bill provides that as soon as the lands are selected the certificates of title to the land shall be deemed to have been vested in the State of Nevada as of the date of selection.

Mr. PITTMAN. What other language has ever been used in a grant?

Mr. SMOOT. This has never been used in any grant.

Mr. PITTMAN. When does the title vest under any grant?

Mr. SMOOT. That all depends on the wording of the grant.

Mr. PITTMAN. When did the railroad land grant vest title? When did the title of the State lands in your State vest?

Mr. SMOOT. If the Government is successful in its suit, we can not tell when title of school lands will vest.

Mr. PITTMAN. You tried to have them vested at some time, did you not?

Mr. SMOOT. We thought that they were vested in the States, and now the Government says they are not.

Mr. PITTMAN. I know, but you did your best to have the title vest in some definite period. That is what we are trying to do.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes. I am only saying that this bill gives to Nevada, as far as that provision is concerned, an advantage over every Western State receiving land grants. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. PITTMAN. Would you not like to have your State——

Mr. SMOOT. If that was the intention, I would like to have had it.

Mr. PITTMAN. In the case of the grants made heretofore you would like to have had it, would you not?

Mr. SMOOT. I think it ought to be.

Mr. PITTMAN. You are complaining now because suit has been brought against some of this land on the ground that the title has not passed.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Nevada is asking for a grant of 7,000,000 acres, in order, as he says, that Nevada may be equal with the other land-grant States, but with the provision referred to she would not only be equal but more than equal in securing title from the Government, but the number of acres granted will be greater.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not know that I understand the Senator, but is the Senator objecting to the number of acres that are requested to be granted to Nevada on the ground that Nevada does not need it or on the ground that his State has not been treated as well?

Mr. SMOOT. No, Mr. President; I am objecting for this reason: In any legislation that the Government grants additional land to the public-land States it ought to treat all public-land States alike. I do not think the Senator will deny that.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have not.

Mr. SMOOT. Now, let us see, Mr. President, if this bill does that. We will consider it first on the basis of population. There were 81,875 people in Nevada.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. When?

Mr. SMOOT. In 1910, the last census. There were 74,206 whites, 513 negroes, 5,240 Indians, 927 Chinese, 864 Japanese, and 55 nonclassified.

This means, Mr. President, that for every white man, woman, and child in the State of Nevada the grant would be on a basis of 95 acres for each. This, Mr. President, means that 7,000,000 acres of land granted to the State of Nevada, in which there are 23,677 families, will amount to 296 acres for every family in the State.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator from Utah, I suppose, recognizes that Nevada has only the title of 2,723,000 acres, as against about 6,000,000 acres for the State of Idaho, 6,000,000 acres for my own State, and 7,414,000 acres for the State represented by the Senator now speaking. About how many acres does the Senator from Utah think it would be fair to accord to Nevada?

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will wait a moment, I am coming to that.

Mr. President, in relation to the 7,000,000 acres granted to the State of Utah that grant included sections 2, 16, 32, and 36 within the State, and most of the land is mountainous land. The Senator from Montana knows that the greater portion of the State of Utah is mountainous. The grant included those four sections, and as stated before the greater part is mountainous land, whereas if this bill passes and 7,000,000 acres of land are granted to Nevada the State of Nevada can select any lands within the State that are nonmineral, giving it every advantage in selections over grants to all the other Western States. The State of Montana was granted sections 16 and 36 in place, and was compelled to take the land within those sections whether they were in the valley or on the mountain tops. Montana had no right to select her granted land in the way provided for in this bill. Therefore this bill is not placing Nevada upon the same footing with other Western States. It is placing Nevada in a much more favorable position.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah if he can inform us what percentage of the grant to Utah or to the other States was of the specified sections that required no selection? There were something over 7,000,000 acres of land granted to the State of Utah. In that grant there were included four sections in each township for school purposes.

Mr. WALSH. I have the figures here.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. What proportion of the whole grant was included in the school sections?

Mr. SMOOT. I have not the exact figures here.

Mr. WALSH. The State of Utah got sections 2, 16, 32, and 36. That aggregates 5,444,000. The total number of acres is 7,414,000.

Mr. SMOOT. So the State of Utah, outside of the school sections, got about 2,000,000 acres of land. The University of Utah thought it was granted the saline lands within the State. The University of Utah has been denied them. The university made a selection, through the State, for the saline lands of the State. They were denied by the Government. A suit was started and carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court held that the saline lands should not go to the university.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, then, under this bill, it is perfectly evident we can not get any saline land, is it not?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is that much protection.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not discussing the question of the protection to the Government.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, so that we may understand the matter clearly, the State of Utah got the poor sections for school purposes, and, as the Senator rightly says, much of it is mountainous; but my understanding is that the great portion of it is within forest reserves in the State of the Senator, and under the ruling of the department they would be entitled to select, in lieu of those, valley lands, would they not?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, no law has been passed granting that right. Before the Public Lands Committee several times there were bills to that effect, and also in the House of Representatives, but none has ever been passed.

Mr. WALSH. I understood the Senator to say that the ruling of the department has thus far been that the grant did not pass to the State, and therefore these areas could be included within forest reserves, giving the State the right to select lands. If that is correct, then the State of Utah has the opportunity to select lands that may aggregate 5,000,000 acres.

Mr. SMOOT. The mineral lands that I spoke of were within the school sections, and they were sold by the State to individuals who developed coal mines upon them, and they have been in operation for 10 or 12 years.

Mr. WALSH. But the question I addressed to the Senator is——

Mr. SMOOT. They would have no right to make a selection outside even if the Forest Service was in favor of it.

I think, Mr. President, the Senator knows that wherever there is a piece of land within a forest reserve that is owned by an individual there has to be a special act of Congress in order to have it exchanged for public lands outside the forest reserve. There is a bill upon the calendar now that I reported to this body on Saturday for that very purpose. We have passed at least a dozen in the Senate of the United States within the last two or three years. That is the only way the exchange can be made. There is no law to-day under which the Secretary of the Interior can give title to a piece of land outside of a forest reserve on the public domain for land within a forest reserve owned by an individual.

Mr. WALSH. Then, as I understand the Senator, he contends that under the present practice the State of Utah is not entitled to select lands in lieu of those in a forest reserve.

Mr. SMOOT. The State of Utah is not entitled to do so.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I wish to ask the Senator if this is to allow the State authorities themselves to make the selection without any reference to what the owner of the public land might think about it? In other words——

Mr. SMOOT. There are land grants to State institutions outside of the school sections. In such cases the individual citizen makes his selection, and then the request by the State is made to the Interior Department that his selection be approved and charged to the particular State institution's grant the selection is made under——

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Then the process by which the result is accomplished is not that 7,000,000 acres are selected at once by the State authorities, and then certified by the commissioner of the land office, but nothing is done until the individual selects the part he wants to buy from the State, and then the State selects it. Would not that process have some bearing as to when the title ought to vest in the State?

Mr. SMOOT. This bill provides when it shall vest.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I know it does; but there is a difference of opinion between the Senator from Nevada and the Senator from Utah as to whether the title shall pass as of the time of the selection or of the time of certification. I gather that the Senator from Nevada wanted some definite time fixed when the title should vest. It occurred to me, as this process is one perhaps of a considerable period of time, it would suit the purpose of the Senator from Nevada and obviate the objection of the Senator from Utah, if the bill should provide that the title shall vest as of the time when the certification by the Commissioner of the Land Office was filed.

Mr. PITTMAN. It would make no difference.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I understand the Senator now to say that it would make no difference. It seems to me it would be better to have the title remain in the Government until the Commissioner of the Land Office had certified that it was approved by the Government at the request of the State.

Mr. BORAH and Mr. FALL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SIMMONS in the chair). Does the Senator from Utah yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. FALL. I desire to refer to the matter to which the Senator from Connecticut called attention.

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. FALL. I simply desire to say that the courts of the United States have passed upon this identical proposition, that these are grants in presenti, and that the approval of the Secretary of the Interior of the selection, as made by the State authorities, is the acceptance of the title that is of the State, and to obtain that approval it is necessary that the location of the lands should have the approval of different departments of the Government, particularly the Geologic Department, which has charge of the mining industry.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Then the Senator agrees with me that the present provisions of the bill would be a departure from the ordinary procedure?

Mr. FALL. I think it might be possibly. I have not studied that part out.

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I think that the present provision of the bill is in exact accord with the decision of the Supreme Court.

Mr. FALL. That is my impression.

Mr. BORAH. The first decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on this subject was one which came up from Nevada, in which a similar provision of the law was included, and they held that the title vested as of the date of the selection on the part of the State.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If that is true, then it would do so without the provision in the bill. If it is the usual provision, I have no objection to it. I was asking for information, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, what I do say is that this land grant to the State of Nevada gives Nevada an advantage, for this reason: All other land-grant States had to take the school sections in place wherever they fell, and the Government of the United States holds now that if the school sections are sold by a State to an individual and it develops later that the lands are mineral in character, the title never passed to the State, and the sale void, even after the lapse of 10 years. There is a suit now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States involving this very question. I will say to the Senator that the lower courts have so held; and if the Supreme Court of the United States sustains the lower courts in their contention, of course the result will be as I stated.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; if the Supreme Court should do so.

Mr. SMOOT. I think that is what the Supreme Court will do.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. I yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If I do not interrupt the Senator. If I do I will not ask the question.

Mr. SMOOT. No; I have no objection.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am seeking the information because I am not so familiar with this question as a Senator who comes from a public-land State. Is it usual to allow the States themselves to make the selections entirely without the Government doing it?

Mr. SMOOT. The State makes the selection upon application of a citizen. The selection is referred to the Interior Department for approval, and an examination is made by the Interior Department and then by the Forest Service and then by the Geological Survey, and so forth.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I know it comes down here, but I did not know whether it was usual to allow the State to select any of the public land it would want.

Mr. SMOOT. Any land which fell within the description of the enabling act.

Mr. STONE. I will be obliged to the Senator if he will allow me to ask him a question for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. I understand that about 7,000,000 acres of land have been given by the United States to Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. That is correct.

Mr. STONE. And Nevada is now asking for 7,000,000 acres to be given to that State.

Mr. SMOOT. Besides what she has already had.

Mr. STONE. How much has she already received?

Mr. SMOOT. Nevada has received about 3,000,000 acres, I think.

Mr. PITTMAN. Two million seven hundred thousand acres.

Mr. STONE. Seven million acres is the total area granted to the State of Utah. How much land has been given to Utah?

Mr. SMOOT. Seven million four hundred and eight thousand acres.

Mr. STONE. There would be a somewhat larger area then deeded to Nevada if this bill passed.

Mr. SMOOT. Nearly 3,000,000 acres more. It is not altogether that that I am complaining of. The grant here of 7,000,000 acres in the way that it is given gives every advantage in the disposition of the land to Nevada over every other Western State. Utah and other Western States had to take grants of mountainous lands. This bill grants 7,000,000 acres of valley land and nothing else.

Mr. STONE. The Senator's objection then is that when we, the people of the United States, donate these lands to States, the land that Nevada would have been able to pick up under this grant would have been more valuable than those Utah has been able to pick up.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; or any of the other of the mountainous States.

Mr. STONE. Does not the Senator think it would be a pretty good solution of this whole question to offer an amendment to transfer all the public lands to the States?

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Utah would be glad to do that if he had any hope whatever of passing such a measure in the House of Representatives; but I have no hope whatever. I do believe this, I will say to the Senator, that whatever is granted to Nevada there ought to be granted to the other Western States lands similar in character to place them upon the same footing with Nevada.

Mr. STONE. Oh, I suppose it is not all of the same character in different States.

Mr. SMOOT. It is almost of the same character if it be taken in the valleys. These are valley lands, and the selections will only be taken in the valleys and not in the mountains, as the Senator from Nevada states.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say, relative to the proposition the Senator has advanced of turning these lands over to the States, that I have introduced a bill of that kind, which is now before the Committee on Public Lands. I hope it may receive due consideration. I brought the matter up many years ago in this body and it had a fair start. In the meantime, however, those who were following it up left the Senate, and I do not know that it has since been considered.

From what the Senator from Utah says, if he will permit me a moment further, I think in these selections—my State, for instance, had the sixteenth and thirty-sixth sections and I think Utah had the sixteenth, the thirty-sixth, the thirty-third, and the thirteenth.

Mr. SMOOT. No; Utah had the second, the sixteenth, the thirty-second, and the thirty-sixth.

Mr. WARREN. That is, taking land in place as it happens to come in the sections so numbered. It is not selected, and therefore not nearly as valuable, acre for acre, as carefully selected land. I feel generously about all these things. The lands lie there unimproved and paying no taxes, and they ought to pass into private hands, whether through State governments or otherwise. Of course, this bill could be arranged for lands in place as these others were, four sections in each township, for the State, but there ought to be some of it in selections. I think all of the States had a certain amount of land selected by the State in addition to the numbered sections taken in place. That is true, is it not?

Mr. SMOOT. It is.

Mr. WARREN. And, of course, Nevada could be treated likewise.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. If I understand, Mr. President, without having accurate information, there are about 70,000,000 acres of public lands undisposed of at the present time. Am I correct in that statement?

Mr. SMOOT. There are some 700,000,000 acres undisposed of.

Mr. GALLINGER. And those lands lie in how many States?

Mr. SMOOT. They lie practically in 13 public-land States.

Mr. WARREN. No; in 17 States.

Mr. SMOOT. There is but very little public land in other than 13 States. It all practically lies in 13 States.

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course those lands belong to the people of the United States at the present time?

Mr. SMOOT. They do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have been reading an article in a local newspaper recently which pointed out the fact that there are bills now before the Senate disposing of 30,000,000 acres of land; among others, it says the Senator from Utah has a bill asking for a million acres for Utah, and other States are enumerated. I do not know how accurate that may be. I have heard it contended here that the Government ought to relinquish its claim to those lands and give them to the States in which they are located. I have never thought that was a very wise contention, but is it not rather a reckless way of disposing of property that belongs to the people of the United States, tossing 7,000,000-acre lots of land to the several States? Of course that means that after you have gone around three or four times you will have all the public lands appropriated.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in answer to that suggestion I wish to say to the Senator that I believe it would be a great advantage to the Government of the United States and to the people of the United States if all of those lands were utilized, and it would be a wonderful advantage to the States themselves. For instance, take my own State of Utah. We have to maintain all of the institutions of every kind and every sort in the State from taxes raised on 21 per cent of the area of the State. The balance of the land in the State is nontaxable. I want to say, Mr. President, that I have here a petition, received this morning, from a meeting of the New York Zoological Society, at which certain resolutions were passed, and one of them is as follows:

Now therefore be it further resolved, That the New York Zoological Society recommends that the Federal Government take immediate steps to convert any and all of the forest reserves of the United States into game refuges for such period and to such extent as is necessary to assure the preservation of threatened species and the continuance of the game supply of the surrounding districts.

Mr. BORAH. Mr, President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator——

Mr. BORAH. I merely desire to say that it seems incredible that any body of men would pass that kind of a resolution. Do not these men know that there are thousands of acres in these reserves that are as good agricultural land as can be found, and that hundreds and thousands of homeless people want them? I have no language with which to express my view of a body of men who would turn such lands over to game reserves.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want to say that that resolution is sent out in the hope of even western Representatives and Senators agreeing to it. It means, Mr. President, that about 79 per cent of my State is to be tied up for a game preserve!

Mr. BORAH. Exactly.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what it means.

Mr. BORAH. For these distinguished gentlemen to come out there and hunt game in, while poor people are yearning for a place to build a home.

Mr. SMOOT. The resolution virtually says so.

Mr. BORAH. And hundreds of thousands of settlers, who really want to make homes, are driven into the adjoining country of Canada for the purpose of finding homes.

Mr. President, may I say just a word if the Senator from New Hampshire is through?

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to listen to the Senator from Idaho, and then perhaps I shall have some observations to make later on.

Mr. BORAH. I want to interrupt the Senator from Utah for just a moment.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator may proceed, if he so desires.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have a great deal of sympathy with this bill. The only objection that I have to the bill is that it is not quite wide enough in its reach. It ought to include more States.

Mr. SMOOT. That is what I say.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, some time ago the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] made a statement—and I know that he is always accurate in these matters—showing the amount of lands in these different States which were not subject to entry and therefore not subject to taxation. The Western States are doing precisely what the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] says, undertaking to build up great Commonwealths upon a taxable area of from 10, 15, 20, and 25 per cent of their entire area.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The Senator refers to Nevada.

Mr. BORAH. That is the average of the different Western States.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I think the taxable area is even less than that.

Mr. BORAH. Perhaps it is less.

Mr. SHAFROTH. In Nevada I do not believe it is 10 per cent.

Mr. BORAH. Perhaps so. I did not suppose it was quite so bad as that, but it is bad enough.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. We have large counties in some of these States where they have had to sustain their schools by private contributions, while distinguished gentlemen throughout the country are petitioning for the creation of hunting reserves in that region of territory, where they have as good agricultural land as lies outdoors.

I am in favor of any movement which will put those lands into the hands of bona fide settlers and of bona fide home builders. We can not build States, or maintain them, unless we are to have something of that kind. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] has been chided because he is in part representing a State which has only so many voters. Well, where is the voter going to stay? He can not stay on reserve land. The only way to get voters and home builders into those States is to open these lands to entry. My sympathy is with the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I want to say that I based what I have said upon a report that was made to the Senate which undertook to show that Nevada had been discriminated against and that this bill was simply to put her on an equal footing with other Western States. I believe the Senator from Nevada himself will admit that if this bill passes in the shape in which it now is, Nevada would not be on an equal footing with other States.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I can not allow that suggestion to go by without denying it. If the distinguished Senator had waited until we got through perfecting this bill by amendment, I think in about five minutes I would have shown exactly what we contend for in the report; but he is now fighting this bill, for some reason that so far has not been disclosed. I imagine, however, that it is for the purpose of forcing some legislation for Utah; and, if that be true, the motive may be very good. I want to say, though, that in this particular case it seems a very uncertain method of legislation to fight something that you approve of in order to force in the same bill something that is desired to be granted to another State.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, of course the little lecture of the Senator may be all right; but I want to say to the Senator that it would not make a particle of difference to me whether my own State was involved or not, if I felt that what was being asked for was unjust. I would never stand for it. I say to the Senator, in answer to the statement that he could not let go by the opportunity of denying the statement I made just previous to his interruption and his statement that what I had said was not true, let us see if it be not true. I make the statement upon the report made by the Senator himself and submitted to the Senate.

California had 8,331,878 acres of public land granted to her. If this bill passes, Nevada will have more than California. Colorado had 4,432,169 acres granted to her. If this bill passes, Nevada will have 5,000,000 acres more than Colorado. Idaho had 3,628,827 acres granted to her. If this bill passes, Nevada will have over 6,000,000 acres more than the State of Idaho. Montana had 5,869,004 acres granted to her. If this bill passes, Nevada will have over 4,000,000 acres more than the State of Montana. Nebraska had 3,456,809 acres granted to her. If this bill passes, Nevada will have nearly 6,000,000 acres more than the State of Nebraska. North Dakota had 3,163,084 acres granted to her, which would give Nevada over 6,000,000 acres more than North Dakota. Oklahoma had 3,004,000 acres granted to her, which would give nearly 7,000,000 acres more to Nevada than Oklahoma received.

Mr. FALL. And Oklahoma received $5,000,000 in cash at the same time, did she not?

Mr. SMOOT. That was for Indian lands.

Mr. FALL. Yes, sir; and because a portion of Oklahoma, like New Mexico, was already taken up and in lieu of a larger land grant she was given $5,000,000 in cash.

Mr. SMOOT. She received $5,000,000. Of course, if these 7,000,000 acres of land in Nevada were sold at $2.50 an acre, the amount received would be $17,500,000.

Oregon had granted to her 4,355,324 acres, vastly less than is proposed to be given to Nevada. South Dakota had 3,433,153 acres granted to her, which would give over 6,000,000 acres more to the State of Nevada than to South Dakota. Washington had 3,042,906 acres granted to her, which would give nearly 7,000,000 more to the State of Nevada than to the State of Washington.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS in the chair). Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.

Mr. FALL. I merely want to ask the Senator a question. I have been listening with a good deal of interest to the Senator; I can not understand upon what ground he is objecting to this bill, and I would like to understand him. Is it because the Senator is convinced that no further donations should be given to any of the States, or is it because this is a donation to one State?

Mr. SMOOT. I thought I had stated that in my opening remarks.

Mr. FALL. I did not understand the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not averse to the Government of the United States making appropriations of public lands to the public-land States; and, as I have said time and time again, I would very gladly vote for a bill transferring all of the public lands within all of the Western States to the respective States. I believe myself, Mr. President, that such a bill could perhaps pass this body, but I am quite sure it could not be passed in the House of Representatives. My opinion is, I will say to the Senator, that I do not believe that it is proper to give a donation of 7,000,000 acres of land to one State, thus giving that State double and more than double and sometimes three times as much as has been donated to other States.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, then let me ask the Senator this question. He has been on the Public Lands Committee for very many years and has been a very prominent member of that committee. Does not the Senator from Utah know perfectly well, as do the Senators from New Mexico, from Idaho, and from every other Western State now having public lands within its borders—does he not know that there are peculiar conditions in each of these States? Does he not know that in the State of Nevada to-day such lands as are being given there would not amount in value, although the acreage may be double or treble the amount which has been donated to other States, to one-fiftieth or one one-hundredth of the donations which have been made to other States?

Mr. SMOOT. In all the States now that are known as public-land States——

Mr. FALL. I will call the Senator's attention to his own State, as shown in one of the tables I have here, and would like to ask him what this means.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, if the Senator had reference to the swamp act, some of those lands were a great deal more valuable.

Mr. FALL. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. But what I mean to say is that if you take what is known as the intermountain States, the land-grant States, taking the land as it was granted to them, most of it being mountain land, will not be more valuable than the land that is proposed to be granted under this bill to the State of Nevada.

Mr. FALL. I disagree with the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. All I know is this——

Mr. FALL. Here is a table, and I want to ask the Senator what the meaning of this table is. I have here before me the report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office for this year showing the desert-land entries made since 1877 in the various States of the Union. In four States, and only in four States, as shown in this table, has the amount of money received on final payment, at the rate of $1 per acre on such final payment, equaled the amount of the first payment at 25 cents per acre. What does that mean? It means that not one-fourth, only about one-fifth, of the lands taken up by the settlers under the desert-land acts have been patented. They have lost the money which they have spent on four-fifths of it; they have lost all amounts paid to the Government, and also $3 per acre which they must expend under the rules and regulations, less their time, less the land, and over half of the money.

Now, I notice that in the State of Utah there has been a little more money paid in on the final payment than was paid in on the first payment; in other words, to read the figures—I desire to ask a question and this is preliminary to the question—in Utah of the total desert-land entries there have been approximately one-third which have gone to final patent; in New Mexico from one-eighth to one-tenth; in Nevada one-tenth. What does that mean?

Mr. SMOOT. I can tell the Senator if he wants me to tell him now.

Mr. FALL. I certainly should like to have the question answered.

Mr. SMOOT. I will tell the Senator now.

Mr. FALL. Very well.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator's statement that not one-fifth of the desert-land entries go to patent is true. The reason for that is because it is impossible for the entrymen to comply with the law.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, that is not the question. The Senator understands me. Now, let me repeat it. Why is the proportion so different in Utah and in Nevada of the lands going to patent? What is the reason?

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, Mr. President, I do not know what the reason for the nonpatenting of desert-land entries in Nevada may be, but I suppose it is because of the fact that they have found out that it would not pay to carry the entries to patent.

Mr. FALL. Exactly; it would pay in Utah and would not pay in Nevada.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that is not necessarily so.

Mr. FALL. That is the Senator's own answer.

Mr. SMOOT. That is not necessarily so. I think the State of Utah, as far as the State is concerned, is as short of water as the State of Nevada.

Mr. FALL. The answer which is given is undoubtedly the answer from the table itself, is it not?—because it would pay to go to patent with a desert-land entry as an agricultural entry in Utah, while it would not pay to go to patent with a desert-land entry in New Mexico or Nevada.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, there may be some other conditions about which I could not say, but I want to say this: As far as the State of Utah is concerned, there are now, I think, thousands of acres that have been entered under desert-land entries, and the entrymen find themselves in this condition: When they made the entry a water company was organized for the purpose of bringing water to that very land; he has done everything in his power to comply with the law, he has made his improvements, he has fenced his land, he has built his home, and the irrigation company has failed to furnish him with the water. I have now before the Interior Department a long petition, signed by the people who have entered lands in the Uintah Basin, who find themselves exactly in that condition, and they can not get title to their land under the law.

There may have been more cases like that in Nevada than there have been in the State of Utah, and that may be the reason why they have not carried their entries to patent—because of the fact that it was absolutely impossible for them to do so, because other people and other sources that they depended upon failed.

Mr. FALL. Then that same answer would apply to all the other cases in the public-land States, if the table shows that, including Utah, there are four States in which the percentage of final proofs would amount to from one-half to one-third, while in the others they run on an average of about one-eighth to one-tenth.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, of course it could not all be charged up to this one reason; because, as the Senator knows, even with the ordinary homestead not a very much larger percentage than the one named by him in the case of the desert-land entries go to patent.

Mr. FALL. Oh, yes; they do, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, somewhat larger percentage. I do not remember just what it is.

Mr. FALL. Now, I want to ask the Senator from Utah if he thinks that in a Rocky Mountain State, which has a rainfall of from 16 inches to 21 or 23 inches, the lands are not much more valuable than those of exactly a similar character in a State where the annual rainfall is less than 16 inches?

Mr. SMOOT. There is no doubt of it, Mr. President.

Mr. FALL. Then, if it is true that in a majority of the States of the Rocky Mountain region the rainfall is 16 inches, while it is equally true that in Nevada, for instance, the rainfall on an average is very much less than 12 inches, the difference between 12 and 16 inches meaning the difference between desert lands susceptible of cultivation in dry farming and those not so suscpetible, in the one instance a desert is worth nothing, while in the other it may be of great value. In other words, instead of the proportion being as suggested by the Senator, 20,000,000 acres in the State of Nevada might not amount to as much as in value as 2,000,000 in the State of Montana.

Mr. SMOOT. I would not agree to that, Mr. President. Wherever there is a rainfall of 12 inches, if properly farmed, they can make dry farming a success.

Mr. FALL. Then the Senator of course knows, Mr. President, that he is in opposition to every Government report and every expert report made upon the subject of which I have any knowledge.

Mr. SMOOT. We have no hesitation at all, in the State of Utah, in undertaking dry farming wherever there is a 12-inch rainfall.

Mr. FALL. Then there are peculiar conditions existing in Utah which does not exist in Nevada or in New Mexico or in Arizona, which would render the lands susceptible of cultivation in the Senator's own State where they are not susceptible of cultivation in the States I have mentioned.

Mr. SMOOT. I can tell the Senator of districts in the State of Nevada that are dry farming to-day and doing it successfully.

Mr. FALL. Oh, that is where the rainfall is, as I have said and the public reports say, above 16 inches. About one year in three, with a 16-inch rainfall, it is possible to make fair crops, while with a 21-inch rainfall it is possible to make some sort of a forage crop every year.

Mr. SMOOT. I know the State of Utah does not have 16 inches of rainfall on an average, and I know that we have dry farmed there for 35 years, and I know that when dry farming was first started it took many, many years to find out just how to conduct it. It used to be the habit of the dry farmer to roll the surface of his land, thinking in that he could keep the moisture in the ground. Now they never do that. They harrow the land now, even after the grain is up. The object is to keep the land from baking and allow the sun to draw the moisture to the roots of the grain. I say now, Mr. President, that the State of Utah does not have 16 inches of rainfall, and there is not a State in the Union that is more successful in dry farming than that State.

Mr. FALL. Then, if it is possible to cultivate land with 12 inches of rainfall in Utah, and because of want of sagacity or energy on the part of the people of the State of Nevada and the State of New Mexico, it is not possible to cultivate the land successfully with a 12-inch rainfall in those States—and I announce absolutely as a fact that it is impossible in my State—if the facts are so different, then I will admit cheerfully that 1 acre of the Senator's land is worth 10 acres of New Mexico land.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course I have not made any such statement, and have made no such claim, and do not admit it now, because I think, of course, the lands in the State of Nevada are just as fertile where cultivated as those of other States; and I think the people of New Mexico can cultivate their lands just as well and just as highly as the people of any other State; but that does not change the provisions of the bill nor the object of the bill one iota. There is no question but that the bill itself, if passed, will place the State of Nevada in a far more advantageous situation than any other of the Western States.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if all of these donations to the States have not been individual donations? I concede that the States ought to be upon an equal basis; but the legislation in this Congress has always been in behalf of granting to each State separately. That being the case, it seems to me it is no ground of objection to this bill that the amount it carries exceeds the amount granted to some other State. When Utah's bill was passed, it was far in excess of that of Colorado. We got only two sections, 16 and 36. Utah got four sections.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, the Senator knows why that was done—because everybody admitted that the great bulk of the land so granted would be mountainous land. There is not a person in Congress, in either the House or the Senate, who has ever been through the State who does not know that to be the fact.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I think it has arisen very largely from the fact that there has been a feeling upon the part of the people of the United States that the States should have more of this land for school purposes; and therefore I think the general rule has been to double the quantity of land which was given to the earlier States.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will go back and look at the debates, both in the House and in the Senate, he will quickly learn why those four sections were given.

Mr. FALL. What was the reason?

Mr. SMOOT. The reason was because of the mountainous lands in which the school sections would fall, and four sections of those lands were worth no more than two sections of valley land. I want to say, as far as the State of Utah is concerned, that 10 sections of mountainous land, all within a forest reserve, are not equal to one section of valley land without the reserve; and the Senator knows that the valley lands in the State of Utah are very limited indeed.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, I do not know what the Senator calls valley lands; but I want to ask him this question, following his statement to its logical conclusion:

Utah has running through it the great Rocky Mountain Range, with a few offshoots from it, and is very mountainous. In the State of New Mexico, on the south boundary of Colorado, this great Rocky Mountain Range breaks into five main ranges, running practically parallel north and south through the State, and cutting it up entirely by mountain ranges from the north to the south into narrow valleys, without any water at all, or practically no water. If the Senator's State, with one mountain range, should have four school sections, why did he not, when he had the power, give to New Mexico at least eight?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator speaks as though there were only one range of mountains in the State of Utah. As a matter of fact, there are many. As far as the valley lands are concerned, I want to say to the Senator that I mean by valley lands the lands that lie at the foot of the mountains, between two mountain ranges.

Mr. FALL. Generally with a watercourse.

Mr. SMOOT. Generally with a watercourse.

Mr. FALL. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. Sometimes in our State they have no watercourse. The water is sometimes stored in the mountains.

Mr. FALL. With a 12-inch rainfall?

Mr. SMOOT. With a 12-inch rainfall.

Mr. FALL. They do?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes. Of course what I mean by rainfall, and what everybody means, is that amount of moisture, whether it is in rain or whether it is in snow. In those districts where the mountains are it is always in snow, but it is measured in inches just the same as if it fell in the summer or in the spring or in the fall in the form of rain. That is always understood by everybody.

Mr. President, I want to say that I believe the Senator from Nevada ought to amend this bill, and he ought to reduce the amount of 7,000,000 acres to a reasonable amount, so that Nevada will be on the same footing as other States. I do not think she ought to be put in any different position; but giving her 7,000,000 acres is not placing Nevada on the same footing as the other States, and that is why I rose to discuss this measure.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah states that there is an error in stating that Nevada has not been as well treated as the other Western States. This has been worked out on a percentage basis. The percentage basis is as follows:

Utah has received 14 per cent of all the public lands in that State. She has received that percentage in several separate grants. Nevada has received less than 4 per cent of the public lands in the State of Nevada. I want to know if the Senator from Utah denies that. I take it that he does not deny it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I have not the figures here to show, offhand, just what the percentages are.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will give the Senator the figures, then, and he can be making the computation a little later.

The land area of the surface of the State of Utah is 52,597,760 acres. The amount of grant to Utah of the public lands has been 7,408,018 acres.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. Just a second, until I finish this statement. The percentage of the grant to Utah is 14 per cent plus. Now, just wait until I get through with Nevada. Nevada has 70,285,440 acres. The total grant to Nevada has been 2,723,647 acres, which is less than 4 per cent. Now, I refer the Senator to the relation of 4 per cent to 14 per cent.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. PITTMAN. I do for a question.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The figures that the Senator has just quoted were printed in the report of the committee accompanying the bill, were they not?

Mr. PITTMAN. They were.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I was very much impressed by the point made by the Senator from Utah as to the effect of giving the State of Nevada the right to select 7,000,000 acres of land instead of allowing it to take the land as it came in the numbered sections. I will ask the Senator from Nevada this question: Has not the State of Nevada already been granted sections 16 and 36 for school purposes?

Mr. PITTMAN. They were so granted; yes.

Mr. POINDEXTER. And is it not also true that the State of Nevada made a bargain, as it might be called, with the United States, by which it surrendered that land grant in exchange for the right to select 2,000,000 acres of land?

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true.

Mr. POINDEXTER. So that the calculation which the Senator is making as to the acreage of land received by the different States and the percentage of that grant to the entire acreage of the State is scarcely a fair comparison, because the State of Nevada has surrendered that grant for what it regarded—no doubt very wisely—as the great advantage of being able to select from the best lands there were in the entire public area of the State to the extent of 2,000,000 acres.

Now, I just want to add a word. I am not opposed——

Mr. PITTMAN. If the Senator wants to speak on this question, I wish he would wait until I conclude. If he wants to ask a question, I should like to have a chance to answer it. Now, I want to answer the question he has asked.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Very well.

Mr. PITTMAN. Referring to the condition of the State of Utah, the State of Utah had a selection of nearly 2,000,000 acres, in addition to about 5,000,000 acres in place. It had about 2,000,000 acres selective, the same as the State of Nevada. In other words, the State of Nevada had 2,000,000 selective acres; the State of Utah had approximately 2,000,000 selective acres and 5,000,000 acres in place. Now, when you come down to the proposition, Congress itself preferred that Nevada should select that land rather than to take it in the other way, because most of our land is mountainous. The mountains of Nevada are richer in minerals than those of any other State in this Union. The mineral lands are far more valuable than any other character of land in our State, and in granting lands to the States it was the object of the Congress not to grant the minerals; and in endeavoring to exclude all possibility of granting minerals, for the purpose of preventing any fraud upon the Government, as was said in some of the arguments at that time, it was considered wise that these should be selected rather than granted in place.

But be that as it may, here is a peculiar condition, and I may say it seems a peculiar system of argument that a western Senator should stand here and argue not as to whether a bill is proper, but whether his State is as well taken care of.

GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS in the chair). Will the Senator from Nevada suspend for a moment? The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 381.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] offered as a substitute for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE].

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum having been suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fletcher	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Md.
Bankhead	Gallinger	Myers	Smoot
Beckham	Gore	Nelson	Sterling
Borah	Gronna	Norris	Stone
Brandegee	Harding	Oliver	Sutherland
Broussard	Hitchcock	Overman	Thomas
Bryan	Husting	Page	Tillman
Catron	Johnson, S. Dak.	Phelan	Townsend
Chamberlain	Jones	Pittman	Underwood
Chilton	Kenyon	Poindexter	Vardaman
Clark, Wyo.	La Follette	Pomerene	Wadsworth
Clarke, Ark.	Lane	Ransdell	Walsh
Cummins	Lee, Md.	Reed	Warren
Curtis	Lewis	Shafroth	Weeks
Dillingham	Lodge	Sheppard	Williams
du Pont	McCumber	Shields
Fall	McLean	Simmons

Mr. TOWNSEND. I wish to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH]. He is paired with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. This announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. CHILTON. My colleague [Mr. GOFF], the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], and the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY] are absent on account of illness. All of them are paired. The junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] is paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]; my colleague [Mr. GOFF] is paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN]; and the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY] is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH].

Mr. BORAH. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. BRADY] is absent on account of illness. This announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] is absent on account of illness. He is paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]. I wish also to announce that the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] is absent on account of illness and is paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY]. I desire that this announcement shall stand for the day.

Mr. STONE. I should like to announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is detained on account of sickness and that he is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I do not desire to discuss the bill that has just been laid aside while the unfinished business is under consideration. I realize that, having the floor, I have a right to discuss anything I see fit and that I have a right to answer the argument of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] and others with regard to this measure. I have this morning done everything I could to facilitate the debate on this matter, so that we could come to a vote. I have been unable to do so, and the unfinished business has come on at 2 o'clock.

While I should like at this time to submit to the Senate matters that would absolutely refute, in my opinion, every proposition the Senator from Utah has brought forward, I believe it would be trespassing upon the Senate unless the Senator who has charge of the unfinished business would consent to temporarily lay the unfinished business aside.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I am in sympathy with the bill the passage of which the Senator from Nevada is struggling so hard to secure, and I regret that he has not been able to finish it; but I can not now consent to allow anything to interfere with the unfinished business, which has already been too often postponed. I hope the Senator will not press his request.

I am going to ask the Senate to-night instead of adjourning to take a recess until to-morrow, in order that the unfinished business may be constantly before the Senate from now on until it is completed. I tried to get a unanimous-consent agreement to shorten the debate, and I have not been able to do so. I am now going to ask the Senate to do the next best thing, and that is to keep this business constantly before the body until it is disposed of.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, after that statement, and believing that the Senate will not object to the calendar coming up—the bill which has been before the Senate being the first on the calendar, and will come up to-morrow morning at the close of the morning business—I shall not ask any further to have the unfinished business set aside, but will then go on with the remarks I was making when the hour of 2 o'clock arrived.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the question immediately before the Senate, as I understand the parliamentary situation, is the substitute offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. It therefore is a question in voting to decide which of these two proposed amendments to the bill is the most desirable in the mind of the person voting.

I have a great deal of sympathy, Mr. President, with the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, because I think in a great measure it is a proper settlement of the Philippine question, but it has some things that it seems to me are very objectionable. It provides that the President of the United States shall undertake to get an agreement with other nations in regard to the independence of those islands, and that upon a failure to get such agreements with all he applies to, to make agreements with those who are willing to enter into them. If none are willing to enter into such an agreement, then the United States alone shall guarantee the independence of the Philippine Islands for five years. It is true he provides in his redrafted amendment that during those five years the United States shall maintain sufficient force there to preserve order, and so forth.

Another objectionable feature, to my mind, is that it provides for retaining perpetually coaling stations and naval bases in the islands. The substitute proposed by the Senator from North Dakota is very short, and I want to read it as it has been modified by the Senator who introduced it. It seems to me to be preferable to the amendment introduced by the Senator from Arkansas, inasmuch as it omits the two objectionable features, or at least what appear to me to be objectionable features. The amendment of the Senator from North Dakota reads as follows:

> The President of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to indicate to the great powers of the world the desire of this Government to extend to the Philippine Islands and the Philippine people full and complete independence so soon as it shall be warranted in the belief that such independence will be respected by the other powers of the world. The President is further authorized and requested to secure from such other powers such agreements as will insure the independence of said islands, and when such agreements have been made he shall forthwith direct a convention to be held in such islands for the purpose of adopting a constitution providing for a republican form of government, and as soon as such constitution has been adopted and officers have been elected and a government inaugurated thereunder he shall, by proclamation, declare such islands and the people thereof to be a free and independent state, with all the powers of complete sovereignty.

It will be observed, Mr. President, that if this should be added to the bill under consideration as an amendment it would not interfere in any way with the bill itself, and should the President of the United States find that it was impossible to get agreements from the other leading nations of the world in regard to the independence of the Philippine Islands the bill would be effective just as though this amendment had not been attached to it. Of course this amendment would have no legal effect until such agreements were entered into.

So, it seems to me, from the point of one supporting the bill itself, there could be no objection if the person believed that we ought to give to the Filipino people independence, and that to bring about such independence at as early a date as possible it would be desirable to have other nations acquiesce in the scheme.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I will ask the Senator whether he has taken into consideration that the amendment which has been proposed by the Senator from North Dakota is an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the Clarke amendment?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is my understanding.

Mr. SHAFROTH. But the difficulty is this: If it takes the place of the Clarke amendment, it has a provision in it which makes it inoperative in regard to independence until there has been an agreement between the nations of the world. It makes our conduct simply depend upon the action of some foreign country.

Mr. NORRIS. As far as this particular amendment is concerned that is true. In other words, the amendment itself would have no legal effect if all the other powers of the world refused to negotiate with us or refused to enter into an agreement by which they would respect the independence of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Does the Senator——

Mr. NORRIS. But that would not defeat the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; but it seems to me it is very unfortunate that it is so worded, because we can not afford to tie our hands by what some foreign nation may do——

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, no.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Or what a number of foreign nations would do.

Mr. NORRIS. No, I would not do that; but there is a difference of opinion among honest men who have studied the subject in detail as to whether the Philippine Islands ought to be independent now, whether their independence would last if it were granted now, and whether we ought to grant it in 10 years from now, or whether they would be able to control and rule themselves in a hundred years from now. But I think most of the objections which are made against granting independence now are coupled with the proposition that if we turn them loose among the nations they will become the prey of other nations. I think there may be some ground for that belief. I would feel differently about simply declaring them independent and turning them loose now without any such agreement than I would if we had an agreement upon the part of the leading nations that they would respect their independence.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Of course we would all rather have an agreement with the leading nations.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the object of this amendment, and that is what we are trying to get.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; further than that it would make it impossible for the President of the United States to act or to recognize the independence of the Filipinos themselves unless the leading nations of the world agreed.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I admit that. Now, let me answer that suggestion. If this were not adopted and the bill was passed just as the Senator and his committee reported it to the Senate, that same objection, if it be an objection, would lie. There would have to be further action by Congress. I do not believe it will be true, but suppose the other nations refuse to enter into such an agreement, this amendment becomes a dead letter. It comes back and Congress can legislate in the future just the same as it can, the same as it probably will, if we pass the bill without this amendment.

In the first place, In do not believe that there is any question but what every nation that we take the question up with will agree with us and will agree to recognize the independence of those islands. I do not believe there is any doubt about it. I believe if this amendment is put on the bill it means the independence of the Philippine Islands as soon as this agreement can be brought about. But if it should not, then we are placed in the same situation—at least as I see it—as though we had passed the bill without this amendment, because we would have to legislate to give them independence. We could start out next year, if we wanted, and give them their independence at once, or we could do it at a later date, whenever it was decided that they could take care of themselves if we gave them independence.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The difficulty with the situation is that if this were simply an amendment to the bill, without being a substitute for the Clarke amendment, there might be great force in what the Senator says.

Mr. NORRIS. That is all it is, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Oh, no.

Mr. NORRIS. The Clarke amendment is a new section to the bill. If this substitute for the Clarke amendment should be adopted, it would become a new section of the bill. It would not modify a single sentence in the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Whenever you move a certain amendment as a substitute for an amendment the natural inquiry and consideration is to contrast the two, so as to ascertain which of the amendments is the best.

Mr. NORRIS. Exactly.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I have not any doubt that the Clarke amendment is better and fairer, both to the Philippine people and to the United States, than the McCumber amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, I have not any doubt that this is better. Of course the Senator, feeling as he does, will vote against this amendment. That is all there is of that.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That is true.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator has placed it there fairly and just as I want him to place it. It is a question as to whether a Senator, in voting, prefers to have enacted into law the McCumber amendment or the Clarke amendment.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The contrast and the argument ought to be, then, as to which is the better amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I am trying to bring about. I pointed out some objections to the Clarke amendment as I look at it. I want to take them up briefly.

The Clarke amendment provides that when we go out we shall retain in the Philippine Islands coaling stations and naval bases. I am opposed to both those propositions. I believe when we leave the Philippine Islands, whenever that time may be—this year or in a hundred years from now—we ought to go out without any strings tied to our departure. If we do not want to retain the Philippine Islands, we would have that liability. In my judgment, we might just as well retain the islands as to retain a coaling station and a naval base.

In the first place, why do we want a naval base there in Asia if we do not have the Philippine Islands? Why do we want a coaling station there if we do not have the Philippine Islands? The only object in having a naval base and coaling station is to be able to better defend our territory in the vicinity of such base. If we give up the Philippine Islands, we will have no territory on that side of the world to defend, and hence no earthly use for a naval base. If we retain a naval base and coaling station, then we must defend the naval base, we must defend the coaling station, to the same extent that we must defend the Philippine Islands as long as we retain them.

I believe that it would be more burdensome to defend a coaling station and a naval base when the sovereignty of the Philippine Islands has been turned over to the Philippines than it would be to defend them now, when we retain the sovereignty, because if we are going to defend them now we can at any time we see fit place an army on the islands to defend any shore on the other side or any place around them. If the Philippine Islands are independent and we want to defend a coaling station or a naval base, the island lying by the side of it will be a country over which we have no sovereignty and over which we have no control, and we would find it more difficult, in my judgment, to defend that than though we retained the islands themselves.

Mr. President, it is not fair that we should retain a coaling station and a naval base over in Asia if we go out of the Philippine Islands. If we give them their independence, we ought to go out absolutely. We ought no more to attempt to retain a coaling station and a naval base in Asia than we would permit an Asiatic country to maintain a naval base on the shores of Mexico, and everyone knows that would create an eruption at once in the United States.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I would suggest to the Senator that if the islands should be turned over and the Filipinos be given their independence and if at any time in the near or remote future the United States determined to abandon that little coaling station it would be a very simple matter to get out.

Mr. NORRIS. It is not a simple matter of getting out. We could get out now if it were just a matter of getting out.

Mr. VARDAMAN. If we are going to remain there five years and guarantee the integrity of the islands it would not be a bad idea to keep a coaling station in the islands.

Mr. NORRIS. If we are going to remain there five years and want to retain possession during all that time or for any length of time, I do not think we ought to get out until we go out bag and baggage.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The matter of that little coaling station is entirely in the hands of Congress, which is sitting almost continuously, and it can be done without any difficulty at all.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator will find a great deal of difficulty.

Now, let me ask the Senator, if we turn over the Philippine Islands and declare them independent and acknowledge their independence, why should we retain a coaling station anywhere around the islands?

Mr. VARDAMAN. As far as I am personally concerned, I say frankly to the Senator that I would prefer packing up our bags and coming away absolutely. I should like to have come away yesterday. I should like just to brush the dust off of our feet and come away, but that does not seem to be the opinion of a great many Senators; there are a great many American people who think that there is a moral obligation devolving upon the United States to train those people a little bit longer. That is the purpose of it. It is one of those compromise measures.

Mr. NORRIS. It is not the purpose of the Clarke amendment to train the people a little bit longer.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Yes; the purpose is that the enactment of this law shall give them an autonomous form of government and that they may be trained, and then gradually and gracefully we will retire.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is the purpose of the bill, I understand, but not of the Clarke amendment. This is only offered as a substitute for the Clarke amendment.

Mr. VARDAMAN. As a matter of fact, the bill will be in operation for not less than two and not more than four years, which ought to give ample time to install it and start it out on its good work.

Mr. NORRIS. If we adopt the Clarke amendment, there will not be much delay in the President undertaking to negotiate with other powers and bringing about our departure. If we adopt this amendment, in some respects the same procedure will be had, although we would not retain a naval base or a coaling station. We would not guarantee their independence after we left.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. In just a moment. I have a great deal of sympathy with the class of people mentioned by the Senator from Mississippi, who think we ought to stay there and teach them a little bit longer. There is not any doubt but what a great many people, perhaps the majority of them, I have no way of determining, believe in that theory. I do not want to get out of the Philippines until we can do so with honor and with credit. I do not want to do anything that would not be fair to the Philippine Islands, to the Filipino people, to our own Government, or to our own people; but I believe, first, that the Filipino people do not want to become citizens of the United States; that they have no desire to become citizens of the United States; that they are anxious for an independent citizenship of their own; and, further, that the retention of the islands can do us no good; that it is a constant menace, and in the case of war would be a liability that would mean that we would have to spend thousands of lives and millions of property in the defense of the islands. I should like to get out as soon as we possibly can, and I sympathize with the Filipino who wants a country of his own. The Filipinos are entirely different; they are a different class, a different race; and they will never assimilate with us. That is no disrespect to them, nor to us. They ought to be independent and to be working out their own salvation, and just as quickly as we can get away, and do it honorably and fairly, I want to do it.

Now I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I, like the Senator from Nebraska, am in favor of getting out of the Philippine Islands as soon as possible with honor both to ourselves and to them; but I notice one provision in the McCumber amendment which I do not quite understand. In line 7 it reads:

> The President is further authorized and requested to secure from such other powers such agreements as will insure the independence of said islands in perpetuity.

"In perpetuity" means forever.

Mr. NORRIS. The words "in perpetuity" have been stricken out.

Mr. LANE. I am glad to hear it, for it seems to me that nobody could legislate in that manner.

Mr. NORRIS. It would probably be difficult for the President to know how long that would mean; but those words have been stricken out.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I want to say to the Senator from Nebraska that he has made a powerful speech in the last three minutes, giving nearly all the reasons why the United States Government should surrender sovereignty to the Philippine Islands. I want to ask him, after noting his sympathy in this matter—it is really practically the same as mine—whether, if the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] were modified to the extent of saying that the President "may" retain a coaling station instead of using the word "shall," which is now the language of the amendment, that would not modify the Senator's views and cause him to support the Clarke amendment?

Mr. NORRIS. That would materially modify my views; but, Mr. President, it strikes me that that would not be fair to the President; that would be shifting a responsibility from our own shoulders that we ought not to try to shift onto somebody else. It seems to me it is peculiarly a question that Congress ought to decide, as to whether we should retain a coaling station and a naval base in the Philippine Islands. If the change were made which has been suggested by the Senator, and I knew the President would say, "I will not retain anything," I would not, of course, have much objection to the provision; but, at the same time, I do not believe that we ought to try to put that responsibility on the President. We ought to decide it for ourselves.

Mr. McCUMBER. Suppose the President should say the opposite?

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, he might say the opposite.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, the difficulty about that situation is this: I do not see the necessity for a coaling station or for a naval base at the present time; but I am not a military expert; I do not know whether conditions might be such that it would be desirable, and not only desirable but to the great advantage of this country to have them. According to my present information they would be of no value, but I do not want to decide that question now, because I have not the evidence before me nor is it likely that we can get it soon; but at the time we are about to surrender the islands to the Philippine people it seems to me we can vest the discretion very wisely in the President, and let the President determine whether or not we should have such a naval base and coaling station there. The President would then have to come to Congress in order to get the provision through, I should think, because if we were to retain such stations it would require appropriations for the purpose of making the necessary improvements there, either for a naval base or for a coaling station.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; the President would have to get the appropriation from Congress; but the Senator from Colorado knows, and I think we all understand, that if the President exercised his discretion under that kind of a law and retained a coaling station, there would be very few of us who would vote against the proper appropriation. I know I should not, although I am opposed to keeping it. If, however, we decide, whether through the President or through Congress, to retain a coaling station and retain a naval base, then I should be in favor of voting whatever appropriation was necessary to keep them in proper shape and in first-class condition.

I do not want to submit this question to anybody. In the first place, it requires no evidence—I do not mean now that I am right and that everybody else is wrong—but it requires no evidence to decide whether we are in favor of keeping up a governmental establishment over in Asia; whether we are or whether we are not, it is a governmental policy, and whether we keep a coaling station and a naval base over there is a question of governmental policy on the part of the United States. Those who believe we ought to do so of course would favor that kind of a provision, while those who believe we ought to get away from Asia, that we are out of place over there, that we are misunderstood over there, and that there is danger lurking to our own welfare in staying there are in favor of deciding as a governmental policy that we ought to go out without any strings tied to our departure.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator from Nebraska think we ought to abandon our trade in the Orient?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I would not abandon it if I could retain it by any honorable means.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator from Nebraska think that we ought to have our merchant vessels going from this country to Japan and China?

Mr. NORRIS. I would be very glad to have them go there. I think some of them go there now.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then, if that be so, is it not advisable that we should have a cruiser or two in that locality now and then?

Mr. NORRIS. In my judgment, it is not. If we are going to build up a Navy and start out a merchant vessel and convoy it with a battleship in order to get trade, then we would need a naval base; but that is no way to get trade.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No, Mr. President; and, so far as I am concerned, I do not want to do anything of the sort; but if we are going to trade in China and if we are going to have trade in other parts of the world, it is almost inevitable that now and then we shall have trouble.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me ask the Senator from Utah, is he in favor of having trade with Brazil, with Argentina, with Ecuador, or with Peru? If he is, then is he in favor of maintaining naval stations all around those shores?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is hardly the question. Of course I am in favor of having trade with Brazil.

Mr. NORRIS. I thought the Senator was.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And of having trade with every country that will trade with us; but that does not mean that we should have a naval station in every country with which we trade. But let me suggest this to the Senator: At the time of the Spanish-American War part of our fleet was in oriental waters. It became a vital necessity that the Spanish fleet at Manila should be at once sought out, captured, and destroyed, because so long as that fleet was free to come and go it threatened us anywhere we might be. If we had not succeeded—if the situation had been such that we could not have succeeded in destroying the Spanish fleet with the utmost promptness—we should have been obliged to entirely abandon oriental waters. It would have been necessary for Commodore Dewey's fleet to go something like 5,000 miles before it could have obtained coal.

Mr. NORRIS. No; it would not. Commodore Dewey's fleet could have gotten coal at any station in Asia, except a Spanish station. We have a right under international law to get coal.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But we would have had to get out in 24 hours.

Mr. NORRIS. We would only have had to get out as soon as we could have gotten our coal. We would have obtained the coal and then got out; and why should we not have done so? Why would our fleet have wanted to lie around in Asiatic waters if there were not any Spanish vessels to fight?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It might have been of the utmost importance to us at that time that our fleet should have had a place where it could rendezvous and remain longer than 24 hours.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I conceive such a thing might have happened; but let me tell the Senator from Utah, that if we retain the coaling station and naval base in the Philippine Islands, this is what is likely to occur: We shall have our fleet over there; war might break out; and then the fleet would be 7,000 miles from home. In case that naval base or coaling station were captured, then the vessels which we had in the vicinity would be left out in the cold, and they would be much worse off than they would have been if we had not had such a coaling station, because in that case they would not have depended upon our coaling station.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, if we have a naval base over there, we must take steps to defend it and fortify it.

Mr. NORRIS. That is one of the objections I have to retaining a coaling station and naval base. That will be used as an argument on every naval appropriation bill we shall have under consideration. If we retain a naval base, it will be said: "Here is a naval base in the Philippine Islands right next to Japan; Japan is likely to have a war with us, and the naval base is 7,000 miles away from our shores, therefore, we must have men; we must have ammunition; we must have fortifications; and we must have more battleships and more of all kinds of ships in order to defend that naval base.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, of course we have to do that. We have to do that as to the Hawaiian Islands and we have to do it as to Guam.

Mr. NORRIS. Exactly; and it will be the same as to all of them—we will have to do that. That is one of the reasons why I do not want to keep the islands. They are a source of danger and so would be a coaling station, and they would invite attack. They are too far away. If we get out of the Philippine Islands, we shall then have no territory in that section of the world to defend. Therefore we shall not need a Navy over there in case of war. Of course if we waged a war of conquest it would be different.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If we are going to eternally take counsel of our fears, the Senator from Nebraska is right.

Mr. NORRIS. We do take counsel of our fears every time we make an appropriation for a battleship, and every time we provide for a fortification anywhere we are taking counsel of our fears. There is not any other reason why we are doing it except through fear.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. We had better take steps to defend ourselves than to run away from these propositions, as it seems to me.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I think, that we had better defend ourselves, and we had better not place ourselves in a position where we have something on our hands that we can not defend except at a great disadvantage; and something that will be of no good to us after we shall have defended it.

Mr. President, that is one of the principal objections that I have to the Clarke amendment, and that is one of the respects in which I think the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota meets my idea as to what ought to be done to meet the situation.

The other objection, that after we have acknowledged the independence of the Philippine Islands we should defend them for five years, is, it seems to me, one of danger. We ought not to do it, and there is no reason why we should do it. If we acknowledge the independence of the Philippine Islands, that country becomes a new nation, one entitled to as much respect as any other nation. There would be no more reason why we should then defend it than there is why we should defend some other nation. If we must be responsible for its international relations—and that is what it means—we ought to stay there and keep possession not only of a coaling station but of the entire islands in order better to carry out the objects of our stay.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to ask the Senator from Nebraska if he thinks that by relinquishing our sovereignty over the Philippine Islands and giving them independence we do thereby get out of the Philippines?

Mr. NORRIS. Is the Senator through with the question?

Mr. STERLING. I am through with that question.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I think we would get out of them. I think I understand that what the Senator means by the question—and there is something in it—is that we have been there and we will have an interest in them, of course, after we are out. We will naturally look with suspicion upon any other country that would try to take advantage of them, and all that; but, Mr. President, the longer we stay the greater becomes that idea. If we stay there five years from now and then go out, we will go out with the same reluctance; we will have the same fear, that we are somewhat responsible for them and ought to look after them; and I share in that feeling, I will say to the Senator. I should look with a good deal of jealousy upon their independence, and I would want to see that they were properly treated; I would want to see that no advantage was taken of them; but we will have that feeling whenever we go out, if we go out. The reason why I particularly think the provisions of the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] are good is because we avoid, as much as human action can avoid, that very objection by entering into an agreement with the other nations of the world that they will respect the independence of the islands.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. Just a moment and I will yield again. It seems to me we naturally have a right to believe that when the other nations enter into such an agreement with us they will respect it much more than they would if we were keeping in the islands a coaling station and a naval base or obtaining any advantage there that the other nations did not possess. I doubt whether any nation would enter into an agreement with us except on terms of absolute equality. As suggested by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] himself, we must enter into this negotiation on the theory that the nations are all equals. If we enter into negotiations with other nations and say to them, "We want you to acknowledge and guard the independence of the Philippine Islands with us; we will retain a coaling station and a naval base and you will have nothing," we would hardly be putting up a fair proposition to the other Governments. If we say to them that we want such advantages, they might properly talk back to us and say, "We want the same advantage there that you have if we are going in on this agreement, and if you retain a coaling station and a naval base we, too, want them." It would not be right to give every nation in the world a coaling station and a naval base in the Philippine Islands; and yet, as I look at it, there is just as much reason why some other nation should have a coaling station and a naval base there as we if we want to acknowledge the independence of the islands. Now, I yield further to the Senator.

Mr. STERLING. To my mind, Mr. President, the proposition involved in my question to the Senator from Nebraska is one of the most vital and important in this whole discussion. I say we are in the Philippine Islands and have been there for the last 17 years. The independence of the Philippine Islands will not take us out of the Philippines. Our trade and commerce are there; our teachers by the thousands have been there; our merchants have been there; and they have established such interests and attachments in the Philippines that they will last forever in connection with the trade that we will carry on there in the future, whether the islands are independent or not.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, I should like to ask the Senator a question there. If the objection which the Senator has just raised is a sufficient reason why we should not leave the Philippines now, I want to ask the Senator, in all candor, whether the same objection will not exist at all times in the future? If we can not go out now on that account, we never can go out.

Mr. STERLING. But, Mr. President, we are likely to have less difficulty, less friction with other nations by reason of our retention of the Philippines than if we were to grant them independence. Such a nation will necessarily be weak for many years to come; there will be contentions among different nations for different privileges and spheres of influence there, for the trade and commerce of the islands, and there may be now and then—and I think it more than a possibility—oppression of the islanders and undue advantage sought to be taken of them. Because of the attachment, because of the interest we feel in them, because they have been under our guardianship for all these years we as Americans will resent some of these activities, and trouble or war is more likely to arise out of that condition of things than if we were to retain the Philippines with full rights there which other nations would be bound to respect.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's argument is a very good one from the standpoint of one who believes that we ought to always keep the islands; but, Mr. President, if we are not to keep them, then it follows that there must come a time when we will leave, and when that time comes we will necessarily desire to see the Philippines prosper after we leave. We will look upon them with jealous care, and perhaps we will interfere where we can in a friendly way to prevent them from getting into trouble. I have no doubt we will all feel that way, and that feeling will exist whether we go out to-morrow, whether we go out one year from now, or whether we go out a hundred years from now; the only difference being that it will increase the longer we stay.

I do not believe in the theory that we have any right, in the first place, to govern the Philippine people without their consent. I do not believe it is right to the Filipinos to try to make them citizens of the United States; and I am not in favor of keeping forever any people under our control and under our subjection unless they can at some time be made citizens free and equal with the rest of us. On the other hand, the Philippine people have a history of their own. They are a different race from us. The things that we perhaps think ought to be done by the Government they might not agree with. In the first place, they are 7,000 miles away. Everybody knows that if we should have war with any nation in the world of any considerable prominence and power the Philippine Islands would be the first place that would be attacked. If they were independent, of course, they would not be attacked. If we had a naval base there it would be the first place that would have to meet an attack. They are the source of the greatest weakness we have in our National Government.

Mr. President, the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING] and the Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND] have suggested that we should retain the Philippines in order to keep our trade.

In my judgment, the keeping of a coaling station and a naval base would not give us the trade of the islands. We do not have any naval base in England, and yet we have a very great trade with England; we do not have a naval base in Italy, nor in Norway, nor in Sweden, nor in Denmark, nor in any country of South America, and yet we have more trade with many of those countries than we have with the Philippines, where we not only have a coaling station but have the entire country. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] suggests that we have a coaling station at Guam, but we have not had any very great trade with Guam on that account.

Mr. President, I do not want to keep trade by backing it up with guns. In the end that will not work. I do not want to make any attempt by sending warships to a country to compel its people to trade with us. That will not work in the end. We can not get trade with the Philippine Islands by sending warships along with our merchant vessels; and, Mr. President, it is not right, in my judgment, in the next place, to insist that we should keep the islands simply to build up trade with us. Such an idea is founded on an illogical and unfair basis. No nation has the right to hold another nation in subjection and under its sovereignty simply to make dollars and cents for its people. That would be true even if we were making money by retaining the Philippines; but it has been demonstrated over and over again that we are losing money every day, and have been ever since we have been in the Philippine Islands, on account of their retention.

I believe that the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota will bring about an easy and wise solution of the difficulty. It is equivalent to saying to all the world, "We are going out as soon as you will agree with us that these people shall have their independence respected, and we are going out without any advantage over you; we are going to place them upon the world's surface as an independent nation, and the rights of other nations shall be the same as ours, and the duties of the Filipinos toward other nations shall be the same as toward us." That is fair; that is a square deal; that is honest, not only to ourselves and to the Filipinos but to the remainder of the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE].

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, before voting on the amendment I want to say a word. I should like very much to vote to give the people of the Philippine Islands their independence for the reason, among others, to avoid complications; and in proportion as I should like to see the Filipinos independent to relieve us of complications, I hesitate to vote for either of these amendments that make new and additional complications. My view of this matter is somewhat different from that of others perhaps. The morning before Dewey sailed into Manila Bay, had some other nation sought to subdue the Filipinos, I can not understand that we would then have been under any obligations to have fought any nation for the independence of the Filipinos any more than to-day if some nation should attempt to overrun Siam, we would be under obligation to go there and prevent Siam from being conquered by some other nation. If on that morning we were under no obligation to sacrifice the lives of our young men to prevent some other nation from taking the Philippine Islands, we certainly are under no obligation to-day, unless in those 17 years our tutelage of those people, our government of those people has been such as to make them less capable, less likely to get along and maintain their independence than they were before we went there. If it is true that 17 years of American tutelage and guidance have rendered those people less competent, less able to take care of themselves, then we, being responsible for that kind of tutelage, there would be a responsibility resting on us to repair the wrong which we had done them. If, on the other hand, those 17 years have been years of education, years of building up of the individuality of the inhabitants of those islands; if, in other words, those 17 years have added to the capacity and the ability of the Filipinos to take care of themselves, surely there is no obligation resting upon us at this time.

Mr. President, a great deal of evidence has been offered here to prove whether the Filipinos want or do not want independence. There are some things so well known, so universal as a part of human nature, that it is a waste of time to read the testimony of this man or that man upon some great fundamental question. The moment we reached the Philippine Islands we reached there with a flag around which clusters the traditions of freedom, the traditions of independence, and that flag would fall short of its purpose and its mission as a symbol of freedom to humanity if 17 years of its presence did not in itself develop a desire for independence. The moment we reached those islands we carried to those people the American history and the American schoolbook—the American history replete with the traditions of freedom and of independence; and American history fails in its mission to teach its lesson if 17 years of study would not develop in the minds of any people a desire for independence and a desire for freedom.

It was my sad duty to help convey from Washington to Canton the remains of that great Christian statesman, William McKinley. Along that whole distance a Nation was in mourning, not because McKinley had been a soldier, for this Nation then was filled with men who were illustrious for their achievements on the field of battle; not because McKinley had been a particularly great statesman, because the greater part of McKinley's activities had been along economic lines; but that mourning Nation stood there, bowed in grief, because it felt that a great Christian character had passed from earth. McKinley's declaration to the Filipinos was, "This is for the Filipinos"; and I believe to-day he would hardly recognize as compatible with his character, as compatible with his purpose, as compatible with his high purpose, a declaration reversed now, and that we should say, "This is for America instead of the Filipinos."

When from the lips of the great McKinley there fell the declaration, "This is for the Filipinos," it meant that the interests, the rights, the obligations should be measured not by the interests of the American people, but by what would be best for the Philippine Islanders. There can be no question of that. We would do violence to his implied promise to say now, We never intend to give you your independence. From that day to this the utterance of those who have gone to those islands representing our Government has been the thought that sooner or later those people would be free.

It may be said that these men spoke beyond the warrant of the Constitution; that Congress alone, not Executives, could give them independence. Undoubtedly they did. Unfortunately, Senators, more and more it has become of late years the habit of those who use the function of the executive office to speak beyond the warrant of the Constitution in the assumption of authority which the fathers vested in Congress. But if an officer of this Nation exceeds his constitutional warrant in holding out promises and inducements, shall a people who know of our Government only by the conduct of our officials be held to a strict constitutional knowledge of the limitations of an executive officer when that executive himself disregards those limitations? High officials have held out to them the suggestion of their ultimate independence.

Then we come down to the declarations of political parties. Those people have a right to accept the verdict of 1912, when a party on a platform declaring for their independence was placed in power by the American voters, as the declaration of the American people that they would give the Filipinos their independence.

While justice to them demands we should keep what they had a right to understand as our promise, the welfare and best interests of our people requires that we should give them their independence, and stop before we go any further in the dangerous, new policy of holding over-sea territory.

For all history has demonstrated one truth, and that is that over-sea territory is always a liability and never an asset of a nation. We may go back to the history of ancient Empires; we may go back to the history of Rome as a Republic, grand and glorious on the surface as a Republic, but decadent under the Empire. But decay itself is never anything but the evidence of conditions which precede the decay; and it was in those centuries of the Roman Republic, grand and glorious as it seemed on the surface, holding foreign conquests, that there were sown the seeds of that decay and rottenness which brought fruitage when the nation became an Empire. The story of Rome is the story of the folly of over-sea colonial possessions. The story of Rome is the story of the folly of a nation seeking to govern people who do not ask for that government.

Spain followed in the same course. History on that subject reads but one lesson, and that is that when a nation holds territory against the wish of the people of that territory, as in every other instance in human activities, when a wrong is done that wrong does its injury to the wrongdoer rather than to the victim of the wrong; and if for no other purpose than to free our own people of the reflex action of holding an alien race against its will and against its rights, we ought to let the Filipinos go, and we ought to bid them Godspeed, at the earliest moment.

No people can be free from this effect upon the nature of a people. This great war in Europe to-day is callousing even the American heart. We read of it and we read of it until the slaughter of thousands scarce stirs the blood in our veins. Exercising a power and a dominion over an alien people makes us callous of the rights of others; and if for no other reason than to protect ourselves from the insidious growth of that spirit, we ought to stop this suggestion of embarking upon a reversal of the traditions of this Republic in the holding of distant alien races by power.

While we have acquired territory by peaceful means, while we have acquired territory by settlement, the acquisition of foreign territory against the will of a people was a reversal, not a continuation, of the traditional policy of this Nation, and the sooner we get through with that reversal, the sooner we return to the old traditional policy of the fathers, the better it will be for all concerned. The holding of the Philippines, an alien distant race, against their will is the reversal of the spirit of our Government, is the reversal of the traditional policy of our people.

Now, in regard to these people learning the lesson of freedom and independence from our flag and from our schoolbooks and our history, no man can question the desire of these people to be free; and there is no warrant in any suggestion, brought from any source where truth asserts her supremacy, that one nation has the right to assert its superiority and its function to govern another nation against its will and against its desire.

And so, while I believe that while that struggle was on years ago to restore order in the islands, it had to be carried on until the supremacy of order was restored. Having asserted that supremacy, having given them 17 years of American tutelage, we have but one duty left to discharge, and that is to give them the independence they desire and which they have a right to expect from us.

There is one phase of this question that I have several times interjected into the debate, and yet it seems to be usually forgotten and ignored by those who discuss the question, and that is this: We are constantly told here that the possession of the Philippine Islands by our Government is a menace to our Government. There can be no question of that. It is a menace to us in the upbuilding of American ideals. It is a menace to us in the tendency to enlarge our Army and Navy because we must protect those islands. It is a menace to us because, so far from our shores, we can not easily protect them. If there is anything in all this clamor to day for war—I do not know who it is proposed that we shall go to war with at once—but if there is anything in this talk of war the Philippine Islands are a menace and a weakness to us.

But, Mr. President, we have a duty and an obligation resting upon us. We have a right and we have a duty to take into account whether or not this relation is a menace to the Philippine Islands themselves. If there is anything in all this continued talk of war that seems to be a world-wide craze to-day, just in proportion as there is a danger of war we impose a menace and a danger upon the Philippine Islands and upon the islanders themselves. All that we have to do, sir, is to look to the record of the genesis of our own relation with those islands. They would not have been touched by the war with Spain had they not been a part of the Spanish Kingdom. Being under the American Government as surely as we had war we would put those people to the risk of an attack, of having the islands ravaged by war, when if the islands were not under our control there would be no occasion for their invasion by this imaginary foe that is supposed to land shortly upon the American shores and desolate this fair land of ours. I say "imaginary" for at present, at least, it can only be imaginary.

So, Mr. President, not only are those distant islands a menace and a weakness to us, but so long as they are held by us, if there is any such thing as danger of war, the fact that they belong to us is an additional danger and menace to the Filipinos themselves; and it is as much our duty to consider those people in their relation to being menaced by a war which we may get into as it is our duty to consider that they are a liability to us in case we get into war.

Mr. President, believing that once and for all we should redeem the promise that first came from the lips of McKinley when he said "This is for the Filipinos"—a promise repeated year in and year out by officials in the Philippine Islands, a promise repeated by the American people in the election of 1912—I believe we should grant the Filipinos their independence. One of my reasons for that, as I have said, is that I think we should avoid complications; and, desiring to avoid the complications involved in our continued possession of the islands, I am loath to vote for either of these amendments, because they continue and multiply the complications.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, with very much of what the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] has said I agree. The difference between the Senator from Minnesota and myself is that he thinks, as I understand him, that the time has now come when in the discharge of our duty and responsibility we can get out of the Philippine Islands. If I believed, as he seems to believe, that the Philippine people themselves would be better off under a government established by themselves, I should entirely agree with what the Senator has said, and I should be in favor of granting them independence now.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator will pardon me a moment, I agree with what Mr. McKinley said, that we are not and ought not to be in the Philippine Islands for the purpose of exploiting them. I think we are there with a great moral responsibility; I think we have a duty of a very high character to discharge with reference to those people. I for one am not in favor of abandoning them, of "scuttling" and running away, until they are in a position to take care of themselves, and I think very clearly that that time has not yet come.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon an interruption?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Certainly.

Mr. CLAPP. I simply want to say that I honor the position taken by the Senator. I have no quarrel with anyone who says "we must retain the Philippine Islands so long as it is for the best interests of the people of those islands," and I have no quarrel with one who believes that that time has not come. That is a matter of judgment about which the Senator from Utah may be right and I may be wrong; but I honor his position, and I agree with the position that this matter should be discussed from the standpoint of the interests of the people of those islands.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Precisely. The Senator from Minnesota and I agree about that. In other words, I think we are in the Philippine Islands not for our sake but for the sake of the people of the islands.

Mr. CLAPP. That is right.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think, too, that the people of the Philippine Islands are no more fitted for self-government to-day than are 8,000,000 children being educated in the primary schools of the United States. It would be a futile and a vain thing to undertake to set up 8,000,000 school children in the business of carrying on a government; and yet I think that number of American children, educated in the grammar schools of the United States would be better fitted to carry on an independent government than the people of the Philippine Islands, as a whole, are to-day.

While I am not a prophet, and not much given to prophecy, I do not hesitate for one moment to predict that if we leave the Philippine Islands, and those people set up a government of their own, riot and bloodshed and anarchy will run from one end of the archipelago to the other. We will have abandoned a trust, and some other great nation will be obliged to take up the work that we have been too cowardly to finish. Japan or some other country will go into the Philippine Islands. They will not permit a condition to exist such as I have indicated I believe will exist.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon another interruption?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Surely.

Mr. CLAPP. I hardly think the Senator means to use the expression "cowardly." Suppose that 10 years from now the Senator himself should feel that the people of those islands had reached the point where they could take care of themselves, but some one else, equally interested from the viewpoint of what was best for the islands, should think they had not reached that point. Surely the Senator would not want his judgment that the time had been reached, and his action based on that judgment, characterized as the cowardly leaving of the islands. It is a matter of opinion.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Oh, I do not mean that the Senator is cowardly.

Mr. CLAPP. No; I know the Senator does not mean that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And I do not mean that anybody who votes for this legislation is cowardly.

Mr. CLAPP. I knew the Senator did not mean that.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But I characterized the act, from my point of view, as being a cowardly act, because I think it is running away from a plain duty.

Now, let me call the Senator's attention and the attention of the Senate to a statement contained in an article in the Army and Navy Journal of five years ago upon the occasion of the visit to those islands of the then Secretary of War, Mr. Dickinson. The article goes on to give an account of a meeting on the Island of Mindanao, at Zamboango, where the Secretary met a number of the Moros and some of the Filipinos. As I understand, in the island of Mindanao and the two or three surrounding islands, Sulu and others, there are to-day something like 600,000 Moros, and in those islands perhaps six or seven thousand Filipinos. In the course of the speech making some suggestion was made about turning over the islands to the Filipinos, and that brought out some very vigorous objections from the Moro chiefs. Let me read the account of that part of the meeting:

> In the speech making that followed at a meeting in the Zamboanga Theater the friction between the Moros and the Filipino elements of the population was much in evidence. Señors Mendoza and Lim were the Filipino speakers. Stripped of their profusion of rhetorical figures, these addresses were a plea for taking the Moro Province from under the dominion of the military and placing it under the Philippine civil government.

Of course, they did not attempt to go as far as we now propose to go by this bill.

> Then Dato Mandi, chief of the Zamboanga Moros, took the platform. He said that the Filipinos on the general reception committee had sought to prevent the Moros from going out in their native boats to greet Mr. Dickinson, as he might get the impression there were only Moros in the Province. "As I look about me," said the dato dramatically, "I see more Moros than Filipinos, and that is why it is called the Moro Province. [Tremendous applause.] I have heard a rumor that we Moros are to be placed in the hands of the Filipinos. If the American Government does not want the Moro Province any more it should give it back to us."
>
> Mandi was followed by another dato named Sakaludan, who said: "I am an old man. I do not want any more trouble, but if it should come to that, that we are to be given over to the Filipinos, I still would fight." [Applause.] He was succeeded by Hadki Nunyo, who explained the difference in race and religion between the Moros and

Filipinos. "And if we should be given over to the Filipinos," he asked, "how much worse would they treat us when they treated even the Spanish badly? We far prefer to be in the hands of the Americans, who are father and mother to us now, than to be turned over to another people."

At a meeting of the Moro datos on August 24 Secretary Dickinson made a speech through an interpreter. He assured them that the Americans had no intention of "exploiting" the Moros. If their necessities compelled them to use anything belonging to the Moros the latter would be paid in full. The Americans would never interfere with their religion or religious customs. "All the money the Moros will have to pay the Government will be used among them for their own benefit." Secretary Dickinson said he agreed with them that it was a bad plan to change governors often and believed the wisest thing would be to keep a good governor as long as possible. If at any time a governor should be unfair or unjust all the Moros had to do would be to make it known to Gen. Pershing, who would see that justice was done. This speech made a decidedly favorable impression upon the native chiefs, who doubtless took back to their people complimentary reports on the intentions of the Americans.

Mr. President, it is now proposed to turn over these islands to the self-government of a people 90 per cent of whom have no understanding of the principles of government—far less capable of carrying on a government than the people of Mexico, where only 80 per cent of them are not trained in governmental matters.

Can it be otherwise than that the condition would follow that I have indicated—that quarrels would result—that these people of various tribes and races, of different religions, different languages, different degrees of intelligence, would be fighting one another? Can there be the slightest doubt that that would result? If that is to be the case, upon what theory of national responsibility can we withdraw our protecting hand from them?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The same prediction which is contained in that statement was made when it was said that if the Filipinos attempted to exercise any governmental powers over the Moros they would immediately begin fighting each other. Mr. Frank Carpenter was appointed governor of the Mindanao district. He went down there. He solicited the aid and assistance of the Moros. He granted to them commissoins for such offices as justice of the peace. There are no American soldiers, strictly in the sense of Americans, there. They have never gotten along as well as in the last two years and a half, since that has been done. They are living together in numbers. Six colonies were sent from Cebu down to Mindanao, and the Filipinos of three of those colonies were located upon 40-acre tracts of land almost alternately with the Moros, and the other Filipinos of the colonies were located almost in the heart of the Moro district. There has been no insurrection. There has been nothing in the nature of an uprising. There has been nothing in the the way of a clash between classes. There has been nothing in the way of a disturbance that would be indicative of religious opposition or hostility.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understand all that, Mr. President; but the Governor is an American. The American Government is there. We are governing both classes of people. It would be a far different situation if the Filipinos were undertaking to govern the Moros instead of the Americans undertaking to govern both of them. The strong hand of the American Government is over them all the time—not only the strong hand, but the just hand. Five years ago that was the attitude of these Moro chiefs, that they would not trust the Filipinos; they would not trust the Filipinos to govern them. They were willing to live side by side with the Filipinos so long as the American Government undertook to govern both of them, but neither would submit to the government of the other.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, you can get expressions of opinion expressed during the last three years by Datos themselves directly opposed to that which the Senator has just read. They assemble and meet all the people who visit there. The most harmonious relations exist between the Filipinos and the Moros, and Gov. Carpenter is the man who accomplished it. He has told them that he is there to have them help govern with the Filipinos, and almost an entire revolution of sentiment has taken place.

The difficulty with the situation is that whenever we as a Nation say, "We will determine this thing just as we want it," "We will give you independence when we get ready; we will give you independence 50 years or a hundred years from now," we crush the hopes and aspirations of that people. They read our Declaration of Independence; they read our American history, as the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] has said; and when they do they get the same spirit of liberty infused into their veins as we did in ours, and we would not want anyone to say to us, "We will give you independence when we want you to have it."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, what proportion of the native inhabitants of the Philippine Islands does the Senator think ever heard of the American Declaration of Independence?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Why, Mr. President, there is hardly a schoolboy but has read the Declaration of Independence. Whenever people visit there, a young man rises and makes a speech to the visiting crowd in behalf of independence, and it is always with relation to the fact that we have gotten our liberty and they are entitled to theirs. Right in the Moro district, where I visited a school, a young man 14 years old delivered an address of welcome to us in the English language.

Now, of course, if we say that we are going to give them independence at the end of 50 years, if they are then capable of self-government, you can make the same statement then, that they are not prepared for it. There ought to be some limitation on it. Seventeen years—long years to them—have elapsed since promises of independence, which they supposed were authoritative, were made to them.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Now, Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me——

Mr. NEWLANDS. Will the Senator allow me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In a moment. The Senator bears out what I have been saying. We are educating the children, but I imagine the Senator would not contend that the children are able to carry on the government. This young man of 14 years of age, who knew so much about the Declaration of Independence, is hardly fitted to go into the legislature or to carry on the government.

My position is that if we will go on with that sort of thing for another generation, if we will educate those people, if we will build into their very existence the principles of Anglo-Saxon self-government, then they will be ready to carry on a government; but my whole argument is that they are not ready for it now.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I have thought that whenever a people have an educated class, college graduates, by the hundreds and thousands and they are the persons who are elected to the general assembly of those islands they are capable of passing goods laws, especially when we consider that being twitted by the Americans as not being capable of self-government they have set the example to the world so far as sending graduates of universities to their general assembly. Out of 81 members there are 81 graduates of universities there.

Is it possible that those people are not capable of making good laws? Is it possible that the men who are attending to the duties of the executive offices of the Government there would lose their power to control in the administration of affairs as soon as they were selected by their people instead of being appointed by our Government? I think not.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Oh, no. I have said several times during the course of this debate that there are people, limited in number, in the Philippine Islands who are educated, who understand matters of government, and who are probably capable of self-government; but the testimony, as has been said here over and over again, has been to the effect, and I have not heard it contradicted, that not to exceed 10 per cent of them occupy that status; that not to exceed 10 per cent of them are capable of discharging the functions of government. Ninety per cent of them are to be governed. Does the Senator want to set up an autocracy over there?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Oh, no.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does he want to have a governing class?

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; Mr. President.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In our own country, if 90 per cent of our own people were of the character that 90 per cent of the Philippine people are and only 10 per cent of our own people were educated and capable of discharging the functions of government, we could not carry on a popular government here. It is because the great body of the people are schooled in the lessons of government that we can carry on a popular government. That is the only reason. You can not have a democracy without a substantial foundation of that kind. You can not have a democracy with a ruling class of 10 per cent and 90 per cent incapable of participating in the government. It is absurd to talk about it, as it seems to me.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Look at the South American countries. It seems to me that no one can question but that Argentina is making a success of independent government, that Brazil and Chile are doing the same, and yet their percentage of illiterates is as great as that of the Filipinos, and in some instances greater. Is it possible that we alone are to judge? If we go to the Declaration of Independence, we at least should assume the truths therein expressed, as applicable to all people. If there are any exceptions, the burden should be upon those who are opposed to independence. If a people have an inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; if in order to attain these ends, governments are instituted among men deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, anyone who makes an exception must show to me clearly that the people excepted are not capable of self-government in order to get me on his side of the controversy.

Mr. President——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let me ask the Senator a question. I have the floor, and I do not want to have that fact overlooked, and I am anxious to proceed. He is in favor of this bill reported from the committee, I understand.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I am in favor of the Clarke amendment, and I am supporting the Clarke amendment.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I am not speaking of the preamble. I am speaking of the body of the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. What proportion of the people of the Philippine Islands will be permitted to vote under this bill?

Mr. SHAFROTH. In this bill under the franchise which we are giving to those who either read or write their native tongue, 750,000 to 900,000 people is the estimate which has been made.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That is about 10 per cent.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes; probably 10 per cent.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. POMERENE in the chair). Does the Senator from Utah yield, and to whom?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from Colorado does not mean 10 per cent. That would be 10 per cent of the whole population, including women and children.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes; it would be 10 per cent of the entire population. I thank the Senato. for his suggestion.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not think it could be 10 per cent of the men of mature age.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator may be right about that, but it is not my information.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The estimate by Gen. McIntyre was that in 1903 those who were capable of reading and writing constituted 32.4 per cent of those over 21 years of age. He estimated that, by reason of the extension of education since 1903, the percentage was now 50 per cent.

I want to say this, Mr. President, and then I will not interrupt the Senator any more. Whenever a people have the power to give self-government to another, it is often resisted by people from one cause or another, and honestly too, upon their own part, so that independence will not come unless there is almost a universal sentiment in favor of it, and this thing of treating the people of different classes in a different way is not fair to them.

I want to read just one sentence——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let the Senator do that in his own time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah declines to yield.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Very well.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I have been reasonably generous to the Senator, and I want to conclude what I have to say.

Mr. CUMMINS. I would like to ask the Senator from Utah a question, and it shall be a question.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Very well.

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator from Utah intend to train the people of the Philippine Islands to become citizens of the United States?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. No, Mr. President; I do not.

Mr. CUMMINS. What does he intend to train them to do?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator does not intend to do anything about it himself, but I am in favor of retaining possession of the Philippine Islands until the people are measurably capable of carrying on a government of their own, a condition which I do not think exists to-day.

Mr. CUMMINS. Did the Senator ever know a master who thought his slave would be better off in freedom than in slavery?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, the Senator's question hardly requires an answer. We do not occupy that relationship in the Philippine Islands. We are not treating them as slaves. We are not treating ourselves as masters. I think, and I believe that the Senator will agree with me, that there never has been in the history of all the world a more magnificent, a more unselfish service rendered to any people than has been rendered by the American Government to those people in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I agree to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I agree to the statement just made by the Senator from Utah. It has been a wonderful service, but it has been the service of a master to a subject, for so long as the Congress of the United States has the sole power of determining the fortunes of the people of the Philippine Islands so long they do not enjoy the essence of freedom.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator thinks that, then he must think that the service we render to our own children in this country when we insist they shall live with us for 21 years, that they shall be educated, that they shall fit themselves for the duties of citizenship before they undertake to discharge the duties of citizenship, involves the relation of master and slave. The service which we have rendered those people over there has been as tender and as altruistic as the service we render to our own children here at home.

Mr. CUMMINS. Of course, the Senator from Utah recognizes the difference between the relation of our own country to a subject colony and the relation of a parent to a child, and I need not enlarge upon that, but analytically and accurately a child who must obey the wish of his parents is not a free person.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He is not a slave. The Senator would hardly contend that.

Mr. CUMMINS. There are certainly incidents connected with the relation between a master and a slave that are not found in the relation between a parent and a child, but the Senator from Utah must admit that if the child is bound to obey the will of another he is not a free person.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. He has not all the powers of the adult citizen. The Senator admits that, of course.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I never knew before that our children up to the time they were 21 were serfs or slaves until it was implied by the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. No.

Mr. NELSON. Because they owe obedience to their parents; because they owe obedience——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield?

Mr. NELSON. Because they owe obedience to the Government of the United States, that stands in the place of parent, they are to be called slaves.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield to the Senator from Iowa for a moment.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota did not understand me to say, because I did not say, that the relation between parent and child was the relation of a master to a slave, but I still insist that the child is not free. However tender the relation may be, however careful the parent may be, the child is not free.

The Senator from Utah puts the people of the Philippine Islands in the same relation to the United States that a child is to the parent. If he is right about that, then of course they not only should not be free but we should not give them the power to legislate as has been given heretofore and as is further given in the bill before us.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator understood perfectly well that I was using that as a mere illustration. I did not mean that the conditions were precisely similar. Of course they are not. But the fact remains, as I view it, that the people of the islands as a whole are not to-day capable of carrying on a government of their own. If we undertake to intrust them with a government of their own, disaster will inevitably follow and some other country will take possession of them and they will lose their independence.

Now, I intended to say just a word with reference——

Mr. McCUMBER. Before the Senator leaves that point——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let me finish the sentence first, and then I will yield. I intended to say a word with reference to the provision of the Clarke amendment which requires us for five years to guarantee the independence of the islands after we have gotten out and to defend them against outside force. When I have said that I am through. In the meantime I will yield to the Senator from North Dakota for a question.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to ask the Senator, because he has shown considerable familiarity with the Filipinos, what is the predominant racial blood of those people?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I do not know what is the predominant racial blood.

Mr. McCUMBER. Are they not of Malayan extraction?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think that predominates, although I am not sure about it.

Mr. McCUMBER. I want to ask the Senator if in the whole history of Asia it is not a fact that the Malayans have been able to maintain self-government? Are not these people as well educated, are they not as docile as the Siamese people, and have not the people of the nearest blood to the Filipinos been able for centuries to maintain self-government when they were left alone? As a matter of fact, does not that apply to all the Malayan peninsula and to those southern countries?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. As I understand the situation in the Philippine Islands, it is altogether different from the situation in Siam, Japan, or any of those other countries. There is no homeogeneity in the Philippine Islands. There is in the Philippines a great variety of people and a great variety of languages and dialects. They never have had a nationality. They were under the control of Spain for 300 years, during which time they were not permitted to exercise any of the functions of local government. They had no opportunity of learning the lessons of government. They are a heterogeneous lot of misfit units, who, as I view it—the Senator is welcome to his own opinion about it—are utterly incapable of coming together and carrying on a government. There is not a single element that makes them one people neither historically nor from having an opportunity to carry on together the functions of government.

But now, Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas proposes what to me is the most dangerous proposition in the whole amendment, namely, that after having sailed away and permitted those people to set up a government of their own, which, as I think, will inevitably result in disaster, we must still from a distance of 7,000 miles guarantee their independence and defend them against attack from any outside force. The five years that are specified in the amendment constitute precisely the time when they are most likely to fail in their government. If they get along for five years, and carry on a government acceptably, there is some hope of their continuing for the future, but the critical time is during the first year or two or four or five years. I think it is as inevitable as that the sun will continue to rise and set that within that five years they will give occasion for some great civilized power to intervene. If a condition arises such as I think will arise, such as has arisen in Mexico, Japan would be fully justified in intervening, just as I think we would have been justified, although for prudential reasons we have kept out, in intervening in Mexico.

Conditions will be as bad there. The chances are that the Japanese will undertake to intervene. But no matter what the cause may be, no matter how the intervention of Japan may be, or of any other country, we have bound ourselves, at the cost of no one knows how many lives or how much money, to defend them against any intervention from the outside. As it seems to me, that situation is inevitable; and being inevitable, the only wise thing for us to do is to stay there and prevent the condition from arising.

Mr. KENYON. I should like to ask the Senator does he believe that we would send over there and defend and protect the Philippine citizens if the islands were attacked?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. That might depend upon what sort of an administration we have in power at the time. We have been setting some examples which justify that inquiry on the part of the Senator. We had better not make such a provision anyhow.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I do not want to yield for a speech. I will yield for a question.

Mr. REED. Is there anything so ominous in my rising as to indicate a speech? The result of the colloquy just had is that we have not defended our people and have not gone to war for them. Do either of the Senators who have taken their seats think we ought to have gone to war? Are they in favor of it now; and if so, what particular nation do they propose to have us attack?

Mr. KENYON. If the Senator is directing that question to me——

Mr. REED. I am directing it to both Senators, because the colloquy leads directly to the innuendo that if we had the right President we would have gone to war to protect our people.

Mr. KENYON. I do not want to disturb the Senator from Utah, but I will say that the principal difficulty I have about the Clarke amendment is whether, if the Philippines should be attacked in the future, the people of this country would be willing to send our Army and Navy there to protect the people of the Philippine Islands.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then let me say to the Senator from Iowa we ought not to make a promise we are not going to keep.

Mr. KENYON. I wish the promise was eliminated from the Clarke amendment. I could support it with much more readiness.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. My argument is entirely in favor of eliminating that provision.

Now, in answer to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], I do not believe in going to war unless it becomes necessary. If it is necessary and that is the only way we can protect our citizens in foreign countries, then I am in favor of going to war. I think, since the Senator has asked me the question, that a firmer and a different policy on the part of the present administration with reference to our affairs in Mexico would have straightened out the situation without putting us in the place we now occupy, where we are in constant danger of armed intervention. I think the greater part of the trouble in Mexico has been due to the vacillating policy of the administration, and a firmer stand with reference to the situation would have obviated the danger of armed intervention.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the answer of the Senator is a mere generality; it gets us nowhere. The import of the colloquy I referred to was that even if our Government should solemnly agree to maintain the independence of the Philippine people we would not go to war to redeem that pledge. The reason alleged was that we will not now make war to protect our own people. There was the implication that our Government had been very derelict in the latter respect. My inquiry, then, whether the Senators were themselves willing to adopt a policy of war was pertinent. It is very easy for any man to say that if we had "adopted a firmer policy," without defining the policy, a better result would have obtained. Such an assertion proves nothing. Possibly if that policy which the Senator has in mind, and which is still in nebula so far as our knowledge of its is concerned, had been adopted we might have involved ourselves in war. Perhaps such a policy might have served only to multiply the murders in Mexico. Perhaps the "firmer policy" spoken of by the Senator would only have brought misery and death. Who shall answer? I do, however, make bold to declare that the Senator will not now and here say that we ought to have invaded and conquered Mexico.

We hear a good deal about what the Government ought to do with reference to our foreign relations with other countries than Mexico. Every once in a while some gentleman gets up and says, "We ought to enforce our rights; we ought to preserve our dignity as a Nation more thoroughly than we are doing," the innuendo being that we ought to go to war. Yet there is not a man in this Chamber who would vote for a declaration of war against any European power to-day.

The truth is, there is a good deal of cheap politics being played by gentlemen who sit in the grand stand and who say, in effect, that if they were captain of the team there would be nothing but wonderful errorless games, whereas, like most grand-stand critics, the probabilities are if they were put into the game they could not catch a ball as big as a balloon and could not "field" it home in a week.

I am getting just a little out of patience with constant carping criticism, upon the one hand, because we have insisted too strenuously upon our rights, and, upon the other hand, because we have not with fire and sword enforced our demands. It is a very happy thing for this country that the extremists to whom I am referring have not been controlling the destinies of the Nation. It is a very fortunate thing that there has been by the President a constant and determined insistence upon the rights of the American Republic so that our rights have not been surrendered. It is equally fortunate that a hot-headed, ambitious demagogue, willing to plunge the country into war in order to further his political fortunes, has not occupied the White House. There are a great many valiant men who are brave when they have no opportunity to put their courage to the test of execution. The peaceful banks of Oyster Bay are about the safest place in the world from which to issue a declaration of war.

I make no invidious comparison when I call attention to what almost every boy has observed, namely, the difference between the ferocity of a dog securely chained in his own yard and one that is at liberty upon the streets where his challenge of battle can be accepted.

Mr. FALL. Does the Senator mean——

Mr. REED. In a moment. I once owned a fighting dog of that variety. He was the best I was able to accumulate. He never manifested any great degree of courage until after he was accused of stealing chickens and I had tied him up to save his worthless life, whereupon my yellow animal was transformed into a raging lion. Let a stray canine pass along the streets, instantly my warrior would draw back malicious lips, displaying dangerous, gleaming fangs; his eyes glared like the headlights of a locomotive; his red tongue lapped out for gore; his hair stood on end and he filled the air with roarings and growlings typically Rooseveltian. But unchain the brute and tabby cat might twitch his tail with perfect impunity. Indeed, his natural habitat was under the porch. [Laughter.]

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. REED. Yes; I think I am through now with that.

Mr. FALL. I hope the Senator will not conclude with that phase until he answers a question. I should like to know whether in 1898 he thought Oyster Bay was a safer place than Kansas City?

Mr. REED. Oh, no; I did not think anything of the kind. I understand the innuendo of the gallant knight from the Southwest; but, since the Senator has asked me the question, I will say to him that I had a regiment raised and the promise of the governor of my State that it should be the next to be mustered in. The only reason I did not go was because the war was over before Missouri was assigned any more troops. I have, however, not been in the habit of parading my modest efforts. I would not mention the circumstance now, except for the somewhat contemptuous and insulting remark the Senator has passed over to this side of the Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let us be careful not to violate the rules of the Senate.

Mr. FALL. If the Senator can construe my question to be an insult, he is welcome to such construction as he desires to place upon it.

Mr. REED. I understood the Senator would come back with his usual courtesy and repeat what he had already said; that has happened often in the Chamber, and it has no more effect on me now than it has had in the past.

I pass from that fruitless topic to remark that much cheap politics are these days being played. Men who, if they were charged with the grave duties devolving upon the head of this Government, would observe a discreet silence are very voluble and highly critical. These knights of forum and sanctum talk all the braver because they only fight with words and bear small measure of responsibility, else they might not be so often heard carping. I declare that it is my humble judgment that the man who at this crisis of the world's affairs will intentionally do anything to aggravate the international situation is a bad man, a dangerous citizen, and the worst kind of a demagogue. What we ought to be trying to do is to preserve our calm, our deliberation, and to keep ourselves as nearly as possible before all the world as a Nation standing impartial, desiring only to see the European conflict brought to an end.

It may be that we ought to have invaded Mexico with an Army of 200,000 men; it may be that we ought to have imposed a debt of two or three billion dollars upon our people; but I repeat that if the question were put to a vote in this Chamber to-day the men who have so often criticized our Mexican policy would not dare to vote a declaration of war against Mexico. I have said that much simply because the intimation was rather broad, as I understood it, that, after all, if we really had a red-blooded President, we would have better maintained the dignity of this country and we would have better protected our citizens.

I conclude with this remark, that I trust even those who did not go into the Spanish War, as did the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL], may be permitted in this Chamber to express an opinion with reference to our national or international matters and even to speak the sacred name of a Roosevelt without any further intimations that they are lacking in personal courage or in patriotism. The quality of courage is not limited to any one race or to any one man. It is therefore possible that courage may be sometimes associated with great vehemence of speech or even a contemptuous intolerance for the opinions of others.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, having settled the Mexican question for all time, I am now ready to bring my amendment up to the slaughter. I understand very well that this amendment is sandwiched in between a determination on the part of a great many on this side that they will vote for nothing except to retain the Philippine Islands and on the other side by a determination of what seems to be a majority that we will kick the Filipinos out of our house unceremoniously and let them take care of themselves. I appreciate the little show that an amendment of this kind will therefore have as between these predetermined forces.

I am now going to discuss for a moment the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] and the amendment which is offered as a substitute for it. I need not take more than five minutes more upon that subject. The amendment which we have before us, for which I offer a substitute, is an amendment that says we shall throw out the Philippine Islands without the protecting influence of this country after a given number of a few years and then let them take care of themselves. Both these amendments propose to give independence to the Philippine Islands. The real difference between them is whether, when we walk out of the Philippines we go out of the front door honorably and fairly, showing our belief that we were there for their own good, or whether we sneak out of the back door like a burglar who has found nothing of value on the premises. The difference, in my opinion, is a difference between performing a duty toward them and failing to perform that duty.

It is a very simple proposition, and I am going to put the question right up to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] and let him answer it. I think I have his idea. I have a conviction—and no argument that I have heard so far can remove that conviction from my mind—that unless before we cease our control over those islands we have an agreement with the great nations of the world that their independence will be respected, they will not hold their independence very long against some of those countries. If the Senator from Colorado should believe that within a comparatively short time after we had ceased our control over the Philippine Islands they would be taken possession of by some other great power, would he still be in favor of granting them their independence to-day and letting them take their chances?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, the first premise of the Senator from North Dakota is something in which I do not believe. When we put to the Filipino people the proposition as to whether or not they want their independence without a protectorate, and they say that they do—and it is the intelligent people over there who are saying that—it is a matter of which they and not we should judge.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am not talking of a protectorate now.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Well, even an international protectorate.

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I am not talking of a protectorate of any kind. The provision of my amendment avoids the protectorate; it asks no country to protect them; it simply proposes to enter into an agreement beforehand, negative in its character, that those countries will merely respect the independence of the Philippines—not that they will guarantee it against each other. Those two propositions are as far apart as are the two poles.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I concede that there is a good deal of merit in the position which the Senator from North Dakota takes in his amendment; but the difficulty with it is that it makes our action as to the independence of the islands dependent upon what other nations may do. If we want to grant them independence, and we can not get this agreement with other nations, according to the Senator's substitute for the Clarke amendment, we would have to quit and say to the Filipinos, "We can not give you independence at all without a new act of Congress."

Mr. McCUMBER. Well, Mr. President, if we can not get their agreement that they will respect the independence of the islands before they pass out of our control, we can not get their agreement that they will respect it or guarantee it afterwards. If we can not get their agreement beforehand that they will respect the independence of those islands, then, I am frank to say, I would say to them our duty toward those islands is such that we will hold control over them until you do consent.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That would be all right if the Filipinos were willing to agree to it; but it is not all right without their consent to make independence contingent upon the action of some outside nation.

Mr. President, the situation of the Senator's amendment is simply this: He wants the nations to guarantee——

Mr. McCUMBER. No.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Or he wants them to agree not to occupy any of the territory of the Philippine Islands, and to make their independence contingent upon that agreement, irrespective as to how capable we think they are; irrespective of their wishes as to whether they should have independence or not; irrespective as to whether or not they could maintain their independence.

On the other hand, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] the other day objected to the Clarke amendment, on the ground that it was attempting to get an indorsement from the nations of the world before there was any government established. He said no nation would entertain any kind of an agreement either to guarantee or to respect the neutrality of what? Of something not formed, of something not made, of something that is not in existence? His objection was that the Clarke amendment was too strong and that it should not be framed in that way, whereas the position of the Senator from North Dakota is that we should make this agreement in advance, before there is a government established, and before there is any independent government to recognize.

Mr. President, it seems to me there should be a middle ground taken. Neither one of these Senators, in my judgment, is correct. I sympathize with much the Senator has said, but when the position is taken on one side that we must negotiate an agreement with foreign powers before any independent government is established in the Philippines, and then, on the other side, have it asserted that the independent government must be established before any negotiations are undertaken, it seems to me the wisdom is demonstrated of having something in the nature of the Clarke amendment. That gives a certain length of time for carrying out the purposes contemplated, and provides that not earlier than two years, and not later than four years, independence may be granted, unless in the meantime conditions should arise or disturbances ensue which would make it appear unwise to give independence in that time, in which event the time can be extended for a year and a half more. That provision will give the Filipinos independence within a reasonable time.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, the question was rather short; the answer has been decidedly long; and yet the Senator has not answered the question. The question in its simplicity was this: If the Senator believes that those islands would be taken possession of by any other great power in a short time after we let go of them, would he still believe that we should grant them their independence? I know the Senator said that he believed they would not be interfered with.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes.

Mr. McCUMBER. But I ask if the Senator believed that they would, would he still be in favor of letting them go to take their chances?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I would leave that entirely to the Filipinos. They are the ones who are capable of deciding that question. They may take their choice as to whether they would run the risk of some other nation taking them, or whether they prefer an iron-hand policy which might be invoked by our own Government. They might well say, "We would rather take the chances of foreign interference than of an iron-hand policy imposed by the Government which now controls the islands."

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, if I had taken a child into my own family and educated him for some time, I would have no right to keep him—I admit that—but if I were going to turn him out into the world, I would want to know that I was not turning him out among a pack of wolves. I would want to know that before I opened the door for him to pass out. We are governed by altruistic motives if we act at all in releasing the Philippine Islands. I am not certain that every other country in the world would be governed by the same motives, and I am fearful that the Philippine people would lose their independence. They do not want to be freed from dependence upon one nation simply to become the dependency of another; and if I feel they are in danger, is it not my duty first to try, at least—I may fail—but is it not my duty at least to try to see if I can not get an agreement from the other nations of the world before I turn them loose to their tender mercies? I feel if I have lost anything, I have only lost the period of time occupied in attempting to secure what I thought was for their benefit. Then if another Congress saw fit to take action, and if the Philippine people were still willing to take their chances, I would probably be willing to vote for the same proposition that the Senator contends for now; but I would make the attempt, at least, to secure such an agreement as I have indicated.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I recognize that the very highest motives prompt the Senator from North Dakota in offering his substitute and in all his views upon the Philippine question, but I want to say to the Senator that there are many who have not that altruistic feeling with respect to this matter. There are Senators in this Chamber who believe in keeping the islands forever, no matter whether the Filipino people are capable of self-government or not. There are people who believe that the islands are rich and might become of great value to the United States. I do not attribute such motives to the Senator from North Dakota; but what will be the situation if, after years of negotiation with other nations, it is determined that they will not grant this request upon the part of the United States? There may be in power then those who do not want to ever give up the islands. Therefore I would take the chances now of giving a reasonable time to bring about Philippine independence without requiring another act of Congress—that is, permitting them to become independent automatically, when the time expires. It seems to me that course is much better and safer for them and much better and safer for us.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, if I thought for a single moment that we could not secure within a very short time an agreement with other nations that they would respect the independence which we propose to grant to those islands, I might be influenced by the argument of the Senator; but I am satisfied that we would have no difficulty whatever in securing such an arrangement with every Government of the world. I am satisfied that we never could secure from any Government a guaranty that that Government should look after the independence of the islands. We could not secure it before, and we could not secure it after we had granted independence. We differ upon that simple proposition.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment to let me introduce a resolution regarding the sessions of the Senate?

Mr. McCUMBER. I would yield if the Senator could do that under the rules of the Senate, but I am a little inclined to think the Chair would rule him out of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is a plain rule, which the Chair is required to enforce, that no Senator can be interrupted to introduce a bill, resolution, or other business of that character.

Mr. McCUMBER. I want to say just a word, in closing, about the capability of the Filipino people for self-government. I determine the capability of any people for self-government more by their racial characteristics than anything else. I think if we will look over the history of the countries of Asia we will find that, while they are not capable of continuing and maintaining our form of government, they have been capable of maintaining a pretty fair government, and one that was adapted to their civilization. The Filipino people are Malayan in character and in blood. As a rule they are a docile people; as a rule they may be willing to be governed by 10 per cent of their citizenship.

If the 10 per cent are capable of governing and the people desire that kind of government, very well; I have no objection whatever to their conducting that kind of a government. Believing that they are capable of maintaining self-government, I am willing to let them, in the first instance, try to carry on the government which I would propose to establish for them, namely, a republican form of government. If it should drift into a monarchy, that is a question for them, and not for us.

The only argument that has been made against that is the argument that was made by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND], in which he stated that the Moros, constituting less than one-tenth of the population, fear that they may not be treated fairly by the other inhabitants of the islands, having a different religion. Mr. President, if that were the measurement by which we were to determine the right of people to self-government, I am afraid we would not have it in the United States. There was a time along about the sixties and running on to 1865, when there was a portion of the people of this country who feared the prejudices of the people of another section of the country. The Senator would not claim that that in any way militated against the ability of those people for self-government. If I cross the ocean to-day, I will find in the next great self-governing country that there has been pending in their parliament a bill to grant a certain autonomy of government to one of the islands of Great Britain, and I will find that several of the counties in that island—some five of them in the northwestern part—believe that the others would be so prejudiced against them that they would not be safe in their hands; and yet we would not question the right of the British or the Irish people to have self-government, because there might be racial prejudices or there might be political prejudices or there might be religious prejudices. That is not the measure. I believe that the people of the Philippines are capable of self-government; and the only thing about which I differ from the Senator from Arkansas and the Senator from Colorado is that I can not vote to give them their independence immediately without some kind of an understanding that that independence will be respected. If Senators vote down this amendment, as they have a right to do and as they undoubtedly will do, on account of divergent views, my own vote will be that we shall hold them until we can be assured of that fact.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I move that at not later than 6 o'clock the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is that proposed as an order?

Mr. CHILTON. No; it is presented as a motion. The present standing order is that, unless otherwise ordered, the Senate shall adjourn at 5 o'clock.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator's motion would "otherwise order."

Mr. CHILTON. The motion is to otherwise order that, instead of that order, to-day at not later than 6 o'clock the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from West Virginia.

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE].

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I understood that the motion of the Senator from West Virginia to take a recess was agreed to, but I did not understand at what time the recess was to be taken.

Mr. CHILTON. At not later than 6 o'clock we shall take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock. It is a change of the standing order for to-day.

Mr. LANE. I should like an opportunity to make a few remarks on the pending amendment before it is submitted to a vote.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is in order now.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, once each year, in honor of the attainment of our own independence, we set aside a day of celebration of that event, at which time we indulge in much self-praise as a free and independent Nation, and furnish children with explosive, noise-making devices, with which they incidentally blow off their little fingers or put their eyes out or acquire lockjaw, and whoop it up generally about the sacred rights of liberty and independence.

I purpose voting for that amendment to this bill, which will most nearly and quickly give independence to the people of the Philippine Islands. If that amendment fails to pass, I am then going to vote for the next amendment which gives the best promise of accomplishing that result, and so on down the line.

It is not going to make any difference to me who offers the amendment or what his politics are. I am not favorably impressed with the theory advanced by those who contend that it is our duty to pilot the Filipinos up to some undefined standard of education, of citizenship, or capacity for self-government; nor do I feel that it is our duty to supervise the building of roads in that country "the while" hundreds of thousands of our own people, farmers and others, have to drag their products through the mire to market and thousands of others are marooned entirely from market on account of impassable roads.

If it were possible to arouse an equal amount of enthusiasm in the gentle bosoms of those who are urging our duty to the Filipinos in such matters and divert it to the betterment of highways and additional school facilities in this country, it would result in great good to this Nation. It would greatly benefit those who are now taxed to pay for maintaining troops in the country of another people whose ways are not ours, yet a good people withal, but who love us not and have no reason to do so.

Before we become too seriously engaged in irritating the eyes and feelings of the Filipinos in an attempt to rid them of some of their motes, we had best set about getting some of the beams out of our own and purge ourselves and live cleanly.

I have no great confidence in the benefits which they will derive from our guardianship of their affairs, and if it should prove to be no better in its results than that which we have exercised over the affairs of the Indians it will prove anything but a blessing to them.

I have no great amount of patience, either, with the attempt now being made to compel the Filipinos to remain in subjection to us until such time as they reach an arbitrary standard of mental and political qualification which will be pleasing to us, and for which no other standard is set, but which must needs make them conform to a sliding scale of indefinite length, manipulated by an interested referee. I have been around too many logging camps not to know what happens when a scaling rod is used in such hands. The proposition is refreshing, however, and I have no doubt but what it would be interesting to watch the misguided Filipinos while they were trying to catch that will-o'-the-wisp.

If this Nation continues that policy, their only hope of ever attaining their independence will rest upon a successful revolution. To make such a proposal can not be accepted by the people of those islands except as an insult, and it deceives neither them nor anybody else. The proposal to hold them in subjection until, in "our" judgment, they become fit for self-government is coolly insulting, and is, in my opinion, a self-righteous assumption of superiority which, whether based on facts or not, can not with good taste be urged by a people who acquired their own independence only after a bloody revolt against a country which urged the same reasons for not freeing us from their subjection.

It has cropped out that behind the dread that the Filipinos may not govern themselves with that sedateness and nicely balanced poise which seem so desirable to some, lies the fear that some goodly profits will be cut off from those who have speculated in properties and grants in that country, and forsooth we are under obligation to keep them under subjection and spend millions of dollars in maintaining an army over there in order that they may realize and fully appreciate the beauties of our enlightenment.

This Nation, if it does its duty by its own citizens, can find plenty to occupy its full time in looking after their welfare, which in many ways is suffering from neglect; also, it can find use for all and more money than this Congress will appropriate for much-needed improvements, for the lack of which its progress is being impeded, and the homes of many thousands are being lost to them, with the result that families are being broken up and scattered throughout the country, thereby bringing the level of want and poverty to a higher level than it would otherwise reach if we expended it as our duty demands that we expend it. If we are, as we claim to be, a people intelligent enough and wise and just and broad enough to govern an alien race for their best interests, we will deal with some of the evils to which our attention has been called by the Vice Commission which has just been in session in Chicago, the summing up of which show that hundreds upon hundreds of working girls, from their inability to derive a living wage, a wage sufficient to keep body and soul together, are being forced out upon the public streets into a life of prostitution. A nation that allows that kind of a cancer upon its bosom, that sort of a social disease to grow up in its own body and within its own vitals, is not a nation in a position to strike too high a tone of righteousness to a people with whose ways and affairs the majority of the people of this country are entirely unfamiliar.

In time of stress we will have to part with the Philippines, whether we wish to do so or not. To retain them, in the event of war, will prove costly and result in the loss of no man knows how many lives or how much money; and to the exact extent of that loss of lives and the expenditure of that money will the defenses of this country be depleted.

Seven thousand miles from our nearest coast is too far to safely or economically transport troops, foodstuffs, and munitions of war with safety.

Half the nations of the world seem to have gone insane, and most of those of Europe are at war now. If this Nation should become involved, the Philippine Islands will be the most vulnerable point of attack upon this country; and through and by its possession and our inability to take care of it and to defend the coasts of this country this Nation may lose its own liberty.

I heard with a good deal of interest one gentleman say that we have constructed upon those islands—near Cavite, I suppose; I never was there—another Gibraltar, an impregnable fortress. That is very good, and I am glad to hear it. I am proud of our ability to have done it; but I question the wisdom of having erected a Gibraltar of defense over in that far-away country and at the same time having neglected to erect at least one, if not more, along our own unprotected coasts. It is possible that if we are real nice and polite in our parting with the Philippines we may be able to trade that impregnable fortress off to the Filipinos for something with which we can defend ourselves nearer at home if we go to war or become entangled in war with some other nation.

I do not believe that any nation, however wise or just it may be, can govern another people, an alien people, as well as they can govern themselves. I do not think any nation in the world, no matter what its state of civilization may be nor what its wealth may be, has the right in justice to impose subjection upon another country which wishes to be free, and, for all we know, would have been a free and independent and a prosperous nation, in the case of the Filipinos, 200 years ago if the Spanish blight had not fallen upon it. We are not skulking out of that country. It is our humane and just duty to them and to ourselves to part with them in good will and in kindness, and it is to their best interests and to ours to do so at as early a date as possible; and I am going to vote for any amendment to this bill which will accomplish that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] as a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE].

The amendment was rejected.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. Unless some other Senator wishes to go on further with the Philippine bill at this time, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] contemplated presenting an amendment, now that the pending amendment has been disposed of; and it is also his purpose to address the Senate. He is out of the Chamber at this time, under the belief that the remarks submitted by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. LANE] would consume more time than has been the case. I hope the motion of the Senator from Missouri will prevail.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 8 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Tuesday, February 1, 1916, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate January 31, 1916.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Dennis B. Lucey, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., to be United States attorney, northern district of New York, vice John H. Gleason, resigned.

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

Walter D. Neilson to be postmaster at Del Monte, Cal., in place of Walter D. Neilson. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1916.

CONNECTICUT.

Daniel A. Smith to be postmaster at Moosup, Conn., in place of W. F. Sheldon. Incumbent's commission expires February 1, 1916.

FLORIDA.

John H. Collins to be postmaster at Milton, Fla., in place of Lawrence Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1916.

E. L. Powe to be postmaster at De Land, Fla., in place of W. A. Allen. Incumbent's commission expires February 8, 1916.

GEORGIA.

Louis J. Leavy, jr., to be postmaster at Brunswick, Ga., in place of C. L. Elliot. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1915.

KANSAS.

Vardie V. Goeden to be postmaster at Lakin, Kans., in place of I. L. Cason. Incumbent's commission expires February 1, 1916.

D. G. M. Keen to be postmaster at Greenleaf, Kans., in place of C. B. Scott. Incumbent's commission expires February 20, 1916.

L. M. Rich to be postmaster at Coldwater, Kans., in place of Z. P. Jackson. Incumbent's commission expires February 1, 1916.

MARYLAND.

W. J. Woodford to be postmaster at Centerville, Md., in place of W. C. Orrell. Incumbent's commission expires February 8, 1916.

MASSACHUSETTS.

James J. Murtaugh to be postmaster at Hopkinton, Mass., in place of J. F. Phipps. Incumbent's commission expired December 12, 1915.

MICHIGAN.

Howard W. Brown to be postmaster at Plymouth, Mich., in place of M. H. Ladd. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1915.

MINNESOTA.

F. L. Frye to be postmaster at Elk River, Minn., in place of F. N. Corey. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1916.

W. R. Hodges to be postmaster at Sleepy Eye, Minn., in place of J. P. Graff. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1916.

James Lynch to be postmaster at Lanesboro, Minn., in place of H. E. Glasoe. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1916.

NEBRASKA.

William A. Nyrop to be postmaster at Elgin, Nebr., in place of C. B. Guffy. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1916.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

John H. Dowd to be postmaster at Portsmouth, N. H., in place of J. P. Conner. Incumbent's commission expires February 20, 1916.

NEW JERSEY.

John H. Lindemann to be postmaster at Closter, N. J., in place of William Tate. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1916.

OKLAHOMA.

C. C. Kidd to be postmaster at Wanette, Okla., in place of F. C. Wright. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1916.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Ellison Capers to be postmaster at Summerton, S. C., in place of Ellison Capers, jr. Incumbent's commission expires February 21, 1916.

Landrum Padgett to be postmaster at Pelzer, S. C., in place of Landrum Padgett. Incumbent's commission expires February 20, 1916.

TEXAS.

August Kleinecke to be postmaster at Hitchcock, Tex., in place of Robert Dempster. Incumbent's commission expired December 12, 1915.

WASHINGTON.

J. F. Lavigne to be postmaster at Chewelah, Wash., in place of J. W. Patterson. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1915.

WYOMING.

F. E. Godfrey to be postmaster at Lander, Wyo., in place of H. A. Bucher. Incumbent's commission expired December 12, 1915.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate January 31, 1916.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Dennis B. Lucey to be United States attorney, northern district of New York.

POSTMASTERS.

FLORIDA.

George J. Dykes, Eustis.
Arthur A. Jones, Lake Worth.

MINNESOTA.

Julia A. Keefe, Morton.

PENNSYLVANIA.

John J. McCormick, Bridgeport.

RHODE ISLAND.

Emory H. Desilets, Manville.

TENNESSEE.

L. N. Alley, Oakdale.

VIRGINIA.

William A. Coates, South Washington.
John L. Henley, Tappahannock.

WISCONSIN.

Henry Knapstein, New London.
A. H. Tarnutzer, Prairie du Sac.

REJECTION.

Executive nomination rejected by the Senate January 31, 1916.

Pearl P. McCarroll to be postmaster at Walnut Ridge, Ark.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn January 31, 1916.

Robert O. Mimmack to be postmaster at Plymouth, Mich.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, January 31, 1916.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou, who, from the heights of Thy glory, dost look down into the hearts of men and from whose all-seeing eye nothing is hid, cleanse our minds and hearts from all unholiness and so prepare us to meet the duties and responsibilities of the new week opening before us. The gravity of the new conditions, the questions involved, the possible conclusions, call for clear thought, wise deliberations, and unanimity of action. To this end let Thy spirit come mightily upon these Thy servants that they may be guided to do Thy will after the similitude of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, January 29, 1916, was read and approved.

IMMIGRATION.

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Immigration has directed the report of the immigration bill and have also directed me to ask unanimous consent that the minority may have until Tuesday of next week, including that day, in which to file their views.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama, the chairman of the Committee on Immigration, asks unanimous consent that the minority have until Tuesday of next week in which to file their views. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chairs hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 9416. An act making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and prior years, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 3344. An act to authorize George H. Hervey, of Pensacola, Fla., to construct and operate an electric railway line on the Fort Barrancas and Fort McRee Military Reservations, Fla., and for other purposes.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

S. 3344. An act to authorize George H. Hervey, of Pensacola, Fla., to construct and operate an electric railway line on the Fort Barrancas and Fort McRee Military Reservation, Fla., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON, by direction of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, reported the bill (H. R. 10484) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes (H. Rept. 94), which was read a first and second time, and, with the accompanying report, ordered printed and referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota reserves all points of order on the bill.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I notice that the bill (H. R. 9416) making appropriations to supply further urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and prior years, and for other purposes, is on the Speaker's table, with Senate amendments thereto. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] will be here a little later, and I also notice that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON], who is on the subcommittee, is not present. I suggest that the Chair let the bill remain upon the table but order the Senate amendments printed. I understand, after inquiry, that that has been the practice.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, in the last House the Chair always ordered these appropriation bills with Senate amendments printed, although they remained on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr CANNON] asks unanimous consent that the urgent deficiency appropriation bill (H. R. 9416) be printed, with the Senate amendments, and at the same time lie on the Speaker's table. Is there objection.

There was no objection.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 10385, the Indian appropriation bill. Pending that, I desire to reach some agreement or understanding with gentlemen on the other side as to the time for general debate. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] and myself have reached a tentative agreement of two hours and a half on a side, and I ask unanimous consent that general debate be confined to five hours, one-half of that time to be controlled by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] and one-half by myself.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have no objection to an arrangement of that kind provided we do not take the bill up for consideration under the five-minute rule to-day.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think that five hours will cover the day. It is understood that it will not be taken up under the five-minute rule to-day, but that we will have five hours for general debate, one-half to be controlled by myself and one-half by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if the general debate is to be concluded to-day, then I suggest that one-half of the time be controlled by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] instead of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL], who is not present. The gentleman from Kansas asked that that be done.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, and pending that asks unanimous consent that general debate upon the bill be confined to five hours, one half to be controlled by himself and the other half by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON]. Is there objection?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I suggest also that it be understood that the general debate close to-day.

Mr. MANN. No such request as that has been made.

The SPEAKER. Did the gentleman from Texas ask unanimous consent that debate be closed to-day?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. It is my opinion that we can close it to-day.

The SPEAKER. Is that the request?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Very well, I will make that request.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, then I renew my original request and motion.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understood the gentleman to say that he would not take up the bill under the five-minute rule to-day.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, in that connection, if no one desires to talk on this bill at the end of an hour, after we go into the Committee of the Whole, with an agreement that we would not take it up under the five-minute rule, what would we do the balance of the day?

Mr. MANN. We could call committees.

The SPEAKER. Whenever we run out of anything to do in this House, the Chair is going to order a call of the committees.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that we could afford to agree not to read any of this bill under the five-minute rule to-day, if general debate should cease to-day.

Mr. GARNER. If nobody desires to talk upon it under general debate, we ought to go on with its consideration under the five-minute rule.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think we should at least read one section of the bill.

The SPEAKER. What is the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That general debate be limited to five hours, one half to be controlled by myself and the other half by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that general debate on this bill be limited to five hours, half of which time to be controlled by himself and half by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON]. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on resolving the House into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to consider the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 10385, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. FOSTER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 10385, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 10385) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a brief statement of the matters contained in this bill. We have presented a bill making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917. I desire to state that we have followed the order in the Book of Estimates in the preparation of this bill. The amount appropriated in this bill for the year ending June 30, 1917, as carried in the joint resolution passed extending the previous law, aggregates the sum of $10,175,036.66. The estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, exceed the current law by $1,249,581.66. We have recommended in the accompanying bill appropriations of $9,357,146.66, reducing the department's estimates in the amount of $817,890, exclusive of the trust funds.

The bill recommended aggregates an appropriation payable from the Federal Treasury amounting to $6,993,266.66; reimbursable from the Indian fund, $1,518,520. We have treaty items amounting to $845,360. The department estimates, submitted to us by the department, contain many claims—several claims—which are not recommended for payment. The committee refused to do so, except in the matter of one claim, that was only $20, and that was clearly due by the United States to an individual Indian. We have found it necessary to strike from the bill many items of legislation, as we did not desire to bring into the House items of legislation upon this appropriation bill. We expect at a later date to bring in an omnibus bill composed of several items which have been stricken from the bill by our committee. These items, many of them, are just, recommended by the department, but for the sake of good legislation we eliminated from this bill matters of legislation; and, as I say, we expect at a later day to pass upon those items submitted by the department to our committee. We have endeavored to give sufficient funds to the reservation and nonreservation schools for the purpose of keeping the schools up to the present standard, and for the additional purpose of keeping the school buildings in repair, having in mind the policy that was adopted a few years ago, which is a very just policy, in my opinion, and that is to build up the reservation schools, spend the money upon the reservation in boarding schools, and also in day schools, and not to extend the number of pupils to any great extent in nonreservation schools, the opinion of the committee being that Indians can be better educated in their own reservations and among their own people than to be carried far away from home to nonreservation boarding schools. We have adopted another policy, and that is this: Where Indians have had allotments made to them, Indian families living among white families, these white persons having bought part of the Indian lands on the reservation, and they establish schools in the various States, we are sending Indian children to those schools under an agreement between the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the State authorities, and we find in the various States very few objections are raised against this means of educating their Indian children. We have gratifying reports from all of those schools; that they are of vast benefit to the Indians themselves; that the children make greater advancement than when educated in their own schools.

In the last few years many journals over the United States and many magazine writers have complained greatly and raised quite a question as to whether or not the Indian Bureau was taking care of the health and morals of the Indians. We provided two years ago for 12 additional hospitals, and we have inaugurated that system now so that we take care of all insane Indians and Indians that have no way of being provided in hospital matters on their own reservation. Some of these are nonreservation hospitals and many of them are reservation hospitals. The only two items we have increased the amount appropriated over last year is one for the hospitals to take care of the health of Indians and the other is for the education of the Indians. All other items, I believe, have been reduced, as is shown by the itemized statement that we shall present and ask to be printed.

Mr. STEENERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I do.

Mr. STEENERSON. The gentleman has referred to the policy of permitting Indian children to attend public schools—the common schools.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Yes; that is right; the common white schools.

Mr. STEENERSON. Now, in my district there is a school at Mahnomen, the county seat of Mahnomen County—a good public school—maintaining an agricultural department, and about two-fifths of the children are Indian children and three-fifths are white, and they get along very harmoniously; but the Indian lands are untaxed, they are contributing nothing. The Indian Bureau has for many years maintained a day school upon an 80-acre tract within half a mile of the schoolhouse, but which they abandoned two years ago. Four-fifths of land in that school district has ceased to be Indian land and has gone into private ownership of white settlers.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Was it an Indian school entirely?

Mr. STEENERSON. It was an Indian school entirely. The Indian children preferred to go to the mixed school, to the common school, and therefore they abandoned the school especially set aside for the Indians, which was perfectly satisfactory. There is absolutely no race feeling amongst them, and the Indian children and the white children get along splendidly together.

Now, the district officers desire to give the use of that 80 acres for the agricultural experiment farm, to be used in connection with this school, and the department here in reporting on the bill refuse to recommend it. I can not understand why, when the Indian children get the advantage of the public school free, their lands being untaxed, that the department should refuse to set aside that 80 acres, as long as the school was willing to use it for agricultural experiment purposes, inasmuch as Congress had given that land to the Indians for school purposes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Is it the desire of the Indians that it should be used for the purpose mentioned by you?

The STEENERSON. The desire of the Indians?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. STEENERSON. Well, I do not know about that. There are, of course, a few Indians that would like to get that land diverted from school purposes to private ownership. I presume there is opposition from those who try to get these 80 acres as an allotment, but that would be devoting it to private purposes instead of school purposes, and I understand Congress has set it aside for purposes of Indian education.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I understand you have a bill for that purpose before the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. STEENERSON. But the Indian Bureau does not recommend it.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. The Indian Bureau does not control the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. STEENERSON. I hope when it comes before the Committee on Indian Affairs and they consider the separate legislation they will bear this in mind.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I will say that the reports made on these bills are only advisory. We try to advise with the department before we report any bill.

Mr. DILLON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. DILLON. I observed your statement that you proposed to bring in an omnibus bill later.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Later; yes.

Mr. DILLON. What features will that cover? Will they be simply claims?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Claims of all kinds and character in favor of the Indians and against them, where our committee has jurisdiction.

Mr. DILLON. Will the intention be to cover matters where there might be a recommendation for a transfer to some town or city of a block of lots?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. From the Indians for the purpose of selling the lots in blocks?

Mr. DILLON. To turn over ground for the benefit of the Indians.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think the Indian Committee would have jurisdiction of that matter without question.

Mr. Chairman, I will reserve the balance of my time unless some gentleman desires to ask further questions.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman reserves the balance of his time.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON], if he is present.

Mr. MANN. He will be here presently.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I would like to ask a question.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Very well.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I notice, Mr. Chairman, in glancing hastily at the report, that in at least one instance an Indian school receives an additional sum over the previous year's appropriation. What method can be used in an effort to enlarge the appropriation for another important Indian school?

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I do not know of any nonreservation Indian school having been established in the last few years.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I do not refer to a new school. I have particular reference to the Cushman School. It hangs along on $50,000 a year.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. That school was authorized a few years ago at the instance of a very splendid citizen of the State of Washington, Francis W. Cushman. It is a nonreservation school, and it is the most available one for the scattered bands of Indian around there.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. For 100 miles around.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. For 100 miles around.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The point is this: The buildings at this school are poor and going into decay; the grounds are poorly kept up and are not beautified for lack of money. The city of Tacoma has grown until it embraces these grounds. The buildings are an eyesore to all the people. Our citizens travel quite a bit. They have seen the Sherman Indian School, for instance, at Riverside, Cal., which is one of the show places of Riverside, with beautiful grounds and beautiful buildings. They return from there and see our poor, dilapidated, worn, frame-built school buildings for the Indians and wonder why. The entire population of that community hopes that some time some Congress, some Committee on Indian Affairs, or some Commissioner of Indian Affairs will do something to enable that school to take rank, at least in appearance, with its standing in achievement and ability.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Doubtless all the statements made by the gentleman are correct, but the department and the committee, after having adopted the policy I mentioned a few minutes ago, of not building up nonreservation schools further than keeping them in good condition for the convenience of the children there, can not spend more money unless we change our views on the matter. We think those Indians should be educated on the reservations in the day schools, if possible, and then in boarding schools on the reservations.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. In the district which I have the honor to represent and the adjoining district there are, all told, 19 scattered tribes of Indians and nearly as many reservations, large and small.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I understand that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Indian children are assembled from a distance of 100 miles west of Tacoma and sent to that school. Under the present policy it would seem that the buildings must go year after year without sufficient repair.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Did you ask for that this year?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. What was the result?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I find that the estimate for the appropriation was the same as in previous years, based on attendance.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. And you have the same amount as given you last year for repairs and improvements. You will find that in every bill it is estimated by the teacher in charge, by the agent in charge at that place, that the amount was sufficient for the repairs and improvements in that school or else it would not have been recommended by the department.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. But even if he had recommended otherwise, the probabilities are he would not get more.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. You better try and see.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I think he has done so. I understand he asked and requested it. The agents who visit that place continually ask for repairs and betterments to the buildings and grounds. I do not want to ask of the chairman what he can not give, and I realize that amendments to increase the appropriations are subject to points of order, but I state now the necessity for these repairs for the benefit of Congress and of the department, in the hope that these buildings may some day be brought up to conditions in keeping with their surroundings.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I think if the gentleman will try it this fall, he will get it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have been trying it for some time.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SHALLENBERGER].

RURAL CREDIT AND BANK DEPOSITS.

Mr. SHALLENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, a rural-credits bill has been reported to this Congress from the Committee on Banking and Currency. I expect to support the committee bill with my vote when given the opportunity to do so. At the proper time, however, I expect to offer an amendment to section 18 of the bill, which has been reported and which provides for a savings-bank department as a part of the Federal farm banks system. In order that this department may start out with a profitable and dependable depositor, I shall move that the postal savings funds shall be deposited in the Federal farm banks instead of in the commercial banks of the country, as at present. The postal savings funds should be deposited in the Federal farm banks for two reasons: First, the reports of the Comptroller of the Currency show that the commercial banking institutions of the country can not use these funds, because they already have excess reserves of about nine hundred millions now idle and unused in their hands; second, the farm banks to be established under the proposed rural-credits bill will require the postal deposits to give them at the outset in the savings-bank department cheap funds that can be loaned upon comparatively short time to the farmers of the country at a rate that will warrant safe borrowers in using the money. Of course, the prime purpose of rural-credit legislation is to assist agriculture. The big problem that confronts the farmer in America is no longer one of experimental work or scientific study as to how best he may improve crop production, but that of securing capital in sufficient quantities for his needs at a rate of interest that will warrant its use.

The ability to secure capital at a low rate of interest is essential to the success of any business, and farming is no exception to the rule. The railroads of the country have appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission for years to allow them to raise the traffic rates they charge the public because they can not secure capital unless they can show ability to pay interest, and unless they can acquire capital, they tell us they must go into bankruptcy. The large corporations engaged in the packing industry, one of the tremendous business organizations of the country, are notoriously big borrowers and at low rates, because they command the whole field of credit for their needs. This same condition as to credit requirements applies, without exception, to all great manufacturing and mining enterprises. The railroads, the packers, the manufacturers, and the miners under modern business conditions must be able to secure large volumes of money or credit when needed at low rates of interest or failure is the result. Though some seem to believe to the contrary, the farmer is no exception to this rule.

The amount of capital required for owning and operating a farm of 160 acres in much of agricultural America is little considered by men in other lines of business. I know something of the problem in the Central West from personal experience. In northern Illinois, where I was born, the investment in the land alone is from $30,000 to $40,000. With the addition of the liquid working capital required, the aggregate amount of the investment becomes $50,000 or more. In Iowa the land is almost as high in price, and hence the total capital required is about the same as in Illinois. In Nebraska at present the capital required for owning and operating a farm of the size indicated is somewhat smaller. In the farming section of Nebraska, however, the man who would own and successfully operate a quarter section of agricultural land needs more capital and has a larger investment than the average capitalization of the 800 State banks of the Commonwealth.

The farmer has not enjoyed equality as to interest rates with other lines of business in America. With reference to the need for equality with other lines of business as to interest rates in America, I will say that in Nebraska the farmers have now purchased and erected many silos for the purpose of storing their forage crops. One of the largest silo-selling concerns in America has its headquarters in Nebraska's capital, the city of Lincoln. The business manager of this concern happens to be an acquaintance of my own. During the summer of 1914, just before the beginning of the European war, I happened to be in Lincoln, and the manager told me something of the immensity of the volume of their sales. He said to me that it required a great deal of money to carry the business of the institution through the active selling season, but he also said, "We get our money very cheaply. We are borrowing all we need right now in the city of New York upon our company notes at 3½ per cent per annum." I subsequently looked up the quotations upon prime commercial paper in New York at that time and found that the rate quoted was common to everyone who had accepted credit there. Now, I know of my own knowledge that at the same time the farmer in Nebraska who purchased the silo and gave his note for it at the bank was paying from 8 to 10 per cent for the credit that he needed. The farmer's solvency was essential to the success and the solidity of the entire business transaction. In other words, the farmer, who supported the whole structure of credit, was paying about two and a half times as much for his capital as was the Nebraska business man who had access to the great accumulation of credit and loanable funds in New York City.

Rural-credit legislation appeals especially to the people of Nebraska, because we are unique among all the States of this Union in that we are more dependent upon agriculture for our material prosperity than any other State. We have no mines that produce a pound of coal or iron or lead or zinc or any useful minerals whatever. We do not produce an ounce of gold or silver or jewels or precious metals of any kind whatever. We have no forests from which we cut any lumber. We value our trees for their beauty and their shade, and will not cut them down for use. We have little of manufacture when compared to many other States. Our wealth is primarily dug from the soil, and we have only a million of people to produce it. But so rich our soil, so matchless the industry of our people, that each year we dig more than $400,000,000 of actual wealth out of our soil in corn and wheat, in pork and beef, and mutton and wool—those things that mankind can not live without, the essentials of life itself. We send these products eastward across the Atlantic and westward beyond the Pacific, and with them we lay hold upon the gold and the silver of the world. We sweep it across these mighty seas and pour it into the lap of American industry and help to build up the great balance of trade in our favor, the largest ever known in the history of the country, and which is to-day the source and support of the prosperity of the Nation. It is because we do these things that we ask from Congress this long-deferred legislation so essential to the farmer. [Applause.]

Postal-savings funds amount to $67,000,000. We have just passed the bill to increase the amount of deposits that is permitted to each depositor to $2,000. The Postmaster General tells us that we can fairly expect that under these new conditions the postal-savings deposits will double in amount in a short time. I voted in this House the other day to remove all limits as to the amount which might be deposited in a post-office savings bank. While the matter was defeated for the time, I am satisfied that sooner or later all limit will be removed. Only the desire to go slowly, as the able chairman of the Post Office Committee indicated to the House, postponed such action at this time. When the limit as to deposits is removed the Post Office Department, having behind it all the power and credit of the Government, will become a great organization for gathering the savings of the thrifty and industrious toilers of the Nation into a place where the funds will be absolutely safe and at the same time make them available for the use of other men who sweat and toil in the fields that the rest of the world may be fed. So little consideration has been given to the necessity for this sort of legislation that Congress has left rural credits as the last financial legislation to be considered in our efforts to mobilize and develop the potential strength of the Nation by increasing its productive capacity.

We have heard a great deal of late about the necessity of preparedness, but here is a preparation that is more essential to our national existence and progress than battleships or cannon, whether in peace or war. The war strength of every nation is primarily dependent upon the productive capacity of its people. We have a concrete example of this displayed for our consideration upon the other side of the Atlantic. Following the Franco-Prussian War the German nation entered upon a period of great national development in every department of human endeavor. Its wise men thought that by developing to the utmost every department of production they made for greater national strength and efficiency, whether in peace or war. Her wise men also knew that if ever the tocsin of war should again sound throughout Europe and England became involved she would sweep the seven seas of the world, as she had done for a thousand years.

For 20 years Napoleon Bonaparte, the greatest warrior the white race ever knew, marched his victorious armies back and forth across Germany until finally he taught her how to fight as well as he. One of the sayings of Bonaparte, so often quoted, was that "Every army moves upon its stomach." What he meant was that the bravest man can not fight unless he is fed. Many a battle has been won by cold steel after the ammunition has all been shot away, but the men in the trenches have to be fed, and fed every day, or they can not fight. The central powers of Europe have said to us, in substance, that they do not object to our selling arms and ammunition to the allies if we would only arrange with England so we could sell them something to eat.

Understanding how all important the ability of a nation to feed itself becomes in time of war, the German Government a generation ago began to study the problem of increasing the production of the farms of Germany. They, of course, soon learned that the essential requisite for agricultural development is a proper system of rural credits. It is not alone enough that we shall provide organizations to administer the details of the business. The great essential is that there shall be loanable funds, obtainable at a rate that will warrant their proper use, available. Our Government has, as yet, not seemed to realize how important this is as a factor in cheapening the cost of living. In prior times we have shown a disposition to cheapen credit by the deposit of Government funds in sections of the country where necessity seemed to require it. When the panic of 1907 came upon us the Government had on deposit in the banks of the principal cities of the Nation $228,000,000, which they had placed there in order that the banks that received the deposits might grant to the business men in the cities the credit they needed. I am not here to criticize this action, but to urge that we should now undertake to apply, in some measure, the same favor to the rural communities of the country when the Government has on hand cheap funds to deposit and the farmers are in need of the money at lower rates of interest than are now being charged, and the further fact being apparent that the commercial banks in the large centers are now gorged to overflowing with idle funds. This policy, which I am now urging to be applied to our proposed system of rural-credit banks, is exactly the same as that which the Government of Germany has adopted and applied to the farm banks of the Empire, and is one of the prime features in the successful development of the system there. As a result of a proper rural-credits system the agricultural development of Germany began to draw the attention of the entire world. She doubled her production of wheat per acre; she doubled her yield of rye; she greatly increased her oat crop; and in potato production she now leads the world. Make a map 6 feet square and the spot that the Teutonic Empires would make upon it you could cover with your hand, yet one-third of all the potatoes in the world are produced in this region. The wise men of Germany prepared well when they encouraged the farmers of the Empire to fill her war-chest with food. The hope of the allies for victory in this war now rests upon the well-known power of starvation to bring even strong men to their knees; but if the farmers of Germany have done their work as well as seems indicated, they have armed the nation against the greatest danger that yet confronts it.

There is no paternalism nor favoritism contemplated in the rural-credit policy which is proposed in this bill now before the House or in the deposit of postal savings funds as advocated by myself. It is only to do tardily the thing which the business experience of other nations and the sound sense of our own should have caused us to have done long ago.

One more point and I am done. We will all agree, I think, that in addition to providing banks for the accumulation of capital, where borrowers may find loanable funds at a reasonable rate, Congress should also seek earnestly to make the money of depositors absolutely safe in all the banking institutions which it authorizes by its laws to receive deposits and endows with its name to lend them credit. The deposits in the banks constitute the great volume of the loanable funds of the Nation; and, therefore, because it receives such vast benefits, because of their availability, it is required, in equity and justice, to make them secure. In the matter of affording the best possible protection to depositors in banks chartered under its laws, the Nation lags behind many of the States. A short time ago, in the fifth congressional district of Nebraska, where I reside, two banks chartered by this Government, each given the alluring title of First National Bank, with gilt signs upon their windows advertising the fact that they were depositories of national funds, closed their doors, with consequent loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to innocent people who could ill afford it, and who had no other protection than the Government's seeming warrant that the institutions were solvent and worthy of credit. Such a disaster should no longer be permitted to occur in this country. I have introduced a bill at this session providing for an amendment to the present Federal reserve banking act which authorizes the establishment of a depositor's guaranty fund in any Federal reserve district wherein a majority of the member banks vote for the establishment of such a fund. The guaranty fund is provided for by the levy of an assessment of one-tenth of 1 per cent upon the deposits in the member banks. This would insure the depositors in failed national banks against the possibility of loss. It is a shame and a disgrace to our financial legislation that any man or woman who has trusted a dollar to a bank chartered under the laws of this Nation should have lost it. I say this because it is shown by reports of the Comptroller of the Currency that if from the foundation of the national banking system down to this hour a tax of one-thirtieth of 1 per cent had been levied upon the deposits in the national banks of the United States, the assessment would have provided a guaranty fund so big that no depositor who trusted his money to a national bank would have experienced the loss of a single dollar, and this in spite of the panics of 1873, 1893, and 1907. The distress and suffering caused by the panics which I have mentioned have only been exceeded by the calamity of war itself. Like every good thing in this world, such a provision of law would be helpful to every interest concerned. It would insure the depositor against the possibility of loss and at the same time increase materially the profit of the banking business of the banks affected. We can state this advisedly, because of the result already achieved in Nebraska under its guaranty of deposits law.

When the First National Bank of Superior failed, with hundreds of thousands of dollars of the peoples' money on hand, it pulled down with it the First States Savings Bank, which had its place of business in the same room with the national bank and was conducted by the same people. The funds of the State bank were in the vaults of the national bank, but the depositors of the State bank were not in the least concerned. After a period of three years the national bank has paid 10 per cent only to its depositors, but the State bank, under the guaranty law, was ready in three days to pay a hundred cents on the dollar to every depositor, and did so pay them as fast as they called for their money. Now, it requires no ghost to come from the grave to tell us that the guaranty-of-deposits law was a good thing for the depositors of that bank; but we have evidence that it is also a profitable measure for the banks that are subject to the act and have paid in the guaranty fund, as required by law. There are a little more than a million dollars now in the depositors' guaranty fund in the State banks of Nebraska. It stands like a stone wall between the depositors in those banks and the possibility of loss. The guaranty law has been in operation something more than five years. A large number of national banks have denationalized because of the pressure of State-bank competition, and have taken out charters under the State law. The increase of deposits in the State banks since this law was enacted, in comparison with the national banks during the same period, shows that more than $10,000,000 of deposits have been added to the State banks by reason of the popularity of the guaranty system. The average rate of interest charged for money by the banks of Nebraska, as shown by Government investigation, is about 8 per cent per annum. The interest, therefore, upon the increase of deposits caused by the guaranty law to the State banks would amount to more than three times the assessment levied upon them to provide the guaranty fund, and the banks already have the guaranty fund fully paid under the law, and are not required to pay any further assessment, unless it should be needed, because of failures of banking institutions.

The equity of the whole guaranty-of-deposits proposition is contained in the proven fact that it provides the safety that the depositor is entitled to and, at the same time, results in added profits and solidity to the banking business; and, furthermore, the protection which it insures to the depositor is warranted, because he is the foundation of the whole banking business. Without the depositor there would be very little, if any, banking done. Banks are not established or organized to make money in the loaning of the bank capital. They are organized to make money out of the depositors' funds which are intrusted to their care. There would not be a bank in Nebraska, nor in any other State, practically, if the people of those Commonwealths did not deposit their money in the institution. The guaranty-of-deposits law simply provides that a little of the profit derived from the use of the depositors' money shall be set aside as a guaranty fund to insure against the possibility of loss the man whose money makes possible all the profits of the banking business. Congress will not have done its full duty to the people it represents until it shall have afforded them every opportunity to obtain capital at the lowest possible rate in any line of business, and, in addition, made the banks of our country so secure that no man who trusts a dollar to an institution chartered by the Nation shall, by any possibility, be in danger of losing it. [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHIPERFIELD].

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I do not rise for the purpose of opposing in any way the provisions of this bill, for I am heartily in sympathy with the work that has been done so industrially and so well by this committee. Nor do I rise merely for the purpose of taking the time of the House to make a speech upon a subject that is not relevant to the provisions of the bill. However, I desire to refer to a practice which has grown up under the appropriations carried in previous bills upon this subject and continued in this bill, a practice which, it seems to me, is abhorrent and repugnant to every person who is imbued with the spirit of our free institutions. I refer to the practice that exists in the northern part of Minnesota at the present time, where, except in certain isolated sections, an Indian is as much of a rarity as he would be if he would come in with war paint and feathers on the floor of this House at the present time, and that is the practice of arbitrarily searching the personal effects and private baggage of men and women who go to this country upon legitimate business or who may seek pleasure in the wonderful lake resorts there found.

In 1855 there was executed an Indian treaty which relinquished the rights of the Indians to about one-half of the northern part of Minnesota. By this treaty the provisions of the Federal law were extended, that provided that liquor should not be taken into the Indian country. I do not stand in opposition to that provision. It is a matter of profound and absolute indifference to me whether that section of the country is wet or dry. If my private opinion should be asked, I do think that the question of whether that country should be wet or dry should be a question for the people of that section of the States to settle for themselves, but that has been denied by the provisions of the treaty and its construction by the courts.

A short time ago, so that you may understand my interest in the matter, the daughter of one of the prominent families of the South, who had been a roommate of my daughter at a certain southern school, had occasion to travel into that country. Her baggage, consisting of a trunk from her home, was searched, and her personal and most intimate belongings were rifled. A sweater which was given to her brother for athletic achievement at Washington and Lee University was stolen, and part of her effects were taken. Seeking to investigate, I wired to United States Marshal Grimshaw, at Duluth, calling his attention to the condition of affairs. He informed me that it had not been done by officers of his department, but that it probably was done by officers from the Indian Department, for whom $315,000 are appropriated by the provisions of this bill, in order that they may carry on such searches under the guise of enforcing the provisions of an obsolete Indian treaty, in violation of the constitutional rights of men and women to be protected from unusual and unfair search as to their persons, property, and effects. He also said he had called the matter of my complaint to the attention of these Indian officers, and they had made the statement that they had been so searching the baggage of men and women going into this country, and not only that, but that they intended to keep it up. I do not claim that they admitted the searching of this particular baggage. In the northern part of Minnesota there are seven or eight thousand Indians. The population of that part of Minnesota is from 400,000 to 500,000. Indians are not prevalent there, except upon certain reservations. These Indian agents, for the purpose of providing places and work for themselves, go up and down the State of Minnesota and search the houses, the offices, the safes, and the effects and belongings of men and women who reside there. They are a band of thugs, carrying revolvers prominently displayed, as I personally know. While engaged in this work, they will go into a man's office and say, "Open up your safe until I can see if there is any whisky there," and this without reference to whether an Indian is within a hundred miles or not. They intrude themselves into the private chambers and apartments of men and women, and do the same thing. They make a practice of searching the baggage and personal effects of travelers going into that country, and if they have not a key that happens to fit a particular trunk, they will take a hammer or a coupling pin and knock the lock off the trunk and then make the search.

I have in my possession here a card which is carried by one of these humorous gentry, and I want you all to note the unspeakable impudence, the absolute effrontery, and total misconception of official duties to be found in the wording of the card. I am reminded of a sentence of Tourgee, speaking of the Federal officeholders, who went down to the South after the war, when he said, referring to such appointees, that they understood merely the insolence of their power and not its responsibilities. I read the card for your edification:

> You can't always, perhaps not even often, tell by the looks of a — well, say a suit case—what may be inside. And it's always interesting, at least, and sometimes exciting, to look in and find out.
>
> W. W. THOMASON,
> Deputy United States Special Officer, Denver, Colo.

Armed with this card, he boards the railroad trains of northern Minnesota, goes to the men and women upon the cars, and demands that they exhibit to his gaze their belongings and personal effects. In the town of Akely there was spread upon one of the baggage trucks of the public station certain wearing apparel of a woman in order that this officer, under the guise of a United States inspector, might exercise his arbitrary power. They have gone the length and breadth of this territory infringing upon the rights of men and women who reside there, men and women who have a legitimate right to be there, men and women who hate the liquor traffic and would not be a party to it in any way, and when the attention of the department is called to it the reply is, "Yes; we are doing this thing, and we intend to keep on doing it."

There is nothing partisan about this. It has been the same thing under Republican administration and under Democratic administration, and one has been no better than the other. By the Constitution of the United States an individual is guaranteed a reasonable degree of protection. The officers who bear the insignia of the United States should cultivate a reverence for the law. A brief time ago a man was traveling toward the Canadian border, a man who represents one of the largest concerns in the United States. It was about the hour of 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. He and his wife and daughter occupied a drawing room upon one of the trains. A knock was heard upon the door, and when he responded an officer with brazen impudence and somewhat violent language inquired why he had his door locked at that time of night. He replied it was because he always kept it locked at night.

The man said, "I am a United States customs officer, and if you answer me in that impudent way again I will take you off the train." A short time ago, in the town where I reside, was a lodge composed of the most reputable gentlemen of the community. I do not belong to the lodge, so I have no personal interest in it. It was the Order of the Moose. A revenue officer came to that town for the purpose of ascertaining if a revenue stamp was required for the business done by that lodge. He knocked at the door, and the porter told him to wait a minute, that he would call the steward. There were three of these men, and while the steward was answering the door these three men burst open the door of the lodge room; and when I made complaint to the Treasury Department I was told that one of these gentleman was a Christian and he resided at the Young Men's Christian Association. That is the only answer I obtained. Officers in the customhouses at our entry ports and in our customs towns are being guilty of the most oppressive and arbitrary acts toward our men and our women. It is not only oppressive, but is bringing the acts of the bureaucratic gentlemen into great disrepute and causing the United States Government to be condemned for its laws. For that reason I protest. I said to these gentlemen when I was told that there was no relief for me that I would make my complaint upon the floor of this House. In pursuance of that statement I keep the promise that I made.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, if in the two covers of this bill there are appropriations which are making vexatious the life, the safety, and the security of the citizens, and being arbitrarily used, it occurs to me at the proper time they should be stricken out. I care not for the interests that might wish to have this country wet. I have no concern in them, nor have I ever been concerned in them, but I have an old-fashioned regard for the Constitution of the United States that says that men and women may freely travel up and down this land in security and be protected against vexatious, irritating, and annoying seizures and searches of their personal baggage and effects, and for that reason I am protesting against these acts that are being committed under the appropriations that are being made by this House to better the Indian service rather than to annoy citizens. [Applause.]

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TILLMAN], a member of the committee.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, I hope that gentlemen present will understand fully the nature of the complaint made by the distinguished gentleman who has just taken his seat, and understand the attitude of the committee in its efforts to do what it considered the laudable thing by attempting to carry out the treaty with this Indian tribe made more than 50 years ago. That treaty provided that, without the consent of either the President or Congress, no liquor should be allowed to be introduced or sold in certain territory of which the gentleman speaks. The Committee on Indian Affairs desires to carry out in good faith the provisions of that treaty. The gentleman would seem to want to abrogate a treaty more than 50 years of age. It is a well-known fact that the Indian has been robbed by being plied with whisky since 1492. He has thus lost his property, his money, his health. Now, you can not have a liquor law of any kind without its working hardship in some instances. Down in Oklahoma, which State adjoins mine, and to which many Arkansas people have gone, they have this same search law. If any man goes into Oklahoma where there are many Indians, and it is suspected that he has whisky in his grip or in his pocket, an officer is allowed to make a search without the filing of an affidavit. The liquor law could not be enforced in Oklahoma, and it can not be enforced elsewhere, without a search law. A very suave and able gentleman appeared before our committee representing a certain brewery in Minnesota. The people who want the liquor law enforced were not present by attorney or otherwise. This gentleman frankly said that he was there representing a brewery, and that he wanted the wet territory extended. So far as the majority of the Indian Committee are concerned, they prefer to see dry territory extended and wet territory limited. Now, the object of the gentleman who has just spoken and others is really to extend this wet territory so as to embrace a portion of the land that the Indians ceded to the United States many years ago on condition that whisky should no longer be sold or introduced within the limits of that territory. The law is bigger than any man, whether he comes from the North or the South; the law is bigger than any woman, whether she comes from the North or the South.

The bureau tells the committee that, as a general proposition, the men who are charged with the enforcement of these liquor laws have done their duty in such a way as to justify their continuance in the service.

Mr. MEEKER. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes.

Mr. MEEKER. On the point the gentleman is on, I would like to ask if it is the gentleman's opinion that a man has no rights which the law is bound to respect?

Mr. TILLMAN. When a law is placed on the statute books, my dear sir, it ought to be enforced.

Mr. MEEKER. Always?

Mr. TILLMAN. Oh, yes; certainly.

Mr. MEEKER. He has no rights of his own at all?

Mr. TILLMAN. He has no right if the law comes in conflict with him, because the law is bigger than he is. If it were not, any man charged with law violation would insist that the law traversed his "rights" and therefore should be ignored.

Mr. MEEKER. The law is greater than any man's individual right?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes, sir. No individual has the right to assume that he is superior to the law. You can not enforce the law against larceny, against illegal liquor sales, or other crime if the man accused is entitled to determine for himself whether or not the law comes in conflict with his rights.

Mr. MEEKER. It is on the point of right of search and seizure. It was the practice that started the revolutionary trouble. I want to know if the gentleman is insisting that there is no individual right which an American citizen possesses that the law is not bound to respect?

Mr. TILLMAN. This law was enacted for the purpose of suppressing a certain traffic or declaring a certain thing criminal, and the law ought to be enforced against all alike.

Mr. MEEKER. I would ask another question on the same point, the point suggested by the gentleman from Minnesota, that some officer of the law suspects that some individual is violating a right, does that give him the right of search and seizure?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes; and an officer may make a mistake, but that does not necessarily reflect on the officer, and certainly this would not discredit the law.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. TILLMAN] has expired.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. Does the gentleman from Arkansas desire more time?

Mr. TILLMAN. Yes, sir; five minutes.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. I yield five minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILLMAN. I will.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Is it the opinion of the distinguished member of the committee that because this is a treaty country that that would give the right to any Indian officer to search the baggage of respectable women traveling from remote points into that country, where there is not an Indian, perhaps, within 50 miles, and where there could not be any basis whatever for the supposition or suspicion that her trunk was carrying this kind of contraband? And another question——

Mr. TILLMAN. Let me answer the first one.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. You can answer them both at the same time, for they are connected with each other. And does not the gentleman recognize that under the laws of the United States, where there is a basis for suspicion, that there are proper search proceedings provided upon affidavit, and regular court proceedings, instead of an arbitrary exercise of power?

Mr. TILLMAN. I will answer the last question first. The law, usually, not always, requires that before an officer can make a search for prohibited liquors an affidavit must be made. But often the law, and properly so, vests the officer with the right to search for contraband liquors without affidavit. An officer has more rights than an individual in the matter of search and seizures.

Now, the other question. Will you repeat it?

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. The substance of it is this, and I think I know what your answer will be. You can not make the search of ladies who are traveling on legitimate business.

Mr. TILLMAN. Oh, no; and it is equally reprehensible for an officer to make a search of men's baggage without reasonable cause. But here is the trouble with people who insist on doing what the gentleman seems to want to do, to criticize or dispense with the Indian police charged with the duty of enforcing these wholesome laws designed to protect the Indian from the sale of liquors.

The trouble with an argument of the kind just heard is that gentlemen always select some seemingly outrageous case of the kind mentioned by the gentleman. If an officer makes a mistake, the law is not at fault. He sometimes does that and is not at fault himself, but this does not argue that the law is bad. Now, so far as I am personally concerned, I would not justify any officer, without excuse, without an affidavit, or without reasonable ground for believing that liquor is contained in baggage, to search the same. But officers must act with the lights before them, and if they make a mistake occasionally it does not justfy Congress in repealing a wholesome treaty regulation,

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Will the gentleman allow me to suggest that the last thing I would want to do would be to take away the Indian police. I want their activities so restricted that they can not take the course I have stated.

Mr. TILLMAN. That is a matter of administration. I think the bureau can be depended upon to see that they act within decent limits. The committee thinks the attempt to enforce the lipuor laws in Oklahoma and elsewhere by proper search and by the use of special detectives and special agents should continue. I would not for a moment justify an officer making a search of a woman's baggage or the baggage of men unless they have reasonable ground for doing so.

The gentleman also spoke about the oppression by certain customhouse officials in making searches and seizures. For many years it was the cheerful habit of men and women coming from Europe to smuggle valuable goods through the customhouses. Recent customhouse officers by carefully searching all baggage have discovered valuable gems and other property coming into this country from Europe, the owners of which, both men and women, sought to escape the custom duties. So I apprehend there are but few searches made in bad faith under this liquor law. I apprehend that these officers do their duty 9 times out of 10 in making these searches and that they are prompted by the best of motives, and that their work is to be commended rather than criticized.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] desire to use any time now? If not, I have a man who desires to us 20 minutes.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I will yield 20 minutes to myself.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. All right.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, the question of the education and the civilization of the Indians of this country is a very large and important one. The management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs by the Government is criticized frequently, and it is criticized more, I believe, by those who know little or nothing of Indian affairs than by those who are well acquainted with the subject.

I am very glad that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHIPERFIELD] made the remarks that he did. I believe the more discussion there is of Indian affairs, the better the service will be. The gentleman made rather a general criticism of a branch of the Indian Bureau service. I trust that for better efficiency in the service that the gentleman complains of, he will place in the RECORD specific charges against definite officials of the Indian Service, so that the men who were guilty of these violations of common courtesy and of common decent performance of their official duties may be brought properly before the Interior Department for hearing and separated from the service if these charges against them are substantiated.

In the short time that I have served on the Committee on Indian Affairs I have heard a great many general complaints made against this branch and that branch of the Indian Service, but when the parties complaining were asked to specify, in most cases they had no bill of particulars. It is easy, gentlemen, to complain of a great department like the Bureau of Indian Affairs in a general way. I do not want to be understood as supporting the proposition that there are no practices and no policies carried on by the Bureau of Indian Affairs against which just and well founded complaint can not be specifically made; but if we are going to arrive at a better condition in that bureau we must have complaint and criticisms backed by and founded upon facts.

The other day a party of Indians and representatives of the Chippewa Tribe in northern Minnesota appeared before the committee, and they made complaint of the annual appropriation expenditure of $185,000, or approximately that amount, of the funds of the Indians for the supervision of the Indians in that territory. Their attorney represented that about everything connected with the expenditure of this sum for the civilization and self-support of these Indians was outrageously wrong. I interrogated the attorney and requested him to name, to begin with, one specific thing that was wrong, and then to name as many other specific criticisms as he might be able. Well, he named only one, and said that that was all he could name at that time. That was a complaint against the superintendent of one of the day schools on the reservation, who was receiving a salary of $1,000 a year. When I asked the delegation if they desired that that position be removed from the list of salaried positions, they said no; they did not want that. It developed that that superintendent had some personal trouble with the sister of one of the delegates appearing before the committee, and that the delegates really familiar with the facts did not think there was any good cause for complaint against the superintendent. And so it is with so many of these complaints and criticisms.

There are in the United States at the present time, according to the reports of the Bureau of the Census and the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, about 300,000 Indians. The number of Indians in the United States is increasing, as will appear from the following reports of the Bureau of the Census and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs:

Report of the Census Bureau of Indian population in the United States for 10-year periods from 1870 to 1910.

	United States.		Alaska (census returns).
	Census returns.	Reports of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.[1]
1910	265,683	279,023	25,331
1900	237,196	250,000	29,536
1890	248,253	228,000	32,996
1880	.....	244,000	.....
1870	.....	278,000	.....

[1] Figures are exclusive of freedmen and intermarried whites, as follows: 1910, 25,927; 1900, 20,000 (estimate); 1890, 16,000 (estimate); 1880, 12,000 (estimate); 1870, 10,000 (estimate).

The report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs gives the following report of the Indian population of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915:

Indian population of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, June 30, 1915.

[Figures compiled from reports of Indian school superintendents, supplemented by information from 1910 census for localities in which no Indian Office representative is located.]

Grand total		333,010
Five Civilized Tribes, including freedmen and intermarried whites		101,521
By blood	75,534
By intermarriage	2,582
Freedmen	23,405
Exclusive of Five Civilized Tribes		231,489

In the brief time I shall address the House this afternoon I shall attempt to bring before gentlemen of the House some facts that will show the past conditions of the Indians in this country and their present conditions; some facts that will show you the amount of money that has in past years been expended for the civilization and education of the Indians, and the amount that is being expended now and the use to which it is being put.

In the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, the commissioner makes this statement, to show the importance and growth of the bureau: In 1899 there were received 59,797 communications by his department pertaining to Indian affairs; in 1915 that number had increased to 292,140. That is, the per cent of increase had been nearly 400. The number of employees in the Bureau of Indian Affairs in 1899—that is, 16 years ago—was 101. The number to-day in that bureau is 260.

The following table from the commissioner's report presents the subject quite clearly:

Comparative statement of work and force in Office of Indian Affairs since 1899.

Year.	Work.		Employees.
	Communications received.	Increase over preceding year.	Total number employed in Indian Office.	Increase (+) or decrease (−) over preceding year.
		Per cent.		Per cent.
1899	59,707	.....	101	.....
1900	62,601	4.84	115	+13.86
1901	67,376	7.62	119	+ 3.48
1902	79,237	17.60	132	+10.92
1903	79,115	.22	131	− .75
1904	86,588	9.03	142	+ 8.39
1905	98,322	13.55	149	+ 4.93
1906	106,533	8.35	145	− 2.68
1907	117,556	10.34	160	+10.34
1908	152,995	30.14	179	+11.87
1909	176,765	15.53	189	+ 5.58
1910	194,241	9.88	203	+ 7.40
1911	197,637	1.74	227	+11.82
1912	222,187	12.37	224	− 1.32
1913	275,452	23.97	237	+ 5.80
1914	280,744	1.92	245	+ 3.37
1915	298,240	6.23	260	+ 6.12

	Per cent.
Increase in work, 1915 over 1899	399.51
Increase in force, 1915 over 1899	157.43

In 1906 the United States Government expended $181,420 to maintain the Indian Bureau. That was but 10 years ago.

Last year we expended $327,433.34. In 1906 there was appropriated for the Indian Service $13,404,615.55; in 1907, in round numbers, $9,000,000; in 1908, $11,000,000; in 1909, in round numbers, $9,000,000; in 1910, $11,000,000; in 1911, $10,000,000, in round numbers; in 1912, $8,000,000; in 1913, $12,000,000; in 1914, $9,000,000; in 1915, $9,855,164.86.

I shall place in the RECORD the memorandum I have here, giving the exact figures covering the appropriations for the Indian Office, the appropriations for the Indian Service, and the amount expended by the Indian Service for the fiscal years 1906 to 1915, inclusive:

Fiscal years.	Appropriations for Indian Office.	Appropriations for Indian Service.	Expended for Indian Service.
1906	$181,420.00	$13,404,615.55	$12,746,859.08
1907	193,020.00	9,648,757.14	15,163,608.41
1908	197,720.00	11,837,731.79	14,579,755.75
1909	220,870.00	9,788,915.13	15,604,618.11
1910	231,210.00	11,891,782.48	18,504,131.69
1911	236,210.00	10,136,017.71	20,936,757.46
1912	232,210.00	8,948,454.30	20,134,839.80
1913	236,710.00	12,406,167.06	20,306,158.90
1914	310,950.00	9,895,553.80	20,215,075.96
1915	327,433.34	9,855,164.86	20,592,322.48
Total	2,367,753.34	107,813,159.82	[1] 178,874,127.55

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
ALBUQUERQUE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., 1915	$26,698.77		$442.56	$1,428.29	$76.54	$9.00	$16,715.30	$9,488.01	$2,632.31	$2,548.36
Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., repairs and improvements.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			7,792.41
Indian school, transportation, 1915		$1,047.80
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	182.70						4.16
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					16.20
Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., buildings.
Indian school, Albuquerque, assembly hall and gymnasium.
Total	26,881.47	1,047.80	8,234.97	1,428.29	92.74	9.00	16,719.46	9,488.01	2,632.31	2,548.36
ARMSTRONG BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw	10,446.99	20.06	480.93		34.95		4,675.91	1,365.08	582.47	845.82
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			622.96
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			3.93		3.13	18.10	23.30	9.00
Total	10,446.99	20.06	1,107.82		38.08	18.10	4,699.21	1,374.08	582.47	845.82
BAY MILLS DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,680.85		23.24		20.00		28.93	172.28	67.03	68.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			33.42
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	30.00
Total	1,710.85		56.66		20.00		28.93	172.28	67.03	68.00
BISHOP AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	660.00	95.15	1.89	15.00			349.20		161.60	69.73
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			502.23
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,104.56						42.56	44.67	162.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	780.00	265.75							210.16
Total	2,544.56	360.90	504.12	15.00			391.76	44.67	533.76	69.73
BISHOP DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	6,250.65		105.27	61.80	129.04		855.89	174.01	24.00	827.01
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			67.30
Total	6,250.65		172.57	61.80	129.04		855.89	174.01	24.00	827.01
BISMARCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Bismarck, N. Dak., 1915	6,676.70	36.30	184.43	446.15	24.75		4,058.71	1,911.54	1,051.94	1,085.52
Indian school, Bismarck, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			840.42
Indian school, transportation, 1915		216.30
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4								16.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	130.00				1.44		15.85	22.50	14.00	2.19
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	6,806.70	252.60	1,024.85	446.15	26.19		4,074.56	1,950.54	1,065.94	1,087.71
BLACKFEET AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Blackfeet Agency, Mont., 1915.	8,113.05	21.40	167.41		93.81		1,961.58	142.74	85.00	611.89
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	8,592.01	210.72				4.00	230.12		377.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			5,587.85
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915		18.20

[1] Includes disbursements from tribal funds for per capita payments, pro rata shares, etc.

I quote these figures to call your attention to this fact, that you will find in the present Indian appropriation bill that is before the House appropriations aggregating $9,357,146.66 for the support, education, and civilization of the Indians.

That is not by any means the total amount that is expended each year for the support and civilization of the Indians. Last year, while the appropriations provided in the Indian appropriation bill were $9,855,164.86, there was expended by the Indian Bureau over $13,000,000, exclusive of the amount for per capita payment.

I believe that it is well that the Congress should know just exactly, or as nearly as possible, for what each dollar of this money has been expended and what it has produced in the way of civilization, education, and improvement among the Indians. I believe that the time should soon come when the Indians who are competent and self-supporting should be released from any supervision or control by the Federal Government other than what is given to any white citizen of the Government. I shall place in the RECORD a detailed statement of the expenditures by the Indian Bureau of the money appropriated for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915, in the Indian appropriation bill, and this detailed statement will include a statement of the money expended by the bureau out of trust funds belonging to the Indians, being an additional expenditure of nearly $5,000,000.

Indian Service, 1915.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									ALBUQUERQUE BOARDING SCHOOL.
$95.28	$688.45	$380.06	$6,884.79				$204.86	$68,202.58	Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., 1915.
				$378.00	$4,613.37			4,991.37	Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								7,792.41	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,047.80	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
			213.95		11.20			412.01	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					73.46			89.66	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
				9,045.33				9,045.33	Indian school, Albuquerque, N. Mex., buildings.
				10,794.79				10,794.79	Indian school, Albuquerque, assembly hall and gymnasium.
95.28	688.45	380.06	7,098.74	20,218.12	4,698.03		204.86	102,465.95	Total.
									ARMSTRONG BOARDING SCHOOL.
65.00	59.96	67.38	999.24	860.22	1,758.89		125.94	22,388.84	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw.
								622.96	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			138.82		4.88			201.16	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
65.00	59.96	67.38	1,138.06	860.22	1,763.77		125.94	23,212.96	Total.
									BAY MILLS DAY SCHOOL.
1.30	154.17	57.26	112.50					2,385.56	Indians schools, support, 1915.
								33.42	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					53.08			53.08	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
							[1] 79.76	109.76	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
1.30	154.17	57.26	112.50		53.08		79.76	2,581.82	Total.
									BISHOP AGENCY.
		102.26	130.74				36.50	1,622.07	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								502.23	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					7.43	$172.57		180.00	Indian school, and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,353.79	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			50.00				[2] 800.00	850.00	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
							[3] 46.50	46.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			26.00					1,281.91	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		102.26	206.74		7.43	172.57	883.00	5,836.50	Total.
									BISHOP DAY SCHOOLS.
56.06	209.52	2.60	1,405.46				57.15	10,158.46	Indian schools support, 1915.
				3,625.48	521.29	612.00	36.00	4,862.07	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
56.06	209.52	2.60	1,405.46	3,625.48	521.29	612.00	93.15	15,020.53	Total.
									BISMARCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
17.50	119.12	56.08	831.72				45.69	16,546.15	Indian school, Bismarck, N. Dak., 1915.
					1,758.74			1,758.74	Indian school, Bismarck, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								840.42	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								216.30	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
			9.88					26.38	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
2.25		21.05	64.42					273.70	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							[1] 70.00	70.00	Relieving distress and prevention of diseases among Indians, 1915.
19.75	119.12	77.13	906.02		1,758.74		115.69	19,731.69	Total.
									BLACKFEET AGENCY.
78.60		1,085.60	1,512.20				475.00	14,348.19	Support of Indians of Blackfeet Agency, Mont., 1915.
28.35		34.23	3,301.84				120.00	12,898.27	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								5,587.85	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				405.52	1,159.55	40.00		1,623.27	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.

[1] Hospital expenses. [2] Owens River Canal stock. [3] Medical attention.

Detailed statement of expenditures.

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
BLACKFEET AGENCY—continued.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	$230.25	$26.00							$214.09
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,311.99							$188.51	45.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Interest on Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.			$15.45				$1,052.62	240.24
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,205.00	27.95
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,275.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M								41.12
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.						$43.04
Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund	2,373.32		656.52				17,328.04		2,608.20	$680.41
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915						925.17
Support of Chief Rocky Boy's Band of Chippewas, Montana, 1915.							3,670.58
Support Rocky Boy's Band of Chippewas and other Indians, Montana, 1915.	110.00	217.32	57.73				4,252.20		138.00
Industry among Indians, 1915		25.10
Industry among Indians, 1915–16		17.00
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)
Total	25,378.62	561.69	6,484.96		$93.81	972.21	28,495.14	612.60	3,467.29	1,292.21
BLACKFEET BOARDING SCHOOL.
Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund			870.99				4,868.22	2,184.18	480.00	1,474.82
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		2.50
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							4.40	18.72
Indian schools, support, 1915	9,328.66				5.25		942.10	349.92	510.67	19.75
Total	9,328.66	2.50	870.99		5.25		5,814.72	2,552.82	990.67	1,494.57
HOLY FAMILY MISSION BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.							4,082.82
BLACKFEET DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,498.00						172.18			307.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915		12.00
Total	1,498.00	12.00					172.18			307.25
BLOOMFIELD BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw	2,232.60	90.00			11.16	7.30	55.93		341.55	24.75
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	74.96		3.30				19.18		93.80
Total	2,307.56	90.00	3.30		11.16	7.30	75.11		435.35	24.75
CAMPO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915			52.50		36.00		151.94	45.63	292.00	46.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			77.98
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							74.99
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	161.66
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indinas (reimbursable)
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	720.00		1.93						80.00
Total	881.66		132.41		36.00		226.93	45.63	372.00	46.00
CAMPO DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,409.50		39.79				233.39	27.37		45.10
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	3,409.50		39.79				233.39	27.37		45.10
CAMP VERDE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	30.00	59.25					111.99
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			48.69
Pay of Indian police, 1915	720.00
Purchase of lands for Camp Verde Indians
Total	750.00	59.25	48.69				111.99
CAMP VERDE DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,882.00	26.15	13.11				7.67	54.29	60.00	113.24
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,882.00	26.15	13.11				7.67	54.29	60.00	113.24
CANTON INSANE ASYLUM.
Asylum for insane Indians, Canton, S. Dak., 1915.	11,127.91	235.22	486.51	$318.16	32.45		4,989.48	852.61	3.75	1,367.95
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies 1915.			736.47
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	11,127.91	235.22	1,222.98	318.16	32.45		4,989.48	852.61	3.75	1,367.95

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									BLACKFEET AGENCY—continued.
			$1.75					$1.75	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			7.00					477.34	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
								2,545.50	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			1,694.61				$30.00	3,032.91	Interest on Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.
			322.50					2,555.45	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								1,275.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			340.00					381.12	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
		$175.48		$14,466.67				14,685.19	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
$17.30		163.92	4,950.18				[1] 6,611.04	35,388.93	Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.
								925.17	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
							[2] 35.00	3,705.58	Support of Chief Rocky Boy's Band of Chippewas, Montana, 1915.
			241.35				[1] 181.70	5,198.30	Support Rocky Boy's Band of Chippewas and other Indians, Montana, 1915.
			74,930.57					74,955.67	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			25,594.40					25,611.40	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
							[3] 1,296.15	1,296.15	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
124.25		1,459.23	112,896.40	14,872.19	$1,159.55	$40.00	8,748.89	206,661.04	Total.
									BLACKFEET BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$342.44		250.82		47.57			10,518.04	Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.
		35.36						37.86	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
					99.09			99.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			67.90					91.02	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	14.99		230.31				36.00	11,437.65	Indian schools, support, 1915.
	357.43	35.36	549.03		146.66		36.00	22,183.66	Total.
									HOLY FAMILY MISSION BOARDING SCHOOL.
								4,082.82	Interest on Blackfeet Reservation 4 per cent fund.
									BLACKFEET DAY SCHOOLS.
								1,977.43	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					217.46		[4] 196.40	425.86	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
					217.46		196.40	2,403.29	Total.
									BLOOMFIELD BOARDING SCHOOL.
	1.50	8.15	99.47		239.30		70.41	3,162.12	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw.
	.50	1.60	55.61		2.65		4.60	256.20	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	2.00	9.75	155.08		241.95		55.01	3,418.32	Total.
									CAMPO AGENCY.
		30.23	150.06				2.50	806.86	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								77.98	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				459.27	37.35			496.62	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								74.99	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							[5] 45.00	45.00	Relieving distress and prevention of diseases among Indians, 1915.
			28.00					189.66	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			869.50					869.50	Industry among Indians, 1915.
								1.93	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
								800.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		30.23	1,047.56	459.27	37.35		47.50	3,362.54	Total.
									CAMPO DAY SCHOOL.
	29.06	1.79	214.23					4,000.23	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					98.78			98.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	29.06	1.79	214.23		98.78			4,099.01	Total.
									CAMP VERDE AGENCY.
101.50			45.50				2.00	350.24	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								48.69	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915
			.50					720.50	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
							[6] 13,000.00	13,000.00	Purchase of lands for Camp Verde Indians.
101.50			46.00				13,002.00	14,119.43	Total.
									CAMP VERDE DAY SCHOOL.
	46.67	188.58	76.05				3.50	3,471.26	Indian schools, support, 1915.
						516.00	[6] 120.00	636.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	46.67	188.58	76.05			516.00	123.50	4,107.26	Total.
									CANTON INSANE ASYLUM.
20.35	3.15	127.22	1,114.37	1,806.75	3,074.21		190.81	25,750.90	Asylum for insane Indians, Canton, S. Dak., 1915.
								736.47	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				350.00				350.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
20.35	3.15	127.22	1,114.37	2,156.75	3,074.21		190.81	26,837.37	Total.

[1] Seed. [2] Burial expenses. [3] Tuition. [4] Land. [5] Hospital expenses. [6] Water.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
CANTONMENT AGENCY.
Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.	$8,297.72	$407.20	$101.46		$7.04		$4.30	$19.11	$43.00	$340.33
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			675.34
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	600.00							41.36
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	300.00						8.09	2.46
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,400.00								163.86
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor						$39.00
Determining heirs of deceased, Indian allottees, 1915.	1,767.50	15.22
Total	12,365.22	422.42	776.80		7.04	39.00	12.39	62.93	206.86	340.33
CANTONMENT BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	6,899.11	27.25	130.13		.20		2,738.74	1,904.32	212.78	951.34
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	304.60	74.66					22.70		561.59	70.84
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	617.81						135.47		362.66
Total	7,821.52	101.91	130.13		.20		2,896.91	1,904.32	1,137.03	1,022.18
CARLISLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Carlisle, Pa., 1915	52,769.61	1,634.18	488.82	$4,168.52	314.69		25,659.34	17,777.57	1,577.25	13,257.74
Indian school, Carlisle, Pa., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,268.40
Indian school, transportation, 1915	7.00	10,748.27			49.59
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,086.44				5.50	164.11
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	350.22	51.17	27.66		27.12	80.65	375.71	6.00		11.37
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, athletics	5,979.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, charity		11.93
Total	60,392.27	12,445.55	1,784.88	4,168.52	396.90	244.76	26,035.05	17,783.57	1,577.25	13,272.11
CARSON BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Carson City, Nev., 1915	18,890.72	178.08		936.66	104.89		9,357.21	5,033.13	826.35	2,374.38
Indian school, Carson City, Nev., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			5,069.87
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,719.82			20.34
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	47.75		2.61		31.06		38.27	.50	4.00
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	60.00	46.25	1.05		5.90		303.09
Support of Indians in California, 1915	75.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.						47.03
Total	19,073.47	1,944.15	5,073.53	936.66	162.19	47.03	9,698.57	5,033.63	830.35	2,374.38
CARTER AGENCY.
Support of Pottawatomies, Wisconsin, 1915	4,259.99	622.71	2.00		35.22		367.53	73.53	439.87
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			20.52
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	78.25						400.80
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Support of Pottawatomies in Wisconsin	67.10	443.83	31.00				245.94	64.85	11.10
Purchase of allotments for Wisconsin Band of Pottawatomies, Wisconsin and Michigan (reimbursable).
Total	4,405.34	1,066.54	53.52		35.22		1,014.27	138.38	450.97
CASS LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	3,707.77	28.65	89.92		25.70		447.99	1,307.57	291.88	64.99
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1913	6.00	59.56					383.68		293.49	481.50
Indian schools, support, 1915	533.65								125.10
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			293.76
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, bridge
Total	4,247.42	88.21	293.68		25.70		831.67	1,307.57	710.47	546.49
CHEROKEE AGENCY, N. C.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	720.00	250.75
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		26.75
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,381.38
Pay of Indian police, 1915	600.00							17.02
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	840.00
Payment to North Carolina Cherokees
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Special deposits, tribal	187.50	40.25
Total	2,347.50	317.75	1,381.38					17.02

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									CANTONMENT AGENCY.
$238.82		$196.15	$346.06				$13.43	$10,014.62	Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								675.34	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					$121.78	$294.00		415.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								641.36	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			.35					310.90	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			325.00					1,888.86	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								39.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								1,782.72	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
238.82		196.15	671.41		121.78	294.00	13.43	15,768.58	Total.
									CANTONMENT BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$8.47	5.29	1,489.33				8.00	14,375.01	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$6,695.73	962.57			7,658.30	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
11.40			260.66		484.51		60.12	1,851.08	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			229.80					1,345.74	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
11.40	8.47	5.29	1,979.84	6,695.73	1,447.08		68.12	25,230.13	Total.
									CARLISLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
179.95	535.92	624.21	10,999.75			400.00	958.12	131,345.67	Indian school, Carlisle, Pa., 1915.
				4,707.06	12,764.84			17,471.90	Indian school, Carlisle, Pa., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								1,268.40	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								10,804.86	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
		8.50						8.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			64.40				1.00	1,321.54	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
23.15		110.96	363.43		16.43		3.37	1,650.24	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							[1] 27,687.10	33,666.10	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, athletics
							[2] 32.50	44.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, charity.
203.10	535.92	743.67	11,427.67	4,707.06	12,781.27	400.00	28,682.09	197,581.64	Total.
									CARSON BOARDING SCHOOL.
3.56	294.28	505.73	1,991.41				221.71	40,719.11	Indian school, Carson City, Nev., 1915.
					7,397.19			7,397.19	Indian school, Carson City, Nev., repairs and and improvements, 1915.
								5,069.87	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,740.16	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
		25.00	407.55		2.35			559.09	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		11.35					[3] 77.17	504.81	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								75.00	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
		2.50		14,666.66			[4] 297.50	15,013.69	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
3.56	294.28	544.58	2,398.96	14,666.66	7,399.54		596.38	71,077.92	Total.
									CARTER AGENCY.
		171.57	173.35				[5] 330.00	6,475.77	Support of Pottawatomies, Wisconsin, 1915.
								20.52	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								479.05	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
						760.00		760.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
111.50			94.96		102.29		463.65	1,636.22	Support of Pottawatomies in Wisconsin.
							[6] 96,449.29	96,449.29	Purchase of allotments for Wisconsin Band of Pottawatomies, Wisconsin and Michigan (reimbursable).
111.50		171.57	268.31		102.29	760.00	97,242.94	105,820.85	Total.
									CASS LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	99.52		337.48		11.24		7.50	6,420.21	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
	.75	1.55	396.60	1,536.50	784.82		57.48	4,001.93	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
							66.05	724.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								203.76	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					2,201.39			2,201.39	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
				4,210.97				4,210.97	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, bridge.
	100.27	1.55	734.08	5,747.47	2,997.45		131.03	17,763.06	Total.
									CHEROKEE AGENCY, N. C.
			10.00					980.75	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								26.75	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
					39.95			39.95	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,381.38	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								617.02	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								840.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							[7] 3,388.85	3,388.85	Payment to North Carolina Cherokees.
			4,733.15				[8] 339.35	5,072.50	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			109.00				[9] 185.30	285.30	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
							[9] 110.00	337.75	Special deposits, tribal.
			4,843.15		39.95		4,023.50	12,970.25	Total.

[1] Athletic expenses.
[2] Tuition.
[3] Burial expenses and medical attendants.
[4] Medical attendance.
[5] Hospital expenses, etc.
[6] Land, $96,430; receiving fees, $29.29.
[7] Taxes on tribal land.
[8] Seed.
[9] Cash payment to needy Indians.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel illuminants, lubricants, etc.
CHEROKEE BOARDING SCHOOL, N. C.
Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., 1915	$14,691.42	$38.85	$84.65				$3,871.37	$3,091.29	$1,793.54	$725.67
Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., buildings
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							3.68
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	14,691.42	38.85	84.65				3,875.05	3,091.29	1,793.54	725.67
CHEROKEE DAY SCHOOL, N. C.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,791.00	9.50					20.75			96.44
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	1,791.00	9.50					20.75			96.44
CHEROKEE BOARDING SCHOOL, OKLA.
Cherokee Orphan Training School, T. C. T., Okla., 1915.	8,185.74	7.92	2.42		$34.93		4,417.19	1,532.99	877.85	459.35
Cherokee Orphan Training School, T. C. T., Okla., repairs and improvements, 1915.						$109.95
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			465.76		.15
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						3.00	11.55		46.76	2.95
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.					.33
Indian school, transportation, 1915		8.92
Total	8,185.74	16.84	468.18		35.41	112.95	4,428.74	1,532.99	924.61	462.30
CHEYENNE AND ARAPAHOE AGENCY.
Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.	10,681.51	107.72			114.39		12.96	39.62	502.50	365.92
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			720.68
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	286.67
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	3,044.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		67.99			138.00
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	299.50	31.77	2.25			3.75	10.00		255.32	21.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						215.83
Proceeds of Cheyenne and Arapahoe reserve lands, Oklahoma.
Cheyennes and Arapahoes in Oklahoma 3 per cent fund.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,530.00						18.94	16.44	317.70
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,155.01
Total	18,936.69	207.48	722.93		252.39	219.58	41.90	56.06	1,165.52	386.92
CHEYENNE AND ARAPAHOE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	12,856.25				100.04		4,648.87	2,639.58		2,181.58
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		12.80
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	316.25	52.00					207.45	102.06	815.46	29.20
Indian school, transportation, 1915		10.00
Proceeds of Cheyenne and Arapahoe reserve lands, Oklahoma.
Total	13,172.50	74.69			100.04		4,856.32	2,741.64	815.46	2,213.78
CHEYENNE RIVER AGENCY.
Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund	17,071.21	1,490.01	2,628.07		49.82	8.25	16,027.68	233.31	1,802.91	1,228.01
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	18,240.34
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.		4.54	3,685.07
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	5,286.98							434.20
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	155.40
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	2,012.26	4.30			7.50	5.00			7.00	8.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						2.00
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,700.00								27.53
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,707.10	45.06
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			238.20
Proceeds C. R. and S. R. Reservation, S. Dak. and N. Dak.	109.74		5.00		148.28
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,766.51	193.14								[b]
Interest on Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund.		16.40
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	50,049.54	1,753.45	6,556.34		205.60	15.25	16,027.68	667.51	1,837.44	1,236.51

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									CHEROKEE BOARDING SCHOOL, N. C.
$211.65	$164.38	$556.24	$3,923.38				$147.61	$29,300.05	Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., 1915.
				$5,134.89	$807.08			5,941.97	Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., repairs and improvements, 1915.
				115.62				115.62	Indian school, Cherokee, N. C., buildings.
9.84			13.91				9.59	36.93	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		6.50						6.50	Relieving and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
221.49	164.38	562.74	3,937.29	5,250.51	807.08		157.11	35,401.07	Total.
									CHEROKEE DAY SCHOOL, N. C.
	87.96		183.87					2,189.52	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					14.75			14.75	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	87.96		183.87		14.75			2,204.27	Total.
									CHEROKEE BOARDING SCHOOL, OKLA.
1.56	271.28	158.73	1,591.57				70.10	17,611.63	Cherokee Orphan Training School, T. C. T., Okla., 1915.
				4,887.33	3,943.21		[1]500.00	9,440.49	Cherokee Orphanage Training School, T. C. T., Okla., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								465.91	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
	3.60		92.37	71.52	29.38	$20.00	41.84	322.97	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		21.90						22.23	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								8.92	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
1.56	274.88	180.63	1,683.94	4,958.85	3,972.59	20.00	611.94	27,872.15	Total.
									CHEYENNE AND ARAPAHOE AGENCY.
		89.24	51.23				33.22	12,088.31	Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								720.68	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					15.69	801.50		817.19	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								286.67	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								3,044.00	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								205.99	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			148.40					148.40	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
356.07			353.67		322.15		16.50	1,611.98	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							215.83	215.83	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
							[2]83.60	83.60	Proceeds of Cheyenne and Arapahoe reserve lands, Oklahoma.
							[2]27.36	27.36	Cheyennes and Arapahoes in Oklahoma 3 per cent fund.
			26.54			300.00		2,209.62	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								3,155.01	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
356.07		89.24	579.84		337.84	1,101.50	160.68	24,614.64	Total.
									CHEYENNE AND ARAPAHOE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	51.67	181.03	486.57				10.25	23,158.84	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				2,747.64	2,221.08	84.00		5,052.72	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	52.26				215.00			280.96	Indian moneys, proceed of labor.
		2.60						2.60	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	30.94	7.90	835.96		496.90		153.30	3,047.51	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								10.00	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
				12,286.36				12,286.36	Proceeds of Cheyenne and Arapahoe reserve lands, Oklahoma.
	134.87	191.53	1,322.53	15,034.00	2,932.98	84.00	163.55	43,838.09	Total.
									CHEYENNE RIVER AGENCY.
97.99		677.22	111,944.59	34,401.64	633.10		3,384.20	191,677.92	Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund.
								18,240.34	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
								3,689.61	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				993.77	1,608.99	360.00		2,962.76	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								5,721.18	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								155.40	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
77.82		19.25	398.81		446.05		59.02	3,045.51	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								2.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
		381.49					32.50	413.99	Reiieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			300.00					3,027.53	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
75.25			1,652.88		52.40		1,285.75	4,818.44	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								238.20	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
.75		.75	31.51				22.54	318.57	Proceeds C. R. and S. R. Reservation, S. Dak. and N. Dak.
2.00			11.55				14.40	2,987.60	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			.30					16.70	Interest on Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			70,302.86				[3]21,016.88	91,319.74	Civilization of the Sioux.
253.72		1,078.71	184,642.50	35,395.41	2,740.54	360.00	25,815.29	328,635.49	Total.

[1] Land. [2] Refund H. E. [3] Treaty benefit payments.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
CHEYENNE RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915	$6,617.15	$111.85	$1,064.58				$4,288.41	$2,603.88	$647.60	$1,531.82
Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	20.25						42.68
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Interest on Sioux fund, Cheyenne River, education.	6,516.66
Total	13,154.06	111.85	1,063.58				4,331.09	2,603.88	647.60	1,531.82
CHEYENNE RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915	1,875.55	13.80					411.62	81.74		302.26
Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund
Total	1,875.55	13.80					411.62	81.74		302.24
CHICAGO WAREHOUSE.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.	19,131.00	389.70	506.26		$462.15	$3.00				122.22
CHILOCCO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Chilocco, Okla., 1915	39,444.67	2.25					20,494.85	10,131.32	56.25	9,229.60
Indian school, Chilocco, Okla., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			2,524.59
Indian school, transportation, 1915		2,695.35
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	2,167.83	44.32	9.22		209.73	23.83	1,265.44	278.39	1,306.75	132.33
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor						107.62
Total	41,612.50	2,741.92	2,533.81		209.73	131.45	21,760.29	10,409.71	1,363.00	9,361.93
COEUR D'ALENE AGENCY.
Support of Coeur d'Alenes, Idaho, 1915	2,714.99
Interest on Coeur d'Alene 3 per cent fund	6,911.44	240.26					173.99	1.20	283.64	202.34
Fulfilling treaties with Coeur d'Alenes
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			636.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						5.00
Special deposits	66.00					25.60
Pay of Indian police, 1915	865.00							65.72	74.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M								7.77
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,800.00								189.09
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	758.61	47.55							47.27
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	180.00	9.60							180.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor						4.00			277.50	279.03
Reimbursement to M. P. Colgrove, superintendent, etc., Idaho.
Coeur d'Alene 3 per cent fund	1,020.50								584.40	40.03
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							1.60
Total	14,400.54	297.41	636.33			34.60	175.59	74.69	1,635.90	521.34
COEUR D'ALENE DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	748.00	38.60	8.60				206.38	461.48		408.85
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	748.00	38.60	8.60				206.38	461.48		408.85
COLORADO RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	6,718.76	455.55	1.20		10.98	10.20	1,573.27	3.23	527.31	119.06
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			4,103.45
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,247.00							18.82	224.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						4.25
Miscellaneous receipts, class 2
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	3,033.50	152.68	3.35		9.51		118.72		1,327.32
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	900.00								385.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00							2.75
Industry among Indians, 1915	3,292.87	90.30	1,218.73
Total	15,912.13	698.53	5,326.82		20.49	14.45	1,691.99	24.80	2,463.63	119.06
COLORADO RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	9,266.01	128.00			10.00		3,884.03	1,494.71	72.00	1,015.82
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						5.25	1.20
Indian school, transportation, 1915		175.00
Total	9,266.01	303.00			10.00	5.25	3,885.23	1,494.71	72.00	1,015.82

Indian Service, 1916—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									CHEYENNE RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
$2.60	$285.72		$957.57		$177.18			$18,287.36	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
		$26.73	28.11	$882.68	3,040.28		$4.60	3,982.40	Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund.
	14.62		80.72		189.33		44.02	391.62	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		13.00						13.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								6,516.66	Interest on Sioux fund, Cheyenne River, education.
2.60	300.34	39.73	1,066.40	882.68	3,406.79		48.62	29,191.04	Total.
									CHEYENNE RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
3.12	258.27	12.89	327.58		91.68			3,378.51	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
			1.80					1.80	Cheyenne River Reservation 3 per cent fund.
3.12	258.27	12.89	329.38		91.68			3,380.31	Total.
									CHICAGO WAREHOUSE.
766.59			44.63			$4,500.00	16.95	25,542.50	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
									CHILOCCO BOARDING SCHOOL.
12.90	889.35	463.66	5,676.47				[1] 65.71	86,467.03	Indian school, Chilocco, Okla., 1915.
					6,988.00			6,988.00	Indian school, Chilocco, Okla., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								2,524.59	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								2,695.35	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
56.26	172.88	14.50	4,792.65		958.91		628.17	12,061.21	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		2.00						2.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			65.69	4,382.11	48.23			4,603.65	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
69.16	1,062.23	480.16	10,534.81	4,382.11	7,995.14		693.88	115,341.83	Total.
									COEUR D'ALENE AGENCY.
		151.79						2,866.78	Support of Coeur d'Alenes, Idaho, 1915.
71.65		175.43	365.52				190.91	8,616.38	Interest on Coeur d'Alene 3 per cent fund.
		37.05						37.05	Fulfilling treaties with Coeur d'Alenes.
								636.33	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				5,168.65	96.28	70.00		5,334.93	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								5.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								91.60	Special deposits.
								1,004.72	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			13.61					21.38	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								1,989.09	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			173.00					1,026.43	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
							3.75	373.35	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
369.50								930.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							6.00	6.00	Reimbursement to M. P. Colgrove, superintendent, etc., Idaho.
			184.51				[2] 1,072.24	2,901.65	Coeur d'Alene 3 per cent fund.
								1.60	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
441.15		364.27	736.64	5,168.65	96.28	70.00	1,272.90	25,926.29	Total.
									COEUR D'ALENE DAY SCHOOL.
	68.83		385.97					2,326.71	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				1,239.75	117.37		[3] 126.50	1,483.62	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	68.83		385.97	1,239.75	117.37		126.50	3,810.33	Total.
									COLORADO RIVER AGENCY.
83.33		487.93	2,383.99				215.00	12,589.90	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								4,103.45	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					550.76			550.76	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		3.60						3.60	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								1,489.82	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
13.71			1.50					19.46	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							12.70	12.70	Miscellaneous receipts, class 2.
11.65			2,870.20				249.00	7,775.93	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								1,285.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		8.50	19.88					751.13	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			18,172.84				[4] 1,147.38	23,922.62	Industry among Indians, 1915.
108.69		500.03	23,448.41		550.76		1,624.58	52,504.37	Total.
									COLORADO RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
19.07	128.78		847.53				23.20	16,889.15	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,090.68			1,090.68	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	37.39		22.25					66.09	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								175.00	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
19.07	166.17		869.78		1,090.68		23.20	18,220.92	Total.

[1] Hospital expense. [2] Refunds, hospital expense. [3] Land, $125; reservation fees, $150. [4] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
COLLINS BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw	$8,963.46	$27.46	$54.88		$29.76	$1.25	$3,709.12	$255.33	$408.75	$105.94
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			422.57
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		7.96	14.47			7.50	31.87
Indian school, transportation, 1915		2.50
Total	8,963.46	37.92	491.92		29.76	8.75	3,800.99	255.33	408.75	105.94
COLVILLE AGENCY.
Proceeds of Colville Reservation, Wash	29,326.12	869.51	1,347.73			7.05	366.38	28.05	2,103.49	894.28
Support of Indians of Colville and Puyallup, etc., 1915.	2,893.98	802.49	243.05		229.52	8.60	171.44		1,153.91	8.75
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			417.12
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			70.36
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,793.01						112.20	215.88
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Payment to Indians of Colville Reservation for lands.		106.55	18.93
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	638.00						29.46	2.21	85.86
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	6,695.50	13.20					468.95		365.21
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	6,660.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	36.00	392.72			22.81	22.50	43.14			57.98
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						15.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	150.00						214.09
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		117.35
Total	48,361.11	2,301.82	2,097.19		252.33	53.15	1,405.66	246.14	3,708.47	961.01
COLVILLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,520.00								190.00
COLVILLE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	8,336.63	216.57	154.52		15.03	8.95	650.46			277.30
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			65.50
Indian school, transportation, 1915		2,018.50
Total	8,336.63	2,235.07	220.02		15.03	8.95	650.46			277.30
CROW AGENCY.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	28,033.94	1,597.77	1,927.18		104.61		2,688.08	51.71	5,387.66	6,362.91
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			2,618.86
Fulfilling treaties with Crows, Montana, 1915	5,975.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	32.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,984.99							395.18
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	197.83	12.75				11.20	7.20		20.00	10.33
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						39.50
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,146.17	66.70
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,698.17
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,259.33
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, benefit objects	2,895.28		2,416.65				649.88		348.82
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, fencing	367.00
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, hospital
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, miscellaneous	2,306.65		234.62				789.14		14,286.34
Total	50,064.36	1,677.22	7,197.31		104.61	50.70	4,134.30	446.89	20,042.82	6,373.24
CROW BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	8,139.99	10.77					1,480.90	504.17	157.00	386.40
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	31.50						27.70	5.24
Indian school, transportation, 1915		55.30
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, school buildings						80.55
Total	8,171.49	66.07				80.55	1,508.60	509.41	157.00	386.40
FRYOR BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	5,468.28	37.25	28.58				1,233.81	853.24		620.17
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4										3.00
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, school buildings
Total	5,468.28	37.25	28.58				1,233.81	853.24		623.17
CROW CREEK AGENCY.
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.	1,748.39	274.14	1,950.42		35.64		8,885.12	13.58	1,592.50	1,191.72
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			3,965.90
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,613.34							213.82	120.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	10,146.01
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor										113.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	774.00							29.81
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,520.66								470.25
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					57

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									COLLINS BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$56.09	$35.38	$1,264.00		$1,277.59		$156.66	$16,408.57	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw.
								422.57	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			220.81				4.00	295.61	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								2.50	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	56.09	35.38	1,494.71		1,277.59		162.66	17,129.25	Total.
									COLVILLE AGENCY.
$86.62		706.20	15,692.50	$1,656.60	6.50		4,614.21	57,705.24	Proceeds of Colville Reservation, Wash.
37.18			129.58				53.35	5,731.85	Support of Indians of Colville and Puyallup, etc., 1915.
								417.12	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				2,839.71	875.86	$456.00		4,241.93	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,121.09	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
		3.75					[1] 140.74	269.97	Payment to Indians of Colville Reservation for lands.
		.71						756.24	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			634.42					8,177.28	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			162.75					6,823.25	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
51.50		68.69	154.67				74.78	924.79	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			7.83				32.60	40.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								15.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								864.09	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								117.35	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
175.30		779.35	16,781.75	4,496.31	882.36	456.00	4,915.68	87,873.63	Total.
									COLVILLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
								3,710.00	Indian schools, support, 1915.
									COLVILLE DAY SCHOOLS.
	214.84	21.44	371.05				24.65	10,291.44	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				243.31	121.77			430.58	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,018.50	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	214.84	21.44	371.05	243.31	121.77		24.65	12,740.52	Total.
									CROW AGENCY.
105.28		1,538.03	6,845.88		642.88		2,802.75	58,088.68	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								2,618.86	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								5,975.00	Fulfilling treaties with Crows, Montana, 1915.
		21.65				5.00	43.73	102.38	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
				2,141.76	860.42			3,002.18	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,380.17	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
120.62		2.50	573.11		104.56			1,060.10	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								30.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
.10								2,212.97	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			360.00					4,058.17	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			250.00					1,509.33	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			14,713.15				[2] 2,398.01	23,421.79	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, benefit objects.
			300.70					667.70	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, fencing.
				2,742.12				2,742.12	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, hospital.
			10,238.33				7,345.16	35,200.24	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, miscellaneous.
226.00		1,562.18	33,281.17	4,883.88	1,607.86	5.00	12,589.65	144,247.19	Total.
									CROW BOARDING SCHOOL.
	91.96	2.29	742.78		631.15		[2] 65.48	12,212.89	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			92.21		1.90			158.55	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								55.30	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
					347.52			428.07	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, school buildings.
	91.96	2.29	834.99		980.57		65.48	12,851.31	Total.
									FRYOR BOARDING SCHOOL.
	118.21	132.24	926.63		125.91		[1] 127.37	9,671.69	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			28.75		5.76		2.00	39.51	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					995.08			995.08	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands, school buildings.
	118.21	132.24	955.38		1,126.75		129.37	10,706.28	Total.
									CROW CREEK AGENCY.
276.73		442.82	1,401.20	2,164.55			2,204.49	22,181.30	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
								3,965.90	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				4,326.22	747.01			5,073.23	Indian School and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,947.16	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								10,146.01	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
				348.34			254.60	715.94	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								803.81	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			135.00					2,125.91	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
54.92		.28						55.77	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.

[1] United States Geological Survey, maintenance geological station.

[2] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditure,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
CROW CREEK AGENCY—continued.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$79.50
Crow Creek 4 per cent fund		$43.84
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	$399.00	22.65	$1.45		$2.68
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	16,369.40	340.63	5,917.77		38.89	79.50	$8,885.12	$257.21	$2,182.75	$1,304.72
CROW CREEK BOARDING SCHOOL.
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.	6,578.07		10.80				1,963.95	2,140.05	616.50	1,445.41
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.			2,494.25				857.55
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	63.00						25.10		52.17
Interest on Sioux fund, Crow Creek education.	3,453.34
Total	10,094.41		2,505.05				2,846.60	2,140.05	668.67	1,445.41
CUSHMAN AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Colville and Puyallup Agencies, etc., 1915.	3,320.00	99.55			9.92		164.00		165.77	178.75
Interest on Puyallup 4 per cent school fund	80.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			957.56
Pay of Indian police, 1915	699.99
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	15.87
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	756.67	115.20
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,680.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	225.56
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	300.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							75.09
Total	7,078.09	214.75	957.56		9.92		239.09		165.77	178.75
CUSHMAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Tacoma, Wash., 1915	22,411.61			$480.76	11.45	51.90	9,385.99	1,364.68	336.50	10,720.78
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							7.25	32.35
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor						42.25	127.75	32.65
Puyallup 4 per cent school fund							3,264.62	5,036.49		187.59
Interest on Puyallup 4 per cent school fund					466.00		108.00			16.50
Proceeds of sale of Puyallup surplus school lands.	5,295.70
Indian school, transportation, 1915		768.47			6.99
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	27,707.31	768.47		480.76	484.44	94.15	12,893.61	6,466.17	336.50	10,924.87
CUSHMAN DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	3,031.84	57.40	21.36				50.17	20.71		311.75
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	3,031.84	57.40	21.36				50.17	20.71		311.75
DIGGER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	5.00	21.90	9.66				783.38	66.52	207.80	24.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			97.34
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian schools support, 1915								31.80
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00							2.57	79.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,000.00								4.60	22.75
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		1.50
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		109.50
Total	1,745.00	132.90	107.00				783.38	100.89	291.90	46.75
EUCHEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Creek general fund, 1915	9,469.00	1.00	29.13	153.78	46.03		4,808.88	472.99	244.35	570.20
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			426.35
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						1.75
Total	9,469.00	1.00	455.48	153.78	46.03	1.75	4,808.88	472.99	244.35	570.20
EUFAULA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Creek general fund, 1915	9,338.95	80.85	13.55	331.38	69.34	6.50	4,957.16	244.27	506.71	441.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			381.99
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	23.05	3.80	1.22			1.35
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	9,362.00	84.65	396.76	331.38	69.34	7.85	4,957.16	244.27	506.71	441.50

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									CROW CREEK AGENCY—continued.
								$79.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			$4,445.00					4,488.84	Crow Creek 4 per cent fund.
							$4.00	429.78	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			7,155.08				[1]7,196.37	14,351.45	Civilization of the Sioux.
$331.65		$443.10	13,136.28	$6,839.11	$747.01		9,659.46	66,532.60	Total.
									CROW CREEK BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$249.10	2.10	636.89	260.78	367.56			14,231.21	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
								3,351.80	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
	4.10		111.15				1.35	236.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					39.00		[2]75.07	3,567.41	Interest on Sioux fund, Crow Creek education.
	213.20	2.10	748.04	260.78	406.56		76.42	21,407.29	Total.
									CUSHMAN AGENCY.
			25.00					3,962.99	Support of Indians of Colville and Puyallup Agencies, etc., 1915.
								80.00	Interest on Puyallup 4 per cent school fund.
								957.56	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			34.48					734.47	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								15.87	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
191.50								1,063.37	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			22.00					1,702.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								225.56	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								300.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
							92.00	92.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								75.09	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
191.50			81.48				92.00	9,208.91	Total.
									CUSHMAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
238.98	554.91	157.82	1,510.17		1,831.64		98.65	49,155.84	Indian school, Tacoma, Wash., 1915.
			220.58				12.70	272.88	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	43.46		416.23					662.34	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	74.76	275.12	1,715.32		930.62		4.50	11,489.02	Puyallup 4 per cent school fund.
2.65		31.15	280.07		4,049.51		60.50	5,014.38	Interest on Puyallup 4 per cent school fund.
								5,295.70	Proceeds of sale of Puyallup surplus school lands.
								775.46	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
		8.00						8.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
241.63	673.13	472.09	4,142.37		6,811.77		176.35	72,673.62	Total.
									CUSHMAN DAY SCHOOL.
	167.79	44.86	511.41				22.75	4,240.04	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					239.80			239.80	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	167.79	44.86	511.41		239.80		22.75	4,479.84	Total.
									DIGGER AGENCY.
		26.02	179.68				225.20	1,549.16	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								97.34	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			152.59		6.00		[3]44.04	202.63	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
					26.25			26.25	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								31.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
			155.75					957.82	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			2.20					1,029.55	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		6.15						7.65	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								109.50	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
		32.17	490.22		32.25		269.24	4,011.70	Total.
									EUCHEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
10.00	226.13	76.98	1,361.95		3,478.14		35.20	20,983.76	Interest on Creek general fund, 1915.
								426.35	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
	1.00	1.25	36.16				2.00	42.16	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
10.00	227.13	78.23	1,398.11		3,478.14		37.20	21,452.27	Total.
									EUFAULA BOARDING SCHOOL.
8.93	177.08	78.56	1,642.70	819.58	2,187.84		[4]544.40	21,449.30	Interest on Creek general fund, 1915.
								381.99	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
30.00	8.91		76.50		126.83			271.66	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		3.90						3.90	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
38.93	185.99	82.46	1,719.20	819.58	2,314.67		544.40	22,106.85	Total.

[1] Treaty benefit payments. [2] Seed. [3] Fruit trees. [4] Insurance, $412.00.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
FALLON AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	$157.50	$36.90								$41.54
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		5.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			$252.81
Pay of Indian police, 1915	592.34							$23.28
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	840.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			4.18
Total	1,589.84	42.40	256.99					23.28		41.54
FALLON DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	4,282.22	79.45	3.37		$1.02		$152.41	13.26		343.86
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	4,282.22	79.45	3.37		1.02		152.41	13.26		343.86
FLANDREAU AGENCY.
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.							765.24
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	60.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	60.00						765.24
FLANDREAU BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., 1915	28,393.79		1,206.78	$416.45	122.86	$15.00	14,188.61	6,047.64	$4.50	4,894.59
Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			3,912.00
Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., special repairs, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	75.70	102.46	98.22	42.20	55.09		143.45	5.40		13.30
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915	7.00	2,393.61			25.12
Total	28,476.49	2,496.07	5,217.00	438.65	203.07	15.00	14,332.06	6,053.04	4.50	4,907.89
FLATHEAD AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Flathead Agency, 1915	4,606.74	976.49	72.77		50.90	47.50	848.16		1,314.22	732.33
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,977.80
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,503.49						5.69	217.76
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	7,247.62	3.75					831.39			20.50
Indian schools, supports, 1915 (tuition)
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		97.65							25.00	103.02
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						32.00
Industry among Indians, 1915		47.85	1,305.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,641.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	3,013.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.								10.99
Proceeds of Flathead patented lands, etc
Proceeds of Flathead Reservation, Mont
Sawmill, etc., Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).	2,070.00
Buildings, etc., Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
Total	23,250.35	1,125.74	3,355.57		50.90	79.50	1,685.24	228.75	1,339.22	855.85
FLATHEAD DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	5,103.59						90.37			104.00
FOND DU LAC AGENCY.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	2,262.25	104.41		12.25	52.74	19.05	544.43		315.43	90.67
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.		50.56	37.88
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	884.17						28.44	62.15
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	398.33	18.14
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915									35.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	900.00	14.35
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	741.67	16.60
Individual Indian money	2,202.73	1.58			5.70	3.50
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, hospital						49.02
Industry among Indians, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	8.00	16.05				1.00			48.81
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						4.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	45.00			33.51		10.25
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		6.92					73.06
Total	7,442.15	228.61	37.88	45.76	58.44	86.82	645.93	62.15	399.27	90.67

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									FALLON AGENCY.
$35.15			$839.14					$1,110.23	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								5.50	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								252.81	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								615.62	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								840.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			22.50				[1]488.22	514.90	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
35.15			861.64				488.22	3,339.06	Total.
									FALLON DAY SCHOOL.
	$45.48	$37.51	335.18				11.25	5,305.01	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$3,245.86	$168.89			3,414.75	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		6.50						6.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	6.50							6.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	51.98	44.01	335.18	3,245.86	168.89		11.25	8,732.76	Total.
									FLANDREAU AGENCY.
			1.32					766.56	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
								60.00	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
		8.15						8.15	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[2]1,409.47	1,409.47	Civilization of the Sioux.
		8.15	1.32				1,409.47	2,244.18	Total.
									FLANDREAU BOARDING SCHOOL.
1.56	377.57	321.05	4,240.73			$90.00	32.50	60,353.63	Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., 1915.
				1,818.65	4,274.54			6,093.19	Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								3,912.00	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			178.20		8,214.36			8,392.56	Indian school, Flandreau, S. Dak., special repairs, 1915.
	173.50	18.75	868.32		3.75		115.65	1,715.79	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		18.25						18.25	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								2,425.73	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
1.56	551.07	358.05	5,287.25	1,818.65	12,492.65	90.00	148.15	82,911.15	Total.
									FLATHEAD AGENCY.
[3]90.45		192.10	1,847.77				[4]371.36	11,450.79	Support of Indians of Flathead Agency, 1915.
								1,977.80	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					106.12			106.12	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,726.94	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			647.64	120.00	499.71			9,370.61	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							620.48	620.48	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
			6.70					232.37	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							4.50	36.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			29,211.73				[5]2,541.99	33,106.37	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			357.00					3,998.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			2,602.77					5,615.77	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
		16.25	221.96					249.29	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[6]1,947.83	1,947.83	Proceeds of Flathead patented lands, etc.
							[6]5,138.77	5,138.77	Proceeds of Flathead Reservation, Mont.
								2,070.00	Sawmill, etc., Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
				16,600.29				16,600.29	Buildings, etc., Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
390.45		208.35	34,895.57	16,720.29	605.83		10,924.93	95,416.54	Total.
									FLATHEAD DAY SCHOOL.
	152.53		77.30					5,533.99	Indian schools, support, 1915.
									FOND DU LAC AGENCY.
10.93			122.38		58.42		48.50	3,641.46	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
								88.44	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					16.52	919.00		935.52	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			7.50					982.26	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								416.47	Determining heirs of deceased Indians (Indian), 1915.
								35.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			459.95					1,374.30	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915.
								758.27	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915.
2.89			36.70					2,253.01	Individual Indian money.
				4,218.00				4,267.02	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, hospital.
			2,914.10					2,914.10	Industry among Indians, 1915.
2.80			47.84		28.18		10.90	163.61	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							4.00	4.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
2.95							18.00	109.71	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								79.98	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
19.48			3,588.47	4,218.00	103.12	919.00	77.40	18,023.15	Total.

[1] Seed.
[2] Treaty benefit payments.
[3] Seed, trees, etc.
[4] Proceeds of sale of land.
[5] Opening Indian lands, General Land Office.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
FOND DU LAC DAY SCHOOLS.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	$4,595.25	$5.42					$86.73	$46.26	$135.02	$390.54
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915										.12
Indian schools, support, 1915
Indian schools, transportation, 1915		150.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	4,595.25	155.42					86.73	46.26	135.02	390.66
FORT APACHE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	9,054.73	368.44	$46.97				4,067.07	10.53	2,693.18	575.67
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	29,522.28	476.65	3,637.64		$21.30		1,196.26		3,474.71	196.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			3,938.81
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,465.00							291.85
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M							61.52	3.42
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,200.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	4,386.48	91.30							1,334.82
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		15.50	12.11			$11.25
Total	46,796.49	951.89	7,635.53		21.30	11.25	5,324.85	305.80	7,502.71	771.67
FORT APACHE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	13,356.07		2,509.68		24.76		5,232.21	699.44	460.68	8.60
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,438.47						5,682.87	3,526.35	582.65	1,555.81
Total	14,794.54		2,509.68		24.76		10,915.08	4,225.79	1,043.33	1,564.41
FORT APACHE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,186.00						465.60	592.32		350.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							298.24	280.02		75.10
Total	2,186.00						763.84	872.34		425.35
FORT BELKNAP AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Fort Belknap Agency, 1915	9,741.94	47.03	475.68		1.36		5,651.77	72.77	15.63	794.64
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			3,236.26
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,606.00							158.13
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	3,246.39	485.39	17.28		13.02				815.11	84.10
Miscellaneous receipts, class 2	142.22		9.30
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	757.24				2.44				109.56	13.75
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,614.45
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	708.00							7.84
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For		17.50
Fort Belknap Reservation 4 per cent fund	5.00
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indians, 1915–16		24.80
Total	19,989.24	574.72	3,738.52		16.82		5,651.77	238.74	940.30	892.49
FORT BELKNAP BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	7,449.37		493.39		.39		2,476.76	1,357.35	313.55	1,016.16
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		16.10
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					.42
Total	7,449.37	16.10	493.39		.81		2,476.76	1,357.35	313.55	1,016.16
FORT BELKNAP DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,045.00						192.61	1.59		102.46
FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Fort Berthold Agency, 1915	8,057.67	96.09	196.96		.82		2,421.14	13.28	705.99	1,218.61
Fort Berthold Reservation 3 per cent fund	2,245.19	97.41	106.33							14.75
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			771.29
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,023.34							192.08
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	4,573.61	496.66	429.02				554.14		68.88	292.24
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,333.00						1.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	660.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	702.78
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		2.00							1.05	13.15
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						8.50
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Total	21,763.59	692.16	1,503.60		.82	8.50	2,976.78	205.36	775.92	1,738.75

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									FOND DU LAC DAY SCHOOLS.
$0.26	$141.10	$121.43	$101.91		$100.69			$5,724.61	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
								.12	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
			99.00					99.00	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								150.00	Indian schools, transportation, 1915.
					92.21			92.21	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.26	141.10	121.43	200.91		192.90			6,065.94	Total.
									FORT APACHE AGENCY.
		292.77	198.40					19,090.76	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
235.75		91.30	11,431.41		1,287.52		$188.45	51,759.27	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								3,938.81	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					795.97			795.97	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,756.85	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
		3.57	30.62					98.53	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			400.00					1,600.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			171.49					5,984.09	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
130.00		8.50	255.85		39.84		2.50	475.55	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
365.75		396.14	14,270.17		2,123.33		190.95	86,667.83	Total.
									FORT APACHE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	266.27		1,767.39				37.50	24,362.60	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$1,241.19	4,481.82			5,723.01	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			59.55		4.25			63.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
2.60	134.66	71.64	1,156.98	169.50	260.11		2.00	14,583.64	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
2.60	400.93	71.64	2,983.92	1,410.69	4,746.18		39.50	44,733.05	Total.
									FORT APACHE DAY SCHOOLS.
	48.87	19.20	616.46					4,278.70	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					77.09			77.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	62.88	11.23	24.09		18.35			770.91	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	111.75	30.43	640.55		96.44			5,126.70	Total.
									FORT BELKNAP AGENCY.
26.01		481.76	952.54				[1]355.00	18,626.13	Support of Indians of Fort Belknap Agency, 1915.
								3,236.26	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					294.44			294.44	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,764.13	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
103.50		50.51	2,922.48				[2]2,370.25	10,108.03	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								151.52	Miscellaneous receipts, class 2.
			100.00					100.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
10.00			217.94				[3]286.87	1,398.46	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		159.00					[4]50.00	209.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			360.00					3,974.45	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			28.74					744.58	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								17.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
								5.00	Fort Belknap Reservation 4 per cent fund.
			75,000.00					75,000.00	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			33,520.00					33,544.80	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
140.11		601.27	113,101.70		294.44		3,072.12	149,342.24	Total.
									FORT BELKNAP BOARDING SCHOOL.
	44.07		606.99				2.00	13,760.03	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,104.20			1,104.20	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								16.10	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
							6.45	6.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	44.07		606.99		1,104.20		8.45	14,887.20	Total.
									FORT BELKNAP DAY SCHOOLS.
	5.16		35.07					1,381.89	Indian schools, support, 1915.
									FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.
146.45		326.99	1,518.13				1.18	14,703.31	Support of Indians of Fort Berthold Agency 1915.
			2,746.84		48.40		488.46	5,747.38	Fort Berthold Reservation 3 per cent fund.
								771.29	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					502.08			502.08	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			101.92					2,317.34	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
197.75			17,290.81				823.45	24,726.56	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		2.90	6.15					3,343.55	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			1.70					661.70	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								702.78	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
		3.40	187.71		4.83		21.60	233.74	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								8.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
		56.00						56.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
344.20		389.29	21,853.26		555.31		1,334.69	53,942.23	Total.

[1] Hospital expenses. [2] Seed, $2,319. [3] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
FORT BERTHOLD BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$5,931.34		$227.69				$1,358.42	$1,504.27		$592.75
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Fulfilling treaties with Indians at Fort Berthold Agency.
Total	5,931.34		227.69				1,358.42	1,504.27		592.75
FORT BERTHOLD DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,085.00						217.11	265.08		275.26
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915		$17.05
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	3,085.00	17.05					217.11	265.08		275.26
FORT BIDWELL AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	1,290.00	30.05	18.22		$5.33		173.06
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		19.40
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,737.62		.95
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	392.66							55.31
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			53.12
Industry among Indians, 1915			556.69
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		36.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	780.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	654.00								$69.50	30.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	786.50	225.57			1.43
Total	3,903.16	311.02	2,365.65		7.71		173.06	55.31	69.50	30.00
FORT BIDWELL BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Fort Bidwell, Cal., 1915	9,934.62	10.85	535.66		12.49		3,071.60	2,041.22	214.00	1,223.52
Indian school, Fort Bidwell, Cal., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		145.65
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							206.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	9,934.62	156.50	535.66		12.49		3,277.60	2,041.22	214.00	1,223.52
FORT BIDWELL DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools support, 1915	2,965.00		22.69				109.16	77.73		199.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,965.00		22.69				109.16	77.73		199.33
FORT HALL AGENCY.
Support Indians of Fort Hall Reservation, Idaho, 1915	12,993.79	101.15		$160.46	19.38		9,678.56	1.85	1,733.63	1,565.42
Support of Bannocks: Employees, Idaho, 1915	3,525.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	225.00		10.67						500.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.		59.40	4,172.14
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of diseases among Indians, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,727.33							212.47
Pay for judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,270.00								62.50
Fulfilling treaties with Fort Hall Indians
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			557.77
Industry among Indians, 1915			1,200.48						1,032.52
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	209.45	23.35			16.34	$11.00			69.81	12.83
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	720.00
Interest on Shoshone and Bannock fund
Total	21,838.57	183.90	6,031.06	160.46	35.72	11.00	9,678.56	214.32	3,418.46	1,578.25
FORT HALL BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	11,672.00	2.10		937.84	9.56		6,283.68	3,260.62	1.88	1,235.97
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915						4.90
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	227.98				2.70	3.60	104.02
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		7.55
Support of Bannocks: Employees, Idaho, 1915	1,200.00
Total	13,099.98	9.65		937.84	12.26	8.50	6,387.70	3,260.62	1.88	1,235.97
FORT LAPWAI AGENCY.
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			768.44
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,555.49							169.03	80.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	912.66
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	992.50	240.95	.94		10.00	240.00			65.00	72.50

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									FORT BERTHOLD BOARDING SCHOOL.
.....	$139.22	$25.60	$221.46	.....	.....	.....	$14.64	$10,015.39	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	$333.91	$75.00	.....	408.91	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,510.00	.....	.....	2,510.00	Fulfilling treaties with Indians at Fort Berthold Agency.
.....	139.22	25.60	221.46	.....	2,843.91	75.00	14.64	12,934.30	Total.
									FORT BERTHOLD DAY SCHOOLS.
81.30	178.81	.....	37.24	.....	.....	.....	.....	4,059.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	96.12	.....	.....	113.17	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	9.25	.....	.....	.....	.....	9.25	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
1.39	178.81	.....	46.49	.....	96.12	.....	.....	4,182.22	Total.
									FORT BIDWELL AGENCY.
2.95	.....	24.64	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,544.25	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	19.40	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,738.57	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	$350.00	.....	.....	.....	350.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	2.90	.....	.....	.....	.....	450.87	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	135.09	.....	.....	.....	.....	188.12	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
.....	.....	.....	2,834.75	.....	.....	.....	[1] 11.50	3,402.94	Industry among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	36.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	780.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	84.00	.....	837.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.50	1,017.00	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
2.95	.....	24.64	2,972.65	350.00	.....	84.00	15.00	10,364.65	Total.
									FORT BIDWELL BOARDING SCHOOL.
217.45	225.63	205.19	2,103.54	.....	.....	.....	4.50	19,800.27	Indian school, Fort Bidwell, Cal., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,660.68	.....	.....	3,500.68	Indian school, Fort Bidwell, Cal., repairs and improvements, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	145.65	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	2.28	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2.28	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	173.62	.....	.....	.....	.....	379.62	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	100.00	.....	75.05	175.05	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
217.45	225.63	207.47	2,277.16	.....	3,760.68	.....	79.55	24,103.55	Total.
									FORT BIDWELL DAY SCHOOLS.
.....	153.81	.91	150.40	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,670.03	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30.71	280.00	.....	310.71	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	153.81	.91	150.40	.....	30.71	280.00	.....	3,980.74	Total.
									FORT HALL AGENCY.
1.70	.....	149.49	3,241.55	.....	.....	.....	1,266.45	30,003.43	Support Indians of Fort Hall Reservation, Idaho, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,525.00	Support of Bannocks: Employees, Idaho, 1915.
70.25	.....	.....	423.80	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,223.72	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4,231.54	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	1,877.47	504.89	.....	.....	2,382.36	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	6.50	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	6.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,939.80	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	470.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,822.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	[2] 20,100.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	20,100.00	Fulfilling treaties with Fort Hall Indians.
.....	.....	.....	1.33	.....	.....	.....	.....	559.10	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
.....	.....	.....	39,050.81	.....	.....	.....	[3] 6,824.11	48,197.92	Industry among Indians, 1915.
241.83	.....	4.41	362.65	.....	524.80	.....	69.82	1,516.23	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	720.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	[4] 5,200.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	5,200.00	Interest on Shoshone and Bannock fund.
313.78	.....	160.40	67,850.14	1,877.47	1,029.69	.....	8,160.38	122,602.16	Total.
									FORT HALL BOARDING SCHOOL.
13.72	183.53	5.38	2,998.72	.....	.....	.....	39.85	26,644.85	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	2,632.50	3,044.13	.....	.....	5,681.53	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	35.74	.....	164.34	.....	334.60	.....	157.60	1,030.58	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	72.00	.....	45.30	.....	.....	117.30	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7.55	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,200.00	Support of Bannocks: Employees, Idaho, 1915.
13.72	219.27	5.38	3,235.06	2,632.50	3,424.03	.....	197.45	34,681.81	Total.
									FORT LAPWAI AGENCY.
.....	.....	30.55	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30.55	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	768.44	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	1,609.58	605.31	96.00	.....	2,310.89	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,804.52	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	912.66	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
87.50	.....	.....	357.03	.....	.....	.....	[5] 57.19	2,123.61	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.

[1] Seed. [2] Bulls and heifers.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
FORT LAPWAI AGENCY—continued.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$16.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	$1,762.52	$27.05
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry.	3,462.00						$39.25
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	289.42		$21.60			9.50
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	5,400.00	315.70	22.75		$33.28		3.52	$5.22	$62.50	$685.32
Total	15,094.59	583.70	813.73		43.28	266.00	42.77	174.25	207.50	757.82
FORT LAPWAI DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	4,465.00	111.80	3.79		79.16		22.38	4.25	66.00	54.65
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	4,465.00	111.80	3.79		79.16		22.38	4.25	66.00	54.65
FORT LAPWAI SANATORIUM.
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	16,514.18	1,356.91	446.61		103.58	48.50	5,905.47	2,419.26	289.83	2,129.70
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,789.05
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915						23.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	232.01				2.34	22.24	50.31	6.70	48.15	11.30
Indian schools support, 1915	1,326.99
Total	18,073.18	1,356.91	2,235.66		105.92	94.24	5,955.78	2,425.96	337.98	2,141.00
FORT M'DERMITT AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	50.00	17.90	91.02		34.39		235.92			55.51
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			239.80		4.25
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor			132.10
Pay of Indian police, 1915	588.50							23.17
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	91.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4										3.27
Total	729.50	17.90	462.92		38.64		235.92	23.17		58.78
FORT M'DERMITT DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	4,631.61	74.41	220.44		5.84		427.98	262.08		413.77
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	4,631.61	74.41	220.44		5.84		427.98	262.08		413.77
FORT MOJAVE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3,438.39	229.50	58.49		9.80		164.15		42.00	22.42
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,869.75
Pay of Indian police, 1915	840.00							37.75
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	816.67								63.00
Bridge across the Colorado River at Topock, Ariz., 1915.						37.10
Dike, Fort Mojave Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable), 1915.	25.00	95.43
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	5,120.06	324.93	1,928.24		9.80	37.10	164.15	37.75	105.00	22.42
FORT MOJAVE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Fort Mojave, Ariz., 1915	13,712.36	304.68	1,494.91		34.80		5,263.31	3,182.76	1,169.90	5,729.97
Indian school, Fort Mojave, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		230.35
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		14.90								23.00
Total	13,712.36	549.93	1,494.91		34.80		5,263.31	3,182.76	1,169.90	5,752.97
FORT PECK AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Fort Peck Agency, Mont., 1915.	16,274.21	315.90	130.55		54.00		8,414.07	7.80	1,315.50	1,345.22
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			4,354.47
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,176.65							106.30	150.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industry among Indians, 1915			751.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,147.00				18.00					482.47
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						6.75				5.85
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,292.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		8.90
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Proceeds of Fort Peck Reservation, Mont
Total	23,057.86	324.80	5,236.02		72.00	6.75	8,414.07	114.10	1,465.50	1,833.54

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									FORT LAPWAI AGENCY—continued.
								$16.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			$78.09					1,867.66	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
						$9.00		729.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			51.75					3,553.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry.
$85.85			27.62				[1] $51.25	485.24	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
103.50		$374.59	303.45					7,309.83	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
276.85		405.14	817.94	$1,609.58	$605.31	105.00	108.44	21,911.90	Total.
									FORT LAPWAI DAY SCHOOL.
	$19.46	30.12	219.85				23.73	5,100.19	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					59.92			59.92	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	19.46	30.12	219.85		59.92		23.73	5,160.11	Total.
									FORT LAPWAI SANATORIUM.
1.50	125.65	818.48	3,292.29	7,108.55	5,552.92		[2] 3,798.05	49,911.48	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								1,789.05	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					1,571.03			1,594.53	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
6.32	9.00	1.50	294.35		104.73		67.05	856.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								1,326.99	Indian schools, support, 1915.
7.82	134.65	819.98	3,586.64	7,108.55	7,228.68		3,865.10	55,478.05	Total.
									FORT M'DERMITT AGENCY.
		77.43	20.03					582.20	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								244.05	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
							49.50	181.60	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								611.67	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								91.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			50.28				[3] 210.00	260.28	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
		12.30	22.87				35.43	73.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		89.73	93.18				294.93	2,044.67	Total.
									FORT M'DERMITT DAY SCHOOL.
	14.82	1.63	276.65				[4] 34.92	6,364.15	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					770.42			770.42	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
							[5] 30.65	30.65	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	14.82	1.63	276.65		770.42		65.57	7,165.22	Total.
									FORT MOJAVE AGENCY.
26.00		52.66	434.63				[6] 180.00	4,058.04	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								1,869.75	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								877.75	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								879.67	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								37.10	Bridge across the Colorado River at Topock, Ariz., 1915.
								120.43	Dike, Fort Mojave Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable), 1915.
140.00								140.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
166.00		52.66	434.63				180.00	8,582.74	Total.
									FORT MOJAVE BOARDING SCHOOL.
169.21	274.39	323.78	1,775.75				[1] 89.31	33,525.13	Indian school, Fort Mojave, Ariz., 1915.
					2,624.98			2,624.98	Indian school, Fort Mojave, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								230.35	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
94.50			314.98		10.50			457.88	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
263.71	274.39	323.78	2,090.73		2,635.48		89.31	36,838.34	Total.
									FORT PECK AGENCY.
156.05		621.96	1,311.09				24.00	29,970.35	Support of Indians of Fort Peck Agency, Mont., 1915.
								4,354.47	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					298.94			298.94	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,432.95	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								108.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			36,431.10				[1] 5,454.20	42,036.30	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			206.20				[7] 100.00	1,953.67	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
13.15		2.80	153.73		68.79		[1] 40.00	297.07	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								3,292.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								8.90	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
		10.10						10.10	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[8] 8,504.48	8,504.48	Proceeds of Fort Peck Reservation, Mont.
169.20		634.86	38,108.12		367.73		14,182.68	93,987.23	Total.

[1] Seed.
[2] Improvements on land.
[3] Seed and trees.
[4] Care of insane.
[5] Horse killed.
[6] Opening Indian land, $8,152.33; refund, H. E., $412.15.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
FORT PECK BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$10,208.07		$83.69		$18.00		$4,368.20	$2,475.97	$653.18	$2,131.03
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							190.70	3.00	6.00
Total	10,208.07		83.69		18.00		4,558.90	2,478.97	659.18	2,131.03
FORT PECK DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	4,074.00	$14.60	50.17				670.27	847.76	.75	299.76
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	4,074.00	14.60	50.17				670.27	847.76	.75	299.76
FORT TOTTEN AGENCY.
Support of Sioux of Devils Lake, N. Dak., 1915	3,550.00	95.95	188.59				128.17		423.63	355.35
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			3,580.77
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	718.00						51.55	73.89	332.14
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	258.00	22.70
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,407.33	14.85
Industrial work and care of timber 1915, M	905.00
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Total	6,838.33	133.50	3,769.36				179.72	73.89	755.77	355.35
FORT TOTTEN BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., 1915	29,412.36	75.30	4,101.75		163.89		14,312.57	8,630.17	692.73	5,429.78
Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		947.60
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4									560.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							296.47
Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., buildings.
Total	29,412.36	1,022.90	4,101.75		163.89		14,609.04	8,630.17	1,252.73	5,429.78
FORT YUMA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	1,000.00	88.45					741.76	53.51	168.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			1,068.44
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,548.67						202.59	17.65
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Industry among Indians, 1915			516.99				884.75		730.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,900.00								116.21	139.70
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915		68.27
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	95.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	855.00
Total	6,118.67	156.72	1,585.34				1,829.10	71.16	1,014.46	139.70
FORT YUMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	13,810.11	25.00		$1,161.65	68.70		6,403.59	3,491.77	220.00	635.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		170.35
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			2.08		.69		27.60		10.00	1.50
Total	13,810.11	195.35	2.08	1,161.65	69.39		6,431.19	3,491.77	230.00	636.50
GENOA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., 1915	27,842.76	5.82	870.11		38.60		13,254.48	7,116.62	356.10	4,046.80
Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., repairs and improvements, 1915					4.10
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			7,203.92		5.42
Indian school, transportation, 1915		2,768.35			30.36
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	149.41	524.81	338.70		127.70	$12.00	646.19	64.35	88.10
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor			55.30		8.55		139.45	267.50	72.57
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., industrial building.
Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., laundry
Total	27,992.17	3,298.98	8,468.03		214.73	12.00	14,040.12	7,448.47	516.77	4,046.80
GRAND PORTAGE AGENCY.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	2,168.00	251.34			41.43	20.29	520.84	158.58	298.58	125.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			380.80
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	360.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry	682.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry	776.35
Total	3,986.35	251.34	380.80		41.43	20.29	520.84	158.58	298.58	125.00

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									FORT PECK BOARDING SCHOOL.
50.05	$116.59	.....	$1,015.62	.....	.....	.....	.....	$21,070.40	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	$2,090.04	$1,136.18	.....	.....	3,235.82	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	$3.10	396.80	.....	39.31	.....	$190.06	828.97	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
50.05	116.59	3.10	1,412.42	2,090.04	1,175.49	.....	190.06	25,135.19	Total.
									FORT PECK DAY SCHOOLS.
2.08	90.38	.....	87.03	.....	.....	.....	.....	6,136.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	120.33	.....	.....	120.33	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	1.00	.....	.....	.....	17.15	18.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
2.08	90.38	.....	88.03	.....	120.33	.....	17.15	6,275.28	Total.
									FORT TOTTEN AGENCY.
.....	.....	58.57	258.53	.....	.....	.....	.....	5,058.79	Support of Sioux of Devils Lake, N. Dak., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,580.77	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	673.89	$48.00	.....	721.89	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,175.58	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
72.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	352.70	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	358.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,780.18	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	150.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,055.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7,680.56	7,680.56	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
72.00	.....	58.57	766.53	.....	673.89	48.00	7,680.56	21,405.47	Total.
									FORT TOTTEN BOARDING SCHOOL.
11.38	947.40	117.80	4,266.32	.....	.....	.....	308.59	68,470.04	Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	5,764.39	.....	.....	5,764.39	Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	947.60	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	86.85	.....	49.00	.....	45.00	740.85	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	78.90	.....	.....	375.37	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	496.88	.....	.....	.....	496.88	Indian school, Fort Totten, N. Dak., buildings.
11.38	947.40	117.80	4,353.17	496.88	5,892.29	.....	353.59	76,795.13	Total.
									FORT YUMA AGENCY.
50.25	.....	504.45	763.30	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,369.72	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,068.44	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,768.91	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	1,671.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,671.00	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
.....	.....	.....	775.75	.....	.....	.....	.....	775.75	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
.....	.....	.....	22,029.40	.....	.....	.....	[1] 499.72	24,661.02	Industry among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	20.54	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,176.45	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	720.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	188.38	.....	.....	.....	.....	256.65	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	70.43	.....	.....	70.43	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	95.00	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	855.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
50.25	.....	504.45	25,448.37	.....	70.43	.....	499.72	37,488.37	Total.
									FORT YUMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
1.56	444.38	5.85	2,422.84	.....	.....	.....	307.16	28,997.61	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,347.93	.....	.....	1,347.93	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	170.35	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	207.93	.....	77.97	.....	.....	327.77	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
1.56	444.38	5.85	2,630.77	.....	1,425.90	.....	307.16	30,843.66	Total.
									GENOA BOARDING SCHOOL.
246.15	848.90	320.81	4,499.08	.....	.....	.....	311.50	59,757.79	Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	5,535.13	4,930.31	.....	.....	10,469.54	Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., repairs and improvements, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7,209.34	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,798.71	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
5.00	237.03	3.65	1,467.64	.....	63.19	.....	891.76	4,619.53	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
31.65	.....	.....	113.73	.....	72.50	.....	243.87	1,008.12	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	2.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2.00	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease, among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	2,605.71	.....	.....	.....	2,605.71	Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., industrial building.
.....	.....	.....	.....	3,006.08	.....	.....	.....	3,006.08	Indian school, Genoa, Nebr., laundry.
285.80	1,085.93	326.46	6,080.45	11,146.92	5,066.00	.....	1,447.13	91,476.82	Total.
									GRAND PORTAGE AGENCY.
111.93	.....	155.10	1,195.07	.....	.....	.....	164.55	5,210.71	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	380.80	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	236.92	.....	.....	236.92	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	360.00	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	18.09	.....	.....	.....	.....	700.09	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry.
.....	.....	.....	67.44	.....	.....	.....	.....	843.79	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Forestry.
111.93	.....	155.10	1,280.60	.....	236.92	.....	164.55	7,732.31	Total.

[1] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
GRAND PORTAGE DAY SCHOOL.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	$2,288.25						$63.70	$161.47	$339.38	$119.75
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915										125.87
Miscellaneous receipts, Class 4										18.75
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,288.25						63.70	161.47	339.38	264.37
GREENVILLE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915		$19.60					16.20
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915		7.60					37.93
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			$299.46
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	425.00								150.00
Total	425.00	27.20	299.46				54.13		150.00
GREENVILLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian School, Greenville, Cal., 1915	8,290.41	17.05	716.83	$239.47	$48.85		3,142.14	1,368.09	329.00	922.60
Indian School, Greenville, Cal., repairs and improvements, 1915
Indian School, transportation, 1915		231.58
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	120.00
Indian School, Greenville, Cal., buildings
Total	8,410.41	248.63	716.83	239.47	48.85		3,142.14	1,368.09	329.00	922.60
HASKELL BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian School, Lawrence, Kans., 1915	50,599.56	81.17		2,520.00	218.52		27,439.40	13,349.03	3,282.28	10,744.77
Indian School, Lawrence, Kans., repairs and improvements, 1915
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915		7.01	2,636.06
Miscellaneous receipts, Class 4	104.30	47.50	18.88		37.50		309.03	88.55		22.25
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		25.43
Indian School, transportation, 1915		5,452.47			10.58
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	50.00
Indian School, Lawrence, Kans., drainage
Indian School, Lawrence, Kans., gymnasium
Total	50,753.86	5,613.58	2,654.94	2,520.00	266.60		27,748.43	13,437.58	3,282.28	10,767.02
HAVASUPAI AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	1,302.22						34.91	43.06	26.46	21.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			209.06
Pay of Indian police, 1915	300.00							19.68	20.00
Total	1,602.22		209.06				34.91	62.74	46.46	21.50
HAVASUPAI DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	2,176.67	47.05	210.91				96.47	438.13	498.74	91.62
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,176.67	47.05	210.91				96.47	438.13	498.74	91.62
HAYWARD AGENCY.
Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915		75.00			25.00		297.95	22.41	143.03	26.15
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			1,285.13
Pay of Indian police, 1915	480.00							41.08
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$1.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		106.25				73.65
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Individual Indian money	506.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915							225.48	2.15		4.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry	1,301.00	95.22				41.86
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	955.83	12.88							115.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	189.60
Total	3,432.43	289.35	1,285.13		25.00	117.01	523.43	65.64	258.03	30.15
HAYWARD BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Hayward, Wis., 1915	15,425.20	6.98	292.50	500.00	72.00		6,795.73	5,063.91	639.38	2,969.21
Indian school, Hayward, Wis., repairs and improvements, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							10.00	27.00	26.00	70.80
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor										99.54
Indian school, transportation, 1915		147.88
Total	15,425.20	154.86	292.50	500.00	72.00		6,805.73	5,090.91	665.38	3,139.55

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									GRAND PORTAGE DAY SCHOOL.
$0.62	$71.51	$11.46	$331.26		$9.33		$26.50	$3,423.23	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
	.75				24.82		10.00	161.44	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
								18.75	Miscellaneous receipts, Class 4.
					457.49			457.49	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.62	72.26	11.46	331.26		491.64		36.50	4,060.91	Total.
									GREENVILLE AGENCY.
							3.50	39.30	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								45.53	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								299.46	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
						$181.00		756.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
						181.00	3.50	1,140.29	Total.
									GREENVILLE BOARDING SCHOOL.
103.50	186.44	129.98	1,003.00				28.50	16,525.86	Indian school, Greenville, Cal., 1915.
					3,691.98			3,691.98	Indian school, Greenville, Cal., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								231.58	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
		6.50						126.50	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
				$5,964.00				5,964.00	Indian school, Greenville, Cal., buildings.
103.50	186.44	136.48	1,003.00	5,964.00	3,691.98		28.50	26,539.92	Total.
									HASKELL BOARDING SCHOOL.
190.70	2,080.63	399.29	11,969.17				[1]162.35	123,036.87	Indian school, Lawrence, Kans., 1915.
				172.35	9,006.43			9,178.78	Indian school, Lawrence, Kans., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								2,643.07	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
216.68	222.85	63.40	1,295.74		340.12		192.02	2,964.82	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		2.00						2.00	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								25.43	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								5,463.05	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
								50.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
							[2]35.25	35.25	Indian school, Lawrence, Kans., drainage.
				18,545.64				18,545.64	Indian school, Lawrence, Kans., gymnasium.
407.38	2,303.48	464.69	13,264.91	18,717.99	9,352.55		389.62	161,944.91	Total.
									HAVASUPAI AGENCY.
		69.65	138.57				[1]19.00	1,655.37	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								209.06	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								339.68	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
		69.65	138.57				19.00	2,204.11	Total.
									HAVASUPAI DAY SCHOOL.
	12.33	30.50	72.42				3.00	3,677.84	Indian schools support, 1915.
					32.62			32.62	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	12.33	30.50	72.42		32.62		3.00	3,710.46	Total.
									HAYWARD AGENCY.
		209.15	9.34				[1]132.68	940.71	Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915.
								1,285.13	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								521.08	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								1.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
							[4]23.87	23.87	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								179.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
					100.00			100.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								506.00	Individual Indian money.
		1.35					[5]115.69	348.67	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			300.00					1,738.08	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.
			20.00					1,103.71	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
								189.60	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
		210.50	329.34		100.00		272.24	6,938.25	Total.
									HAYWARD BOARDING SCHOOL.
3.35	213.51	161.11	1,617.68				211.01	33,971.57	Indian school, Hayward, Wis., 1915.
					4,990.53			4,990.53	Indian school, Hayward, Wis., repairs and improvements, 1915.
			98.18		55.54		26.63	314.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		2.60						2.60	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								99.54	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								147.88	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
3.35	213.51	163.71	1,715.86		5,046.07		237.64	39,526.27	Total.

[1] Seed. [2] Drainage assessment. [3] Hospital and burial expenses. [4] Burial expenses. [5] Hospital expenses

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
HAYWARD DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$1,050.00						$156.27	$269.00		$60.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	1,050.00						156.27	269.00		60.00
HOOPA VALLEY AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	4,110.53	$979.82	$512.60		$31.39		837.09	.21	$180.00	61.59
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			410.96
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,016.00						60.33	91.76	209.98
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	161.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	875.00	26.15
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.	2,112.28
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00							3.37
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4										15.41
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					3.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		25.50
Industry among Indians, 1915			175.27						189.68
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			221.64
Total	8,874.81	1,031.47	1,320.47		34.39		897.42	95.34	579.66	75.03
HOOPA VALLEY BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	13,467.31	154.30	1,577.27		40.46		5,963.01	2,791.00	1,979.48	829.87
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Indian school, transportation, 1915		163.25
Total	13,467.31	317.55	1,577.27		40.46		5,963.01	2,791.00	1,979.48	829.87
JICARILLA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	12,926.17	57.14			3.92	$200.03	9,740.81	170.12	320.00	883.22
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			2,674.49
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,237.01							153.38
Industry among Indians, 1915–16		3.80
Industry among Indians, 1915		55.85					625.91		342.48	3.28
Miscellaneous receipts, class 2
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	2,619.61	142.32	362.32		4.95	7.00	347.33		12.00	194.15
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,561.67	9.20							268.80
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	641.67							5.15
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.	6,612.92	52.75
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	168.61	63.47
Proceeds of timber, Jicarilla Reservation, New Mexico.	231.24
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	26,998.90	384.73	3,036.81		8.87	207.03	10,714.05	328.65	943.28	1,080.65
JACARILLA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	8,378.17	28.03			5.21		3,574.49	1,390.32	492.99	2,500.53
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915					2.26
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							16.55
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	110.50
Total	8,488.67	28.03			7.47		3,591.04	1,390.32	492.99	2,500.53
JICARILLA DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915							91.71	320.08		2.57
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total							91.71	320.08		2.57
JONES BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw	10,880.13	32.13			52.40	11.55	4,812.29	1,955.46	539.40	724.62
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			370.42
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			1.35				18.46
Total	10,880.13	32.13	371.77		52.40	11.55	4,830.75	1,955.46	539.40	724.62
KAIBAB AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3,716.50	42.07	188.59				80.00		329.03	4.03
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			142.49
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	136.67							28.97
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		9.00				5.00			87.50	4.50
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									HAYWARD DAY SCHOOL.
	$36.33	$0.81						$1,572.41	Indian schools, support, 1915.
						$100.00		100.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	36.33	.81				100.00		1,672.41	Total.
									HOOPA VALLEY AGENCY.
$3.85		421.45	$172.07					7,310.60	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								410.96	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					$167.26			167.26	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			1.00					1,379.07	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								161.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								901.15	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			14.63					2,126.91	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.
								603.37	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
		9.50	57.45		14.40		$1.00	95.79	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								3.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		19.50						19.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								25.50	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			2,581.50					2,946.45	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			1,101.50					1,323.14	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
3.85		450.45	3,928.15		181.66		1.00	17,473.70	Total.
									HOOPA VALLEY BOARDING SCHOOL.
45.00	254.20		1,905.35				108.94	29,116.19	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$740.00	1,606.68			2,346.68	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
1.25	3.91		68.84		5.26		18.50	97.76	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								163.25	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
46.25	258.11		1,974.19	740.00	1,611.94		127.44	31,723.88	Total.
									JACARILLA AGENCY.
		149.80	2,676.79				[1] 198.00	27,326.00	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								2,674.49	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					151.27			151.27	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,390.39	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			61,463.03					61,466.83	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
			24,635.22				20.90	25,683.64	Industry among Indians, 1915.
							.40	.40	Miscellaneous receipts, class 2.
			2,437.75				840.00	6,967.63	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			438.75					2,278.42	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			214.64					861.46	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			177.89					6,843.56	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.
								232.08	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								231.24	Proceeds of timber, Jicarilla Reservation, New Mexico.
					1,441.70			1,441.70	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
		149.80	92,044.07		1,592.97		1,059.30	138,549.11	Total.
									JICARILLA BOARDING SCHOOL.
67.50	120.66	38.90	1,730.87				173.84	18,510.51	Indian schools support, 1915.
					2,763.26			2,765.52	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		3.25						3.25	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							1.50	18.05	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	10.10		263.56					384.16	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
67.50	130.76	42.15	1,994.43		2,763.26		175.34	21,681.49	Total.
									JICARILLA DAY SCHOOLS.
.13	40.97		26.93					482.39	Indian schools support, 1915.
					17.96			17.96	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.13	40.97		26.93		17.96			500.35	Total.
									JONES BOARDING SCHOOL.
	108.15	74.69	1,489.51	378.30	1,514.76		171.62	22,745.01	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw.
								370.42	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
	3.29		307.23		1.70			332.03	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	111.44	74.69	1,796.74	378.30	1,516.46		171.62	23,447.46	Total.
									KAIBAB AGENCY.
		101.24	184.99				24.00	4,670.47	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								142.49	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
							[2] 12.75	12.75	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, forestry.
								165.64	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			4.95		3.60			114.55	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
				731.00	8.97			739.97	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.

[1] Seed.

[2] Trees.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
KAIBAB AGENCY—continued.
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	$97.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	521.25	$18.60
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Industry among Indians, 1915		28.50
Total	4,555.42	98.17	$331.08			$5.00	$80.00	$28.97	$416.53	$8.55
KAIBAB DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,439.60	29.40	54.85		$24.00		75.82	196.34		55.93
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	1,439.60	29.40	54.85		24.00		75.82	196.34		55.93
KESHENA AGENCY.
Interest on Menominee log fund	29,415.20					116.02	2,388.63	180.35	1,244.74	1,142.65
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			956.31
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915	325.00	17.12
Fulfilling treaties with Menominees, logs
Fulfilling treaties with Menominees, proceeds of lands.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	380.00								95.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For		55.86
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,142.50						200.38	210.06
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	170.66
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	6.50						7.46
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	600.25	8.89
Interest on Menominee fund	676.50	45.26	372.70		83.25		685.69
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Total	33,716.61	127.13	1,329.01		83.25	116.02	3,282.16	390.41	1,340.24	1,142.65
KESHENA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Menominee log fund	14,772.41						2,825.07	4,552.08		4,027.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	224.49		2.16				62.64	7.79	68.57	42.52
Interest on Menominee fund	859.83	24.59	314.23				39.99	2.25	20.00	5.65
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor										35.00
Indian schools, support, 1915
Total	15,856.73	24.59	316.39				2,927.70	4,562.12	88.57	4,110.50
KESHENA DAY SCHOOL.
Interest on Menominee log fund	1,321.50						13.37	35.07
Interest on Menominee fund	47.00
Total	1,368.50						13.37	35.07
MENOMINEE SAW MILLS.
Menominee log fund	223,784.61	329.87	134.17		311.03	474.50	25,190.34	1,456.29	16,744.14	7,083.45
KICKAPOO AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	780.00	99.19
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			585.11
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,000.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						6.50
Total	1,780.00	99.19	585.11			6.50
KICKAPOO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Kickapoo Reservation, Kans. 1915.	7,972.50		158.77		72.40		2,046.86	1,283.51	3.75	865.24
Indian school, Kickapoo Reservation, Kans., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	43.07						168.51		360.17	50.81
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		12.60					115.50			31.25
Total	8,015.57	12.60	158.77		72.40		2,330.87	1,283.51	363.92	947.30
KICKAPOO DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	586.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					18.00		1.35			100.00
Total	586.00				18.00		1.35			100.00
KIOWA AGENCY.
Support of Wichitas and affiliated bands, Oklahoma, 1915.	3,245.25	397.01	10.09		91.44	3.46			62.22	59.08
Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund, 1915.	14,641.01	800.52	30.78	$505.67	397.00	18.79	8.04		203.55	1,661.79
Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund
Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund, hospital.
Kiowa Agency Hospital 4 per cent fund	66.67						422.81	249.66

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									KAIBAB AGENCY—continued.
		$6.50						$103.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
$47.19			$93.78					680.73	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1,100.00					1,100.00	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
								28.50	Industry among Indians, 1915.
47.19		107.74	1,383.72	$731.00	$12.57		$36.75	7,842.60	Total.
									KAIBAB DAY SCHOOL.
.30	$122.60	6.25	68.78				1.75	2,075.62	Indian schools support, 1915.
			12.15		373.33	$30.00		403.33	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			1.25					12.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								1.25	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.30	122.60	6.25	82.18		373.33	30.00	1.75	2,492.35	Total.
									KESHENA AGENCY.
106.73		340.23	11,224.33	5,104.40	453.18		3,275.06	54,991.52	Interest on Menominee log fund.
								956.31	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					334.19			676.31	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
					44.25			44.25	Fulfilling treaties with Menominees, logs.
			10.25					10.25	Fulfilling treaties with Menominees, proceeds of lands.
			66.40					541.90	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								55.86	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
								2,552.94	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								170.66	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
1.60		1.00	5.02		8.65		10.95	81.18	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			1,355.46		61.65		9.29	2,035.54	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
3.60		103.13	1,282.37		5.50			3,258.00	Interest on Menominee fund.
							[1] 1,922.03	1,922.03	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
111.93		444.36	13,983.83	5,104.40	907.42		5,217.33	67,296.75	Total.
									KESHENA BOARDING SCHOOL.
69.13	455.17		2,688.60		297.20			29,686.99	Interest on Menominee log fund.
					.85			.85	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
1.10			142.26		170.72		6.05	728.30	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		5.10	253.79		1,771.78		1.44	3,298.65	Interest on Menominee fund.
		5.63	106.92		146.55			294.10	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1,236.92				[1] 116.57	1,353.49	Indian schools, support, 1915.
70.23	455.17	10.73	4,428.49		2,387.10		124.06	35,362.38	Total.
									KESHENA DAY SCHOOL.
.52	466.77		105.08		18.60			1,960.91	Intatest on Menominee log fund.
								47.00	Interest on Menominee fund.
.52	466.77		105.08		18.60			2,007.91	Total.
									MENOMINEE SAW MILLS.
402.54		736.36	27,452.43	2,097.39	3,407.80		[2] 17,600.05	327,204.97	Menominee log fund.
									KICKAPOO AGENCY.
								879.19	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			212.00					212.00	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
								585.11	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			193.05					1,193.05	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								6.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			405.05					2,875.85	Total.
									KICKAPOO BOARDING SCHOOL.
165.80	96.05	69.96	1,206.50				4.40	13,945.74	Indian school, Kickapoo Reservation, Kans., 1915.
				1,916.80	655.88			2,572.68	Indian school, Kickapoo Reservation, Kans., repairs and improvements, 1915.
	3.60		1,639.85		21.65		[1] 119.65	2,407.31	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	16.00		82.65	336.97	32.50			627.47	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
165.80	115.65	69.96	2,929.00	2,253.77	710.03		124.05	19,553.20	Total.
									KICKAPOO DAY SCHOOL.
	.75							586.75	Indian schools, support, 1915.
	4.05	5.60	99.30		16.80			245.10	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	4.80	5.60	99.30		16.80			831.85	Total.
									KIOWA AGENCY.
41.06		446.05	192.11				38.15	4,585.92	Support of Wichitas and affiliated bands, Oklahoma, 1915.
269.09		202.61	1,378.59				37.00	19,554.44	Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund, 1915.
							[3] 110.94	110.94	Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund.
				[4] 1,050.00				1,050.00	Apache, Kiowa, and Comanche 4 per cent fund, hospital.
65.09		558.58	912.28		1,893.39		3,132.95	7,301.34	Kiowa Agency Hospital 4 per cent fund.

[1] Seed.
[2] Insurance, $16,311.06; refunds, $956.67; burial expenses, $98.20; seed, $190.64; miscellaneous, $43.68.
[3] Refund H. E.
[4] Superintendent of construction.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
KIOWA AGENCY—continued.
Interest on Kiowa Agency Hospital 4 per cent fund.	$56.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			$3,184.02
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	4,151.98
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition) (should be charged to Ponca).
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	2,723.41								$175.19	$73.75
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	2,378.83								157.43
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	42.85				$1.10
Proceeds of Wichita ceded lands
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	352.50	$171.94				$116.90
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	3,090.50
Release and settlement of Apache Indians held as prisoners of war at Fort Sill, Okla.	76.00								147.65	6.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	30,825.00	1,369.47	3,224.89	$305.67	480.54	139.15	$430.85	$249.66	746.04	1,200.62
ANADARKO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	7,700.29	70.12	154.89	350.51	53.67		4,313.48	2,186.25	918.80	768.68
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	71.10		3.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							59.10
Total	7,771.39	70.12	157.89	350.51	53.67		4,372.58	2,186.25	918.80	768.68
FORT SILL BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	11,636.56	184.54	176.29	714.30	81.35		5,103.60	3,069.56	13.00	1,537.09
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	269.98		2.14			1.50	21.00		216.50	.65
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	598.33					5.50	69.77
Total	12,504.87	184.54	178.43	714.30	81.35	7.00	5,194.37	3,069.56	229.50	1,537.74
RAINY MOUNTAIN BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	10,988.39	178.80	728.28		36.91		6,058.26	2,987.44	351.25	1,486.45
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	327.26		27.85			12.65	33.00		5.00	12.90
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor						1.50	37.45	86.31
Indian school, transportation, 1915		9.54
Total	11,315.65	188.34	756.13		36.91	14.15	6,128.71	3,073.75	356.25	1,499.35
RIVERSIDE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	9,913.19	70.14	118.35	235.39	20.51		5,056.79	2,575.42	133.84	1,317.79
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	64.71					4.00	12.00	.60	20.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	117.85	17.74
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	25.00						60.00
Total	10,120.75	87.88	118.35	235.39	20.51	4.00	5,128.79	2,576.02	153.84	1,317.79
KLAMATH AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Klamath Agency, 1915	5,099.00		99.31		4.87				120.00	813.50
Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.			1,314.46		3.99
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,214.90							158.81
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	31.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	2,997.50								120.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,414.00									30.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	4,195.48	64.45				15.00	228.91		263.62
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	6,691.52	204.78	.52		13.46		337.58	.42	441.64	327.05
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	2.00		8.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						19.30
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allotees, 1915.	2,290.84	148.33
Industry among Indians, 1915
Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency, Oreg.
Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency for lands, etc.	153.33		14.00						120.95
Total	25,090.07	417.56	1,436.29		22.32	34.30	566.49	159.23	1,066.21	1,170.55
KLAMATH BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	10,553.59		431.89		1.30		2,796.57	1,357.15	60.00	915.05
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	9.25	53.63	1.30		8.46	37.70	212.70		12.00	16.87
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		2.00					32.70	91.65
Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency, Oreg., for lands.
Total	10,562.84	55.63	433.19		9.76	37.70	3,041.97	1,448.80	72.00	931.92

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									KIOWA AGENCY—continued.
								$56.00	Interest on Kiowa Agency Hospital 4 per cent fund.
								3,184.02	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					$3,249.66	$266.25		3,515.91	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								4,151.98	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
							[1] $375.15	375.15	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition) (should be charged to Ponca).
			$161.96			349.50		3,483.81	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			1,927.21					4,463.47	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
$5.00					135.59		1.00	185.54	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							[2] 144.95	144.95	Proceeds of Wichita ceded lands.
			121.77				2.95	766.06	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
71.60							5.00	3,167.10	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			1,736.81	$8,937.30			[3] 69,812.35	80,716.15	Release and settlement of Apache Indians held as prisoners of war at Fort Sill, Okla.
		$34.00						34.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
451.75		1,241.24	6,430.73	9,987.30	5,278.64	615.75	73,660.44	136,846.74	Total.
									ANADARKO BOARDING SCHOOL.
42.85	$311.77	11.25	832.04				139.66	17,854.26	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					151.71	400.00		551.71	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			78.04		126.51		14.50	293.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			39.00				28.79	126.89	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
42.85	311.77	11.25	949.08		278.22	400.00	182.95	18,826.01	Total.
									FORT SILL BOARDING SCHOOL.
12.50	307.46	148.06	4,655.41				38.95	27,678.67	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,226.58			1,226.58	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		2.80	304.20		1,098.30		177.20	2,094.27	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							28.79	702.39	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
12.50	307.46	150.86	4,959.61		2,324.88		244.94	31,701.91	Total.
									RAINY MOUNTAIN BOARDING SCHOOL.
12.50	205.60	158.10	1,318.92				86.37	24,597.27	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				3,339.20	3,632.42			6,371.62	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		11.10	258.41		943.60		15.00	1,646.17	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			165.00				28.79	319.05	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								9.54	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
12.50	205.60	169.20	1,742.33	3,339.20	3,975.42		130.16	32,943.65	Total.
									RIVERSIDE BOARDING SCHOOL.
12.50	327.11	2.18	2,794.60				121.76	22,699.57	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					5,114.48			5,114.48	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	1.80	.35	284.50		183.41		75.72	647.09	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		21.00						156.59	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							17.71	102.71	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
12.50	328.91	23.53	3,079.10		5,297.89		215.19	28,720.44	Total.
									KLAMATH AGENCY.
			143.95					6,280.63	Support of Indians of Klamath Agency, 1915.
								1,318.45	Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.
				2,264.51	412.62			2,677.13	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			10.00					2,383.71	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								31.50	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								3,117.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
			60.00					1,504.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			656.50				42.50	5,466.46	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
51.66		246.49	2,470.06		150.60		66.46	11,002.24	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			16.65		3.75			30.40	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								19.30	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
171.89								2,611.06	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			52.45					52.45	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			5.24					5.24	Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency, Oreg.
			3,457.45				[4] 291.85	4,037.58	Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency for lands, etc.
223.55		246.49	6,872.30	2,264.51	566.97		400.81	40,537.65	Total.
									KLAMATH BOARDING SCHOOL.
	204.43	25.67	804.39				158.85	17,308.89	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,540.52			1,540.52	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	1.16		968.86		183.97		18.75	1,524.65	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			331.00		484.09			941.44	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
					9.00			9.00	Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency, Oreg., for lands.
	205.59	25.67	2,104.25		2,217.58		177.60	21,324.50	Total.

[1] Tuition. [2] Refund H. E. [3] Land, $69,670; seed, time, etc., $142.25. [4] United States Geological Survey maintenance of gauging station.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
KLAMATH DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$5,260.33		$4.00				$11.04	$28.96		$312.24
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915									$15.60	44.58
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency for lands, etc.
Total	5,260.33		4.00				11.04	28.96	15.60	356.82
LAC DU FLAMBEAU AGENCY.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	240.00						711.35	81.00
Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915			2,593.62
Pay of Indian police, 1915	350.67							50.15	117.96
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	780.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	550.00						50.00		117.97
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,477.68
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	50.00				$0.49					221.26
Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915							61.50
Individual Indian money	136.67
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	750.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	4,419.02		2,593.62		.49		822.85	131.15	235.93	221.26
LAC DU FLAMBEAU BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	12,379.83	$28.01			2.29		3,857.24	1,656.13	1,383.56	1,939.32
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	19.82					$5.50	4.50		192.17	40.94
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		33.10
Total	12,399.65	61.11			2.29	5.50	3,861.74	1,656.13	1,575.73	1,939.26
LA POINTE AGENCY.
Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915	2,460.00	25.36	9.47		36.00		457.31		125.40	82.30
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			39.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Diking, etc., Bad River Reservation, Wis. (reimbursement), 1915	[1] 7,688.73
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,560.00								34.65
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,996.00								91.00	65.78
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	23.33	99.40
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	1,929.33	556.10			29.24				6.40	2.05
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor									108.50
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915		15.72
Individual Indian money	4,166.67	96.14
Proceeds of timber, cemetery site, etc., La Pointe Chippewas, Wis.	228.25
Total	20,052.31	792.72	48.80		65.24		457.31		365.95	150.33
LA POINTE DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	3,855.00						45.91	7.57
LEECH LAKE AGENCY.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	13,057.80	809.35	39.79		23.56		706.72		1,261.17	1,142.16
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			710.76
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	52.50	19.94
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,820.67							245.97	175.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	146.04
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	108.33	116.45
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,228.50	66.67
Industry among Indians, 1915
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund		95.91					96.60			44.25
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Individual Indian money	4,919.00	415.90				6.00
Chippewa in Minnesota fund	2,425.00	36.30
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					4.50
Total	24,757.84	1,560.52	750.55		28.06	6.00	803.32	245.97	1,436.17	1,186.41
LEECH LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	8,679.30		389.87				1,975.85	1,707.92	962.18	1,661.29
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							1.92		105.00	13.10
Indian school, transportation, 1915		3.18
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915			85.79				147.94	45.28	187.48	203.90
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	8,679.30	3.18	475.66				2,125.71	1,753.20	1,254.66	1,878.29

[1] Contract labor and material.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									KLAMATH DAY SCHOOLS.
.....	$154.33	$1.50	$141.28	.....	.....	.....	.....	$5,913.68	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	$120.26	.....	.....	120.26	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	5.27	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	65.45	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	8.25	.....	.....	8.25	Payment to Indians of Klamath Agency for lands, etc.
.....	159.60	1.50	141.28	.....	128.51	.....	.....	6,107.64	Total.
									LAC DU FLAMBEAU AGENCY.
.....	.....	262.31	.75	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,295.41	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,593.62	Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	518.78	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	393.97	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,173.97	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
.....	.....	.....	44.40	.....	.....	.....	.....	762.37	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	199.01	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,676.69	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
$20.69	.....	.....	355.15	.....	32.00	.....	.....	679.59	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	122.93	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	184.43	Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	136.67	Individual Indian money.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	750.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	22.00	.....	.....	22.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
20.69	.....	385.24	993.28	.....	54.00	.....	.....	9,877.53	Total.
									LAC DU FLAMBEAU BOARDING SCHOOL.
.....	199.40	.79	1,954.09	.....	.....	.....	$162.55	23,563.21	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,619.81	.....	.....	1,619.81	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	525.24	.....	46.70	.....	3.00	837.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	6.78	15.24	.....	12.00	.....	.....	34.02	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	33.10	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	199.40	7.57	2,494.57	.....	1,678.51	.....	165.55	26,088.01	Total.
									LA POINTE AGENCY.
.....	.....	185.12	100.00	.....	.....	.....	4.00	3,485.16	Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	39.33	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	29.89	$1,050.15	.....	1,080.04	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7,688.73	Diking, etc., Bad River Reservation, Wis. (reimbursement), 1915.
.....	.....	.....	22.45	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,617.10	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	141.50	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,294.28	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	2.97	.....	.....	.....	.....	125.70	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
.....	.....	.....	55.05	.....	.....	.....	12.90	2,591.07	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	52.63	.....	183.03	.....	.....	344.16	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	15.72	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4,262.81	Individual Indian money.
.....	.....	.....	.....	$450.00	.....	.....	.....	678.25	Proceeds of timber, cemetery site, etc., La Pointe Chippewas, Wis.
.....	.....	185.12	374.60	450.00	212.92	1,050.15	16.90	24,222.35	Total.
									LA POINTE DAY SCHOOL.
.....	3.73	.....	3.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,915.21	Indian schools support, 1915.
									LEECH LAKE AGENCY.
217.50	.....	589.91	2,233.62	.....	.....	.....	626.52	20,708.10	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	710.76	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,300.84	.....	.....	1,300.84	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
61.25	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	133.69	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,241.64	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	146.04	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	224.78	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	33.60	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,328.77	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
.....	.....	.....	3,313.67	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,313.67	Industry among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	236.76	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
.....	.....	13.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	25.55	38.55	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	3.35	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.35	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	26.50	.....	.....	.....	26.24	5,393.64	Individual Indian money.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,461.30	Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
.....	.....	33.83	73.20	.....	.....	.....	12.85	124.38	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
278.75	.....	636.74	5,683.94	.....	1,300.84	.....	691.16	39,366.27	Total.
									LEECH LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
70.00	84.71	3.51	499.41	1,663.64	241.67	.....	22.50	18,061.85	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
.....	.....	.75	66.15	.....	80.45	.....	106.00	373.37	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.18	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	570.72	.....	47.31	.....	.....	1,288.42	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	1,924.75	2,736.07	.....	.....	4,660.82	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
70.00	84.71	4.26	1,136.28	3,588.39	3,205.50	.....	128.50	24,387.64	Total.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
LEECH LAKE DAY SCHOOLS.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	$1,950.00	$3.80					$0.38	$6.97		$240.96
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915
Total	1,950.00	3.80					.38	6.97		240.96
LEUPP AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	5,732.14	62.29	$314.09		$3.01	$1.75	128.18	55.40	$410.57	326.95
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			1,973.20		.82
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,150.50						97.84	146.29	63.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	1,550.83								29.97
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	85.83								14.30
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					.90		41.58
Industry among Indians, 1915			232.58
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	34.00				.24		11.78
Total	8,721.30	62.29	2,519.87		4.97	1.75	279.38	201.69	517.84	326.95
LEUPP BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	7,474.67	52.70	1,511.67		6.32	1.75	2,642.62	2,011.64	36.49	1,961.64
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school transportation, 1915					.23
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					2.17		33.80	5.00
Total	7,474.67	52.70	1,511.67		8.72	1.75	2,676.42	2,016.64	36.49	1,961.64
LOWER BRULE AGENCY.
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915	752.95	267.81	2,852.96		67.35	20.00	2,724.02		691.32	699.01
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			2,021.95
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,059.17							78.82
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915	7,840.68
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,536.71					176.75	70.45		260.48	11.48
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	797.50
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915
Proceeds of Lower Brule Reservation, S. Dak	348.75	82.80							5,251.77
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	12,419.76	350.61	4,874.91		67.35	196.75	2,794.47	78.82	6,203.57	710.49
LOWER BRULE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Education, Sioux Nation, S. Dak., 1915	8,233.42	2.00					1,179.39	1,646.88	320.51	1,001.09
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915							591.42
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	11.00		3.95				11.20
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor									32.00
Total	8,244.42	2.00	3.95				1,782.01	1,646.88	352.51	1,004.09
MACKINAC AGENCY.
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	495.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor			.50				4.98			2.15
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			4.69
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915							7.66
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	736.00	57.47
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	2,058.00	6.00	2.10	$42.00	20.00				400.00	79.40
Individual Indian money	99.00	39.02			2.04
Total	3,388.00	102.49	7.29	42.00	22.04		12.64		400.00	81.55
MALKI AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	2,878.00	233.20			80.25		224.75	25.00	340.68	1,020.89
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			401.04
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Industry among Indians, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,193.33						70.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Por	453.49
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,842.23	185.40							690.00	112.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00								102.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp	174.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	17.00	16.30					150.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	302.25
Total	7,628.30	434.90	401.04		80.25		444.75	25.00	1,132.68	1,132.89

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									LEECH LAKE DAY SCHOOLS.
.....	$51.16	.....	$5.23	.....	$36.87	.....	.....	$2,295.37	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
.....	.....	.....	503.39	.....	81.15	.....	$3.80	588.34	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
.....	51.16	.....	508.62	.....	118.02	.....	3.80	2,883.71	Total.
									LEUPP AGENCY.
$72.64	.....	$446.58	3,575.41	.....	.....	.....	71.50	11,200.51	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,974.02	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	659.29	.....	.....	659.29	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	68.60	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,526.23	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	992.75	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,573.55	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
.....	.....	.....	19.13	.....	.....	.....	.....	119.26	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.45	42.93	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	232.58	Industry among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	66.03	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	112.05	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
72.64	.....	512.61	4,655.89	.....	659.29	.....	71.95	18,608.42	Total.
									LEUPP BOARDING SCHOOL.
81.82	233.13	112.02	790.98	.....	.....	.....	24.50	16,941.95	Indian schools support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,049.77	.....	.....	1,049.77	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.23	Indian school transportation, 1915.
.....	.....	16.60	8.05	.....	.....	.....	.10	65.72	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
81.82	233.13	128.62	799.03	.....	1,049.77	.....	24.60	18,057.67	Total.
									LOWER BRULE AGENCY.
186.60	.....	325.43	1,742.35	.....	.....	.....	71.23	10,401.03	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	2,021.95	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,056.68	.....	.....	1,056.68	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,137.99	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7,840.68	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	2,078.12	.....	178.27	.....	586.75	4,899.01	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	275.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,072.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
147.60	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	147.60	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	32,260.03	$5,437.92	.....	.....	554.11	43,935.38	Proceeds of Lower Brule Reservation, S. Dak.
.....	.....	.....	7,049.86	.....	.....	.....	[1] 3,440.21	10,490.07	Civilization of the Sioux.
334.20	.....	325.43	43,405.36	5,437.92	1,234.95	.....	4,652.30	83,086.89	Total.
									LOWER BRULE BOARDING SCHOOL.
40.56	296.51	5.00	2,139.96	5,312.58	1,105.02	.....	.....	21,285.92	Education, Sioux Nation, S. Dak., 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	591.42	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
7.00	1.20	.....	362.61	.....	3.42	.....	19.53	419.91	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	3.50	.....	.....	.....	.....	37.50	73.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
47.56	297.71	8.50	2,502.57	5,312.58	1,108.44	.....	57.03	22,370.25	Total.
									MACKINAC AGENCY.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	10.00	505.00	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7.63	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4.69	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	$372.00	14.50	386.50	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	7.66	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	83.89	.....	.....	.....	.....	877.36	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
74.45	.....	1.75	16.39	.....	.....	.....	10.00	2,710.09	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	140.06	Individual Indian money.
74.45	.....	1.75	100.28	.....	.....	372.00	34.50	4,638.99	Total.
									MALKI AGENCY.
.....	.....	59.71	1,345.08	.....	.....	.....	364.50	6,572.06	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	401.04	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	275.36	.....	[2] 24.00	299.36	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	[3] 390.27	390.27	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	[4] 1,750.00	1,750.00	Industry among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	28.40	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,291.73	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	453.49	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
.....	.....	.....	716.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	3,545.63	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	25.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	727.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	174.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	[5] 90.00	90.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	[6] 125.00	308.30	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	285.43	.....	.....	.....	[7] 60.00	647.68	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	59.71	2,399.91	.....	275.36	.....	2,803.77	16,818.56	Total.

[1] Treaty benefit payments.
[2] Water.
[3] Fruit trees.
[4] Seed and fruit trees.
[5] Seed.
[6] Hospital expenses, etc.
[7] Burial expense.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
MALKI DAY SCHOOL.
Indian school support, 1915	$1,250.00	$166.50			$118.65		$55.99	$192.99		$191.00
Indian school, transportation, 1915		893.34
Total	1,250.00	1,059.84			118.65		55.99	192.99		191.00
MEKUSUKEY BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Seminole school fund	9,211.42	29.62			23.40		4,602.02	726.06	$758.25	1,046.18
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			$396.51
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	13.50	5.00				$13.25	57.62		50.09
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	150.00
Total	9,374.92	34.62	396.51		23.40	13.25	4,659.64	726.06	808.34	1,046.18
MESCALERO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	10,855.43	120.81	144.09		38.31	3.25	7,133.36	5.60	928.41	360.81
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			2,375.21
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			14.36
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,995.00							166.58	35.40
Industry among Indians, 1915		36.10	187.17				84.28		299.55
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,680.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	2,695.57
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,719.85	222.18	151.05				1,105.38	241.95	245.00	78.60
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915						44.57
Miscellaneous receipts, class 2			21.20
Release and settlement of Apache Indians held as prisoners of war at Fort Sill, Okla.	3,329.23	10.50	888.68				4,182.79			277.74
Total	23,275.08	389.59	3,781.76		38.31	47.82	12,505.81	414.13	1,508.36	717.15
MESCALERO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school support, 1915	7,789.20		1,165.65		2.74		4,973.68	1,769.57	520.00	1,152.15
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	158.70						128.96			7.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							11.25
Total	7,947.90		1,165.65		2.74		5,113.89	1,769.57	521.00	1,159.15
MOAPA RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915		24.95		$10.50			142.50	3.25		17.30
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915							46.72
Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915			71.91
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Industry among Indians, 1915–1916
Industry among Indians, 1915	286.12		295.45
Pay of Indian police, 1915	468.67							21.94
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	59.00
Total	813.79	24.95	367.36	10.50			189.22	25.19		17.30
MOAPA RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,150.83	65.90	3.10	26.05			151.17	9.81	21.54	188.07
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	3,150.83	65.90	3.10	26.05			151.17	9.81	21.54	188.07
MOQUI AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	9,074.72	172.10	5,679.86			13.20	145.20	73.17	1,633.30	244.74
Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915		67.80	3,980.13		.66
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,310.00						35.44	149.28		24.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	217.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	3,140.00						17.65	17.79		120.60
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,031.67								54.60
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			4.67
Industry among Indians, 1915	25.00	121.60	1,226.51
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Payment to William Volz, Oklahoma		65.50
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indians, 1915–1916	20.00
Total	15,818.39	427.00	10,891.17		.66	13.20	198.29	240.24	1,687.90	389.34
MOQUI BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	15,339.91	146.35	6,236.20				4,122.53	1,928.84	992.60	389.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	15,339.91	146.35	6,236.20				4,122.53	1,928.84	992.60	389.25
MOQUI DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	12,552.70						1,292.99	1,740.79	58.64	582.48
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	12,552.70						1,292.99	1,740.79	58.64	582.48

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									MALKI DAY SCHOOL.
		$32.95	$124.00					$2,132.08	Indian schools support, 1915.
								893.34	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
		32.95	124.00					3,025.42	Total.
									MEKUSUKEY BOARDING SCHOOL.
995.00	$52.41	72.72	1,642.62		$2,015.79		[1]$523.20	20,774.69	Interest on Seminole school fund.
								396.51	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
3.20	22.99		53.67		220.04		15.56	514.92	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								150.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
108.20	75.40	52.72	1,716.29		2,235.83		544.76	21,816.12	Total.
									MESCALERO AGENCY.
.50		162.01	1,097.51				12.97	20,870.06	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								2,375.21	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
				$1,052.08	322.73			1,389.17	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,196.98	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			68,727.02					69,334.12	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			380.80					2,060.80	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			491.86		12.40			3,199.83	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For
		1.80	598.31	229.53			853.40	5,447.05	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			135.00	5,786.66				5,966.23	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								21.20	Miscellaneous receipts, class 2.
			2,225.93	11,341.81			[2]360.00	22,616.68	Release and settlement of Apache Indians held as prisoners of war, at Fort Sill, Okla.
.50		163.81	73,656.43	18,410.08	335.13		1,226.37	136,477.33	Total.
									MESCALERO BOARDING SCHOOL.
	177.58	1.32	243.58				16.50	17,817.97	Indian schools support, 1915.
					1,316.90			1,316.90	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			152.23				64.94	551.89	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					74.60			85.85	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	177.58	1.32	441.87		1,391.50		81.44	19,772.61	Total.
									MOAPA RIVER AGENCY.
		.14	25.60				20.00	248.24	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
							53.00	99.72	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								71.91	Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.
					98.00	$420.00		518.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			310.00					310.00	Industry among Indians, 1915–1916.
			514.32					1,395.89	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			3.18					493.79	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								59.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
		4.14	1,153.10		98.00	420.00	73.00	3,196.55	Total.
									MOAPA RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
	16.66	37.23	274.24				21.37	2,965.37	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					234.10		[1]22.80	256.90	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	16.66	37.23	274.24		234.10		44.17	4,222.27	Total.
									MOQUI AGENCY.
		740.90	8,731.86				765.00	27,074.05	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
							139.00	4,187.59	Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.
				2,985.15	1,759.36			4,744.51	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,518.72	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								217.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			112.65					3,408.69	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			350.00					2,436.27	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								4.67	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			4,332.27					5,905.38	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			10.03					10.03	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								65.50	Payment to William Volz, Oklahoma.
		21.00						21.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								20.00	Industry among Indians, 1915–1916.
		761.90	13,736.81	2,985.15	1,759.36		904.00	49,613.41	Total.
									MOQUI BOARDING SCHOOL.
28.50	140.75	41.74	968.16				30.31	30,365.14	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					3,703.03			3,703.03	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	4.93							4.93	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
28.50	145.68	41.74	968.16		3,703.03		30.31	34,073.10	Total.
									MOQUI DAY SCHOOL.
	160.42	114.06	417.08					16,919.16	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				2,542.00	18.64			2,560.64	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	160.42	114.06	417.08	2,542.00	18.64			19,479.80	Total.

[1] Insurance, $443.70.

[2] Water.

[3] Sheep dip.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
MOUNT PLEASANT BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., 1915	$22,677.15	$146.81	$832.33	$199.70	$72.03	$5.50	$13,969.89	$8,247.24	$301.50	$5,013.15
Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., repairs and improvements, 1915
Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915			3,613.27
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,258.37			12.34
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					24.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Total	22,677.15	1,405.18	4,445.60	199.70	108.37	5.50	13,969.89	8,247.24	301.50	5,013.15
NAVAJO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	15,792.48	523.22	4,541.28		114.31	18.50	1,214.29	270.25	2,810.09	189.13
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			6,044.04
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,484.67		50.00					18.00	341.00	120.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	156.33
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	4,785.00	19.45							100.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	863.17
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,190.54
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
General expenses, Indian service, 1915	1,550.00
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	250.00						600.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Total	27,072.19	542.67	10,635.32		114.31	18.50	1,814.29	288.25	3,251.09	309.13
NAVAJO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	20,016.12	218.10	7,821.14		9.59	8.00	10,534.40	6,689.60	878.20	443.60
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	6.00		3.73
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		30.25
Total	20,022.12	248.35	7,824.87		9.59	8.00	10,534.40	6,689.60	878.20	443.60
CHIN LEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	9,371.00	58.70	4,818.10				4,700.15	2,401.32	198.61	1,785.53
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915			261.92
Total	9,371.00	58.70	5,080.02				4,700.15	2,401.32	198.61	1,785.53
TOHATCHI BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	9,931.01	55.15	3,417.74		.25		3,858.86	3,897.57	821.48	573.22
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							20.00	8.06
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Total	9,931.01	55.15	3,417.74		.25		3,878.86	3,905.63	821.48	573.22
NAVAJO DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools support, 1915	1,138.33	3.00	229.73				397.07	430.31		212.12
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915			616.42				22.26	18.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	1,138.33	3.00	846.15				419.33	448.64		212.12
NAVAJO SPRINGS AGENCY.
Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund	3,008.08		107.19				1.52	27.55	562.50	44.10
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915							4,160.99
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915			401.37
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund	395.25	136.88	302.23		21.07				2,136.00
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,063.00							147.94
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915	2,315.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	576.67						3.50	4.42
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,256.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	385.25	219.21			45.44				2,250.00	131.43
Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund	11,888.11	936.61	103.24	72.00	14.74		233.70		55.74
Payment to Confederated Bands of Utes (reimbursable)	372.25
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4									282.99
Determining heirs of deceased, Indian allottees, 1915	606.00	61.75
Total	22,866.11	1,354.45	914.03	72.00	81.25		4,399.71	179.91	5,287.23	175.53

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									MOUNT PLEASANT BOARDING SCHOOL.
$74.35	$858.14	$451.73	$3,356.32				$472.93	$56,678.77	Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., 1915.
					$4,662.44			4,662.44	Indian school, Mount Pleasant, Mich., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								3,613.27	Purchase and transportation, Indian supplies, 1915.
							4.00	1,274.71	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	5.25	5.00	69.48		5.00		174.00	282.73	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		13.00						13.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
74.35	863.39	469.73	3,425.80		4,667.44		650.93	66,524.92	Total.
									NAVAJO AGENCY.
396.40		891.18	7,380.61				[1] 423.00	34,573.74	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								6,044.04	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					2,123.27			2,123.27	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,013.67	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								156.33	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								4,904.45	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								863.17	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								1,190.54	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			350.45				[2] 249.97	600.42	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								1,550.00	General expenses, Indian service, 1915.
15.20		84.63	742.19	$10,392.54				12,084.56	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			4,199.00					4,199.00	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
411.60		975.81	12,681.25	10,392.54	2,123.27		672.97	71,303.19	Total.
									NAVAJO BOARDING SCHOOL.
	337.51	31.75	2,295.12				[2] 149.10	49,432.23	Indian schools support, 1915.
				12,540.06	1,672.64			14,212.70	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		112.50						112.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	19.30		296.02					325.05	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					2,023.33			2,023.33	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
			109.00					109.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								30.25	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	356.81	144.25	2,700.14	12,540.10	3,695.97		149.10	66,245.06	Total.
									CHIN LEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
18.25	185.55	354.04	421.58					24,312.83	Indian schools support, 1915.
					736.20			736.20	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
				16,006.54	2,227.96			18,496.42	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
18.25	185.55	354.04	421.58	16,006.54	2,964.16			43,545.45	Total.
									TOHATCHI BOARDING SCHOOL.
22.93	242.76	244.99	673.30					23,739.26	Indian schools support, 1915.
					334.57			334.57	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			55.71		72.06			155.83	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		4.88						4.88	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
22.93	242.76	249.87	729.01		406.63			24,234.54	Total.
									NAVAJO DAY SCHOOLS.
	102.36	3.63	282.64					2,799.19	Indian schools support, 1915.
			49.07	185.64				891.72	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
					30.54			30.54	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	102.36	3.63	331.71	185.64	30.54			3,721.45	Total.
									NAVAJO SPRINGS AGENCY.
4.60		116.93	683.23				103.70	4,659.40	Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund.
								4,160.99	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
								401.37	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					3.78			3.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			85,282.60	7,464.53	1,426.77		[2] 279.26	97,444.59	Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
								2,210.94	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								2,315.50	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.
			28.60					613.19	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			22.41					1,278.41	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			742.08					3,773.41	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		4.20	4,623.58		500.13			18,432.05	Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
			880.00					1,252.25	Payment to Confederated Bands of Utes (reimbursable).
								282.99	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								667.75	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
4.60		121.13	92,262.50	7,464.53	1,930.68		382.96	137,496.62	Total.

[1] Sheep dip, $393.

[2] Seed.

[2] Seed and trees.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
NAVAJO SPRINGS DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	$2,685.54		$6.21				$16.07	$367.31
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.							12.44
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Total	2,685.54		6.21				28.51	367.31
NEAH BAY AGENCY.
Support of Makahs, Washington, 1915	600.00	$51.60	129.82				149.41	1.20	$80.00	$8.52
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Support of Quiraielts and Quillehutes, Washington, 1915.		17.80
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			115.69
Pay of Indian police, 1915	540.00							40.85
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	7.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	566.00								48.75
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	320.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			9.16
Total	2,033.00	69.40	254.67				149.41	42.05	128.75	8.52
NEAH BAY DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools support, 1915	4,627.42	24.30	14.57				25.50	6.65		154.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					$30.00
Total	4,627.42	24.30	14.57		30.00		25.50	6.65		154.00
NETT LAKE AGENCY.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	9,824.08	442.44	319.19				1,471.61	109.37	828.97	284.44
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			279.48
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund
Pay of Indian police, 1915	480.00						118.25	28.72
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	718.52					$27.90
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	716.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915						125.78
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	22.00	27.35
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	11,760.60	469.79	598.67			153.68	1,589.86	138.09	828.97	284.44
NETT LAKE DAY SCHOOL.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915							297.88	473.78	295.28	127.11
Indian schools, support, 1915
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	2,690.00						14.25	4.02		30.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							5.60	.30
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Total	2,690.00						317.73	478.10	295.28	157.11
NEVADA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	1,360.00		4.80				736.99	.21	280.84	205.41
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			1,446.74
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,319.33							40.80
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,616.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	2,827.00	6.50
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Total	7,926.33	6.50	1,451.54				736.99	41.01	280.84	205.41
NEVADA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	6,271.67	11.25	247.19				2,811.42	1,465.59	766.54	1,118.24
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							32.78	5.31		15.50
Indian school, transportation, 1915		13.50
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	6,271.67	24.75	247.19				2,844.20	1,470.90	766.54	1,133.74
NEVADA DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	300.00
NEW YORK AGENCY.
Fulfilling treaties with Six Nations of New York.								2,727.66
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			70.43
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	250.00
General expenses, Indian service, 1915	2,517.50	178.05	60.25		30.00	10.20				2.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		3.40
Total	2,767.50	181.45	130.68		30.00	10.20		2,727.66		2.00

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									NAVAJO SPRINGS DAY SCHOOL.
	$4.60		$5.92					$3,085.65	Indian schools support, 1915.
								12.44	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
					$516.39			516.39	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
	4.60		5.92		516.39			3,614.48	Total.
									NEAH BAY AGENCY.
$72.00		$101.04	393.28					1,586.87	Support of Makahs, Washington, 1915.
				$151.75	52.34			204.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			400.00					417.80	Support of Quinaielts and Quillehutes, Washington, 1915.
								115.69	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
								580.85	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								7.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			100.00					714.75	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								320.00	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			75.00					75.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			.70		7.50			17.36	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
72.00		101.04	968.98	151.75	59.84			4,039.41	Total.
									NEAH BAY DAY SCHOOLS.
13.80	146.31		267.12				$2.00	5,281.67	Indian schools support, 1915.
				415.58	67.66			483.24	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								30.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
13.80	146.31		267.12	415.58	67.66		2.00	5,794.91	Total.
									NETT LAKE AGENCY.
197.23		64.74	2,067.11		35.55		218.78	15,863.55	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
								279.48	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					447.25			447.25	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			4.50					4.50	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
								626.97	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			58.50					804.92	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			372.00					1,088.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								125.78	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								49.35	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
		29.30						29.30	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
197.23		94.04	2,502.11		482.80		218.78	19,319.06	Total.
									NETT LAKE DAY SCHOOL.
	127.60	185.60	394.46					1,901.71	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
							[1] 119.00	119.00	Indian schools support, 1915.
	12.98		210.31		51.57			3,013.13	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
			21.75				2.00	29.65	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
				3,430.07	412.74			3,842.81	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	140.58	185.60	626.52	3,430.07	464.31		121.00	8,906.30	Total.
									NEVADA AGENCY.
		172.19	300.97					3,061.41	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								1,446.74	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					352.35			352.35	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,360.13	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								1,616.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							$72.00	792.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			534.31				258.00	3,625.81	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1,065.00					1,065.00	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			200.00					200.00	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
		172.19	2,100.28		352.35	72.00	258.00	13,603.44	Total.
									NEVADA BOARDING SCHOOL.
	9.12	175.73	694.85					13,781.60	Indian schools support, 1915.
			214.16				8.25	276.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								13.50	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
				698.22	84.29			782.51	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	9.12	175.73	1,119.01	698.22	84.29		8.25	14,853.61	Total.
									NEVADA DAY SCHOOL.
			20.00					320.00	Indian schools support, 1915.
									NEW YORK AGENCY.
								2,727.66	Fulfilling treaties with Six Nations of New York.
								70.43	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					33.80	120.00		153.80	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
							[2] 2,524.00	2,774.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
5.25		87.73	64.83				9.44	2,165.25	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								3.40	Relieving distress and prevention of disea among Indians, 1915.
5.25		87.73	64.83		33.80	120.00	2,533.44	8,694.54	Total.

[1] Seed.

[2] Rental due Seneca Tribe.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
NEW YORK WAREHOUSE.
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.	$7,279.97	$110.21	$453.84	$121.36	$64.17
NUYAKA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Creek general fund	8,864.86	49.62	512.27		10.00		$4,642.86	$299.58	$1,090.69	$563.42
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			568.23
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	9.00		31.01		10.25		55.26	16.20	112.06
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		13.30
Total	8,873.86	62.92	1,111.51		20.25		4,698.12	315.78	1,202.75	563.42
OMAHA AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	5,381.91	109.63			54.67		21.08		209.20	391.19
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	528.30		142.74
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			157.13
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	945.00							89.05
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	142.42				5.33		3.85
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,011.64	94.53
Proceeds of Omaha Reservation, Nebr., act of May 15, 1888.	449.86
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$16.00
Total	8,459.13	204.16	299.87		60.00	16.00	24.93	89.05	209.20	391.19
OMAHA WAREHOUSE.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.	5,226.66	196.11	134.06	4.74	123.68					70.75
ONEIDA AGENCY.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			276.11
Pay of Indian police, 1915	240.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.		243.62
Total	240.00	243.62	276.11
ONEIDA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	14,164.21	23.60	43.81		18.00		3,505.73	2,261.09	249.70	1,904.15
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	21.00	9.00						36.70
Total	14,185.21	32.60	43.81		18.00		3,505.73	2,297.79	249.70	1,904.15
OSAGE AGENCY.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, agency, 1915	27,505.63	5,246.70	5.12	123.16	389.02	164.00			1,206.10	340.15
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			558.40
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4				3.30
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						7.50
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	27,505.63	5,246.70	563.52	126.46	389.02	171.50			1,206.10	340.15
OSAGE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, school, 1915	18,067.73	150.85	18.37		60.24		2,892.49	1,038.19	1,949.30	713.94
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	3.00		3.18	7.70		5.00	64.86
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	18,070.73	150.85	21.55	7.70	60.24	5.00	2,957.35	1,038.19	1,949.30	713.94
OTOE AGENCY.
Interest on Otoe and Missouria fund	2,989.67	178.69			77.86				35.00	1.20
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915						96.25
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			204.02
Pay of Indian police, 1915	442.50							19.63
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3						55.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	720.00								110.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		75.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	285.00	7.04
Total	4,437.17	260.73	204.02		77.86	151.25		19.63	145.00	1.20
OTOE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Otoe and Missouria fund	8,188.61		435.41				966.73	929.90	254.18	1,162.10
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	12.50						36.08	2.75		8.99
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor			83.50						128.50	144.10
Indian schools, support, 1915	90.00						21.39	82.71		73.73
Total	8,291.11		518.91				1,024.20	1,015.36	382.68	1,388.83

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									NEW YORK WAREHOUSE.
$84.93			$15.40			$3,208.33	$14.07	$11,352.28	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
									NUYAKA BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$100.45	$145.01	2,556.23	$3,863.91	$2,204.62	115.63	79.86	25,099.01	Interest on Creek general fund.
								568.23	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			218.70		70.29		11.29	534.06	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		6.50						6.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								13.30	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	100.45	151.51	2,774.93	3,863.91	2,274.91	115.63	91.15	26,221.10	Total.
									OMAHA AGENCY.
193.35			396.59					6,757.62	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			939.05		96.00		89.40	1,796.39	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								157.13	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					1,448.31			1,448.31	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,034.05	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
235.02			55.01		11.00		12.30	464.93	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			321.00					1,427.17	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								449.86	Proceeds of Omaha Reservation, Nebr., act of May 15, 1888.
								16.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
428.37			1,712.55		1,555.31		101.70	13,551.46	Total.
									OMAHA WAREHOUSE.
46.84			2.65			1,466.63	39.90	7,432.02	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
									ONEIDA AGENCY.
								276.11	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								240.00	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								243.62	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								759.73	Total.
									ONEIDA BOARDING SCHOOL.
224.26	173.80	36.38	276.29				806.30	23,247.32	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,277.74			1,277.74	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
2.03		29.61	33.92		.23		5.00	137.49	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
226.29	173.80	65.99	310.21		1,277.97		371.30	24,662.55	Total.
									OSAGE AGENCY.
825.99			2,427.52		995.26	30.00	533.05	39,781.70	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, agency, 1915.
								556.40	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
9.40			12.60				14.00	39.30	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								7.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
					309.51			309.51	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
835.39			2,440.12		1,304.77	30.00	537.05	40,696.41	Total.
									OSAGE BOARDING SCHOOL.
41.39	143.38	212.30	1,642.91	7,442.41	4,721.50		1,199.50	40,294.50	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, school, 1915.
		4.75	322.17		28.25			435.91	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					619.04			619.04	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
41.39	143.38	217.05	1,965.08	7,442.41	5,368.79		1,199.50	41,352.45	Total.
									OTOE AGENCY.
1.50			52.30		35.38		20.00	3,391.69	Interest on Otoe and Missouria fund.
								96.25	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								204.02	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								462.13	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								55.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			385.00					1,215.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
140.00		87.87					18.06	320.98	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
64.50								356.54	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
206.00		87.87	437.30		35.38		38.06	6,101.56	Total.
									OTOE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	21.94	75.51	1,176.85		428.25		[1]301.54	13,941.02	Interest on Otoe and Missouria fund.
113.65			60.09					233.97	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					737.94			737.94	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			223.76					579.86	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
54.75	7.47	25.61	76.92				23.50	456.08	Indian schools, support, 1915.
168.40	29.41	101.12	1,537.62		1,166.19		325.04	15,948.87	Total.

[1] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
PALA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	$1,880.34	$148.71	$50.00		$40.30		$232.20		$593.75	$593.59
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			951.34
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			119.11
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,420.00							$76.39
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,045.84	49.25							117.77
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp
Industry among Indians, 1915
Total	6,514.18	197.96	1,120.45		40.30		232.20	76.39	711.52	593.59
PALA DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	6,144.33	290.62	100.00		35.33		77.99	36.33	261.24	518.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		489.84
Total	6,144.33	780.46	100.00		35.33		77.99	36.33	261.24	518.70
PAWNEE AGENCY.
Support of Pawnees: Employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915	5,109.98
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	61.00	186.27	45.81	$221.36	78.55				546.27	491.06
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			433.17
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915					.39
Pay of Indian police, 1915	720.00							46.25
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	2,597.00	50.45			15.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,232.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	78.00					$8.00
Support of Pawnees: Iron, steel, etc., Oklahoma, 1915	325.73
Total	11,123.71	236.72	478.98	221.36	93.94	8.00		46.25	546.27	491.06
PAWNEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Support of Pawnees: Schools, Oklahoma, 1915	723.66		94.28	510.28	18.00		2,841.92	1,614.50	1,261.19	603.33
Support of Pawnees: Employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915	1,345.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian schools, support, 1915	8,766.66									145.55
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	95.50					1.50	102.55		68.70	19.56
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		50.00					154.16
Indian school, transportation, 1915					.54
Total	10,930.82	50.00	94.28	510.28	18.54	1.50	3,098.63	1,614.50	1,329.89	768.44
PHOENIX BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., 1915	49,919.23	102.65	1,431.37	1,996.91	305.98		28,196.29	15,228.63	2,589.97	4,410.88
Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			10,884.87		2.00
Indian school, transportation, 1915		3,794.81			30.65
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	126.60				60.20	64.09	98.13	83.18		29.05
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	4,971.25	727.17		47.94	103.15		4,837.58	2,700.89	287.41	294.69
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor				1,477.44	31.75			156.75		261.91
Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., sewer system, 1915		76.77				103.41
Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., buildings						11.70
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	840.00
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915
Total	55,857.08	4,701.40	12,316.24	3,522.29	533.73	179.20	33,132.00	18,169.36	2,877.38	4,995.60
PIERRE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., 1915	16,161.33	33.66	396.85	914.70	45.74	140.50	9,475.48	5,041.03	792.25	1,488.87
Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915					2.55
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			4,534.55
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,043.07			37.17
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	117.94	15.00			16.70	26.50	17.40	42.08	51.95	61.26
Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., irrigation system	785.65	228.77								26.20
Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., buildings						39.29
Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., land, 1915
Total	17,064.92	1,320.50	4,931.40	914.70	102.16	206.29	9,492.88	5,083.11	844.20	1,576.33
PIMA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	12,906.83	575.36	880.92		9.52	20.00	1,724.05	17.48	1,092.66	2,628.23
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			7,764.02
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,088.17					179.22	180.00

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									PALA AGENCY.
		$159.04	$1,378.85				$17.00	$5,093.78	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								951.34	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				$1,142.87	$2,259.61			3,521.59	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		2.90					23.56	26.46	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								1,496.39	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
							6.55	3,219.41	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			1.00				[1] 85.06	86.06	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
							[1] 1,580.16	1,580.16	Industry among Indians, 1915.
		161.94	1,379.85	1,142.87	2,259.61		1,712.33	16,143.19	Total.
									PALA DAY SCHOOLS.
	$80.94	7.66	833.58				21.81	8,408.53	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					633.44			633.44	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								489.84	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	80.94	7.66	833.58		633.44		21.81	9,531.81	Total.
									PAWNEE AGENCY.
		23.33						5,133.31	Support of Pawnees: Employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915.
$16.45		111.87	277.43				[2] 116.39	2,152.46	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								433.17	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					574.07	$150.00		724.07	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								.39	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								766.25	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
6.75								2,609.20	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			275.00					2,507.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			76.93				207.80	370.73	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
79.85			96.16					501.74	Support of Pawnees: Iron, steel, etc., Oklahoma, 1915.
103.05		135.20	725.52		574.07	150.00	324.19	15,258.32	Total.
									PAWNEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
3.35	203.40	16.26	925.85		163.49		19.55	8,998.97	Support of Pawnees: Schools, Oklahoma 1915.
								1,345.00	Support of Pawnees: Employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915.
					889.28			889.28	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			75.03				[2] 102.43	9,089.67	Indian schools, support, 1915.
5.00	2.80		328.34		523.24		23.75	1,170.94	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					30.00		30.00	204.16	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								.54	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
8.35	206.20	16.26	1,329.22		1,606.01		175.73	21,758.58	Total.
									PHOENIX BOARDING SCHOOL.
207.40	643.20	1,054.24	7,958.24			240.00	839.05	115,124.04	Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., 1915.
					6,912.43			6,912.43	Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								10,886.87	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								3,825.46	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
54.90	357.64		2,620.60		70.08		147.67	3,712.14	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
99.25		1,011.32	4,135.68	2,876.97	7,259.91		110.50	29,463.59	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[2] 525.00	525.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
2.50								1,929.45	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
				23,268.08			38.75	23,487.01	Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., sewer system, 1915.
				14,900.00				14,911.70	Indian school, Phoenix, Ariz., buildings.
								840.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			63.78	435.93				499.71	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
364.05	1,000.84	2,065.56	14,778.30	41,480.98	14,242.42	240.00	1,660.97	212,117.40	Total.
									PIERRE BOARDING SCHOOL.
786.56	96.88	122.85	6,351.60				66.08	41,714.36	Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., 1915.
				975.09	4,647.07			5,624.71	Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								4,534.55	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,080.24	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
							[4] 26.00	26.00	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
		.65	419.05			35.00	67.60	871.13	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			807.66					1,848.28	Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., irrigation system.
				9,972.32				10,011.61	Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., buildings.
							[3] 3,500.00	3,500.00	Indian school, Pierre, S. Dak., land, 1915.
786.56	96.88	123.50	7,578.31	10,947.41	4,647.07	35.00	3,650.68	69,210.88	Total.
									PIMA AGENCY.
79.40		1,122.93	6,700.73				803.10	28,761.21	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								7,764.02	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				463.98	537.97	200.00		1,141.95	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
				89.25				2,527.64	Pay of Indian police, 1915.

[1] Seed, trees, etc. [2] Hospital expenses. [3] Land. [4] Tuition.

Detailed statement of expenditures.

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
PIMA AGENCY—continued.
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	$174.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	6,682.08	$118.90							$498.31
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00						$79.65	$16.41	25.62
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp	4,260.36		$3.01						38.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		37.05	429.83		$0.31
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	524.99	51.30			4.33	$4.61	12.00			$62.85
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		104.40
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	1,029.46					46.81	28.02	479.14		100.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			624.74
Industry among Indians, 1915			252.88
Industry among Indians, 1915–16			67.91
Total	28,385.89	887.01	10,023.31		14.16	241.64	2,023.72	513.03	1,655.09	2,791.08
PIMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	18,998.71	100.40	433.38	$470.15			7,303.66	4,718.61	769.81	1,556.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	487.98	25.55	14.67		14.56		23.96		3.50
Indian school, transportation, 1915		6.75
Total	19,486.69	132.70	448.05	470.15	14.56		7,327.62	4,718.61	773.31	1,559.00
PIMA DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	5,885.50	58.65						27.76		14.00
Indian schools and agency buildings, 1915		21.55
Indian school, transportation, 1915		432.00
School facilities for Papago Indians, Arizona, 1915		186.18	352.85
Total	5,885.50	698.38	352.85					27.76		14.00
PINE RIDGE AGENCY.
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915	10,317.45	659.32	13,833.44				80,661.97		3,445.16	3,200.64
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			7,261.67
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	7,580.00	59.90
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,570.00
Pay of Indian police, 1915	10,421.32							1,068.43
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	261.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915	26,830.84
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	66.66
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	194.10				1.00	20.00				2.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	50.00	23.85
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						39.80
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	2,261.00	49.82
Pine Ridge Reservation 3 per cent fund
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	59,561.37	792.89	21,095.11		1.00	59.80	80,661.97	1,068.43	3,445.16	3,202.64
PINE RIDGE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915	18,816.39						2,033.07	4,214.32	1.50	2,824.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915							1,593.42
Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education							5.40	399.12		1,032.34
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	72.00	26.65	2.16		.26
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915	615.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor								37.00		104.85
Total	19,503.39	26.65	2.16		.26		3,631.89	4,650.44	1.50	3,961.19
PINE RIDGE DAY SCHOOLS.
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915	32,877.67	107.00					139.71	5,918.84		3,310.60
Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915							1,172.08
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education							4.02	991.10		1,153.65
Total	32,877.67	107.00					1,315.81	6,909.94		4,464.25
PIPESTONE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., 1915	16,916.00		119.61	545.44	53.07	5.00	7,807.47	5,075.83		2,525.84
Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., repairs and improvements, 1915
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			2,217.63
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,349.17			21.78
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor									242.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	43.83						23.28	116.49	65.76
Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., special repairs, 1915
Total	16,959.83	1,349.17	2,337.24	545.44	74.85	5.00	7,830.75	5,192.32	308.26	2,525.84

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									PIMA AGENCY—continued.
								$174.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			$431.44					7,730.73	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			101.17					942.85	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			4,826.52	$1,647.20			[1] $43.49	10,819.08	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
			15.54		$428.48			911.21	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
$73.60			590.80		413.44		.52	1,738.44	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								104.40	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
		$23.50	3,002.13		2,991.54			7,700.60	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			1,315.64					1,940.38	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			4,427.36					4,680.24	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			615.50					683.41	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
153.00		1,146.43	22,026.83	2,140.43	4,371.43	$200.00	847.11	77,420.16	Total.
									PIMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
151.33	$345.44	139.04	5,160.69				[1] 183.47	40,342.60	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				2,525.00	4,514.86	150.00		7,189.86	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	8.55	5.15	911.17		314.70		50.78	1,860.57	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								6.75	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
151.33	353.99	144.19	6,080.86	2,525.00	4,829.56	150.00	234.25	49,399.87	Total.
									PIMA DAY SCHOOL.
	105.56		172.17					6,263.64	Indian schools support, 1915.
					195.72			217.27	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								432.00	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
				16,901.57				17,440.60	School facilities for Papago Indians, Arizona, 1915.
	105.56		172.17	16,901.57	195.72			24,353.51	Total.
									PINE RIDGE AGENCY.
105.55		743.53	2,382.40				2,550.18	117,899.64	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
								7,261.67	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					1,345.00			1,345.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			199.64					7,839.54	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								1,570.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
								11,489.75	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								261.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								26,830.84	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
			114.50	922.18			895.00	1,998.34	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
304.59			235.09		201.43		1.00	959.21	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		2.00						2.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
								82.85	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
								39.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
170.25								2,481.07	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
							[2] 30.00	30.00	Pine Ridge Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			119,453.25				[3] 97,426.34	216,879.59	Civilization of the Sioux.
580.39		745.53	122,384.88	922.18	1,546.43		100,902.52	396,970.30	Total.
									PINE RIDGE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	336.91	170.20	698.47	2,179.65	1,105.72			32,380.23	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,593.42	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
	7.92	8.58	260.95	274.50	20.28		[1] 405.00	2,423.09	Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education.
	82.21		1,162.47		301.46		142.48	1,789.69	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								615.00	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
	5.75		73.80	256.17	29.66		253.75	760.98	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	432.79	178.78	2,204.69	2,710.32	1,457.12		801.23	39,562.41	Total.
									PINE RIDGE DAY SCHOOLS.
	660.79	440.03	1,354.69		1,507.37			46,316.70	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,172.08	Support of Sioux of different tribes, subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
					298.00			298.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	9.90	29.71	136.79		739.44			3,064.61	Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education.
	670.69	469.74	1,491.48		2,544.81			50,851.39	Total.
									PIPESTONE BOARDING SCHOOL.
20.00	419.99	211.55	3,981.95				140.06	37,821.81	Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., 1915.
				3,763.75	3,343.09			7,106.84	Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								2,217.63	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,370.95	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
72.40			28.00				7.50	350.40	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	12.28	9.10	386.42		166.35		46.88	870.39	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					6,500.00			6,500.00	Indian school, Pipestone, Minn., special repairs, 1915.
92.40	432.27	220.65	4,396.37	3,763.75	10,009.44		194.44	56,238.02	Total.

[1] Seed. [2] Opening Indian lands. [3] Treaty benefit payments.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
PIPESTONE DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	$1,420.00		$4.00		$15.00		$101.37	$2.27		$74.12
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							75.47	14.43
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915					.87			.42
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.		$53.36
Total	1,420.00	53.36	4.00		15.87		176.84	17.12		74.12
PONCA AGENCY.
Support of Poncas, Oklahoma, 1915	4,974.51	22.07			72.70	$24.70	1.01		$533.75	45.30
Support of Kansas Indians, Oklahoma, 1915	1,008.50	19.16			24.15	24.70			35.80	58.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			509.52
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	300.00							21.58
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		109.57			9.30				19.25	40.29
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00							3.25	140.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,800.00								29.59
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, Kaw	21.00	10.56			6.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						73.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	34.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		9.66								3.25
Expense account, mining operations						11.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					36.00					329.43
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Kaw
Total	9,738.51	171.02	509.52		148.15	133.90	1.01	24.83	758.39	476.77
PONCA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	9,088.10				48.00		2,998.44	1,403.66	352.75	1,662.59
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	248.09	4.85				12.50	14.36
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor								40.72
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	9,336.19	4.85			48.00	12.50	3,012.80	1,444.38	352.75	1,662.59
POTTAWATOMIE AGENCY.
Interest on Pattawatomie general fund	1,289.72	68.54	26.50		16.80		24.04		197.25	405.82
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			187.10
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	394.16							22.97
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							23.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	1,519.00	175.32			7.60	4.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,080.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	667.50	24.04
Industry among Indians, 1915-16
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		40.76				23.85
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						54.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						5.60
Total	4,950.38	308.66	213.60		24.40	87.70	47.04	22.97	197.25	405.82
POTTAWATOMIE DAY SCHOOL.
Interest on Pottawatomie education fund	1,231.00
Interest on Pottawatomie general fund
Total	1,231.00
PUEBLO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	6,588.80	414.60	67.83	$34.55	78.32	12.25	584.79		293.89	125.41
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			535.44
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,755.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	175.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,401.49
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	2,313.83									83.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			12.30
Industry among Indians, 1915-16
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							29.94			36.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	225.00
Total	14,459.42	414.60	615.57	34.55	78.32	12.25	614.73		293.89	274.41
PUEBLO DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	18,171.11	279.40	57.58	11.45	37.21		346.90	80.51	477.75	293.30
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	18,171.11	279.40	57.58	11.45	37.21		346.90	80.51	477.75	293.30
PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	2,577.57	248.80	115.44	35.45	63.25		254.33	515.45	1,530.31	98.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,364.98

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									PIPESTONE DAY SCHOOL.
	$107.57	$32.95	$21.21					$1,778.49	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					$50.00			50.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								89.90	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
		68.56	.14					69.99	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								53.36	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
	107.57	101.51	21.35		50.00			2,041.74	Total.
									PONCA AGENCY.
$6.20		24.47	509.48				$19.65	6,233.84	Support of Poncas, Oklahoma, 1915.
3.42			78.75				6.85	1,259.83	Support of Kansas Indians, Oklahoma, 1915.
								509.52	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				$4,000.00	754.28			4,754.28	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								321.58	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			73.23				14.74	266.38	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			43.40					786.65	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			213.40					3,042.99	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			3.40					40.96	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4, Kaw.
								73.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								34.50	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
5.75								18.66	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
75.60								87.10	Expense account, mining operations.
33.40			64.15					462.98	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
10.30								10.30	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Kaw.
134.67		24.47	985.81	4,000.00	754.28		41.24	17,902.57	Total.
									PONCA BOARDING SCHOOL.
.52	257.89	164.68	744.89				52.32	16,803.84	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,536.48			1,536.48	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			223.81		106.66		77.00	687.27	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			287.25		278.61			606.58	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		3.25						3.25	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.52	257.89	167.93	1,255.95		1,921.75		129.32	19,637.42	Total.
									POTTAWATOMIE AGENCY.
17.75			207.44				[1] 10.80	2,264.66	Interest on Pottawatomie genera fund.
								187.10	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					386.17			386.17	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								417.13	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
		12.35				$12.65	88.50	136.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
3.15			30.75				9.00	1,749.07	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			313.50					1,393.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							10.70	702.24	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			3,555.50					3,555.50	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
			43.95					108.56	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			32.50					86.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								5.60	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
20.90		12.35	4,183.64		386.17	12.65	119.00	10,992.53	Total.
									POTTAWATOMIE DAY SCHOOL.
								1,231.00	Interest on Pottawatomie education fund.
	3.00							3.00	Interest on Pottawatomie general fund.
	3.00							1,234.00	Total.
									PUEBLO AGENCY.
1.20		43.09	920.14				[2] 493.38	9,658.25	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								535.44	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,755.00	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								175.50	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			82.77					3,484.06	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			2.53			244.66	[3] 11.50	2,655.52	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
				378.08	58.48	1,056.50	[3] 41.55	1,534.61	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			14.10					26.40	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			552.00					552.00	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
			1.80	1,772.96				1,840.70	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								225.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
1.20		43.09	1,573.34	2,151.04	58.48	1,301.16	546.43	22,442.48	Total.
									PUEBLO DAY SCHOOLS.
6.18	52.82		2,040.01				5.00	21,859.22	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				10,893.49	636.78	618.50	[3] 53.45	12,202.22	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
6.18	52.82		2,040.01	10,893.49	636.78	618.50	58.45	34,061.44	Total.
									PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE AGENCY.
3.35		708.17	938.61				[4] 24.00	7,113.23	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								1,364.98	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.

[1] Trees. [2] Seed. [3] Water. [4] Burial expenses.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE AGENCY—continued.
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	$1,045.00							$46.45
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	40.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,072.50						$50.75	81.60		$42.41
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,307.76						.38		$146.16	15.27
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.			$60.00				435.61	69.40	278.50	.24
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Total	6,043.33	$248.80	1,540.42	$35.45	$63.25		741.07	712.90	1,954.97	156.42
PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	5,731.34	19.75	357.54		26.18		287.69	2,873.26		818.77
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		.50
Total	5,731.34	20.25	357.54		26.18		287.69	2,873.26		818.77
PUEBLO BONITO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	6,785.90	395.71	1,117.48				89.15	91.33	2,173.71	123.19
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			3,191.49
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,363.00						126.69	123.46	180.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,000.00								92.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M								6.97
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		19.70
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		6.65
Total	12,148.90	422.06	4,308.97				215.84	221.76	2,445.71	123.19
PUEBLO BONITO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	8,235.75		829.08				3,607.62	2,462.67	240.53	47.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		4.75
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.						$48.86
Total	8,235.75	4.75	829.08			48.86	3,607.62	2,462.67	240.53	47.70
RAPID CITY BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Rapid City, S. Dak., 1915	20,852.35		919.82	1,231.80	143.58	13.17	8,858.48	4,695.80	796.90	6,419.70
Indian school, Rapid City, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies 1915.			1,140.41
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,393.83
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	217.67		36.80		25.80	52.11	167.55	16.56	244.00	49.50
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)
Total	21,070.02	1,393.83	2,097.03	1,271.80	169.38	65.28	9,026.03	4,712.36	1,040.90	6,469.20
RED CLIFF AGENCY.
Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915.	1,320.00	16.50	6.45	20.34	56.68	1.65	190.40		198.10	167.89
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			63.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	330.00						30.00	29.95
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	658.00								32.60
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	922.98								8.51	50.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	1,800.00	38.65					3.50
Individual Indian money						13.70
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						41.50
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	30.85
Total	5,061.83	55.15	69.70	20.34	56.68	56.85	223.90	29.95	238.61	217.89
RED CLIFF DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,491.00	10.80	12.46				80.85	9.10		104.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,491.00	10.80	12.46				80.85	9.10		104.00
RED LAKE AGENCY.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	11,609.39	180.40	19.95				915.55		1,646.76	702.42
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	9,620.19	78.54	73.91		120.00	2.00			10.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,278.79
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,922.67						523.80	276.57
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,620.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,333.26
Proceeds of Red Lake Reservation, Minn
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	3,087.55		112.87			8.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	5.00		24.60

Indian Service, 1916—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE AGENCY—continued.
					$57.95	$462.00	[1] $144.20	$664.15	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,091.45	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								40.50	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			$80.84			115.50		1,443.60	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			63.77					1,533.34	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
$3.35		$164.75	53.97		17.51			1,083.33	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			209.48					209.48	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
6.70		872.92	1,346.67		75.46	577.50	168.20	14,544.06	Total.
									PUEBLO ALBUQUERQUE DAY SCHOOLS.
	$493.49	12.55	317.39					10,937.96	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					14.88	291.50		306.38	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								.50	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	493.49	12.55	317.39		14.88	291.50		11,244.84	Total.
									PUEBLO BONITO AGENCY.
93.50		410.83	6,858.30				[2] 2,311.50	20,450.60	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								3,191.49	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					208.04		[3] 90.60	298.64	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,793.15	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								3,092.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			55.85					62.82	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
		2.00	2,550.00					2,550.00	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
								21.70	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								6.65	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
93.50		412.83	9,464.15		208.04		2,402.10	32,467.05	Total.
									PUEBLO BONITO BOARDING SCHOOL.
40.00	127.14	35.48	2,908.72				110.11	18,644.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,200.71			1,200.71	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								4.75	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
			86.43	$10,300.00	1,073.50			11,508.79	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools Arizona, 1915.
40.00	127.14	35.48	2,995.15	10,300.00	2,274.21		110.11	31,359.05	Total.
									RAPID CITY BOARDING SCHOOL.
101.20	319.63	235.95	2,406.32				255.50	47,290.20	Indian school, Rapid City, S. Dak., 1915.
					4,912.34			4,912.34	Indian school, Rapid City, S. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								1,140.41	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,393.83	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
40.70	76.56	19.30	685.35		73.12		54.52	1,759.54	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		22.83					[4] 149.50	172.33	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							175.00	175.00	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
141.90	396.19	278.08	3,091.67		4,985.46		634.52	56,843.65	Total.
									RED CLIFF AGENCY.
11.00		163.24	382.25				.80	2,535.30	Support of Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., 1915.
								63.25	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					59.12	510.00		569.12	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			4.50					394.45	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								690.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			37.34					1,018.83	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
35.65			103.75				2.00	1,983.55	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								13.70	Individual Indian money.
								41.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
							[4] 35.00	65.85	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
35.65		163.24	527.84		59.12	510.00	37.80	7,375.55	Total.
									RED CLIFF DAY SCHOOL.
	98.50	4.36	117.44					2,928.51	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					61.94	100.00		161.94	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	98.50	4.36	117.44		61.94	100.00		3,090.45	Total.
									RED LAKE AGENCY.
18.00		267.48	11,143.18		328.35		354.50	27,185.98	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
7.75		29.69	383.75				720.70	11,046.53	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
								1,278.79	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				1,322.01	852.85	60.00		2,234.86	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,723.04	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			69.89					1,689.89	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			371.13					1,704.39	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
							[5] 133.55	133.55	Proceeds of Red Lake Reservation, Minn.
			61.02					3,272.44	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
			7.68					35.28	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.

[1] Land, $99. [2] Sheep dip. [3] Use of perforator. [4] Hospital expenses. [5] Refund H. E.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
RED LAKE AGENCY—continued.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, hospital						$22.19
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	$49.50	$3.74
Total	30,415.56	262.68	$1,510.12		$120.00	32.19	$1,439.35	$276.57	$1,656.76	$702.42
RED LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	3.00		47.39				56.73			38.75
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	119.00						2,448.75	1,326.88	393.86	2,135.21
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915									100.07
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	7,251.50	14.85	64.68				35.85		77.50	82.71
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian schools, support, 1915							49.45
Total	7,373.50	14.85	112.07				2,590.78	1,326.88	571.43	2,256.67
CROSS LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	4,121.24	22.60					.57			10.56
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							1,548.65	1,224.37	450.03	464.96
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915		12.95								5.60
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian schools, support, 1915		6.50
Total	4,121.24	42.05					1,549.22	1,224.37	450.03	481.12
RED MOON AGENCY.
Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.	1,858.17	154.76			8.00		1.41		49.43	80.23
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			235.15
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	200.00							26.58
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	300.00							2.91
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	720.00								49.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						7.00
Total	3,078.17	154.76	235.15		8.00	7.00	1.41	29.49	98.93	80.23
RED MOON DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,831.65	2.60					74.04	54.95	115.31	81.46
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	824.42		3.13			4.00	202.94	22.78	365.64	22.28
Total	3,656.07	2.60	3.13			4.00	276.98	77.73	480.95	103.74
RICE STATION BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	15,349.50						7,144.89	2,538.69	965.00	4,102.45
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,559.98
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			438.94
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	200.25		5.83					25.19	61.90
Total	15,549.75		2,004.75				7,144.89	2,563.88	1,026.90	4,102.45
ROSEBUD AGENCY.
Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.	16,633.12	1,469.86	13,588.54		53.06	52.66	50,015.95	¥49.14	3,0d9.01	1,476.11
Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Apr. 23, 1904.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		12.18
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			9,848.87
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915		7.80
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	18,209.51
Pay of Indian police, 1915	8,688.67						80.00	978.90
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Reimbursed to Edward B. Kelly, late superintendent of Rosebud Agency, S. Dak., etc.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M								13.72		45.39
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	5,402.50								13.75
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	61.01	14.70
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,490.00	131.17				7.00
Rosebud Reservation 3 per cent fund, act of May 30, 1910.
Civilization of the Sioux
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		36.70								4.30
Total	51,484.81	1,672.41	23,437.41		53.06	59.66	50,095.95	1,741.76	3,082.76	1,525.80
ROSEBUD BOARDING SCHOOS.
Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.	25.00					21.00	2,881.09	1,817.00	1,524.54	1,035.42
Interest on Sioux fund, Rosebud education	10,577.22								400.00	114.00
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915	17.40	21.17					3,806.12		313.20	796.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota., 1915.	1,179.17
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	37.50						66.75	5.20	147.54
Total	11,836.29	21.17				21.00	6,753.96	1,822.20	2,385.28	1,945.42

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									RED LAKE AGENCY—continued.
				$8,328.28				$8,350.47	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, hospital.
		$26.00						79.24	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
$25.75		323.17	$12,037.65	9,650.29	$1,181.20	$60.00	$1,208.75	60,902.46	Total.
									RED LAKE, BOARDING SCHOOL.
			66.35		9.50			221.72	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.78	$171.31	3.90	556.85		120.04			7,276.58	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
25.10			28.90				88.98	243.05	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
	10.26	18.15	150.33		6.80		2.40	7,715.03	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
					804.26			804.26	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		43.50						43.50	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			195.00					244.45	Indian schools, support, 1915.
35.88	181.57	65.55	997.43		940.60		91.38	16,548.59	Total.
									CROSS LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
			128.78					4,283.75	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
	78.66		349.22	1,171.23	* 414.65			5,701.77	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1.20				18.22	37.97	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
					482.73			482.73	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			213.75					220.25	Indian schools, support, 1915.
	78.66		692.95	1,171.23	897.38		18.22	10,726.47	Total.
									RED MOON AGENCY.
		12.83	204.61				11.08	2,389.52	Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								235.15	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				272.40	66.69			339.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								226.58	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			.80					303.71	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			15.00					784.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								7.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
		12.83	220.41	272.40	66.69		11.08	4,285.55	Total.
									RED MOON DAY SCHOOL.
2.30	6.12		166.44					3,334.87	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					66.60			66.60	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	52.94	8.40	711.02		129.13		79.36	2,426.04	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
2.30	59.06	8.40	877.46		195.73		79.36	5,827.51	Total.
									RICE STATION BOARDING SCHOOL.
	17.47	100.62	734.76				269.10	31,222.48	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								1,559.98	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				853.73	1,542.43			2,835.10	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
15.85		56.30	242.43		477.11		53.24	1,138.10	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
15.85	17.47	156.92	977.19	853.73	2,019.54		322.34	36,755.66	Total.
									ROSEBUD AGENCY.
336.67		1,395.94	36,604.43	34,682.24	2,329.39		4,403.67	166,859.79	Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.
							[1] 120.00	720.00	Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Apr. 23, 1904.
							7.80	19.98	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								9,848.87	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				5,050.00	1,371.72	48.00		6,477.52	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								18,209.51	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
			209.97					9,957.54	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
		30.00					[2] 148.00	178.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							1,558.20	1,558.20	Reimbursed to Edward B. Kelly, late superintendent of Rosebud Agency, S. Dak., etc.
			130.63					189.74	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			755.25					6,171.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			190.00				223.00	488.71	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
61.25							74.00	2,763.42	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
							2,592.46	2,592.46	Rosebud Reservation 3 per cent fund, act of May 30, 1910.
			153,083.26				[3] 63,525.08	216,608.34	Civilization of the Sioux.
			19.95					60.95	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
397.92		1,425.94	190,993.49	39,732.24	3,701.11	48.00	73,252.21	442,704.53	Total.
									ROSEBUD BOARDING SCHOOL.
1.56	613.60	.79	1,205.04		1,596.71			10,721.75	Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.
			751.07		54.00			11,896.29	Interest on Sioux fund, Rosebud education.
	43.34		206.65		489.95		.80	5,694.63	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,179.17	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
	14.60		263.07				12.00	546.66	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
1.56	671.54	.79	2,425.83		2,140.66		12.80	30,038.50	Total.

[1] Refund hospital expenses.

[2] Hospital expenses, costs in suit.

[3] Treaty benefit payment.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
ROSEBUD DAY SCHOOL.
Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.							$1,184.07	$3,878.45		$945.09
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.	$29,820.25	$259.26					1,024.33	4.70		475.75
Total	29,820.25	259.26					2,208.40	3,883.15		1,420.84
ROSEBURG AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	3,036.72	1,724.02		$12.00	$86.89					163.30
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	67.50						165.35	49.85		14.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			$3.72
Support of Indians in California, 1915							302.64
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, for	431.33	302.71
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$39.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	60.00		1.25			3.50
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	3,630.55	1,225.17
Indian schools, support 1915
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	7,226.10	3,251.90	4.97	12.00	86.89	43.00	467.99	49.85		177.30
ROUND VALLEY AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	2,068.13	54.36	29.04		5.74		292.14	108.16	$346.38	6.59
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			382.53
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	209.00
Pay of Indian police, 1915	898.67							46.56
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Individual Indian money									192.20
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	3.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,470.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,050.00								125.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	878.96						18.35	9.31	59.00	12.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)	18.00		265.25
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	889.01	104.45			.34
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		8.60
Total	7,484.77	167.41	676.82		6.08		310.49	164.03	722.83	18.59
ROUND VALLEY DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	7,427.70	90.88	68.95		30.40		120.97	14.71	9.80	443.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915	[1] 8.50	15.50			.21
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	307.91						1.70		90.00	2.10
Indian school, transportation, 1915		759.27			.73
Total	7,744.11	865.65	68.95		31.34		122.67	14.71	99.80	445.35
SAC AND FOX AGENCY, IOWA.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	488.50				7.00				173.40	21.28
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	885.00							53.49
Interest Sac and Fox of Mississippi fund, Iowa, acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.	[2] 500.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			744.19
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	330.90		7.50			85.50				22.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,200.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M							50.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	12.00
Total	3,416.40		751.69		7.00	85.50	50.00	53.49	173.40	43.78
SAC AND FOX DAY SCHOOLS, IOWA.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,255.93		21.59		20.00		325.17	438.00		82.85
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	2,255.93		21.59		20.00		325.17	438.00		82.85
SAC AND FOX SANATORIUM, IOWA.
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	11,576.19	1,257.04	238.89	334.49	61.82	2.20	4,386.80	1,990.25	342.50	670.39
Indian schools, support, 1915	165.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	33.75		36.01		12.00		9.23	3.64	87.40
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	11,774.94	1,257.04	274.90	334.49	73.82	2.20	4,396.03	1,993.89	429.90	670.39
SAC AND FOX AGENCY, OKLA.
Interest on Sac and Fox of the Mississippi fund, Oklahoma; acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.	5,024.35	462.84	25.97		84.36				692.50	423.31
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			574.03
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,620.00								39.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	60.89
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	517.50	45.58

[1] Surveyor.

[2] Chief's salary.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									ROSEBUD DAY SCHOOLS.
.....	$1,448.73	.....	$1,035.93	$525.00	$826.78	.....	.....	$9,844.05	Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907.
.....	170.54	.....	140.59	.....	241.00	$00.00	.....	32,196.42	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
.....	1,619.27	.....	1,176.52	525.00	1,067.78	00.00	.....	42,040.47	Total.
									ROSEBURG AGENCY.
$4.00	.....	.....	363.65	.....	.....	690.00	.....	6,080.58	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	296.70	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.72	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	302.64	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	734.04	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	39.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
343.20	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	407.95	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
125.25	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	4,980.97	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	$0.75	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.75	Indian schools support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	30.00	.....	30.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
472.45	.....	.75	363.65	.....	.....	720.00	.....	12,876.85	Total.
									ROUND VALLEY AGENCY.
.....	.....	287.65	169.96	.....	.....	.....	$31.00	3,399.15	Supportof Indians in California, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	382.53	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	20.93	.....	.....	20.93	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
94.58	.....	.....	558.70	.....	.....	.....	.....	862.28	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	945.23	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	3.50	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	[1] 1,230.07	1,422.27	Individual Indian money.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	3.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
.....	.....	.....	125.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,595.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,175.25	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
.....	.....	.....	39.13	.....	.....	120.00	.....	1,136.75	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	1,904.76	.....	.....	.....	[2] 1,458.25	3,646.26	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
186.23	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,180.03	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	8.60	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
280.81	.....	287.65	2,801.05	.....	20.93	120.00	2,719.32	15,780.78	Total.
									ROUND VALLEY DAY SCHOOLS.
11.63	183.18	9.36	575.88	.....	.....	.....	4.45	8,991.16	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	433.62	414.00	[3] 125.00	996.83	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	57.00	.....	.....	.....	152.81	611.52	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	760.00	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
11.63	183.18	9.36	632.88	.....	433.62	414.00	282.26	11,359.51	Total.
									SAC AND FOX AGENCY, IOWA.
.....	.....	200.03	45.58	.....	.....	.....	.....	935.79	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	200.00	.....	200.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	938.49	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	500.00	Interest Sac and Fox of Mississippi fund, Iowa, acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	744.19	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	4.80	.....	.....	.....	[4] 1,008.86	1,460.06	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	.....	.....	269.80	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,469.80	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	50.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	12.00	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
.....	.....	200.03	320.18	.....	.....	200.00	1,008.86	6,310.33	Total.
									SAC AND FOX DAY SCHOOLS, IOWA.
.....	268.81	.20	218.67	.....	.....	.....	3.00	3,634.22	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	206.34	.....	.....	206.34	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	9.60	.....	424.70	.....	.....	434.30	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.....	268.81	.20	228.27	.....	631.04	.....	3.00	4,274.86	Total.
									SAC AND FOX SANATORIUM, IOWA.
25.00	57.95	362.05	1,460.41	5,721.14	1,829.31	.....	203.16	30,520.09	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
.....	20.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	185.00	Indian schools, support, 1915.
1.00	.....	10.05	262.50	.....	2.05	.....	8.55	466.18	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,124.29	.....	.....	1,124.29	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
26.00	77.95	372.10	1,722.91	5,721.14	2,956.15	.....	211.71	32,295.56	Total.
									SAC AND FOX AGENCY, OKLA.
27.10	.....	97.17	207.58	.....	.....	.....	21.96	7,067.14	Interest on Sac and Fox of the Mississippi fund, Oklahoma; acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	440.19	420.00	.....	860.19	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	574.03	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	1,659.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.....	.....	.....	5.61	.....	41.92	.....	5.40	113.82	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	10.00	.....	573.08	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees 1915.

[1] Vaquero fees. [2] Seed. [3] Abstract. [4] Taxes on Indian land, $935.13.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SAC AND FOX AGENCY, OKLA.—continued.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$9.15
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		$5.81
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	$2,038.22	112.10
Special deposits, R. of W. inspection		21.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor				$3.00						$31.75
Total	9,260.96	647.33	$600.00	3.00	$84.36	9.15			$731.50	455.06
SAC AND FOX BOARDING SCHOOL, OKLAHOMA.
Indian schools support, 1915	3,370.83		183.39		1.85		$2,088.61	$1,195.47	415.78	709.48
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	343.37						7.55
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	90.00
Indian school, transportation, 1915		24.95
Interest on Sac and Fox of the Mississippi fund, Oklahoma; acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.	4,725.43
Total	8,529.63	24.95	183.39		1.85		2,096.16	1,195.47	415.78	709.48
ST. LOUIS WAREHOUSE.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.	7,505.85	351.61	352.30	80.63	168.03	9.00				36.41
SALEM BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Salem, Oreg., 1915	38,482.91	74.10	50.60		187.42	24.40	22,399.96	18,159.19	160.05	10,846.68
Indian school, Salem, Oreg., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			9,024.72		29.57
Indian school, transportation, 1915		8,291.64			71.61
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	261.35	440.80	80.00		12.00
Indian schools support, 1915 (tuition)
Indian school, Salem, Oreg., assembly hall
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	38,744.26	8,806.54	9,155.32		300.60	24.40	22,399.96	18,159.19	160.05	10,846.68
SALT RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3,192.67	28.45	129.79		26.86		145.19		107.50	134.20
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			367.97
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	829.33							41.98
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,297.33
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			117.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	5,403.33	28.45	614.76		26.86		145.19	41.98	107.50	134.20
SALT RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools support, 1915	5,193.34	6.15	1.30		25.77	1.75	30.39	181.24	100.00	353.65
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	5,193.34	6.15	1.30		25.77	1.75	30.39	181.24	100.00	353.65
SAN CARLOS AGENCY.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	46,593.76	193.95				28.52	12,428.81	352.60	4,695.00	4,317.95
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			4,500.94
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,935.84							237.42	280.65
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	174.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,200.00							.29		.20
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,189.67
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		111.27	2.00		15.59		95.15			5.45
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3	313.83
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3.00	25.00			23.09					146.92
Total	53,410.10	330.22	4,502.94		38.68	28.52	12,523.96	590.31	4,975.65	4,470.52
SAN CARLOS DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,250.00		2.41				211.75
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	4,464.83	.30					157.20	815.29		240.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	17.70						24.52	4.80
Total	6,732.53	.30	2.41				393.47	820.09		240.00
SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.	6,873.68	38.20	375.54	14.40	145.82

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SAC AND FOX AGENCY, OKLA.—continued.
								$9.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								5.81	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								2,150.32	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								21.00	Special deposits, R. of W. inspection.
							$3.65	38.40	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
$27.10		$97.17	$213.19		$482.11	$430.00	31.01	13,071.94	Total.
									SAC AND FOX BOARDING SCHOOL, OKLAHOMA.
24.68	$134.57		548.65				91.44	8,764.75	Indian schools support, 1915.
					771.96			771.96	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			7.20		196.49		98.00	652.61	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		1.30						1.30	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
					12.50			102.50	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								24.95	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
					6.35			4,731.78	Interest on Sac and Fox of the Mississippi fund, Oklahoma; acts of Mar. 3, 1909, and Apr. 4, 1910.
24.68	134.57	1.30	555.85		987.30		189.44	15,049.85	Total.
									ST. LOUIS WAREHOUSE.
325.16			28.92			1,500.00	8.00	10,365.91	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
									SALEM BOARDING SCHOOL.
181.85	1,212.32	442.28	6,071.54				475.53	98,768.83	Indian school, Salem, Oreg., 1915.
					11,626.67			11,626.67	Indian school, Salem, Oreg., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								9,054.29	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								8,363.25	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
1.75			233.62		1,323.79		306.30	2,659.61	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							[1] 293.35	293.35	Indian schools support, 1915 (tuition).
				$25.00				25.00	Indian school, Salem, Oreg., assembly hall.
		73.75						73.75	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
					135.00			135.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
183.60	1,212.32	516.03	6,305.16	25.00	13,085.46		1,075.18	130,999.75	Total.
									SALT RIVER AGENCY.
140.00		248.89	2,941.38				306.45	7,401.38	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								367.97	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				1,499.88	28.14			1,528.02	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								871.31	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								1,297.33	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F
			52.76					52.76	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			542.73				[2] 158.40	818.13	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
							[2] 15.00	15.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
140.00		248.89	3,536.87	1,499.88	28.14		479.85	12,435.90	Total.
									SALT RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
.78	164.96	11.50	532.49				8.43	6,611.75	Indian schools support, 1915.
					93.17			93.17	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	1.20		41.23					42.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.78	166.16	11.50	573.72		93.17		8.43	6,747.35	Total.
									SAN CARLOS AGENCY.
		275.40	52,778.00	4,487.92	400.74		[3] 1,275.17	127,827.82	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								4,500.94	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				445.49	362.80			808.29	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,453.91	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								174.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			92.95					1,293.44	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			26.00					2,215.67	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			757.99					757.99	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
		10.50	950.43		166.55		72.92	1,429.86	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							21.78	335.61	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
		25.50						25.50	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
		129.60	17.10					344.71	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
		441.00	54,622.47	4,933.41	930.09		1,369.87	143,167.74	Total.
									SAN CARLOS DAY SCHOOLS.
	6.54							2,470.70	Indian schools, support, 1915.
.52	173.37	4.29	200.72	3,534.73	1,441.04			11,032.20	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			12.48		13.79		9.70	82.99	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.52	179.91	4.29	213.20	3,534.73	1,454.83		9.70	13,585.98	Total.
									SAN FRANCISCO WAREHOUSE.
60.30			44.60			2,400.00	139.05	10,091.59	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.

[1] Tuition. [2] Seed. [3] Ground water investigations, $1,000; hospital expenses, $275.17.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SAN JUAN AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	$16,930.20	$79.05	$609.73		$75.70		$153.78		$1,960.50	$402.26
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			3,767.63
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	6,295.99						214.52	$147.15	610.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	145.13
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	4,365.83								500.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	640.00	280.03
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	63.90				4.50					11.60
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			288.58
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	697.56
Total	29,138.61	359.08	4,665.94		80.20		368.30	147.15	3,070.50	413.86
SAN JUAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	25,013.82	45.06	644.37		6.69		5,384.41	2,252.37	999.50	284.78
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	482.42		8.97		11.75		183.40	5.28		193.83
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	25,496.24	45.06	653.34		18.44		5,567.81	2,257.65	999.50	478.61
SAN JUAN DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,063.33	25.10	77.91				481.55	440.61		228.02
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
Total	1,063.33	25.10	77.91				481.55	440.61		228.02
SANTA FE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	2,560.66	264.10	142.02		39.54		1.27	.76	1,416.53	211.08
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			4,486.35
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	440.00							78.57
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	99.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,567.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	375.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	935.00						13.80	15.58		62.49
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			482.75
Total	5,977.16	264.10	5,111.12		39.54		15.07	94.91	1,416.53	273.57
SANTA FE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., 1915	25,121.74	7.25		$1,109.62	113.05	$2.50	11,682.77	6,547.52	1,913.28	5,763.59
Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,402.74
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					14.10			18.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor					14.10
Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., buildings		6.95
Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., dairy barn
Total	25,121.74	1,416.94		1,109.62	141.25	2.50	11,682.77	6,566.02	1,913.28	5,763.59
SANTA FE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools support, 1915	4,463.88	55.15	36.60		37.82		73.42	1,711.48		626.43
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	4,463.88	55.15	36.60		37.82		73.42	1,711.48		626.43
SANTEE AGENCY.
Subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.	982.50	37.15	241.38		47.65	27.00	2,073.62		307.13	598.49
Interest on Sioux fund, Santee, education	1,700.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	36.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			343.84
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		8.70								21.48
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	85.00							20.47
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	4,595.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,100.00								102.88
Determining heirs of deceased, Indian allottees, 1915.	735.00	48.27
Support of Poncas, Oklahoma, 1915	180.00	15.55	15.01		7.50				138.88	105.07
Industry among Indians, 1915
Civilization of the Sioux
Total	10,413.50	109.67	600.23		55.15	27.00	2,073.62	20.47	548.89	725.04
SAN XAVIER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3,919.63	184.26					237.16		191.73	467.68
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			2,717.17
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SAN JUAN AGENCY.
		$500.97	$4,871.40				[1] $1,909.75	$27,493.34	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								3,767.63	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				$6,037.86	$1,270.39		1.50	7,309.75	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								7,267.66	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								145.13	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								4,865.83	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								920.03	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
		5.95	51.85		4.00			141.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			1,872.75				[2] 999.97	3,161.30	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			275.15					972.71	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		506.92	7,071.15	6,037.86	1,274.39		2,911.22	56,045.18	Total.
									SAN JUAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
$1.56	$299.83	38.63	2,920.44				3.25	37,894.71	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,235.17			1,235.17	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
13.20		48.55	474.01		151.01		89.74	1,662.16	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					528.00			528.00	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
			118.70					118.70	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
14.76	299.83	87.18	3,513.15		1,914.18		92.99	41,438.74	Total.
									SAN JUAN DAY SCHOOLS.
	24.15	518.64	386.03					3,245.34	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					20.90			20.90	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
				12,702.33				12,702.33	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
	24.15	518.64	386.03	12,702.33	20.90			15,968.57	Total.
									SANTA FE AGENCY.
3.50		647.29	930.85				1.00	6,218.60	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								4,486.35	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					97.35	$429.00		526.35	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								518.57	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								99.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								1,567.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								375.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			52.90			111.82		1,191.59	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			793.78					1,276.53	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
3.50		647.29	1,777.53		97.35	540.82	1.00	16,259.49	Total.
									SANTA FE BOARDING SCHOOL.
32.00	235.42	292.67	6,231.79				[3] 1,756.11	60,809.31	Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., 1915.
					5,513.54			5,513.54	Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								1,402.74	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
2.25	41.74		214.65		52.75		30.35	374.34	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		5.00						19.10	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								6.95	Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., buildings.
				3,959.75				3,959.75	Indian school, Santa Fe, N. Mex., dairy barn.
34.25	277.16	297.67	6,446.44	3,959.75	5,566.29		1,786.46	72,085.73	Total.
									SANTA FE DAY SCHOOLS.
	475.31		363.74					7,843.83	Indian schools support, 1915.
					134.15	70.00	[4] 59.50	263.65	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	475.31		363.74		134.15	70.00	59.50	8,107.48	Total.
									SANTEE AGENCY.
236.00		142.62	1,392.42				12.65	6,098.61	Subsistence and civilization, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,700.00	Interest on Sioux fund, Santee, education.
			190.40					226.40	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								343.84	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					1,902.04			1,902.04	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			40.25		2.50		49.00	121.93	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		2.00						2.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								105.47	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								4,595.00	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
			715.75					2,918.63	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							3.30	786.57	Determining heirs of deceased, Indian allottees 1915.
			534.96					996.97	Support of Poncas, Oklahoma, 1915.
							[2] 656.45	656.45	Industry among Indians, 1915.
							[5] 5,353.82	5,353.82	Civilization of the Sioux.
236.00		144.62	2,873.78		1,904.54		6,075.22	25,807.73	Total.
									SAN XAVIER AGENCY.
42.43		291.34	3,670.07				90.00	9,094.30	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								2,717.17	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				262.50	159.13			421.63	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.

[1] Sheep dip, all but 25 cents. [2] Seed. [3] Irrigation water, $1,600. [4] School site (land), $55; water, $4.50. [5] Treaty Ban. payment.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SAN XAVIER AGENCY—continued.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	$1,830.00							$171.23
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	932.50	$16.45		$61.23			$5.52		$3.93
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,400.00	13.10								$78.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			$10.82				14.40
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,342.44	297.12
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			2.32
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.						$49.05
Total	11,592.57	510.93	2,730.31	61.23		49.05	257.08	171.23	195.66	545.68
SAN XAVIER DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	4,450.00						447.14	156.91		166.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
School facilities for Papago Indians in Arizona, 1915.		292.33				112.77
Total	4,450.00	292.33				112.77	447.14	156.91		166.70
SEGER AGENCY.
Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.	4,895.75	247.08	150.40		$49.20	12.00			123.78	326.72
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			441.08
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	480.00							35.92
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						26.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4						16.75
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,398.50	97.73							40.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	865.00	14.20
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	239.75	25.00
Total	8,479.00	384.01	591.48		49.20	55.25		35.92	163.78	326.72
SEGER BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	9,352.55	13.48	1,293.72		8.92		2,703.36	1,520.87	86.00	2,283.32
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	107.25	66.87			2.70	20.75	150.36	6.80		109.81
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor								102.36	90.00
Indian school, transportation, 1915		17.74
Total	9,459.80	98.09	1,293.72		11.62	20.75	2,853.72	1,630.03	176.00	2,393.13
SENECA AGENCY.
Support of Quapaws, employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915.	480.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						45.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			483.99
Pay of Indian police, 1915	240.00							20.19
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	2,340.00	177.41			64.13					8.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	654.50
Total	3,714.50	177.41	483.99		64.13	45.00		20.19		8.00
SENECA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	10,570.03		8.05				3,972.27	2,367.80	856.84	1,172.57
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	55.62				12.00	2.50	42.11		43.45	7.87
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	150.00
Total	10,775.65		8.05		12.00	2.50	4,014.38	2,367.80	900.29	1,180.44
SHAWNEE AGENCY.
Support of Kickapoos, Oklahoma, 1915	900.00	30.00		89.69	71.55				52.25	304.90
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			349.42
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	7.70	4.94
Pay of Indian police, 1915	770.67						55.72		69.19
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						7.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,740.00	245.02							328.32
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	588.33							3.97	43.22	24.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	898.75	475.44		17.14	73.20	3.50			162.66
Payment drainage assessment on allotted lands in Pottawatomie County, Okla. (reimbursable), 1915.
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Industry among Indians, 1915
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	800.00
Total	5,705.45	755.40	349.42	106.83	144.75	10.75	55.72	3.97	655.64	328.90

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SAN XAVIER AGENCY—continued.
								$2,001.23	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			$35.43			$441.00		1,496.06	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								2,491.10	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		$4.10	632.34		$36.75		$108.50	806.91	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			10.58					10.58	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								2,639.56	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								2.32	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
		19.50					152.74	221.29	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
$42.43		314.94	4,348.42	$262.50	195.88	441.00	351.24	22,070.15	Total.
									SAN XAVIER DAY SCHOOL.
.26	$97.16	159.48	275.64				5.65	5,758.94	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				863.00	188.87	323.33		1,375.20	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
				6,923.40				7,328.50	School facilities for Papago Indians in Arizona, 1915.
.26	97.16	159.48	275.64	7,786.40	188.87	323.33	5.65	14,462.64	Total.
									SEGER AGENCY.
129.11		271.70	356.12				17.40	6,579.26	Support of Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								441.08	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					137.97			137.97	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								515.92	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								26.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								16.75	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			260.00					1,796.23	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			315.00			45.00		960.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								879.20	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
65.00			25.00					354.75	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
194.11		271.70	956.12		137.97	45.00	17.40	11,707.66	Total.
									SEGER BOARDING SCHOOL.
9.02	214.13	1.77	1,113.71				16.95	18,617.80	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					740.63			740.63	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
1.11	20.12	14.87	1,234.06		213.91		273.35	2,221.96	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			55.72		1,160.45			1,408.53	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								17.74	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
10.13	234.25	16.64	2,403.49		2,114.99		290.30	23,006.66	Total.
									SENECA AGENCY.
			18.14					498.14	Support of Quapaws, employees, etc., Oklahoma, 1915.
							4.50	49.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								483.99	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								260.19	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
140.00							97.50	237.50	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
2.95								2,502.49	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
							[1] 184.25	838.75	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
142.95			18.14				286.25	4,960.56	Total.
									SENECA BOARDING SCHOOL.
1.30	243.32	224.45	2,979.77					22,396.40	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,516.92			1,516.92	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			144.06				52.82	360.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			16.25					16.25	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		1.89						151.89	Relieving distress and prevention o disease among Indians, 1915.
1.30	243.32	226.34	3,140.08		1,516.92		52.82	24,441.89	Total.
									SHAWNEE AGENCY.
5.60			444.70				28.84	1,927.53	Support of Kickapoos, Oklahoma, 1915.
								349.42	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					62.15	347.98		416.13	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								12.64	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								895.58	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								7.25	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
			62.00					2,375.34	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			15.00					674.52	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
11.05			97.80				4.50	1,744.04	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
							[2] 18,256.66	18,256.66	Payment drainage assessment on allotted lands in Pottawatomie County, Okla. (reimbursable), 1915.
			1,271.90					1,271.90	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
		2.35	5.20			10.00		17.55	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			250.00					250.00	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
			2,241.50					2,241.50	Industry among Indians, 1915.
							16.10	816.10	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
16.65		2.35	4,388.10		62.15	357.98	18,306.10	31,250.16	Total.

[1] Witness fees.

[2] Assessment on drainage district.

Detailed statement of expenditures.

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SHAWNEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$10,849.68		$70.05	$706.41	$39.23	$64.00	$4,183.45	$1,617.85	$575.47	$2,007.98
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	49.52
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	525.33					10.25	53.65	15.65	189.35	15.60
Total	11,424.53		70.05	706.41	39.23	74.25	4,237.10	1,633.50	764.82	2,023.58
SHERMAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Riverside, Cal., 1915	39,582.70			3,007.97	251.55	36.50	22,849.33	13,550.61	1,137.36	5,406.37
Indian school, Riverside, Cal. (repairs and improvements), 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			7,015.73
Indian school, transportation, 1915		$5,996.10			47.11
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	13.50		2.42				10.00		75.25
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	63.00				66.00
Special deposits, athletic association
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	39,659.20	6,996.10	7,018.15	3,007.97	364.66	36.50	22,859.33	13,550.61	1,212.61	5,406.37
SHIVWITS AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	500.00						54.50	10.90
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			98.41
Pay of Indian police, 1915	104.00
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	475.00							20.23
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp	75.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							220.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							143.19
Total	1,238.00		98.41				417.69	31.13
SHIVWITS DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,042.00		51.99		36.00		78.27	174.24	236.10	161.29
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			4.21
Total	2,042.00		56.20		36.00		78.27	174.24	236.10	164.29
SHOSHONE AGENCY.
Support of Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915.	9,593.19	198.51	320.00		57.82	15.00	4,000.50		965.15	724.53
Support of Shoshones in Wyoming, 1915	2,261.80	547.82	318.99		57.82	29.63	4,303.60		151.50	713.97
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			4,246.39
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Support of Shoshones: Employees, etc., Wyoming, 1915.	5,561.67
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,820.00							236.99
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	5,050.50								150.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	1,939.03	15.00					40.55		1.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	9,450.92	936.84	1,987.49			193.93	291.73		3,224.00	3.22
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							2.83
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,912.50	95.46
Industry among Indians, 1915			1,863.72
Repairs, Fort Washakie, Wind River Reservation, Wyo., 1915.	1,081.25
Roads and bridges, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo. (reimbursed), 1915.	18,966.70		1,400.92						3.00
Reimbursement to Bishop N. S. Thomas, Wyoming
Pro. of Wind River Reservation, Wyo	37.38
Total	59,674.94	1,793.63	10,137.51		115.64	238.56	8,639.21	236.99	4,495.15	1,441.72
SHOSHONE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., 1915.	13,617.91		3,548.66		69.26		5,307.42	2,437.31		3,549.47
Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	891.50		38.02				389.05			9.40
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		29.25
Total	14,509.41	29.25	3,586.68		69.26		5,696.47	2,437.31		3,558.87
SHOSHONE DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,758.00		60.00				169.16	42.81		214.96
SILETZ AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Grande Ronde and Siletz Agencies, Oreg., 1915.	2,088.00	194.40	28.75		24.00		701.27			220.67
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			116.50
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SHAWNEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$202.85	$145.73	$1,183.65				$186.86	$21,833.21	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					$2,936.14			2,936.14	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			68.00		195.43			312.95	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
$10.54	67.05	13.97	712.46		235.80		89.69	1,939.34	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
10.54	269.90	159.70	1,964.11		3,367.37		276.55	27,021.64	Total.
									SHERMAN BOARDING SCHOOL.
272.80	657.17	709.96	17,451.89			$75.00	[1] 1,719.77	106,708.98	Indian school, Riverside, Cal., 1915.
					9,944.80			9,944.80	Indian school, Riverside, Cal. (repairs and improvements), 1915.
								7,015.73	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								7,043.21	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
48.60			170.55		26.90			347.22	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								129.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							[2] 331.61	331.61	Special deposits, athletic association.
		41.40					[3] 26.75	68.15	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
321.40	657.17	751.36	17,622.44		9,971.70	75.00	2,078.13	131,588.70	Total.
									SHIVWITS AGENCY.
		3.60	143.05					712.05	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								98.41	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								104.00	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			9.00					504.23	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			65.00				[4] 25.00	165.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
							[4] 16.75	16.75	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
		13.29	27.90					261.19	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
		13.15	20.25					177.19	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		30.64	265.20				41.75	2,122.82	Total.
									SHIVWITS DAY SCHOOL.
3.35	50.57	52.68	132.33					3,021.82	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					420.57			424.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
3.35	50.57	52.68	132.33		420.57			3,446.60	Total.
									SHOSHONE AGENCY.
45.95		193.23	2,709.49				[5] 130.00	18,953.37	Support of Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915.
135.35		34.79	3,012.68					11,567.95	Support of Shoshones in Wyoming, 1915.
								4,246.39	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					952.68			952.68	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								5,561.67	Support of Shoshones: Employees, etc., Wyoming, 1915.
								3,056.99	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								5,200.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								1,996.08	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
							[4] 454.50	454.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
		55.46	2,898.57		6,462.99		3,734.45	29,239.66	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
							9.80	9.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
.98			1.20		7.76			12.77	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								3,007.96	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			24,117.55					25,981.27	Industry among Indians, 1915.
					499.97			1,581.22	Repairs, Fort Washakie, Wind River Reservation, Wyo., 1915.
			3,497.90	$976.50				24,845.02	Roads and bridges, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo. (reimbursable), 1915.
					391.84			391.84	Reimbursement to Bishop N. S. Thomes, Wyoming.
								37.38	Pro. of Wind River Reservation, Wyo.
182.28		283.48	36,237.39	976.50	8,315.24		4,328.75	137,096.99	Total.
									SHOSHONE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	236.64	125.56	1,306.80					30,199.03	Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., 1915.
				1,980.48	950.04			2,930.52	Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., repairs and improvements, 1915.
	56.71		342.29		10.42		[4] 139.16	1,876.55	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			176.04					176.04	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		13.00						13.00	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								29.25	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	293.35	138.56	1,825.13	1,980.48	960.46		139.16	35,224.39	Total.
									SHOSHONE DAY SCHOOL.
	30.80		83.49					2,359.22	Indian schools, support, 1915.
									SILETZ AGENCY.
		238.59	275.20				[6] 124.00	3,894.88	Support of Indians of Grande Ronde and Siletz Agencies, Oreg., 1915.
								116.50	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					57.64			57.64	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.

[1] Irrigation water, $914.07; seed, etc., $667.70. [2] Athletic purposes. [3] Medical examination. [4] Seed. [5] Horses killed. [6] Hospital expenses, etc.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SILETZ AGENCY—continued.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	$1,320.00							$129.59
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	780.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	450.00
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	4,638.00	$194.40	$145.25		$21.00		$701.27	129.59		$221.67
SILETZ DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,996.67		2.46				2.01	5.53		235.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							15.00
Total	2,996.67		2.46				17.01	5.53		235.33
SISSETON AGENCY.
Interest on Sisseton and Wahpeton fund	4,624.08	648.10			199.91				$229.10
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,107.62
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	480.00
Industry among Indians, 1915–16		44.00
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	720.00	47.09							40.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	2,807.75	32.52			.99
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	8,631.83	771.71	1,107.62		200.90				269.10
SISSETON BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Sisseton and Wahpeton fund	11,998.73	12.70	813.97			$18.00	5,776.36	2,779.48	128.53	1,949.46
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	39.57								158.30
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	12,038.30	12.70	813.97			18.00	5,776.36	2,779.48	286.83	1,949.46
SOBOBA AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	4,396.00	858.89	173.34	$283.54	136.80		163.10	.48	631.88	550.48
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			462.26
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	2,820.00							70.59
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	420.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F									160.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		23.50								10.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							348.25
Purchase of lands for landless Indians in California.		12.95
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)	4.00		116.32
Industry among Indians, 1915
Total	7,640.00	895.34	751.92	283.54	136.80		511.35	71.07	791.88	560.48
SOBOBA DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	7,297.65	214.12	54.99	200.35	81.10		370.26	61.72	40.00	508.95
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		907.34
Total	7,297.65	1,121.46	54.99	200.35	81.10		370.26	61.72	40.00	508.95
SOUTHERN UTE AGENCY.
Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund	1,193.33	240.81			24.92		358.55	6.53	498.28	461.34
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,493.32
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,235.00							76.68
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.							4,948.14
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, seeds and implements, Utah, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4										8.10
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00							23.14	4.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,740.00
Proceeds of Southern Ute Reservation
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.	4,939.96
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		102.90
Payment to Confederated Bands of Utes (reimbursable).	87.17	28.07								48.90
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.		1.41			1.80
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund
Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.	811.70	829.55	1,154.90
Total	10,607.16	1,202.74	2,648.22		26.72		5,306.69	106.35	502.28	518.34

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SILETZ AGENCY—continued.
								$1,449.59	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			$32.00					812.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								450.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
		$21.85						21.85	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			25.70					25.70	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		260.44	332.90		$57.64		$124.00	6,828.16	Total.
									SILETZ DAY SCHOOL.
$0.13	$120.72	$1.32	$117.13					3,481.30	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					201.67			201.67	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								15.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
.13	120.72	1.32	117.13		201.67			3,697.97	Total.
									SISSETON AGENCY.
			1,506.47		449.05		[1] 3,939.70	11,596.41	Interest on Sisseton and Wahpeton fund.
								1,107.62	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				$736.05	1,464.32	$240.00		2,440.37	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								480.00	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
							[2] 3,989.08	4,033.08	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
			[3] 19,206.00					19,206.00	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			330.75					1,137.84	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
18.25								2,859.51	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			800.00	1,400.00				2,200.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
18.25			21,843.22	2,136.05	1,913.37	240.00	7,928.78	45,060.83	Total.
									SISSETON BOARDING SCHOOL.
1.30	180.78	215.58	1,691.88	284.50	553.57			26,404.84	Interest on Sisseton and Wahpeton fund.
			278.80				25.46	502.13	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					94.28			94.28	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
1.30	180.78	215.58	1,970.68	284.50	647.85		25.46	27,001.25	Total.
									SOBOBA AGENCY.
		482.13	561.82			18.75	344.25	8,601.46	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								462.26	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			1.00	399.65	61.56	150.00		611.21	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,891.59	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								420.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			250.00					410.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		2.50	14.50				1.13	51.63	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		36.65						384.90	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[4] 30.00	42.95	Purchase of lands for landless Indians in California.
			2,805.42				[5] 821.12	3,746.86	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			1,660.00				[2] 11.91	1,671.91	Industry among Indians, 1915.
		521.28	5,292.74	399.65	61.56	168.75	1,208.41	19,294.77	Total.
									SOBOBA DAY SCHOOL.
64.56	257.47	8.39	1,477.15				51.59	10,688.30	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				883.50	429.28			1,312.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								907.34	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
64.56	257.47	8.39	1,477.15	883.50	429.28		51.59	12,908.42	Total.
									SOUTHERN UTE AGENCY.
2.25		236.32	970.42					3,992.75	Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund.
								1,493.32	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				2,000.00	343.06	135.41		2,478.47	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,311.68	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								4,948.14	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
			1,553.40					1,553.40	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, seed and implements, Utah, 1915.
			1.00					9.10	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			325.96					953.10	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
								1,740.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							[6] 120.00	120.09	Proceeds of Southern Ute Reservation.
								4,939.96	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.
			82.20					185.10	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1,814.11				[7] 177.75	2,156.00	Payment to Confederated Bands of Utes (reimbursable).
								3.21	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
		2.10						2.10	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[8] 1,358.71	1,358.71	Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
			6,301.50				489.75	9,587.40	Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
2.25		238.42	11,048.59	2,000.00	343.06	135.41	2,146.21	36,832.44	Total.

[1] Seed, $3,747.95. [2] Seed. [3] Cows. [4] Abstract of title. [5] Seed and trees. [6] Refunds. [7] Fair premiums.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
SOUTHERN UTE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$7,644.26	$25.80					$292.82	$880.52	$177.87	$1,353.36
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	40.75						20.00		88.05
Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.							2,499.92
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.		26.10
Total	7,685.01	51.90					2,812.74	880.52	265.92	1,353.36
SOUTHERN UTE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,075.00						3.48	150.95		23.68
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.							84.08
Total	1,075.00						87.56	150.95		23.68
SPOKANE AGENCY.
Fulfilling treaties with Spokanes	3,746.50	25.80	$631.88				305.71		236.20	193.96
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			157.99
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	12.00	240.58			$42.92		18.80		195.92	44.54
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Support of Spokanes, Washington, 1915	590.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor			24.00
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,027.67						239.66	84.90	35.80
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	900.00	2.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	3,042.88
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	9,487.55	268.88	813.87		42.92		561.17	84.90	467.92	238.50
SPOKANE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	4,640.00	1.00	62.35				236.23	61.96		266.60
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							22.00
Total	4,640.00	1.00	62.35				258.23	61.96		266.60
SPRINGFIELD BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	5,148.46		56.01	$10.40	43.30	$1.75	2,005.70	1,101.42	431.65	786.27
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			674.06
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4					3.00		7.60
Indian school, transportation, 1915		42.38
Total	5,148.46	42.38	730.07	10.40	46.30	1.75	2,013.30	1,101.42	431.65	786.27
STANDING ROCK AGENCY.
Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund	8,080.40	712.63	6,139.15		12.69		18,729.74	18.23	2,821.50	2,755.30
Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund, act of Feb. 14, 1913.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			6,999.92		1.68
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	7,433.33							761.31
Pay of judges Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	15,132.61
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	8,777.11	13.23					196.45			540.11
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	4,440.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			1.75			29.50	4.80			4.15
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	1,948.00	34.89
Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.	11,254.09									402.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Civilization of the Sioux						185.28
Total	57,233.54	760.75	13,140.82		14.37	214.78	18,930.99	779.54	2,821.50	3,701.56
STANDING ROCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915							3,522.98	1,078.11	387.15	3,505.83
Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.	1,200.00
Interest on Sioux fund, Standing Rock, education.	10,771.07
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							44.00	8.10		9.53
Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.			105.00				5,355.71	3,070.44	1.88	517.74
Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund		17.90					191.00		264.00	165.65
Indian school, transportation, 1915					.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	11,971.07	17.90	105.00		.50		9,113.69	4,156.65	653.03	4,198.75

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									SOUTHERN UTE BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$84.13		$869.63		$1,260.80		$19.50	$11,347.89	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								1,260.80	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			162.82				10.50	322.12	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			37.20					37.20	Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
								2,499.92	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
			29.60					29.60	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								26.10	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	84.13		1,099.25		1,260.80		30.00	15,523.63	Total.
									SOUTHERN UTE DAY SCHOOLS.
	15.84		19.43					1,288.38	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					44.98			44.98	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								84.08	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
	15.84		19.43		44.98			1,417.44	Total.
									SPOKANE AGENCY.
		$171.86	477.15					5,789.06	Fulfilling treaties with Spokanes.
								157.99	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
		27.80	725.82				1.25	1,309.63	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
				$10,996.34	3.10			10,939.44	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			271.85					862.35	Support of Spokanes, Washington, 1915.
								24.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			31.25					1,419.28	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
							[1] 591.13	591.13	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			320.00					1,222.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			374.96					3,417.84	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
		2.70						2.70	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
		202.36	2,201.03	10,996.34	3.10		592.38	25,963.92	Total.
									SPOKANE DAY SCHOOLS.
	153.86		449.28				73.21	5,944.49	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					209.07			209.07	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								22.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	153.86		449.28		209.07		73.21	6,175.56	Total.
									SPRINGFIELD BOARDING SCHOOL.
	114.51	47.00	615.69				30.03	10,392.19	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								674.06	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				509.95	749.32	$240.00	[2] 13.50	1,512.77	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
$1.50			34.60		34.05			80.75	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								42.38	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
1.50	114.51	47.00	650.29	509.95	783.37	240.00	43.53	12,702.15	Total.
									STANDING ROCK AGENCY.
372.35		1,339.34	5,289.74	24,287.04	388.68		8,224.76	79,171.55	Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			99,783.23					99,783.23	Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund, act of Feb. 14, 1913.
								7,001.60	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					930.81	10.00		940.81	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								8,194.64	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges Indian courts, 1915.
								15,132.61	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
22.18			193.96				1,028.35	10,771.39	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								4,440.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
.25			144.30				2.10	186.85	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
61.25								2,944.14	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			33.80					11,689.89	Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
		13.00						13.00	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			57,220.99				[3] 7,521.86	64,928.13	Civilization of the Sioux.
456.03		1,352.34	162,666.02	24,287.04	1,319.49	10.00	16,777.07	304,465.84	Total.
									STANDING ROCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
.78	193.20	133.20	299.52		787.69			9,908.46	Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,200.00	Support of Sioux of different tribes, employees, etc., South Dakota, 1915.
								10,771.07	Interest on Sioux fund, Standing Rock, education.
	5.15		52.25		58.80			177.83	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	.54	87.07	485.67		87.88			9,711.93	Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
		18.66	485.58	378.00	319.28			1,840.07	Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
								.50	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
							40.48	40.48	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
.78	198.89	238.93	1,323.02	378.00	1,253.65		40.48	33,650.34	Total.

[1] Seed. [2] Water. [3] Treaty benefit payment.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
STANDING ROCK AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.
Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915		$10.95					$2,639.48	$429.67	$448.82	$1,891.31
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							25.00
Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund							342.93	1,839.59		13.75
Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund	$7,056.50	33.45					32.50	.25	417.00	16.35
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	7,056.50	44.40					3,039.91	2,269.51	865.82	1,921.41
STANDING ROCK DAY SCHOOL.
Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915							718.24	314.94	35.00	714.36
Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund			$7.20				206.67	1,288.04		87.66
Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund	8,364.30						39.00	93.45
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	8,364.30		7.20				963.91	1,696.43	35.00	802.02
TAHOLAR AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	1,316.09		150.00		$1.80
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			128.86
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		22.45					25.00
Pay of Indian police, 1915	584.01
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	68.13
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	4,539.96	38.92	14.25				587.45			80.00
Support of Quinaielts and Quillehutes, Washington, 1915		100.00					300.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	6,508.19	161.37	293.11		1.80		912.45			80.00
TAHOLAH DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,660.44									182.15
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor									222.20
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,660.44								222.20	182.15
TOMAH AGENCY.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	1,962.78	499.03		$6.45	.40	$1.50				25.10
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			3,133.36		4.55
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	240.00							5.29
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	2,957.50	228.45				1.10
Indian schools, support, 1915
Total	5,160.28	727.48	3,133.36	6.45	4.95	2.60		5.29		25.10
TOMAH BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Tomah, Wis., 1915	18,487.06	31.71	691.80	744.30	15.05		7,341.72	5,937.83	1,145.99	4,761.61
Indian school, Tomah, Wis., repairs and improvements, 1915
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,348.16			15.15
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	86.35	268.22	9.58			9.27	6.24	38.02	221.57
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915
Indian school, Tomah, Wis., special repairs, 1915		20.88				1.25
Indian school, Tomah, Wis., employees' building						62.41
Total	18,573.41	1,668.97	701.38	744.30	30.20	72.93	7,347.96	5,975.85	1,367.56	4,761.61
TONGUE RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915	12,886.02	628.48	3,563.30		48.52		24,595.25	10.94	32.50	783.25
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915			3,354.77		.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	3,053.83							200.31
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	161.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	36.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	13,563.25	24.65	389.63						2,672.32	108.49
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915	996.50	30.55						1.00
Line riders, Northern Cheyenne Reservation, Mont., 1915	1,236.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	653.33
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	1,174.50							2.92
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,802.22	145.31
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.										.75
Industry among Indians, 1915–16		42.00	1,346.61						4,075.43
Industry among Indians, 1915		114.68	707.43
Purchase of stock for Northern Cheyenne Indians, Montana (reimbursable)
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)							421.46		1,490.00	1.09
Individual Indian money	2,269.07	68.25
Purchase of implements for Indians of Tongue River Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable)			265.29
Total	38,831.72	1,053.92	9,627.03		49.22		25,016.71	215.17	8,270.25	893.49

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									STANDING ROCK AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.
$75.60	$57.15		$303.46		$106.38			$5,962.82	Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
	1.76		179.81		27.50			232.31	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			577.68		24.01			2,799.72	Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			1,668.28		651.43			9,875.76	Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			400.00				$60.33	460.33	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
75.60	58.91		3,129.23		809.32		60.33	19,330.94	Total.
									STANDING ROCK DAY SCHOOL.
3.12	444.70		544.06		187.63			2,962.05	Education Sioux Nation, South Dakota, 1915.
	17.34	$2.80	183.76		59.79			1,853.26	Interest on Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
			35.14		2.50			8,534.39	Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund.
							18.41	18.41	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
3.12	462.04	2.80	762.96		249.92		18.41	13,368.11	Total.
									TAHOLAH AGENCY.
156.45			93.45					1,717.79	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								128.86	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
		950.70	6.10					1,004.25	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								584.01	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								68.13	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
			505.44				4.93	5,770.95	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
								400.00	Support of Quinaielts and Quillehutes, Washington, 1915.
					68.09			68.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
156.45		950.70	604.99		68.09		4.93	9,742.08	Total.
									TAHOLAH DAY SCHOOL.
	74.73		48.80				5.00	2,971.12	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								222.20	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
					.85		[1] 460.50	461.35	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	74.73		48.80		.85		465.50	3,654.67	Total.
									TOMAH AGENCY.
2.95			211.29					2,709.50	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								3,137.91	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					56.00			56.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								215.23	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
							4.25	3,191.30	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
							[2] 100.00	100.00	Indian schools, support, 1915.
2.95			211.29		56.00		104.25	9,440.00	Total.
									TOMAH BOARDING SCHOOL.
27.60	291.90	125.79	2,583.89				266.86	42,453.11	Indian school, Tomah, Wis., 1915.
					5,807.07			5,807.07	Indian school, Tomah, Wis., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								1,363.31	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	31.74		319.32		43.83		158.24	1,192.38	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		32.66						32.66	Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
					2,280.44			2,302.57	Indian school, Tomah, Wis., special repairs, 1915.
				$3,980.70				4,043.11	Indian school, Tomah, Wis., employees' building.
27.60	323.64	158.45	2,903.21	3,980.70	8,131.34		425.10	57,194.21	Total.
									TONGUE RIVER AGENCY.
213.27		425.80	3,910.04				1,116.06	48,213.43	Support of Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915.
								3,355.47	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					3,969.47			3,969.47	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,254.14	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								161.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
1.85	9.90		103.75		4.76		4.70	160.96	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		16.51	675.55	117.15			578.19	18,145.74	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		133.50	35.50		921.09		[3] 51.10	2,169.24	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								1,236.00	Line riders, Northern Cheyenne Reservation, Mont., 1915.
			159.96					813.29	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			.17					1,177.59	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			636.00					3,583.53	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							[4] 130.00	130.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
			6,762.08		6.20		[4] 2,587.15	10,744.79	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
			668.40		7,131.23			12,697.17	Industry among Indians, 1916.
			[5] 22,525.00					22,525.00	Purchase of stock for Northern Cheyenne Indians, Montana (reimbursable).
							[2] 230.55	230.55	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
			6.75					4,256.53	Individual Indian money.
			3,509.00				[4] 857.79	4,632.08	Purchase of implements for Indians of Tongue River Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
215.12	9.90	575.81	38,992.20	117.15	12,032.75		5,555.54	141,455.98	Total.

[1] Land, $459. [2] Tuition. [3] Hospital expenses. [4] Seed.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
TONGUE RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$10,400.04	$60.85	$781.14				$1,713.64	$1,358.22	$410.75	$412.18
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	44.00						2.40
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor										9.63
Total	10,444.04	60.85	781.14				1,716.04	1,358.22	410.75	421.81
TONGUE RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,704.03	9.95	44.28				566.15	504.56		56.15
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	27.00
Miscellaneous recepts, class 4
Total	2,731.03	9.95	44.28				566.15	504.56		56.15
TRUXTON CANYON AGENCY.
Indian moneys, p oceeds of labor	4,906.20	288.60	3.50		$3.69	$7.13	486.14	.21	395.45	26.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,414.13		.23
Pay of Indian police, 1915	210.00							15.27
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	5,116.20	288.60	1,417.63		3.92	7.13	486.14	15.48	395.45	26.00
TRUXTON CANYON BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Truxton Canyon, Ariz., 1915	8,946.43	61.15	3.52		5.02		2,461.12	1,580.35	678.35	988.33
Indian school, Truxton Canyon, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Indian school, transportation, 1915		113.85			.44
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							6.35	11.50		4.40
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Total	8,946.43	175.00	3.52		5.46		2,467.47	1,591.85	678.35	992.73
TULALIP AGENCY.
Support of D. Wamish and other allied tribes in Washington, 1915.	5,252.00	108.50			51.50				315.43	478.67
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			1,154.69
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,490.00							155.56
Inddustrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.	1,000.00	56.20				168.47
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,076.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915						61.84
Individual Indian money	189.83
Total	11,007.83	164.70	1,154.69		51.50	230.31		155.56	315.43	478.67
TULALIP BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	16,197.49	11.70					6,859.00	2,043.46	1,588.93	4,074.29
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	158.10	10.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		32.60
Total	16,355.59	54.30					6,859.00	2,043.46	1,588.93	4,074.29
TULALIP DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,336.00						69.28	209.47		240.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	1,336.00						69.28	209.47		240.00
TULE RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in California, 1915	25.00	8.20	6.30							13.20
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			112.97
Pay of Indian police, 1915	227.33							9.66
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	10.00						496.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	600.00	36.00							180.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.	1,824.74						5.75		121.50	14.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	529.50	50.30	3.03						15.00	14.00
Total	3,216.57	94.50	122.30				501.75	9.66	316.50	41.20
TULE RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,767.00	36.50	17.10				88.96	25.01	173.00	136.37
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,767.00	36.50	17.10				88.96	25.01	173.00	136.37
TULLAHASSEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Creek general fund, 1915	866.33		4.50				31.52
Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.			1.04
Total	866.33		5.54				31.52

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									TONGUE RIVER BOARDING SCHOOL.
	$76.04	$12.66	$1,182.34				[1] $125.91	$16,533.77	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$334.70	$1,324.01			1,658.71	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			178.54		26.97		62.89	314.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			12.80					22.43	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	76.04	12.66	1,373.68	334.70	1,350.98		188.80	18,529.71	Total.
									TONGUE RIVER DAY SCHOOLS.
$3.75	27.18		109.82				25.21	4,051.08	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					22.90			22.90	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			6.00					33.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			7.93		.70			8.63	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
3.75	27.18		123.75		23.60		25.21	4,115.61	Total.
									TRUXTON CANYON AGENCY.
4.85		268.20	14,381.30		46.77	$20.00	126.54	20,964.58	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								1,414.36	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								225.27	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
				977.92				977.92	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
4.85		268.20	14,381.30	977.92	46.77	20.00	126.54	23,582.13	Total.
									TRUXTON CANYON BOARDING SCHOOL.
29.25	102.51	111.21	803.46				64.95	15,835.65	Indian school, Truxton Canyon, Ariz., 1915.
					2,569.17			2,569.17	Indian school, Truxton Canyon, Ariz., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								114.29	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
			41.03		52.92		5.00	121.20	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	31.05							31.05	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
29.25	133.56	111.21	844.49		2,622.09		69.95	18,671.36	Total.
									TULALIP AGENCY.
7.30		411.31	142.02				9.10	6,770.83	Support of D. Wamish and other allied tribes in Washington, 1915.
								1,154.69	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
					18.10			18.10	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
2.95			72.85					75.80	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								1,645.56	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			41.26					1,265.93	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			722.00					3,798.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
7.00		10.05	95.10					112.15	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								61.84	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								189.83	Individual Indian money.
12.25		421.36	1,073.23		18.10		9.10	15,092.73	Total.
									TULALIP BOARDING SCHOOL.
262.75	539.53	182.72	2,910.66				[1] 157.10	34,827.63	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					4,114.61			4,114.61	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		136.58	288.21		30.25		[2] 49.61	652.75	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
					18.85		[2] 214.39	233.24	Indian moneys proceeds of labor.
								32.60	Indian school transportation, 1915.
262.75	539.53	319.30	3,178.87		4,163.71		421.10	39,860.83	Total.
									TULALIP DAY SCHOOLS.
1.30	304.51		188.60					2,349.16	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					189.28			189.28	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
1.30	304.51		188.60		189.28			2,538.44	Total.
									TULE RIVER AGENCY.
			154.35					207.95	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
								112.97	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
								236.99	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
		9.41						515.41	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			3.00			119.99		938.99	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M
			68.78					2,034.77	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
23.25		35.81	201.55		261.25		177.68	1,311.37	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
23.25		45.22	427.68		261.25	119.99	177.68	5,357.55	Total.
									TULE RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
	37.16	8.56	369.44					3,659.10	Indian schools support, 1915.
					151.78			151.78	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	37.16	8.56	369.44		151.78			3,810.88	Total.
									TULLAHASSEE BOARDING SCHOOL.
			17.75				[3] 76.25	996.35	Interest on Creek general fund, 1915.
								1.04	Purchase and transportation Indian supplies, 1915.
			17.75				76.25	997.39	Total.

[1] Seed. [2] Trees. [3] Insurance.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
TURTLE MOUNTAIN AGENCY.
Support of Chippewas, Turtle Mountain Band, North Dakota, 1915.	$4,839.17	$672.35	$258.04		$88.49		$2,052.59	$4.65	$214.32	$885.83
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,046.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Pay of Indian police, 1915.	1,664.66							159.92
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.	1,920.00								106.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.							102.75
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	28.00					$45.57	37.98
Court costs, etc., in suits involving lands allotted to Indians, 1915.	28.00	104.05
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	447.50
Total.	9,095.33	776.40	1,304.74		88.49	45.57	2,193.32	164.57	320.32	885.83
TURTLE MOUNTAIN DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915.	6,743.75		242.66		5.10		683.57	119.99		873.38
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Total.	6,743.75		242.66		5.10		683.57	119.99		873.38
TUSKAHOMA BOARDING SCHOOLS.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.	[1] 9,785.81	47.93	835.23		26.08	31.05	5,528.73	808.74	1,030.30	1,742.41
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			519.01
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.	16.00						6.23
Total.	9,801.81	47.93	1,354.24		26.08	31.05	5,534.96	808.74	1,030.30	1,742.41
UINTAH AGENCY.
Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund.	373.33	379.15	1,837.33		55.47		1.58	17.15	3,294.81	1,604.48
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.	[2] 836.66						7,418.80
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,734.49
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.		16.25
Pay of Indian police, 1915.	2,308.00							158.94	107.66
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.	41.67	75.35				65.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.	5,104.22	256.20				38.50
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.	3,613.89	25.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.	994.00
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.	13,658.21
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.						52.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.	1,381.21	5.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.	4,808.02		1,870.96				74.61	18.27	292.63
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.		4.90
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, seeds and improvement, Utah, 1915.									82.52
Total.	33,119.21	762.35	5,442.78		55.47	156.00	7,494.99	194.36	3,777.62	1,604.48
UINTAH BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915.	6,367.90	74.60	420.83				302.99	1,451.23	404.49	1,039.58
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.	4.75	57.75					20.00
Relief of Benj. A. Sanders, for injuries.								11.50
Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.	2,060.00
Indian school, transportation, 1915.		6.75
Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.							1,527.83
Total.	8,432.65	139.10	420.83				1,850.82	1,462.73	404.49	1,039.58
UMATILLA AGENCY.
Interest on Umatilla general fund.
Support of Indians of Umatilla Agency, Oreg., 1915.	2,940.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			986.68
Pay of Indian police, 1915.	698.67							60.93
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.	900.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.	375.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.	1,164.17	38.02
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.		42.35			2.20
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.						31.00
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	215.00	41.18
Court costs, etc., suits involving lands allotted to Indians, 1915.	3.70
Umatilla general fund.
Total.	6,380.54	121.55	986.68		2.20	31.00		60.93

[1] Choctaw.

[2] Lieu of rations.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									TURTLE MOUNTAIN AGENCY.
$356.08		$256.85	$716.96				$348.13	$10,693.46	Support of Chippewas, Turtle Mountain Band, North Dakota, 1915.
								1,046.70	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					$732.39			732.39	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			1.00					1,825.58	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								2,026.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								102.75	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		36.55	212.45	$9,779.20			22.00	10,161.75	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[1] 79.32	211.37	Court costs, etc., in suits involving lands allotted to Indians, 1915.
								447.50	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
356.08		293.40	970.41	9,779.20	732.39		449.45	27,415.50	Total.
									TURTLE MOUNTAIN DAY SCHOOLS.
83.55	$380.14	1.86	371.56				[2] 49.02	9,554.58	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				344.50	1,195.89			1,540.39	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
83.55	380.14	1.86	371.56	344.50	1,195.89		49.02	11,094.97	Total.
									TUSKAHOMA BOARDING SCHOOLS.
	207.85	115.36	1,088.99	374.50	2,649.08		144.67	24,516.73	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								519.01	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			21.50		3.86			47.59	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	307.85	115.36	1,110.49	374.50	2,652.94		144.67	25,083.33	Total.
									UINTAH AGENCY.
94.25		532.75	2,277.15				9.30	10,476.75	Interest on Ute 5 per cent fund.
								8,255.46	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
								1,734.49	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				4,777.97	631.42	$120.00		5,545.64	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								2,574.60	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								182.02	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			93.50				6.30	5,498.92	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			446.50					4,085.39	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								994.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
								13,658.21	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.
								52.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								1,386.71	Miscellaneous receipts, class 3.
			27.70		2.70			30.40	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
21.00		142.81	42,224.00				[3] 3,673.76	53,126.06	Interest on Confederated Bands of Utes 4 per cent fund.
								4.90	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			1,567.40				[3] 1,576.63	3,226.55	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, seeds and improvement, Utah, 1915.
115.25		675.56	46,636.25	4,777.97	634.12	120.00	5,266.19	110,832.60	Total.
									UINTAH BOARDING SCHOOL.
	17.79		266.53				[1] 69.00	10,414.94	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					531.23			531.23	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			192.39				16.00	290.89	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
							[4] 1,000.00	1,000.00	Relief of Benj. A. Sanders, for injuries.
			90.00					101.50	Interest on Confederated Band of Utes 4 per cent fund.
								2,000.00	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, employees, Utah, 1915.
								6.75	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
								1,527.83	Support of Confederated Bands of Utes, subsistence, Utah, 1915.
	17.79		548.92		531.23		1,085.00	15,933.14	Total.
									UMATILLA AGENCY.
		183.21						183.21	Interest on Umatilla general fund.
								2,940.00	Support of Indians of Umatilla Agency, Oreg., 1915.
								986.68	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								759.60	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								900.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								375.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
7.65		7.70	64.30					1,202.19	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								124.20	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								31.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								256.18	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								3.70	Court costs, etc., suits involving lands allotted to Indians, 1915.
							[5] 3,906.39	3,906.39	Umatilla general fund.
7.65		190.91	64.30				3,906.39	11,752.15	Total.

[1] Court costs, etc. [2] Seed. [3] Seed, etc. [4] Injuries. [5] Refunds homestead entries.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
UMATILLA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	$1,650.00						$2,342.65	$2,355.18	$499.80	$1,727.31
Interest on Umatilla general fund	6,125.08				$48.03			24.80		9.06
Interest on Umatilla school fund	291.66
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	320.56	$152.00	$82.75		15.32	$2.00	268.00	73.55	917.89	26.19
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	600.00	10.05				10.50	.90	76.48	.90	75.00
Total	8,987.30	162.05	82.75		63.35	12.50	2,611.55	2,510.01	1,418.59	1,837.56
UNION AGENCY.
Administration of the affairs of Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.	154,189.76	14,907.05	134.38	$51.17	1.82	15.50
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			263.08
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	9,083.00							294.44
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	13,588.88	4,743.62
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	144.00
Probate attorneys, Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.	59,276.12	8,116.33	11.60	9.00	804.03	129.18				15.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.	7,000.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Un. Land.	20,162.39	2,588.06			44.89	6,692.37
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.	7,633.32	749.90
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Un. Land.	6,720.79	862.69			14.96	1,453.85
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Union Agency.	5,667.08	4,248.43		42.65	474.39	621.28			258.98	38.75
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Creek Un. Land.	391.67	123.60
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	31,698.27	10,077.93	43.80	394.28	1,354.36	1,118.93			488.80	26.00
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						375.70
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Five Civilized Tribes.					.20	684.95
Interest on Cherokee moneys on deposit in banks.	8,334.92					264.13
Interest on Chickasaw moneys on deposit in banks.	3,216.67					45.02
Interest on Choctaw moneys on deposit in banks.
Interest on Seminole moneys on deposit in banks.	2,739.00	255.47				12.90				4.03
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy. Hospital.		57.54				92.24
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy. Hospital.		19.19				30.78
Oil and gas inspectors, Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.	7,836.41	2,563.31			42.89	210.11
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							5.60	4.80
Court costs, etc., in suits of Indian allottees, Five Civilized Tribes.
Interest on Cherokee school fund	350.00
Interest on Seminole general fund	2,201.00					10.00
Interest on Creek general fund	9,714.44	756.80
Creek general fund	3,060.00				5.39	72.38
Cherokee national fund	250.00
Choctaw 3 per cent fund
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)
Total	353,257.72	50,069.92	452.86	497.10	2,742.90	11,829.32	5.60	299.24	747.78	83.78
VERMILLION LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	8,770.08			350.00	50.00		105.65	67.61	41.40	122.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			752.04
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							5.60	16.34	9.20
Indian school, transportation, 1915		180.88
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		11.39
Indian schools, support, 1915
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	605.00				21.00		3,245.00	1,721.79	431.10	2,636.60
Total	9,375.08	192.27	752.04	350.00	71.00		3,356.25	1,805.74	481.70	2,758.60
WAHPETON BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., 1915	14,269.01	110.92		602.34	47.57	6.40	6,998.61	4,504.89	837.20	3,640.94
Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,383.20		.18
Indian school, transportation, 1915		1,259.36			55.90
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4		14.01			23.36		15.55	68.10
Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., buildings.
Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., power plant and water system.
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	14,269.01	1,384.29	1,383.20	602.34	127.01	6.40	7,014.16	4,572.99	837.20	3,640.94
WALKER RIVER AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	1,671.98	61.25			11.50		630.08	8.50	27.20	233.52
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			667.33
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									UMATILLA BOARDING SCHOOL.
$0.26	$186.47	$0.50	$1,060.25					$9,822.42	Indian schools, support, 1915.
	6.54		137.90		$205.07			6,576.18	Interest on Umatilla general fund.
					140.06			431.66	Interest on Umatilla school fund.
				$2,832.75	4.50			2,837.25	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
137.00	20.63	30.10	1,562.56		1,300.72		$28.60	4,937.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			413.43		1,010.96			2,178.22	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
137.26	213.64	30.60	3,194.14	2,832.75	2,661.25		28.60	26,783.90	Total.
									UNION AGENCY.
1,058.36		2.28	9.18			$2,038.50		173,308.00	Administration of the affairs of Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								283.08	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
						12,232.00		12,232.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								9,377.44	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			325.00					18,657.50	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								144.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
1,012.84			59.75			3,403.00	495.75	73,332.57	Probate attorneys, Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.
							2,330.31	9,330.31	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.
						105.00	734.53	30,327.24	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Un. Land.
							2,247.96	10,631.18	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.
						35.00	244.84	9,332.13	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Un. Land.
28.79			365.96			38.67	348.39	12,428.37	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Union Agency.
								515.27	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Creek Un. Land.
1,988.83			168.40			788.25	1,526.78	49,674.63	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								375.70	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
								685.15	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Five Civilized Tribes.
						3.00	327.56	8,929.61	Interest on Cherokee moneys on deposit in banks.
							183.61	3,715.30	Interest on Chickasaw moneys on deposit in banks.
							.80	.80	Interest on Choctaw moneys on deposit in banks.
12.55							.40	3,024.35	Interest on Seminole moneys on deposit in banks.
								149.78	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy. Hospital.
								49.97	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy. Hospital.
503.62			407.19			172.50		11,826.03	Oil and gas inspectors, Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.
		212.92	7.00			18.67		248.99	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							2,905.68	2,905.68	Court costs, etc., in suits of Indian allottees, Five Civilized Tribes.
							13.12	363.12	Interest on Cherokee school fund.
							386.71	2,597.71	Interest on Seminole general fund.
						300.00	2,316.60	13,087.84	Interest on Creek general fund.
21.50							289.40	3,448.67	Creek general fund.
						7.50		257.50	Cherokee national fund.
							.80	.80	Choctaw 3 per cent fund.
							[1] 94.07	94.07	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
5,016.49		215.20	1,342.48			20,042.09	14,742.31	461,344.79	Total.
									VERMILLION LAKE BOARDING SCHOOL.
15.00	5.04		82.68	110.11	53.35		[2] 41.96	9,814.88	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
								752.04	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
.75			24.52		112.02			168.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								180.88	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
								11.39	General expenses, Indian service, 1915.
			221.57					221.57	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				980.57	1,094.90			2,075.47	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	94.66	67.92	988.74	240.00	598.45			10,650.26	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
15.75	99.70	67.92	1,317.51	1,330.68	1,858.72		41.96	23,874.92	Total.
									WAHPETON BOARDING SCHOOL.
	492.37	283.81	2,353.68			300.00	395.43	34,843.17	Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., 1915.
				463.40	2,300.06			2,763.46	Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., repairs and improvements, 1915.
								1,383.38	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								1,315.26	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	6.00	9.95	87.95		7.50			232.42	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			147.75	218.95				366.70	Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., buildings.
					3,329.12			3,329.12	Indian school, Wahpeton, N. Dak., power plant and water system.
		6.50					[2] 101.99	108.49	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	498.37	300.26	2,589.38	682.35	5,636.68	300.00	497.42	44,342.00	Total.
									WALKER RIVER AGENCY.
1.09		385.28	318.02				10.50	3,328.92	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								667.33	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					38.04			38.04	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.

[1] Seed.

[2] Hospital expenses.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
WALKER RIVER AGENCY—continued.
Pay of Indian police, 1915	$886.67						$80.62	$67.41
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,606.00									$90.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	892.99	$5.50							$28.80	20.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							8.77
Industry among Indians, 1915
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)		66.55
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		71.10					80.50
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915		66.55
Total	5,141.64	270.95	$667.33		$11.50		799.97	75.91	56.00	313.52
WALKER RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,273.18	19.00	12.00		7.66		169.62	462.58	20.00	204.17
Ind an school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	3,273.18	19.00	12.00		7.66		169.62	462.58	20.00	204.17
WARM SPRINGS AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Warm Springs Agency, Oreg., 1915.	2,119.30	149.75			23.57		396.68		562.69	151.70
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,184.02
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,560.00						182.07	45.51	42.53
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	720.00							4.37	104.60
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	4,016.17								193.37
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	2,626.00								113.41
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,296.00
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Industry among Indians, 1915	1,516.00		1,965.80						247.75
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	1,800.00	37.55
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							4.60
Relieving distress, and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.							4.30
General expenses, Indian service, 1915	184.00	106.40			3.49				97.61
Total	16,005.17	293.70	3,149.82		27.06		588.25	49.88	1,361.96	151.70
WARM SPRINGS BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	10,406.78	53.30					3,643.56	1,172.53	1,986.28	1,593.06
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	5.03						20.40		96.02
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	90.00	14.45
Indian school, transportation, 1915		43.65
Total	10,501.78	111.40					3,663.96	1,172.53	2,082.30	1,593.06
WARM SPRINGS DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools support, 1915	1,020.00						59.94	84.07		52.37
WESTERN NAVAJO AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	7,220.35	139.19	985.25				80.52	.21	420.25	126.43
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,996.05
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,972.00						123.50	236.63
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	2,688.75								234.50
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	25.00								27.30
Bridge, Western Navajo Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable).	180.00	37.23				$32.70
Total	12,264.10	176.42	2,981.30			32.70	204.02	236.84	682.05	126.43
WESTERN NAVAJO BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	11,366.73	76.55	3,909.08				3,155.90	2,058.13	246.62	1,365.98
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915			23.73
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							16.38	5.75
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		56.58
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.			227.92			96.47
Total	11,366.73	133.13	4,160.73			96.47	3,172.28	2,063.88	246.62	1,365.98
MARSH PASS BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,739.02	29.45	708.31				647.25	33.76	371.23	375.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							35.51
Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.		33.65	37.75
Total	2,739.02	63.10	746.06				682.76	33.76	371.23	375.00
WESTERN NAVAJO DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,128.00						138.32	321.78		3.77
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	1,128.00						138.32	321.78		3.77

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									WALKER RIVER AGENCY—continued.
			$50.40					$1,085.10	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								1,666.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			78.04				$107.07	1,132.40	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
		$2.30						11.07	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			2,085.00					2,085.00	Industry among Indians, 1915.
			3,161.74				[1] $892.08	4,120.37	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			776.75	$203.75				1,132.10	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								66.55	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
$1.09		387.58	6,469.95	203.75	$38.04	107.07	902.58	15,446.88	Total.
									WALKER RIVER DAY SCHOOL.
$3.83	$130.60	6.78	479.01				16.70	4,885.13	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				2,258.42	930.83			3,189.25	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
$3.83	130.60	6.78	479.01	2,258.42	930.83		16.70	8,074.38	Total.
									WARM SPRINGS AGENCY.
		193.16	402.81					3,999.36	Support of Indians of Warm Springs Agency, Oreg., 1915.
								1,184.02	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					71.63			71.63	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,830.11	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
		16.56	4.40					849.93	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			177.24					4,386.78	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
			12.53					2,751.94	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
			17.35				170.39	1,483.74	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			1,177.80					1,177.80	Industry among Indians, 1915-16.
			44,584.38				[1] 1,725.50	50,039.43	Industry among Indians, 1915.
115.00							26.60	1,979.15	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			71.75					76.35	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		29.16						34.06	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			65.57					457.07	General expenses, Indian service, 1915.
115.00		238.88	46,513.83		71.63		1,922.49	70,489.37	Total.
									WARM SPRINGS BOARDING SCHOOL.
	120.35	29.65	778.51				190.73	19,974.75	Indian schools support, 1915.
					2,246.49			2,246.49	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		3.11	278.27		46.65		2.35	451.80	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		116.13						220.58	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								43.65	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	120.35	148.89	1,056.78		2,293.14		193.08	22,937.27	Total.
									WARM SPRINGS DAY SCHOOL.
	.11	.50	15.87					1,232.86	Indian school support, 1915.
									WESTERN NAVAJO AGENCY.
		218.13	5,223.28				[1] 352.30	14,765.91	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								1,996.05	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					225.77			225.77	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			6.11					2,338.24	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								2,933.25	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
							4.76	57.06	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
				5,741.00				5,990.93	Bridge, Western Navajo Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable).
		218.13	5,229.39	5,741.00	225.77		357.06	28,475.21	Total.
									WESTERN NAVAJO BOARDING SCHOOL.
	124.75	1.50	1,613.62				[2] 289.56	24,208.42	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					968.28			992.01	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
7.00	4.69		439.68		1.14		31.60	506.24	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
			159.26		.94			160.20	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								56.58	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
				6,090.00	733.06			7,147.45	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes, schools, Arizona, 1915.
7.00	129.44	1.50	2,212.56	6,090.00	1,703.42		321.16	33,070.90	Total.
									MARSH PASS BOARDING SCHOOL.
	5.15		12.30					4,921.47	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					13.63			13.63	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								35.51	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
				325.74	5.46			402.60	Fulfilling treaties with Navajoes schools, Arizona, 1915.
	5.15		12.30	325.74	19.09			5,373.21	Total.
									WESTERN NAVAJO DAY SCHOOL.
	72.02	.50	303.81					1,968.20	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					49.94			49.94	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	72.02	.50	303.81		49.94			2,018.14	Total.

[1] Seed.

[2] Sheep dip, $225; seed, $127.30.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
WESTERN SHOSHONE AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	$2,981.06	$69.61	$1,204.58		$57.38		$1,446.01	$4.00	$344.99	$88.48
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			964.10
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	24.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)			390.30
Pay of Indian police, 1915	960.00							104.28
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	84.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	900.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	464.00
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	1,244.55	16.35	1,440.03						23.53
Total	6,657.61	85.96	3,999.01		57.38		1,446.01	108.28	368.52	88.48
WESTERN SHOSHONE DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,599.16	44.65	504.62		54.40		912.49	1,241.31	289.15	1,291.25
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							16.35	3.00	5.12
Total	3,599.16	44.65	504.62		54.40		928.84	1,244.31	294.27	1,291.25
WHEELOCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw	10,202.22	32.39		$315.30	31.83	$30.80	4,134.47	1,226.54	579.85	486.92
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			327.87
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	254.74					14.25	157.55	19.68
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	10,456.96	32.39	327.87	315.30	31.83	45.05	4,292.02	1,246.22	579.85	486.92
WHITE EARTH AGENCY.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	25,424.84	1,255.54	3,032.65		222.06		6,221.25	280.20	2,488.54	1,674.69
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			3,607.86
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	3,780.00							303.66
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.		20.42
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	526.83	8.80							599.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	3,066.50	478.91
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							248.00
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915						9.80
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, annual celebration.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, extension of water system.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, purchase of lands for Mille Lac Indians.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, removal of dead bodies.		33.48
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, expenses, delegates, Washington and Cass Lake.	58.00	1,074.70
Industry among Indians, 1915–16
Industry among Indians, 1915
Education, Chippewas of Minnesota (reimbursable), 1915.
Total	32,806.17	2,871.85	6,640.51		222.06	9.80	6,469.25	583.86	3,087.79	1,674.69
WHITE EARTH BOARDING SCHOOL.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	75.00	1.55					9,411.67	5,134.97	1,207.05	5,056.61
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Support of Chippewas of the Mississippi, Minnesota, 1915.	3,958.33
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	8,627.20	204.34					59.91	60.06		240.49
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	7.00							16.65		7.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Indian school, transportation, 1915		26.28
Total	12,667.53	232.17					9,471.58	5,220.68	1,207.05	5,304.10
WHITE EARTH DAY SCHOOL.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915	25.00	18.60					524.75	1,480.50	373.25	1,076.31
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund	10,461.67	231.30					12.00
Total	10,486.67	249.90					536.75	1,480.50	373.25	1,076.31
WINNEBAGO AGENCY.
Interest on Winnebago fund, Nebraska	16.00	12.12	56.21				.38		442.38	533.79
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			414.60
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,005.30							59.41
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	8,146.83	73.48			38.47					170.25
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	780.00							16.17	58.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915 F	1,200.00	119.96								17.25
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									WESTERN SHOSHONE AGENCY.
$131.87		[2]237.08	$1,167.96				$1.00	$7,734.02	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								964.10	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					$254.38			254.38	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		254.05						278.05	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
			1,166.60					1,556.90	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
			11.80					1,076.08	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								84.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
								900.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			271.00					735.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			5,302.80					5,302.80	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
			5,094.14		60.59		[1]732.00	8,611.19	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
131.87		491.13	13,014.30		314.97		733.00	27,496.52	Total.
									WESTERN SHOSHONE DAY SCHOOLS.
	$89.50	43.95	469.39				.50	8,540.37	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$1,198.20	319.79			1,517.99	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			237.93		41.49			279.42	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
	2.01		57.70				1.00	85.18	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
	91.51	43.95	765.02	1,198.20	361.28		1.50	10,422.96	Total.
									WHEELOCK BOARDING SCHOOL.
31.09	272.80	106.30	1,208.96		2,250.32		25.49	20,935.28	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw.
								327.87	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
	4.26	10.10	70.63		508.09		29.18	1,068.48	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		3.90						3.90	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
31.09	277.06	120.30	1,279.59		2,758.41		54.67	23,335.53	Total.
									WHITE EARTH AGENCY.
74.95		1,423.18	955.74		44.48		475.62	43,573.74	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
								3,607.86	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				1,558.00	1,772.48			3,330.48	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								4,033.66	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								20.42	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
			350.00					1,484.88	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								3,545.41	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
							[2]5.20	5.20	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, Exp.
103.77		501.27	800.00				22.00	1,675.04	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		68.78					[3]59.25	128.03	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								9.80	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
							1,000.00	1,000.00	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, annual celebration.
					526.39			526.39	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, extension of water system.
							[4]16,691.70	16,691.70	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, purchase of lands for Mille Lac Indians.
								33.48	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, removal of dead bodies.
								1,132.70	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, expenses, delegates, Washington and Cass Lake.
			186.30					186.30	Industry among Indians, 1915–16.
			318.69				[2]248.35	567.04	Industry among Indians, 1915.
							[5]1,000.00	1,000.00	Education, Chippewas of Minnesota (reimbursable), 1915.
178.72		1,993.23	2,610.73	1,558.00	2,343.35		19,502.12	82,552.13	Total.
									WHITE EARTH BOARDING SCHOOL.
	128.04	25.14	3,581.97		405.98			25,027.98	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
				716.39	1,025.21			1,741.60	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								3,958.33	Support of Chippewas of the Mississippi, Minnesota, 1915.
	20.33		987.72		77.06		49.85	10,335.96	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
			398.90		4.98		4.77	349.30	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		1.80						1.80	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								26.28	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
	148.37	26.94	4,878.59	716.39	1,513.23		54.62	41,441.25	Total.
									WHITE EARTH DAY SCHOOL.
.52	286.37	270.23	416.16		152.11			4,623.80	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915.
					61.86			61.86	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			19.34				27.85	10,732.16	Interest on Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
.52	286.37	270.23	435.50		213.97		27.85	15,437.82	Total.
									WINNEBAGO AGENCY.
		226.09	213.15		.78			1,509.90	Interest on Winnebago fund, Nebraska.
								414.69	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
				7,783.56	506.34			8,289.90	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,064.71	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
35.09		112.12	72.84				307.70	8,956.69	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			.15					854.32	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			161.00					1,498.21	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
		9.36						9.36	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.

[1] Seed, $604. [2] Seed. [3] Hospital expenses. [4] Land, $16,685.45. [5] Tuition, etc.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
WINNEBAGO AGENCY—continued.
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						$26.45
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	$115.00		$32.36		$13.89				$38.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		$310.19					$20.50
Total	11,263.13	515.75	503.17		52.36	26.45	20.88	$75.58	538.38	$721.29
WINNEBAGO DAY SCHOOLS.
Indian schools, support, 1915	3,594.00	459.10	2.26				168.11
Interest on Winnebago fund, Nebraska										51.00
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4							17.55
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	3,594.00	459.10	2.26				185.66			51.00
WITTENBERG AGENCY.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			773.53
WITTENBERG BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	10,739.87		1.69	$805.46	30.00		3,533.09	1,861.59	856.63	661.29
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	165.33		.55		10.79		18.79		6.20
Indian school, transportation, 1915		160.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor							17.76
Total	10,905.20	160.00	2.24	805.46	40.79		3,569.64	1,861.59	862.83	661.29
YAKIMA AGENCY.
Support of Indians of Yakima Agency, Wash., 1915.	455.75				121.54		186.65	.52	742.42	222.89
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			864.70
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	1,370.00						300.00	113.56
Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915	168.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	686.00				13.50			3.06		22.74
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	1,900.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For	7,187.33	121.22					187.64		78.72
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	40.00					8.40
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	13,402.58	701.80	354.44		6.05		329.03		482.51	1,028.75
Determining heirs of deceased, Indian allottees, 1915.	1,852.50	112.60
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						4.75
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915
Total	27,062.16	935.62	1,219.14		141.09	13.15	1,003.32	117.14	1,303.65	1,274.38
YAKIMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	12,059.44		612.54				5,236.11	2,119.27	269.23	2,003.84
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4	22.82					15.50		2.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	60.00	3.35
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	12,142.26	3.35	612.54			15.50	5,236.11	2,121.77	269.23	2,003.84
YANKTON AGENCY.
Support of Sioux, Yankton Tribe, South Dakota, 1915.	7,701.77	129.80	412.82		135.72		635.82	13.75	755.09	630.31
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,898.79
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	718.00							84.40
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P	1,800.00	88.87								49.98
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	328.33
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	286.00	59.13								34.75
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.	1,466.00	58.26
Miscellaneous receipts, class 5						45.00
Total	12,280.10	336.06	2,311.61		135.72	45.00	635.82	98.15	755.09	715.04
YANKTON BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	9,769.23	44.15	1,399.39		4.25		2,868.75	2,281.51	694.75	1,743.94
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4			8.38				35.40		85.40	98.50
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
Total	9,769.23	44.15	1,407.77		4.25		2,904.15	2,281.51	780.15	1,842.44
ZUNI AGENCY.
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.	3,905.32	130.67	769.94				23.80	1.37	1,059.73	75.19
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			1,544.66
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Pay of Indian police, 1915	480.00							24.30
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M	560.00						16.56	3.29

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									WINNEBAGO AGENCY—continued.
								$26.45	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
$7.02		$21.21	$186.55		$112.95		$59.61	586.59	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		12.96	371.15		40.84			755.64	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
42.02		381.74	1,004.84	$7,783.56	660.91		367.31	23,957.37	Total.
									WINNEBAGO DAY SCHOOLS.
50.85	$14.63		36.71					4,325.66	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								51.00	Interest on Winnebago fund, Nebraska.
					1,164.86	$54.00		1,218.86	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			12.50					12.50	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								17.55	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		53.85						53.85	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
50.85	14.63	53.85	49.21		1,164.86	54.00		5,679.42	Total.
									WITTENBERG AGENCY.
								773.53	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
									WITTENBERG BOARDING SCHOOL.
	174.64	55.05	1,124.29				178.47	20,022.07	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					625.66	120.00		745.66	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
10.70	11.89		230.77		44.99		21.29	521.21	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								160.00	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
					135.13			152.89	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
10.70	186.53	55.05	1,355.06		805.69	120.00	199.76	21,601.83	Total.
									YAKIMA AGENCY.
190.00		428.38	599.23					2,947.38	Support of Indians or Yakima Agency, Wash. 1915.
								864.70	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					508.47	822.00		1,330.47	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								1,783.56	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
								168.00	Pay of judges, Indian courts, 1915.
						507.50		1,232.80	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			275.00					2,175.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
4.00			1,266.97				1.00	8,846.88	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, For.
17.00			129.76		85.27		9.00	289.43	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
150.00		27.51	2,974.37				[1]30.00	19,487.04	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
7.00							1.59	1,973.60	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								4.75	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
							[2]3,499.36	3,499.36	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
							2.70	2.70	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
368.00		455.89	5,245.33		593.74	1,329.50	3,543.56	44,605.67	Total.
									YAKIMA BOARDING SCHOOL.
	388.20	1.50	1,499.01					24,189.14	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					983.24			983.24	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			141.31		2.94		58.56	243.63	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
								63.35	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
		56.25						56.25	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	388.20	57.75	1,640.32		986.18		58.56	25,535.61	Total.
									YANKTON AGENCY.
141.70		542.44	1,834.48				283.00	13,216.70	Support of Sioux, Yankton Tribe, South Dakota, 1915.
								1,898.79	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					545.42			545.42	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								802.40	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			283.00					2,221.85	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, P.
			325.00					653.33	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.
			17.45					377.33	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
67.50			6.75					1,598.51	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
								45.00	Miscellaneous receipts, class 5.
209.20		542.44	2,466.68		545.42		283.00	21,359.33	Total.
									YANKTON BOARDING SCHOOL.
	156.08	10.53	1,699.60				[1]145.00	20,817.18	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					3,907.77			3,907.77	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
		26.77	242.96		84.38		10.00	591.79	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
		31.50						31.50	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
	156.08	68.80	1,942.56		3,992.15		155.00	25,348.24	Total.
									ZUNI AGENCY.
140.54		153.91	610.41				[1]270.00	7,140.88	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
								1,544.66	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
					410.37	240.00		650.37	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								504.30	Pay of Indian police, 1915.
			13.11			66.67		659.63	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, M.

[1] Seed. [2] Tuition. [3] Sheep dip.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
ZUNI AGENCY—continued.
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	$1,585.00
Industry among Indians (reimbursable)		$7.80	$1,075.76
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor		8.38
Total	6,530.32	146.85	3,390.36				$40.36	$28.96	$1,059.73	$75.19
ZUNI BOARDING SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	10,741.92	117.75	3,336.33		$100.00		3,432.68	1,641.59	434.76	587.35
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Miscellaneous receipts, class 4
Total	10,741.92	117.75	3,336.33		100.00		3,432.68	1,641.59	434.76	587.35
ZUNI DAY SCHOOL.
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,421.50						31.85	1,180.54		20.30
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Total	2,421.50						31.85	1,180.54		20.30
ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK.[1]
CHEYENNE RIVER.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	1,645.00		13.50						271.70
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						$19.90
Appropriations, classification, and allotments, (reimbursable), A.	2,959.00
Total	4,604.00		13.50			19.90			271.70
COLORADO RIVER.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	791.25	87.85	4.27						22.22
COLVILLE.
Surveying and allotting Colville Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable), S.	292.11					16.20
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						17.10
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations, (reimbursable), A.	31,296.47	1,101.77	29.70		84.03	134.76			1,710.29	100.23
Total	34,588.58	1,101.77	29.70		84.03	168.06			1,710.29	100.23
CROW CREEK.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	656.00
DUCK VALLEY (WESTERN SHOSHONE).
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						154.30
FLATHEAD.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						209.85
FORT BELKNAP.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	3,130.96	73.77	9.22				712.95		249.85
FORT BERTHOLD.
Surveying, etc., Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak. (reimbursable), S.	34.66	9.40	4.09			151.30	20.20
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.		26.70
Surveying, etc., Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak. (reimbursable), A.	10.00
Appropriation, classification, etc., of reserved lands, Fort Berthold Reservation (reimbursable), 1915, A.	1,949.33	86.19								3.05
Total	1,993.99	122.29	4.09			151.30	20.20			3.05
FORT HALL.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						5.25
Total						5.25
FORT YUMA.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
GRAND PORTAGE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.

[1] "A" refers to allotment work; "S" refers to survey work.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									ZUNI AGENCY—continued.
								$1,585.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			$5,225.89					6,209.45	Industry among Indians (reimbursable).
								8.38	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
$140.54		$153.91	5,849.41		$410.37	$306.67	$270.00	18,402.67	Total.
									ZUNI BOARDING SCHOOL.
41.72	$188.20	307.00	1,453.28					22,382.58	Indian schools, support, 1915.
				$2,153.82	551.99			2,705.81	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
			11.72				11.15	22.87	Miscellaneous receipts, class 4.
41.72	188.20	307.00	1,465.00	2,153.82	551.99		11.15	25,111.26	Total.
									ZUNI DAY SCHOOL.
	70.86	6.09	157.75					3,888.89	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					1,940.09			1,940.09	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
	70.86	6.09	157.75		1,940.09			5,828.98	Total.
									ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK.[1]
									CHEYENNE RIVER.
			86.07					2,016.27	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
								19.90	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
			250.00					3,209.00	Appropriation, classification, and allotments, C. R. & S. R. Res. (reimbursable), A.
			336.07					5,245.17	Total.
									COLORADO RIVER.
			62.00				[1]35.00	1,002.59	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
									COLVILLE.
							1.00	309.31	Surveying and allotting Colville Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable), S.
								17.10	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
330.01			2,069.82		2.50	48.00	164.48	40,072.06	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
330.01			2,069.82		2.50	48.00	165.48	40,398.47	Total.
									CROW CREEK.
								656.00	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
									DUCK VALLEY (WESTERN SHOSHONE).
								154.30	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									FLATHEAD.
								209.85	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									FORT BELKNAP.
			35.38				3.98	4,216.11	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									FORT BERTHOLD.
								219.65	Surveying, etc., Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak. (reimbursable), S.
								26.70	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
								10.00	Surveying, etc., Fort Berthold Reservation, N. Dak. (reimbursable), A.
			647.20					2,685.77	Appropriation, classification, etc., of reserved lands, Fort Berthold Reservation (reimbursable), 1915, A.
			647.20					2,942.12	Total.
									FORT HALL.
							[2]847.93	847.93	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
								5.25	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
							847.93	853.18	Total.
									FORT YUMA.
							[2]394.45	394.45	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
									GRAND PORTAGE.
			67.34					67.34	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.

[1] Rent of equipment.

[2] Examination and designation of land.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK—Continued.
JICARILLA.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	$2,383.10	$144.03	$30.92				$413.20
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	105.00
Total	2,488.10	144.03	30.92				413.20
LA POINTE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	1,597.34	181.61	20.90		$1.53		113.80
LEUPP.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	4.33	12.50	2.00				3.45
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	4.33	12.50	2.00
Total							3.45
MOAPA RIVER.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	40.00	31.05					4.65
NAVAJO.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
NEAH BAY.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	2,193.23	154.64	10.57				642.97
PIMA.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	669.49
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	3,210.00	59.80							$79.69	$40.00
Total	3,879.49	59.80							79.69	40.00
PINE RIDGE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						$27.05
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	3,582.00	47.30				33.90
Appropriation, classification, measurements, Pine Ridge Reservation, S. Dak. (reimbursable), A.	1,569.67
Total	5,151.67	47.30				60.95
PUEBLOS.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	16,089.20	352.22	493.50				6,414.53		2,173.44
ROSEBUD.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	3,855.50								124.70	19.72
ROUND VALLEY.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	505.01	712.83	2.04			2.90
SAN CARLOS.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
SAN XAVIER.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	3,020.45	124.05	357.79				1,313.96		244.53
SHOSHONE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	4,998.33	106.16	74.80			28.65	1,282.54		454.47
SOBOBA.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	2,271.18	91.65					1,369.34		33.90
SILETZ.
Survey, sale, etc., of Siletz Reservation, Oreg. (reimbursable), S.	40.00	10.25			.48
SOUTHERN UTE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	3,343.12	85.10	17.47				1,472.08		466.78

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK—Contd.
									JICARILLA.
			$10.69				$497.25	$3,479.19	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
								105.00	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
			10.69				497.25	3,581.19	Total.
									LA POINTE.
			15.84				12.75	1,943.77	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									LEUPP.
								22.28	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
$61.25								61.25	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
61.25								83.53
									MOAPA RIVER.
							1.25	76.95	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									NAVAJO.
			827.50				.50	828.00	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									NEAH BAY.
			20.26				150.35	3,172.02	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									PIMA.
								669.49	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
1.04			204.28					3,594.81	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
1.04			204.28					4,264.30	Total.
									PINE RIDGE.
								27.05	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
17.50							[1]616.00	4,296.70	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
								1,569.67	Appropriation, classification measurements, Pine Ridge Reservation, S. Dak. (reimbursable), A.
17.50							616.00	5,893.42	Total.
									PUEBLOS.
			5,880.65				317.63	31,721.17	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									ROSEBUD.
								3,999.92	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
									ROUND VALLEY.
								1,222.78	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
			176.50					176.50	SAN CARLOS. Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									SAN XAVIER.
			1,136.36				60.52	6,257.66	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									SHOSHONI.
			245.00				11.00	7,200.95	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									SOBOBA.
			855.32				645.42	5,266.81	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									SILETZ.
								20.73	Survey, sale, etc. of Siletz Reservation, Oreg. (reimbursable), S.
									SOUTHERN UTE.
			142.38				37.05	5,563.98	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.

[1] Hire of teams.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK—Continued.
SPOKANE.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						$29.95
STANDING ROCK.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						5.20
Surveying and allotting Standing Rock Reservation, S. Dak. and N. Dak. (reimbursable), S.	$1,491.17	$40.45					$543.86		$152.34
Total	1,491.17	40.45				5.20	543.86		152.34
TAHOLAH.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	315.49	20.05				12.35	74.37		1.70
TURTLE MOUNTAIN.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	1,015.00	286.76
UINTAH.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.						60.70
WARM SPRINGS
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	4,219.80	66.45							590.72
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	214.33	20.85					70.37
Total	4,434.13	87.30					70.37		590.72
YAKIMA.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	1,038.00	171.50
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	180.79					4.45	41.34
Total	1,218.79	171.50				4.45	41.34
ZUNI.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	468.00	18.80					165.88		2.00
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.						33.65
Total	468.00	18.80				33.65	165.88		2.00
GOSHUTE.
Surveying and allotting indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	1,414.31	161.35	$73.08				294.09
MISCELLANEOUS.
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.	1,390.94	659.04	2.96			187.20
Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.	40.00	166.00	146.33		$51.61	67.50	18.30
Total	1,430.94	825.04	149.29		51.61	254.70	18.30
IRRIGATION WORK.
BISHOP.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	4,415.89	391.42	417.44							$119.82
BLACKFEET.
Irrigation system, Blackfeet Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).	33,232.50	84.95
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).		4.35
Total	33,232.50	89.30
CAMPO.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	631.75	34.50	184.80							2.90
COLORADO RIVER.
Irrigation, Colorado River Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable).	11,646.21	201.71	695.85						293.88	491.02
COLVILLE.
Proceeds of Colville Reservation, Wash.	3,427.03	461.47	31.89		3.12				57.00

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									ALLOTMENT AND SURVEY WORK—Continued.
									SPOKANE.
								$29.95	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									STANDING ROCK.
								5.20	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
			$233.72				$56.00	2,517.54	Surveying and allotting Standing Rock Reservation, S. Dak. and N. Dak. (reimbursable), S.
			233.72				56.00	2,522.74	Total.
									TAHOLAH.
			1.40				[1] 35.50	540.86	Surveying and allotting Indian reservation, (reimbursable), S.
									TURTLE MOUNTAIN
								1,301.76	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
									UINTAH.
								60.70	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									WARM SPRINGS.
			145.42				4.00	5,026.39	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
			3.68				29.37	338.60	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
			149.10				33.37	5,364.99	Total.
									YAKIMA.
$8.37								1,217.87	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
							[1] 72.00	298.58	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
8.37							72.00	1,516.45	Total.
									ZUNI.
			641.20				20.20	1,316.08	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
								33.65	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
			641.20				20.20	1,349.73	Total.
									GOSHUTE.
			12.70				291.28	2,246.81	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
									MISCELLANEOUS.
								2,240.14	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), A.
30.66			1,763.77				11.50	2,295.67	Surveying and allotting Indian reservations (reimbursable), S.
30.66			1,763.77				11.50	4,535.81	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK.
									BISHOP.
			883.98				[1] 21.75	6,230.30	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									BLACKFEET.
			24,710.79				[1] 65.95	58,094.19	Irrigation system, Blackfeet Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
								4.35	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable.)
			24,710.79				65.95	58,098.54	Total.
									CAMPO.
			450.04				[1] 70.00	1,373.99	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable.)
									COLORADO RIVER.
			1,165.61				[1] 58.50	14,552.78	Irrigation, Colorado River Reservation, Ariz. (reimbursable).
									COLVILLE.
14.43			24.65				150.20	4,169.79	Proceeds of Colville Reservation, Wash.

[1] Team hire. [2] Court fees. [3] United States Geological Survey, measuring flow of streams. [4] Hire of transit.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
CROW.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	$21,479.51	$32.90	$415.87	.....	.....	$4.50	.....	.....	$1,114.40	$340.12
Proceeds of Crow ceded lands (miscellaneous)	11,989.42	23.25	1.07	.....	.....	6.50	.....	.....	72.48	165.48
Total	33,468.93	56.15	416.94	.....	.....	11.00	.....	.....	1,186.97	505.60
DIGGER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	849.09	148.30	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
FALLON.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
FLATHEAD.
Irrigation system, Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable)	46,111.77	50.17	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	.....	4.35	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total	46,111.17	54.52	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
FORT APACHE.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	3,557.11	26.85	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	31.00	10.90
FORT BELKNAP.
Maintenance and operation, Milk River irrigation system, Fort Belknap Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable), 1915.	14,751.06	283.28	415.26	.....	85.72	.....	.....	.....	105.36	314.53
FORT HALL.
Maintenance and operation, Fort Hall irrigation system, Idaho (reimbursable), 1915.	17,613.67	355.62	11.40	$93.27	23.67	59.60	.....	.....	828.34	487.22
Irrigation maintenance fund, Fort Hall project	7,971.96	2.65	.....	.....	.....	2.25	.....	.....	283.32	188.78
Irrigation and water system, Fort Hall Reservation, Idaho (reimbursable)	2,046.23	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total	27,631.86	358.27	11.40	93.27	23.67	61.85	.....	.....	1,111.66	676.00
FORT M'DERMITT.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	767.95	.....	63.00	.....	2.42	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
FORT PECK.
Irrigation system, Fort Peck Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable)	49,984.94	185.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	.....	19.85	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total	49,984.94	204.85	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
FORT YUMA.
Irrigating allotments, Yuma Reservation, Cal. (reimbursable), 1915.	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
KLAMATH.
Irrigation system, Klamath Reservation, Oreg. (reimbursable)	22,118.02	282.47	754.98	.....	12.40	6.00	.....	.....	8.00	87.84
Payment to Indians of Klamath Reservation for lands, etc.	2,091.48	26.60	.....	.....	4.15	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	2,277.52	8.05	243.80	.....	2.06	.....	.....	.....	.....	21.75
Maintenance and operation Modoc Point irrigation system, Klamath Reservation, 1915 (reimbursable)	2,047.91	70.55	123.65	.....	3.26	.....	.....	.....	65.36	52.00
Total	28,534.93	387.67	1,122.43	.....	21.87	6.00	.....	.....	73.36	161.59
MALKI.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	20,858.68	697.88	154.01	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	265.65
MOAPA RIVER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	413.50	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
NAVAJO.
Canado irrigation project, Navajo Reservation, Ariz.	13,366.15	57.15	.07	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Water supply, Navajo Indians, Arizona (reimbursable)	18,258.60	122.80	781.52	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	114.45
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	1,288.16	252.11	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
Total	32,912.91	432.06	1,110.59	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	114.45
NEVADA.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	1,239.50	20.00	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
PALA.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	9,432.02	276.98	1,161.59	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	48.63

[1] Three assessments and interest on "Two Leggins Ditch."
[2] Three assessments and interest on "Two Leggins Ditch" and for water.
[3] Seventh and eighth annual installments, building and operation and maintenance charges.
[4] Earnings on Wilson Bros. and Nelson Rish contracts.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs, material.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
									CROW.
$17.41			$3,690.29		$39.04		[1] $3,229.41	$30,363.54	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
18.46		$1.40	2,902.88				[2] 53,443.05	68,623.99	Proceeds of Crow ceded lands (miscellaneous).
35.87		1.40	6,593.17		39.04		56,672.46	98,987.53	Total.
									DIGGER.
			325.23					1,322.62	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									FALLON.
							[3] 14,736.65	14,736.65	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									FLATHEAD.
			63,717.23				[4] 20,852.81	130,731.98	Irrigation system, Flathead Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
								4.35	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			63,717.23				20,852.81	130,736.33	Total.
									FORT APACHE.
			112.65					3,738.51	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									FORT BELKNAP.
11.71			3,422.49		438.27		72.33	19,820.01	Maintenance and operation Milk River irrigation system, Fort Belknap Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable), 1915.
									FORT HALL.
447.10			2,874.62		424.67		21.70	23,240.88	Maintenance and operation Fort Hall irrigation system, Idaho (reimbursable), 1915.
.30		1.50	1,231.23		156.28		33.75	9,872.02	Irrigation maintenance fund, Fort Hall project.
			52.16					2,098.39	Irrigation and water system, Fort Hall Reservation, Idaho (reimbursable).
							[5] 1,573.00	1,573.00	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
447.40		1.50	4,158.01		580.95		1,628.45	36,784.29	Total.
									FORT M'DERMITT.
			3.00				[6] 28.00	864.37	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									FORT PECK.
			20,936.79				[6] 222.57	71,329.30	Irrigation system, Fort Peck Reservation, Mont. (reimbursable).
								19.85	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			20,936.79				222.57	71,349.15	Total.
									FORT YUMA.
							[7] 33,396.00	33,396.00	Irrigating allotments, Yuma Reservation, Cal. (reimbursable), 1915.
									KLAMATH.
14.67			3,830.88				1,605.82	28,721.08	Irrigation system, Klamath Reservation, Oreg. (reimbursable).
1.00			81.41				[8] 46.49	2,251.13	Payment to Indians of Klamath Reservation for lands, etc.
			407.20				[8] 39.50	2,999.88	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
			163.51				109.99	2,636.23	Maintenance and operation Modoc Point irrigation system, Klamath Reservation, 1915 (reimbursable).
15.67			4,483.00				1,801.80	36,608.32	Total.
									MALKI.
			4,495.28				261.73	26,733.23	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									MOAPA RIVER.
			105.00					518.50	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									NAVAJO.
			853.92					14,606.29	Ganado irrigation project, Navajo Reservation, Ariz.
			4,621.44			$24.00		23,922.81	Water supply, Navajo Indians, Arizona (reimbursable).
			53.65					1,593.92	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			5,529.01			24.00		40,123.02	Total.
									NEVADA.
								1,259.50	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									PALA.
			7,215.38				418.85	18,553.45	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).

[5] United States Geological Survey, maintenance gauging stations.
[6] United States Geological Survey, measuring streams, etc.
[7] Fourth annual installment building charges.
[8] Hire of stock.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
PIMA.
Maintenance of irrigation system, Pima Indian lands, Arizona (reimbursable), 1915.	$6,859.40	$16.80	$47.03	$273.02					$169.68	$3.60
Irrigation, Pima Indian lands, Arizona (reimbursable), 1915.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	23,320.92	413.10	681.58			$23.80			446.34	65.92
Irrigation, Indian reservations (Gila River survey) (reimbursable).	1,922.99	68.19	36.65
Total	32,103.31	498.09	765.26	273.02		23.80			556.02	69.52
PINE RIDGE.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	280.37
PUEBLOS.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	12,889.75	300.49								138.20
ROUND VALLEY.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	3,082.24	62.46
SALT RIVER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	1,882.78	15.95
SAN CARLOS.
Irrigation, San Carlos Reservation, Ariz.					$0.21
Investigation, San Carlos irrigation project, Arizona, 1915.	12,342.13	1,813.32	14.32			234.42			28.30	334.67
P. & R. investigation, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	903.50	14.90
Investigation, irrigation possibilities, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	1,568.83	28.85
Total	14,814.46	1,857.07	14.32		.21	264.42			28.30	334.67
SAN JUAN.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	16,822.96	44.18			30.00
SAN XAVIER.
Papago Reservation, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	4,950.71	457.63	227.80						5.00	42.32
Ah-chin village, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	7,621.79	634.93	9.82						147.71	157.43
Nomadic Papago, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	8,158.08	557.82				32.00				254.43
Flood protection, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	6,362.27	72.02							774.30	4.32
Water supply, nomadic Papago Indians, Arizona, 1915.	2,997.92	175.40
Water supply, Papago Indian villages, Arizona, 1915.	5,705.11	219.41								82.21
Total	35,795.88	2,117.21	237.62			32.00			927.01	540.71
SHIVWITS.
Irrigations, Indian reservation (reimbursable).	75.00
SHOSHONE.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	17,759.91								390.50	12.52
Irrigation system, W. River Dam, reservation, Wyo. (reimbursable).	42,552.96	101.84	1,814.95		110.48				1,553.77	733.80
Total	60,312.87	101.84	1,814.95		110.48				1,944.27	746.38
SOBOBA.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	10,488.58	353.70	206.59							22.20
SOUTHERN UTE.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	24,924.71	110.42				3.50				10.10
TONGUE RIVER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	1,379.75		9.96
TULE RIVER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	320.38	76.93
UINTAH.
Irrigation system, Uintah Reservation, Utah (reimbursable).	30,594.41	758.45	194.59	20.73	18.27	3.35			2,192.07	79.90
WALKER RIVER.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).	6,408.01	143.75			14.38	2.25			60.00	136.55
WARM SPRINGS.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs, material.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
									PIMA.
			$831.89				[1] $36.34	$8,177.76	Maintenance of irrigation system, Pima Indian lands, Arizona (reimbursable), 1915.
							.62	.62	Irrigation Pima Indian lands, Arizona (reimbursable), 1915.
			2,781.12				[1] 450.51	28,183.29	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			85.70				[1] 105.50	2,219.03	Irrigation, Indian reservations (Gila River survey) (reimbursable).
			3,698.71				592.97	38,580.70	Total.
									PINE RIDGE.
			112.30				[2] 238.94	631.61	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									PUEBLOS.
			2,425.84			$16.00		15,770.28	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									ROUND VALLEY.
			161.13					3,305.83	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)
									SALT RIVER.
			149.95				[3] 1,014.65	3,063.33	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									SAN CARLOS.
			12.00					12.21	Irrigation, San Carlos Reservation, Ariz.
$26.70			1,117.41			10.00	4,552.14	20,503.41	Investigation, San Carlos irrigation project, Arizona, 1915.
			117.85					1,036.25	P. & R. investigation, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			8.39					1,606.07	Investigation, irrigation possibilities, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
26.70			1,255.65			10.00	4,552.14	23,157.94	Total.
									SAN JUAN.
			581.54					17,478.68	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									SAN XAVIER.
			4,395.07				[1] 82.48	10,161.01	Papago Reservation, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			13,946.04			[1] 78.60	206.74	22,803.06	Ah-chin village, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			963.73				12.87	9,978.93	Nomadic Papago, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			125.50				[1] 956.58	8,294.99	Flood protection, irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
			1,599.60					4,772.92	Water supply, nomadic Papago Indians, Arizona, 1915.
			12,389.85				[1] 69.50	18,416.68	Water supply, Papago Indian villages, Arizona, 1915.
			33,369.79			78.60	1,328.17	74,426.99	Total.
									SHIVWITS.
								75.00	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									SHOSHONE.
3.98			946.71					19,113.62	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
54.75			5,721.25		$426.93	20.00	3.00	53,093.79	Irrigation system, W. River Dam Reservation, Wyo. (reimbursable).
58.73			6,667.96		426.93	20.00	3.00	72,207.41	Total.
									SOBOBA.
			3,097.88				[1] 243.75	14,412.70	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									SOUTHERN UTE.
10.00			1,787.84			36.00		26,882.87	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									TONGUE RIVER.
			321.90					1,711.61	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									TULE RIVER.
			36.11					433.42	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									UINTAH.
10.65		$16.63	2,292.86		254.02	15.00	7.08	36,458.01	Irrigation system, Uintah Reservation, Utah (reimbursable).
									WALKER RIVER.
113.94			1,561.04				3.60	8,443.52	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									WARM SPRINGS.
							[2] 424.22	424.22	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).

[1] Hire of equipment.
[2] United States Geological Survey maintenance-gauging stations.
[3] Irrigation assessments.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
WESTERN NAVAJO.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	$4,245.59	$89.01
WESTERN SHOSHONE.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	2,620.97	82.03	$232.70		$38.41	$2.25			$279.92	$82.50
YAKIMA.
Maintenance and operation, irrigation system, Yakima Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable), 1915	11,910.20	104.00	192.60	$6.00	47.02				271.78	25.40
Irrigation system, Yakima Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable)	742.50	11.45	9.50
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	7,393.91	84.15	20.98						147.03	179.90
Payment for water, Yakima Reservation, Wash., 1915
Irrigation fund, maintenance	30,311.08	86.05		19.70	121.41	1.10			166.91	216.62
Total	50,357.69	285.65	223.08	25.70	168.43	1.10			585.72	421.92
ZUNI.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	13,390.16				36.00					31.63
MISCELLANEOUS.
Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable)	36,614.34	9,317.21	177.56		303.23	668.76				43.07
ATTORNEYS.
Counsel for Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, 1915	[1] 1,500.00	12.10
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy	[2] 5,000.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy	[3] 5,000.00
Interest on Creek general fund	[4] 5,000.00
Total	16,500.00	12.10
BUREAU OF CATHOLIC INDIAN MISSIONS.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Osage school, 1915 (Osage pupils)
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy. (Choctaw pupils)
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy. (Chickasaw pupils)
Support of northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915
Support of Quapaws, education, Oklahoma, 1915 (Quapaw pupils)
Interest on Menominee log fund (Menominee pupils)
Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota (Crow Creek pupils)
Interest on Sioux fund, Lower Brule, education (Lower Brule pupils)
Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education (Pine Ridge pupils)
Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907 (Rosebud pupils)
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915 (Red Lake Chippewa pupils)
Total
COMMISSIONER TO THE FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES.
Administration of the affairs of Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915	1,815.00	230.00	.95	18.51	47.97	23.09
Miscellaneous receipts, class 1	1,320.00					4.50
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy	93.75	189.98			.56
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy	31.25	63.33			.19
Choctaw 3 per cent fund	75.00
Chickasaw national fund	25.00
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw un. land	4,930.61	243.85				367.05
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw un. land	1,643.55	81.28				122.35
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Creek general fund	4,236.32	233.94			9.87	195.15
Total	14,170.48	1,042.38	.95	18.51	58.59	712.14
FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES SCHOOLS—CONTRACT.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy
Total

[1] Francis C. Wilson, $438.86; Jacob H. Crist, $1,162.50, for Pueblos of New Mexico.
[2] P. J. Hurley for Choctaws.
[3] Reford Bond for Chickasaws.
[4] R. C. Allen for Creeks.
[5] Northern Cheyenne pupils, Tongue River Reservation, Mont., $2,296.05. Arapahoe pupils, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., $7,833.36.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs, material.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
									WESTERN NAVAJO.
			$41.20					$4,375.80	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									WESTERN SHOSHONE.
$158.13			561.58				$9.65	4,068.14	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									YAKIMA.
42.55			2,260.85		$14.85	$135.00	97.50	15,107.75	Maintenance and operation, irrigation system, Yakima Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable), 1915.
			63.36					826.81	Irrigation system, Yakima Reservation, Wash. (reimbursable).
96.06			367.91			140.00	[1] 1,701.24	10,131.18	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
							[2] 100,000.00	100,000.00	Payment for water, Yakima Reservation, Wash., 1915.
365.26			2,549.92			265.00	77.58	34,180.63	Irrigation fund, maintenance.
503.87			5,242.04		14.85	540.00	101,876.32	160,246.37	Total.
									ZUNI.
			42.28					13,500.07	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									MISCELLANEOUS.
480.84			3,420.66			157.50	[3] 860.61	52,052.78	Irrigation, Indian reservations (reimbursable).
									ATTORNEYS.
							[4] 89.26	1,601.36	Counsel for Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, 1915.
							[4] 2,864.64	7,864.64	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.
							[4] 2,722.50	7,722.50	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.
						745.00	6,510.22	12,255.22	Interest on Creek general fund.
						745.00	12,186.62	29,443.72	Total.
									BUREAU OF CATHOLIC INDIAN MISSIONS.
							[5] 4,202.88	4,202.88	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Osage school, 1915 (Osage pupils).
							[5] 14,657.01	14,657.01	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy. (Choctaw pupils).
							[5] 10,301.19	10,301.19	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy. (Chickasaw pupils).
							[5] 10,126.41	10,126.41	Support of Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes, Montana, 1915.[5]
							[5] 972.00	972.00	Support of Quapaws, education, Oklahoma, 1915 (Quapaw pupils).
							[5] 16,200.00	16,200.00	Interest on Menominee log fund (Menominee pupils).
							[5] 3,672.00	3,672.00	Education, Sioux Nation, South Dakota, (Crow Creek pupils).
							[5] 480.60	480.60	Interest on Sioux fund, Lower Brule, education (Lower Brule pupils).
							[5] 23,086.73	23,086.73	Interest on Sioux fund, Pine Ridge, education (Pine Ridge pupils).
							[5] 29,160.00	29,160.00	Proceeds of Rosebud Reservation, S. Dak., act of Mar. 2, 1907 (Rosebud pupils).
							[5] 3,741.12	3,741.12	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, 1915 (Red Lake Chippewa pupils).
							116,599.94	116,599.94	Total.
									COMMISSIONER TO THE FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES.
33.66			15.00				8.20	2,192.38	Administration of the affairs of Five Civilized Tribes, Oklahoma, 1915.
								1,324.50	Miscellaneous receipts, class 1.
						52.50	420.75	757.54	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.
						17.50	140.25	252.52	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.
								75.00	Choctaw 3 per cent fund.
								25.00	Chickasaw national fund.
							[6] 241.74	5,783.25	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw un. land.
							[6] 80.59	1,927.77	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw un. land.
						30.00		30.00	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
.74							499.45	5,175.47	Creek general fund.
34.40			15.00			100.00	1,390.98	17,543.43	Total.
									FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES SCHOOLS—CONTRACT.
							[5] 15,089.35	15,089.35	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.
							[5] 7,303.82	7,303.82	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.
							22,393.17	22,393.17	Total.

[1] United States Geological Survey, maintenance gauging stations.
[2] Transferred to United States Reclamation Service to pay for water.
[3] United States Geological Survey, maintenance gauging stations, $671.23.
[4] Including expenses.
[5] Care and maintenance of pupils.
[6] Refund.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES SCHOOLS—GENERAL EXPENSES.
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.	$1,420.00	$577.44
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.	600.00
Interest on Creek general fund	37.50
Interest on Cherokee orphan fund	233.33
Interest on Cherokee school fund	816.67	95.72
Interest on Seminole school fund	450.00
Interest on Seminole general fund
Indian schools, Five civilized tribes, 1915	7,128.50	415.13			$140.23	$73.00
Indian schools, Five Civilized Tribes, surplus court fees.	3,618.00	415.01				3.51
Total	14,304.00	1,503.30			140.23	76.51
INSPECTION SERVICE (SPECIAL AGENTS, ETC.)
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	30,006.00	20,690.12	$25.00	$15.00	95.86					$14.70
Inspectors, Indian Service, 1915	1,633.99	1,032.83
Total	31,639.99	21,722.95	25.00	15.00	95.86					14.70
SUPERVISION (SCHOOL SUPERVISORS).
Indian schools, support, 1915	19,569.77	5,754.58			.96
CONSTRUCTION (SUPERVISORS OF CONSTRUCTION AND ENGINEERING, ETC.)
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915	9,386.66	3,767.17			.20
INDUSTRIES (SUPERVISOR OF EMPLOYMENT AND GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY EMPLOYEES OF FARMING AND STOCK RAISING).
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	3,450.00	392.75
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	2,300.00	964.48			112.41
Indian schools, support, 1915	300.00	581.91
Indian school, transportation, 1915		2,445.32
Total	6,050.00	4,384.46			112.41
HEALTH (GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY HEALTH EMPLOYEES).
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.	26,682.76	9,696.43			.66
Indian schools, support, 1915	2,000.00	557.33
Total	28,682.76	10,253.76			.66
LETTING CONTRACTS AND ADVERTISING OF SUPPLIES.
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.	10.00	430.55	6.54		.41	761.67
SUPPRESSING LIQUOR TRAFFIC.
Suppressing liquor traffic among Indians, 1915	51,247.82	46,851.50	3.02		800.52	27.45
TIMBER (GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY TIMBER EMPLOYEES).
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, for	10,955.56	2,317.68
WILLIAM O'NEIL, SUPERINTENDENT OF LOGGING.
Chippewa in Minnesota fund	17,174.66	5,550.85	2.19		22.82
LORENZO D. CREEL (SPECIAL AGENT FOR SCATTERED BANDS OF INDIANS IN UTAH).
Support of Indians in Utah, 1915	3,447.00	1,326.01	784.05				89.31	$74.20	$98.33
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,875.00		13.01				10.00	103.51	216.67	7.46
Indian school and agency buildings, 1915
Court costs, etc., suits involving lands allotted to Indians in 1915.	96.00
Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F	910.00
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.			283.09
Indian moneys, proceeds of labor	218.00
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915					4.49
Total	6,546.00	1,326.01	1,080.15		4.49		99.31	177.71	315.00	7.46
LUCIEN A. SPENCER, SPECIAL COMMISSIONER TO SEMINOLES IN FLORIDA.
Support of Indians in Florida, 1914–15	2,000.00	977.04			.27

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
									FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES SCHOOLS—GENERAL EXPENSES.
					$537.00			$2,534.44	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Choctaw Roy.
							[1]$270.00	870.00	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor, Chickasaw Roy.
								37.50	Interest on Creek general fund.
								233.33	Interest on Cherokee orphan fund.
								912.39	Interest on Cherokee school fund.
					182.00			632.00	Interest on Seminole school fund.
					58.00			58.00	Interest on Seminole general fund.
$28.02							[2]262,476.57	270,261.45	Indian schools, Five Civilized Tribes, 1915.
73.15	$0.75		$6.00				3.00	4,119.42	Indian schools, Five Civilized Tribes, surplus court fees.
101.17	.75		6.00		777.00		262,749.57	279,658.53	Total.
									INSPECTION SERVICE (SPECIAL AGENTS, ETC.).
114.09			202.05			$546.00	62.50	51,771.32	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								2,666.82	Inspectors, Indian Service, 1915.
114.09			202.05			546.00	62.50	54,438.14	Total.
									SUPERVISION (SCHOOL SUPERVISORS).
88.60								25,413.31	Indian schools, support, 1915.
									CONSTRUCTION (SUPERVISORS OF CONSTRUCTION AND ENGINEERING, ETC.).
45.00			59.57					13,258.60	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
									INDUSTRIES (SUPERVISOR OF EMPLOYMENT AND GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY EMPLOYEES OF FARMING AND STOCK RAISING).
								3,842.75	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
			2.05			82.50		3,461.44	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
			22.65					904.56	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								2,445.32	Indian school, transportation, 1915.
			24.70			82.50		10,654.07	Total.
									HEALTH (GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY HEALTH EMPLOYEES).
45.00		717.21	418.77				189.88	37,750.71	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								2,557.33	Indian schools, support, 1915.
45.00		717.21	418.77				189.88	40,308.04	Total.
									LETTING CONTRACTS AND ADVERTISING OF SUPPLIES.
								1,209.17	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
									SUPPRESSING LIQUOR TRAFFIC.
473.85			99.78			480.00	144.80	100,128.74	Suppressing liquor traffic among Indians, 1915.
									TIMBER (GENERAL AND SUPERVISORY TIMBER EMPLOYEES).
			771.28					14,044.52	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, for.
									WILLIAM O'NEIL, SUPERINTENDENT OF LOGGING.
123.27						600.00		23,473.79	Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
									LORENZO D. CREEL (SPECIAL AGENT FOR SCATTERED BANDS OF INDIANS IN UTAH).
45.90		37.99	1,064.85				99.91	7,067.55	Support of Indians in Utah, 1915.
	243.20		774.95				[3]53.36	3,297.16	Indian schools, support, 1915.
					25.13			25.13	Indian school and agency buildings, 1915.
								96.00	Court costs, etc., suits involving funds allotted to Indians in 1915.
								910.00	Industrial work and care of timber, 1915, F.
								283.09	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
			169.62					387.62	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor.
								4.49	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
45.90	243.20	37.99	2,009.42		25.13		153.27	12,071.04	Total.
									LUCIEN A. SPENCER, SPECIAL COMMISSIONER TO SEMINOLES IN FLORIDA.
							[4]42.00	3,019.31	Support of Indians in Florida, 1914-15.

[1] Tuition.

[2] Aid of common schools, $262,473.19.

[3] Seed.

[4] Hospital expenses.

Detailed statement of expenditures,

	Salaries, wages, etc.	Traveling expenses.	Transportation of supplies.	Heat, light, and power (service).	Communication service.	Printing, binding, advertising, etc.	Subsistence supplies.	Dry goods, wearing apparel, etc.	Forage.	Fuel, illuminants, lubricants, etc.
IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
C. H. ASBURY, SPECIAL AGENT.
Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915	$124.50	$39.02	$4.05				$568.95
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	297.93	68.65
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915							92.07
Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition)
Support of Indians in California, 1915							76.11
Total	422.43	107.67	4.05				737.13
BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS.
Expenses, Indian commissioners, 1915	4,924.74	2,911.54			$86.39	$1,125.20
MISCELLANEOUS.
General expenses, Indian Service, 1915	72.00	2,046.86	7.62		.84	1.44
Indian schools, support, 1915	1,085.27	1,375.44			.29
Telegraphing and telephoning, Indian Service, 1915					9,528.34
Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915		24.86	1,120.64		6.30
Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915	[1]20,126.47
Relief of May Stanley, widow of Will H. Stanley, etc.	393.75	43.95
Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915	7,998.42	73.00	347.51							[2]$101.20
Chippewa in Minnesota fund	1,478.00	75.14
Judgment, Indian depredation claims
Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915		60.45					3.78
Chippewa in Minnesota fund, expenses general council at Bermidji		1,288.08
Total	31,153.91	4,987.78	1,475.77		9,535.77	1.44	3.78			101.20
Grand total

[1] Indian Office employees, $19,982.57.

[2] H. F. Robinson, developing water supply.

It is interesting to know the number of Indians under Federal supervision to-day and the number under the Federal supervision in years past. In 1890 there were 230,437 Indians under Federal supervision. To-day, according to the commissioner's report for 1915, there are 309,911. Of the Indians under Federal supervision in 1911—that is, the first time that these statistics were compiled—there were 88,182 holding trust or restricted fee patents. In 1915 there were 68,000. Those holding fee patents for part allotments in 1911 were 1,926. In 1915 there were 2,600. Those holding patents for their entire allotments, fee patents, in 1911 were 76,000. In 1915 there were 110,686.

It is a well-recognized fact that as the number of Indians own and holding full title to their lands increases it is an indication of their higher civilization, and I trust that this Congress will always favor legislation that will soon bring about the granting of patents in fee simple to all Indians who are competent and self-supporting.

This is a statement which shows more fully the Indians under supervision of the United States since 1890 and the manner in which their lands are held by them.

Indians under Federal supervision—Unallotted and holding trust and fee patents, June 30, 1915.

	Total Indians under Federal supervision.	Allotted.				Unallotted.
		Total allotted.	Holding trust or restricted fee patents.	Holding fee patents for—
				Part of allotment.	Entire allotment.
Total, 1915	309,911	182,289	68,980	2,623	110,686	126,379
1914	307,891	180,605	69,944	1,643	109,018	124,797
1913	307,433	183,742	72,411	1,420	109,911	121,233
1912	300,930	177,626	103,417	1,926	70,904	120,876
1911	296,320	164,215	88,182		76,033	120,780
1901	247,522	64,853
1890	230,437	15,166

It is gratifying to those interested in Indian problems of our Government to find that the number of Indians holding full title to their own lands is slowly but surely and constantly increasing. The statement was made before the Committee on Indian Affairs a few days ago by one of the members of the Chippewa Tribe, a very highly educated and most able young attorney, that he believed over 90 per cent of the 8,000 Chippewa Indians in northern Minnesota were competent and self-supporting. All these Indians to-day are under the supervision of the Government. The Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs said that, in his opinion, 60 per cent of those Indians were competent and in every way self-supporting. Now, I present these facts to you, gentlemen of the House, for the reason that I believe the 60 per cent, or the 90 per cent, as the case may be, of these Indians who are competent and self-supporting, who have been in that condition for a number of years, should be released from the supervision of the Indian Service, and that the work of the Indian Bureau, instead of increasing, should at some time soon begin to decrease. In my opinion it will be a golden day in the history of the American Indian when he can do away with the services of the Indian Bureau.

It would surprise some gentlemen of the House, I believe, to know where the Indians of the United States are variously located, where they are civilized, where semicivilized, where most full bloods are to be found, and where the most mixed bloods reside. If I should go anywhere here in the East and tell the people that I was from North Dakota, they would at once think of Indians in North Dakota. Why, gentlemen, to-day there are nearly, within just a few hundreds, as many Indians in New York State as in the State of North Dakota. In New York State there are more full-blood Indians to-day than in North Dakota, and North Dakota, as you know, is considerably larger in area than New York and of comparatively recent settlement and development by white men.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, the subject which the gentleman is discussing is a most interesting one, and I suggest that we ought to have a quorum present to listen to it. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wyoming makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Indian Service, 1915—Continued.

Stationery and office supplies.	Educational supplies.	Medical supplies.	Equipment, material, etc.	Construction.	Repairs.	Rent.	Miscellaneous.	Total.
									IRRIGATION WORK—Continued.
									C. H. ASBURY, SPECIAL AGENT.
		$26.20	$27.10			$60.00	$108.42	$958.24	Support of Indians in Nevada, 1915.
								366.58	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
$53.50								53.50	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
								92.07	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
							[1]910.65	910.65	Indian schools, support, 1915 (tuition).
								76.11	Support of Indians in California, 1915.
53.50		26.20	27.10			60.00	1,019.07	2,457.15	Total.
									BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS.
135.76							21.16	9,294.79	Expenses, Indian commissioners, 1915.
									MISCELLANEOUS.
			123.43				254.20	2,506.39	General expenses, Indian Service, 1915.
17,000.00							113.30	19,574.30	Indian schools, support, 1915.
								9,528.34	Telegraphing and telephoning, Indian Service, 1915.
509.64			57.85				25.30	1,735.59	Purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, 1915.
								20,126.47	Determining heirs of deceased Indian allottees, 1915.
							3,062.30	3,500.00	Relief of May Stanley, widow of Will F. Stanley, etc.
			4,068.24			55.70		[2]12,644.07	Support of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, 1915.
							[3]1,376.00	2,920.14	Chippewa in Minnesota fund.
							[4]42,565.00	42,565.00	Judgment, Indian depredation claims.
82.50	$60.00							206.73	Relieving distress and prevention of disease among Indians, 1915.
								1,288.08	Chippewa in Minnesota fund, expenses general council at Bermidji.
17,583.14	60.00		4,249.52			55.70	47,396.10	116,604.11	Total.
								13,644,389.01	Grand total.

[1] Tuition.
[2] Moqui and Navajo Reservations, $4,568.24; Pueblo Reservation, $8,075.83.
[3] Refund hospital expenses.
[4] Judgment, depredation claims.

Pending the count.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I think a quorum has now come in, and I withdraw the point.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws the point of order.

Mr. NORTON. Another indication of the increasing civilization and development of the Indians is shown in the statistics that present the records of marriages among them, the number of missionaries who work with them, the number of churches that have been established and are doing work among them, and the number of Indians who have acquired citizenship. In 1890 there were 118,196 Indians wearing citizens' clothing. In 1915 there were 182,496.

In 1915 there were 24,134 Indians who were voters and there were 74,092 who were citizens of the United States. The memorandum which I have gives these facts more fully so that comparisons can be made. I shall place the memorandum in the RECORD.

Marriages, missionaries, churches, English language, dress, citizenship, crimes, misdemeanors, etc., June 30, 1915.

	Marriages.				Plural marriages existing June 30, 1915.	Crimes.		Misdemeanors.		Arrests for drunkenness.		Missionaries working among Indians		Churches among Indians.	Professing Indians.		Indians who—
	Between Indians and whites.	Between Indians.	By tribal custom.	By legal procedure.		By Indians.	By whites.	By Indians.	By whites.	Indians.	Whites.	Protestant.	Catholic.		Protestant.	Catholic.	Speak English language.	Read and write English language.	Wear citizens' clothing.	Are citizens of the United States.	Are voters.
Total, 1915	111	1,633	474	1,210	219	312	120	942	165	1,489	135	432	291	625	37,430	51,638	113,928	74,973	[1]182,496	74,092	24,134
1914	168	1,892	496	1,516	154	305	229	881	512	1,815	261	431	282	583	36,377	48,925	104,594	66,203	[1]172,160	80,241	22,118
1913	200	1,800	516	1,484	201	292	244	822	348	1,960	153	425	277	554	34,136	45,251	100,208	62,865	[1]161,585	74,295	.....
1912	172	2,151	779	1,544	588	266	207	1,264	327	2,057	165	386	258	513	29,897	39,632	90,431	54,843	[1]149,521	78,543	.....
1911	.....	.....	606	1,177	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	283	189	458	.....	.....	.....	.....	[1]135,410	.....	.....
1900	.....	.....	459	891	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	177	118	348	.....	.....	.....	.....	[1]131,714	.....	.....
1890	.....	.....	397	770	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	144	130	203	.....	.....	.....	.....	[1]118,196	.....	.....

[1] Exclusive of Five Civilized Tribes.

Mr. EMERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NORTON. Certainly.

Mr. EMERSON. What does the gentleman mean by "citizens"? I do not understand. Are they not all citizens?

Mr. NORTON. Those to whom have been given the full rights of citizenship in the States in which they reside.

Mr. EMERSON. Under what conditions?

Mr. NORTON. On condition that the Indian has severed his tribal relations, and, in some instances, on the further condition that all restrictions as to his property has been released by the Federal Government.

Mr. EMERSON. Is that all that is necessary in order to give them the status of citizenship—to be released from their tribal relations?

Mr. NORTON. That depends upon the laws of the different States. In most of the Western States that is all that is necessary—that the Government recognize the fact that they have no tribal relations and that they are self-supporting.

Mr. EMERSON. The point is, does that take the decree of any court, or how is that brought about?

Mr. NORTON. No; that does not take a decree of court. Full citizenship is granted to the Indian, as a matter of fact, when he complies with certain conditions provided by the law. They may exercise all the rights of citizenship, and, of course, some do exercise the rights of full citizenship who, if the question were tested, are not under the laws entitled to enjoy the full rights of citizenship.

A very interesting and important problem in the administration of Indian affairs is the use of the agricultural land belonging to the Indians. There has been a great deal of criticism of that, and I believe it is well that the Members of the House should know how the amount of agricultural land held by the Indians is, in increasing proportion, being placed under actual farming conditions.

The report of the Indian Commissioner for 1890 shows that in that year there were engaged in farming 5,554 Indians. In 1915 that number had increased to 31,956, a most encouraging increase.

The area of allotted lands of the Indians in 1915 was 6,623,170 acres. The area of unallotted lands was 969,441 acres. The income from leases for the allotted and unallotted lands in 1915 was $2,122,431. I might say, in commenting upon this, that the amount of land owned by the Indians and under cultivation is rapidly growing larger each year. This is the most significant and most promising indication of the larger development and higher civilization that is being attained by our red brethren. The statement which I have here presents the conditions pertaining to the lands cultivated by Indians since 1911 and for other years.

Use of agricultural lands belonging to Indians, fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Area of lands.		Cultivated by Indians.		Able-bodied male adults.	Number of Indians farming.	Leased.
							Allotted.				Unallotted.			Total income.
	Allotted.	Unallotted.	Allotted.	Unallotted.			Number of leases.	Number of allotments.	Area.	Income.	Number of leases.	Area.	Income.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.					Acres.			Acres.
Total, 1915	6,623,170	969,441	532,095	132,444	42,239	31,956	16,500	15,207	2,415,794	$2,117,166	51	2,370	$5,265	$2,122,431
1914	5,820,701	2,221,135	468,722	125,546	42,353	29,811	(1)	16,757	1,570,267	(2)	68	4,151	(2)	2,164,319
1913	6,775,542	2,873,108	478,052	117,279	39,951	29,216	(1)	[3] 28,847	[3] 3,109,209	(2)	578	[3] 70,201	(2)	[3] 3,520,251
1912	6,661,032	2,042,963	431,500	127,003	39,901	28,051	(1)	[3] 27,605	[3] 2,792,799	(2)	46	4,951	(2)	[3] 3,073,898
1911	6,311,561	2,533,328	265,080	117,945	28,544	24,483	(1)	[3] 19,753	[3] 2,528,495	(2)	1,706	[3] 183,528	(2)	[3] 2,075,271
1900						10,835	(1)	2,592		(2)	52	8,421	(2)	7,033
1890						5,554	(1)

[1] Not reported. [2] Included in "Total income." [3] Includes grazing leases also.

Use of grazing lands belonging to Indians, fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Area of lands.		Grazed by Indian stock.		Indians engaged in stock raising.	Leased.
						Allotted.				Unallotted.			Total income.
	Allotted.	Unallotted.	Allotted.	Unallotted.		Number of leases.	Number of allotments.	Area.	Income.	Number of leases.	Area.	Income.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.				Acres.			Acres.
Total, 1915	13,088,784	30,935,867	8,702,245	21,894,898	44,704	9,387	10,426	1,868,779	$925,554	329	8,122,918	$420,895	$1,346,449
1914	13,499,098	29,991,010	8,176,753	21,350,359	53,503	(1)	[2] 18,356	2,384,446	(3)	1,759	10,162,842	(3)	1,771,421
1913	12,500,000	30,500,000	8,544,127	20,611,984	54,220	(1)	[2] 28,847	[2] 3,109,209	(3)	3,911	10,568,948	(3)	[2] 4,100,078
1912	9,506,449	31,029,096	8,735,552	21,314,688	51,380	(1)	[2] 27,605	[2] 2,792,799	(3)	3,225	8,369,351	(3)	[2] 3,535,948
1911	6,295,485	25,169,192	4,696,446	18,729,124	44,985	(1)	[2] 19,753	[2] 2,528,495	(3)	3,584	5,859,325	(3)	[2] 2,161,125
1900	(1)	(1)	(1)	(1)	(1)	(1)	2,592	(1)	(3)	101	2,373,815	(3)	94,243

[1] Not reported. [2] Includes farming leases also. [3] Included in "Total income."

This statement shows how the grazing lands of the Indians are being used. Among other things, it shows that while a large amount of both the unallotted and allotted lands of the Indians is leased there are this year some 44,704 Indians engaged in stock raising. From the leasing of their grazing lands the Indians receive a total income of $1,346,449.

The policy of the Indian Bureau is to encourage in every way the use by the Indians themselves of more and more of their lands each year for both agriculture and grazing. In the past not so much emphasis was placed upon this by those having the Indians under supervision and control. It is now held by those who have made closest study of the Indian question that if the leasing of the lands of the Indians for agricultural and grazing purposes proves profitable to white citizens the use of this same land by the Indians themselves will return to them a greater and more permanent income than that received from leases to white citizens.

I shall insert in the RECORD summarized statements showing the industrial pursuits, employment, and income of the Indians of the United States during the past fiscal year and for other years.

Comparative statement of industrial pursuits by Indians for last five years, 1911 to 1915.

It should be borne in mind that the system of gathering industrial statistics began in 1911. The figures of 1911 are largely estimates, and in some cases have been subjected to office changes to harmonize with later and better data.]

	Population.	Use of agricultural lands.												Indians engaged in stock raising.
		Area, 1915.	Number of Indians farming.					Acreage farmed.					Value of crops raised.
			1915	1914	1913	1912	1911	1915	1914	1913	1912	1911	1915	1911	1915	1911
Total [1]	196,306	7,489,118	30,277	28,702	28,962	27,311	24,065	643,843	616,348	607,576	557,344	490,951	$4,776,481	$2,638,179	44,473	49,860

[1] Does not include Florida, Pipestone, Salt Lake, and Carter.

Employment of Indians during fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Total employed.		Indians employed by United States Indian Service.				Employed by private parties.
			Regular employees.		Irregular employees.		Adults.		Minors or outing pupils.
	Number.	Earnings.	Number.	Earnings.	Number.	Earnings.	Number.	Earnings.	Number.	Earnings.
Total 1915	25,681	$2,304,339	2,533	$940,013	13,968	$414,422	6,899	$828,218	2,281	$121,686
1914	23,440	2,127,403	2,319	810,950	13,218	505,492	5,553	689,517	2,350	121,444
1913	22,793	2,065,124	2,271	762,264	12,290	414,706	5,585	778,117	2,647	110,037
1912	22,424	1,940,414	2,516	732,526	12,420	432,470	5,113	673,289	2,375	102,129
1911	11,781	1,861,630	1,995	687,039	6,582	582,919	3,204	591,672	(1)	(1)
1910	2,901	953,573	2,094	749,148	(2)	(2)	(2)	177,169	807	27,256

[1] Included with adults by private parties.

[2] No data available.

Incomes of Indians, by reservations, fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Population.	Total.	Crops raised by Indians.	Stock sold.	Weaving, basketry, etc.	Value of timber cut.	Wages earned.	Rations and miscellaneous issues.	From leases.	Proceeds sales of land.	Interest on trust fund.	Treaty and agreement obligations.	Indian moneys, proceeds of labor and miscellaneous.
Total 1915	309,911	$23,193,046	$4,790,968	$2,114,623	[1] $1,177,600	$1,446,021	$2,304,339	$499,585	[2] $2,975,526	$3,571,855	$2,125,787	$630,560	$1,556,182
1914	307,447	24,709,074	4,007,335	1,599,633	1,194,185	1,925,056	2,127,403	576,202	3,486,634	4,312,812	1,777,543	630,560	3,071,711
1913	303,240	26,283,494	4,021,392	1,783,950	1,316,298	1,605,011	2,065,124	437,458	4,386,151	6,116,369	1,830,584	780,560	1,940,597
1912	300,980	22,484,093	3,250,288	1,571,795	1,211,433	2,000,337	1,940,414	462,128	3,542,971	4,475,489	1,740,296	594,560	1,694,082
1911	296,320	21,092,923	1,951,782	900,000	847,556	1,398,166	1,861,630	590,655	2,382,027	6,010,642	1,911,609	1,177,561	2,051,015
1900	247,522	9,091,986	1,408,865	(3)	177,169	324,225	953,573	1,231,000	109,946	(3)	1,387,349	2,702,649	797,210
1890	230,437	3,307,235	1,507,072	(3)	131,374	193,460	(3)	(3)	(3)	(3)	1,475,329	(3)	(3)

[1] Includes 27,927 Indians engaged in various industries as follows:

Basket making by 4,062 Indians	$52,063
Beadwork by 3,429 Indians	39,664
Blanket weaving by 3,653 Indians	501,070
Fishing by 3,498 Indians	168,289
Lace making by 253 Indians	5,033

[2] Does not include $463,354, which is duplicated in farming and grazing tables.

[3] Unknown.

The number of self-supporting Indians is gradually increasing and the ration Indians are each year becoming fewer. On a number of reservations now where but a few years ago most of the Indians were ration Indians—that is, Indians living for the most part from rations received from the Government—it has become among the Indians themselves quite unpopular, in fact it has become discreditable for any able-bodied Indian to accept rations from the Government. This shows a splendid spirit of self-respect and a genuine progress to the very highest civilization. The statement which I shall place in the RECORD will show some of the changes that are taking place along these lines among the Indians of the country.

States and reservations.	Able-bodied adult Indians entirely self-supporting.	Indians receiving rations.							Indians receiving miscellaneous supplies.
		Total.		In return for labor.		Without labor equivalent.			Total.		In return for labor.		Without labor equivalent.
		Receiving rations.	Value of rations.	Number.	Value of rations.	Able-bodied.	Disabled.	Value of rations.	Receiving supplies.	Value of supplies.	Number.	Value of supplies.	Able-bodied.	Disabled.	Value of supplies.
Total, 1915	51,761	18,231	$297,668	1,325	$30,196	6,650	10,256	$267,472	8,512	$201,917	4,625	$64,024	2,677	1,219	$137,893
1914	52,110	14,987	471,394	805	9,475	4,371	9,811	461,919	9,045	104,808	5,331	72,190	1,634	2,080	32,618
1913	51,516	17,166	344,024	1,138	13,172	5,338	10,690	330,852	7,963	93,434	4,468	61,048	2,045	1,450	32,386
1912		16,679	400,732	1,415	37,262	5,175	10,089	363,470	5,475	61,695	3,501	45,743	635	1,339	15,951
1911		15,987	395,165						5,759	195,488
1900		57,570	1,231,000
1840			11,800
1830			11,528

The true policy of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, as I understand it to-day, is to encourage the Indian to make his own livelihood. The bureau believes from past experience that it is better to spend a dollar in inducing the Indian to earn a dollar than to give him the dollar outright. They are meeting with success in this, as shown by the report which I shall place in the RECORD, giving the value of the products raised by the Indians on their farms and in their workshops during the past year. There are at the present time 84,929 Indian children of school age, according to the last report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Those eligible for attendance in school number 78,333. There are in Government schools of this number 27,960 and in public schools 26,438, or, altogether, in Government schools in mission, private, and public schools, 59,447. There are 15,359 Indian children of school age who are not in school, according to this report. Of that number there are many who are attending the public schools of which no report has been made to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. This is the report made by the Bureau of Indian Affairs of school population, schools, school attendance, and so forth, for the last fiscal year:

School population, number eligible for school attendance, number in schools, etc., and capacity of schools provided for Indian children during fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Number of school age.	Ineligible for attendance.	Eligible for attendance.	In school.							Eligible children not in school.	Capacity of schools.					Total capacity, all schools.
				Government.				Mission and private.		Public.	Total in school.		Government.		Mission and private.		Public.
				Non-reservation boarding.	Reservation boarding.	Day.	Total.	Boarding.	Day.				Reservation boarding.	Day.	Boarding.	Day.
Grand total	84,929	6,596	78,333	10,791	9,899	7,270	27,960	4,557	492	26,438	59,447	[1] 15,359	18,596	8,239	5,572	615	26,438	59,460

[1] Includes those in public schools but not reported.

From this it would seem fair to estimate that there are upward of 10,000 Indian children of school age who should be in school and for whom no adequate school facilities are provided. It is, I believe, the aim of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and I know that it is the earnest desire of the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs, that at any early date ample school accommodations be provided, so that every Indian child of school age may be placed in school. Through the environment of the school more than through any other influence lies the hope that the red man will fit and adapt himself to successfully compete for existence in our modern life and modern civilization.

The appropriations made for school facilities for the Indians is one that shows a generous and steady increase. In 1877 the amount appropriated for this purpose was $20,000; in 1878, $30,000; in 1915 the amount appropriated was $4,238,627. It would be interesting to me, and I venture to say it would also be interesting to gentlemen of the House, to have the figures showing how much was expended by the United States for the period of 10 or 15 years succeeding 1877 on our Army for the protection of white settlers against the Indians. To-day instead of spending money for the Army to protect the whites from the attacks of the Indians we are spending that money for the education of the Indians and getting much better and much more desirable results.

The problem of irrigating the lands of the Indians is a large one and a most perplexing one. I shall place in the RECORD, with your consent, a table showing the area of Indian lands susceptible of irrigation, the extent of the irrigation projects that have already been appropriated for by the Government, the cost of that, the number of acres under irrigation, and the number of acres that are actually farmed. To-day I believe there are a number of projects that have been started for Indians on reservations that have not proved successful and will not in the future prove successful—projects where a great waste of money has been made. But it is no different than in some cases where projects have been begun for white settlers and have failed. I know of more than one project begun for white settlers where more than a million dollars has been spent and the land under cultivation is so small that the profits from the products would not pay for the operating expenses of the project.

The tables which I here present give in summary statement the expenditures made for irrigation projects, the acreage under projects, and so forth:

Area susceptible of irrigation, acreage under projects, and expenditures for irrigation, fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Area susceptible of irrigation (acres).				Acreage now under project.			Acreage not under project.	Expenditures—
									During fiscal year 1915.		To June 30, 1915.
	Total.	Allotted.	Unallotted.	School and agency.	Allotted.	Unallotted.	School and agency.		Construction.	Maintenance.	Construction.	Maintenance.	Total.
Grand total	1,627,253	1,015,772	596,711	14,770	605,515	263,011	6,613	752,114	$896,843.79	$294,461.60	$11,275,458.91	$1,122,850.87	$12,398,309.78

Miles of ditches and use of irrigated areas on Indian reservations, fiscal year ended June 30, 1915.

	Ditches on reservation.		Allotments under ditch June 30, 1915.	Indians benefited by irrigation.	Irrigated allotted lands leased.	Acreage of irrigated lands cultivated.						Within service of ditches June 30, 1915.	Remainder to be put under ditch.
	Main.	Lateral.				Allotted.	Unallotted.	School and agency.	Total.	Indians engaged.	Value of crops.
	Miles.	Miles.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.							Acres.	Acres.
Grand total	1,304	2,422	13,366	37,940	63,312	92,434	53,761	129	146,324	12,649	$3,448,122	518,786	1,018,821

In the consideration of the appropriations for irrigation projects in this bill your Committee on Indian Affairs has made an honest effort to first determine, before recommending any appropriation, that the money asked to be appropriated would, if appropriated, be wisely expended, and that it would be expended upon a project where the land when placed under irrigation would be used and farmed by the Indians. Care has been taken that appropriations be not made chiefly for the benefit of others than the Indians, and that the funds of the Indians be not exploited in the construction of irrigation projects for the development of any section of the country for white citizens.

The Indians of the country own property totaling in value nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars. With your permission, I shall place in the RECORD this statement, giving the value of the individual and tribal property of the Indians during the past five years.

Value of Indians' individual and tribal property, June 30, 1915.

	Total individual and tribal property.	Individual.							Tribal.
		Total.	Lands, exclusive of timber.	Timber.	Funds in banks and in hands of superintendents. [1]	Homes, furniture, barns, etc.	Wagons, implements, etc.	Stock, poultry, and other property.	Total.	Lands, exclusive of timber.	Timber and stock.	Balance of funds in Treasury.
Total 1915	$658,262,436	$438,116,841	$368,030,944	$11,369,277	$12,224,196	$10,827,552	$4,244,646	$31,420,226	$220,145,595	$101,390,579	[2] $76,558,336	$42,196,680
1914	667,454,639	434,872,202	372,776,671	11,373,084	12,251,557	9,924,495	3,769,903	[3] 24,776,492	232,582,437	111,396,816	74,093,412	47,092,209
1913	666,931,263	426,436,766	368,890,835	11,766,623	11,200,525	8,537,204	2,815,071	[3] 23,226,508	240,494,497	120,701,799	73,123,997	46,668,701
1912	648,689,092	404,265,024	348,504,293	11,745,511	10,098,276	8,276,073	2,641,906	[3] 22,998,965	244,424,068	127,838,467	72,011,067	44,519,534
1911	623,134,254	380,934,110	331,429,404	9,106,470	10,735,723	7,796,805	2,232,379	[3] 19,633,329	242,200,144	124,942,110	75,413,904	41,843,853

[1] Data incomplete. [2] Includes $1,694,721 tribal stock. [3] Includes tribal stock.

A very grave responsibility rests upon the Government and upon the Congress in the proper administration of the affairs of those Indians who are still wards of the Nation. Might I hope that every Member of the House will give just a little more time and study to the serious and difficult problems which confront the Nation in its efforts to best provide for the welfare and civilization of our red brethren, so that each may be better able and better prepared to bear his share of the responsibility for this work. If this would be done, I am confident that the golden era would soon be reached in the care and conduct of Indian affairs by our Government.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague Mr. McLEMORE be given leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. DOUGHTON). The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that his colleague Mr. McLEMORE be allowed to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, on day before yesterday, Saturday last, the House presented a very unusual and a very pleasing sight. As the Members gathered for the session nearly everyone wore in his lapel a pink carnation. Visitors in the gallery and the uninitiated, on inquiry, were informed, almost reverentially, that this was in honor of the memory of the character and public services of a great American, William McKinley. [Applause.] Those of us who knew him well remember him best for his modesty, for his kindly, knightly chivalry, and courteous consideration of the views of all men.

But he will be remembered best and longest as the advance agent, as the prophet of prosperity [applause on the Republican side], a prosperity as wide as the boundaries of the Republic, a prosperity felt and appreciated throughout the length and breadth of the land, a prosperity affecting every section, every industry, a prosperity that reached every hamlet and every home under the flag. And as we think of this prohpet of a real prosperity we are reminded of the voices that are now coming to us from divers places claiming that at last, after a long period of depression, prosperity has again returned to the land.

Prosperity is howled at us from the stock exchange by frenzied speculators in the stocks of munition corporations and other blood merchandisers.

Prosperity is shrieked at us from the riotous debauchery of money-mad munition speculators, their dupes and painted consorts in and around the lobster and champagne palaces of New York's great white way.

Prosperity is yelled at us from out the feverish activity and wild debauchery; of raw, crude, and comfortless mushroom war-munition settlements.

Prosperity is bawled at us by those whose profits increase with the increase of want, suffering, misery, anguish, and death along the battle lines and in the wake of the ruthless and devastating armies of Europe.

Prosperity is persistently thrust upon us by smug and unctious professional official prosperity barkers of Government bureaus.

Prosperity is deluged upon us daily by great newspapers, whose proprietor's profits lie that way, in fervid editorials on the alleged revival, spread, and expansion of prosperity over the land.

In the midst of these edifying evidences and palpitating pronouncements that prosperity, though belated, has arrived, it is perhaps unkind and inconsiderate for one to calmly ponder and plainly relate a few features of the country's actual situation.

For the first time since the Civil War not an industry or an enterprise, unless it may be that of building automobiles, is expanding, enlarging, or prospering except as the direct or indirect result of the war in Europe and the conditions which flow from it.

The cost of living to the American people, both actually and by comparison with incomes and wages, is higher to-day than at any time in our history, and is steadily advancing.

The past year has witnessed the first check in the continuous and steady decline of freight and passenger rates on American railroads, and has brought an advance in rates, under which our people are paying millions in increased charges.

Notwithstanding this increased burden of transportation charges, more miles of railways have been in the hands of receivers in the past year than at any other period of our history and fewer miles of new railway were constructed than in any year since the Civil War.

Not since the days of forty-nine has there been a year of peace in American history which brought so little increase in new mileage, new territory developed, and new facilities afforded by railway construction as did the year 1915.

The year 1915 found and left our people paying tax burdens, direct and obnoxious, never before levied in time of peace. It gave us our largest deficit in public revenues and our smallest cash balance in the Public Treasury.

Of one thing at least we are all in agreement, the times are and have been most extraordinary and the question of whether or not you consider them prosperous depends on your point of view.

If the making of millionaires be a badge and sign of prosperity, then we have certainly been prosperous, for the making of powder, shot, and shell and the speculation in the stocks of this murder merchandising has, it is estimated, made more millionaires in a year than we have heretofore acquired in a decade.

If wild speculation be a criterion of prosperity, then we have been prosperous, for never in our history has the fever of speculation reached the temperature or counted the victims that war-stock speculation has brought.

If the amassing of great riches in a few hands and temporary and mushroom expansion of industries, a large part of which must be abandoned or radically adjusted with the dawn of peace, is prosperity, then we have been prosperous.

If, however, we expect prosperity to be evidenced by a steady and secure development of resources and the safe, substantial, and permanent growth and expansion of industries, we shall scan the horizon of 1915 or that of the present time in vain for substantial evidence of such growth, development, or expansion.

If we view prosperity as a condition under which the burdens of the people under government are lightened, as a condition under which the cost of living, as compared with the average income, is moderate or declining, then we shall search all horizons in vain for sign or semblence or immediate prospect of prosperity.

It is a most unusual condition and situation however you view it, either from the standpoint of those who winning large profits out of the woe and welter of the world-wide war proclaim all things prosperous, or from the standpoint of those who noting the lack of orderly and permanent development, and witnessing the continued increase of living costs, can not sense, realize, or admit the existence of the prosperity so clamorously proclaimed.

Out of such conditions so varying viewed from different standpoints it is indisputable that certain facts stand out as the characteristic signs and tokens of the times. We are not lacking in such signs and tokens. This period will be remembered as the one which, on the one hand, created the munition millionaires, and which, on the other hand, first witnessed the offering of horse meat as a staple article of American diet. I leave it to you to judge whether these things spell prosperity. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. NORTON. If the gentleman from Texas will permit, we will use some more time on this side. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FULLER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FULLER] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, the conditions apparent this afternoon bear out what I have often thought, that there is too much talk in the House of Representatives and too little action. It is my opinion that we ought more to get down to business and not waste so much time in making speeches for home consumption. I have taken up very little of the time of this House expressing my views, and I shall take but a very few minutes now. There is one question, it seems to me, of paramount importance in this country at this time, about which the people are talking and about which they desire us to take action, and that is on the question of preparedness, not preparedness for war but preparedness for peace.

I have given to this question considerable consideration myself; and, in order to know what the people back home want, I have sent out a large number of letters to the people in my district, to all classes and to the members of all political parties, asking them what they desired their Representative to do and what they desired the Congress to do upon the question of preparedness, and how far they expected me as their Representative to go upon that question; and, if they were in favor of the propaganda for preparedness, to what extent they favored increased appropriations by Congress in order that the country might be prepared for national defense, and be able to defend ourselves against possible aggression, and how they desired the revenues necessary to pay the expenses of preparedness to be raised. I also asked them in that letter to state their opinion on the question of an embargo on munitions of war to the belligerent nations of Europe. In answer to these letters that I have sent out I have received a great many hundreds of answers from all classes and from members of all parties, showing that the people are interested and that they are studying these questions and have views of their own as to what this Congress should do. I am here to say to-day that the people of my district—the great majority of them—are in favor of the Government making adequate preparation so that we may be prepared—not for war, which they do not want, but to maintain the peace of this country of ours [applause] and be able to defend our homes, our institutions, and our rights on land or sea; and the almost unanimous response has been that no matter what the expense may be they are willing to bear their share; and they want us, not to talk about this question all summer, not to be here month after month considering what we will do, but to make preparation now [applause], to see that this country is prepared against any possible invasion. One gentleman gave to me in the shortest possible form this argument. He said: "I do not expect my house to be burned, but as a matter of precaution, as a prudent man, I have it insured." And so, Mr. Chairman, that is what we should do. We should have an adequate measure of insurance against whatever might occur, whatever danger may threaten our peace or our rights and interests as a great Nation growing out of the exceptional conditions which now exist throughout the world. Some men think we are in no danger; that this war is so great, so devastating, so expensive that the nations engaged therein are becoming exhausted, that their resources will soon be wholly exhausted, and that when they get through there will be no more war. But we see to-day conditions that never have existed before, and we must take account of the fact that wars, like fires, will spread.

If a great conflagration is impending, if building after building is being destroyed, will you say that you will not insure your building because that fire can not extend any farther, because that fire will burn out? Oh, no; we do not know how far it will extend, and only the Almighty can know or predict when or how this great war will end. We ought, we must, as prudent men, as Representatives of the people intrusted with responsibility, to make reasonable preparation for whatever may come. This is a great treasure land, and is worth defending at whatever cost. It is the most prosperous Nation on the face of the earth. Other countries will be jealous of us when the war is over, and our very prosperity will be one of our greatest dangers. They will not be unprepared for war. We want no war, but we do want and must have reasonable preparation for peace. That is what I am in favor of, and that is what I understand the great majority of the people of my district and of this country favor.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will my colleague yield for a question?

Mr. FULLER. I will.

Mr. McKENZIE. Inasmuch as it is up to the members of the Committee on Military Affairs to devise some plan to carry out the idea of preparedness, and inasmuch as we are seeking all the light we can along that line, I would be very much obliged to the gentleman if he would state whether any of his constituents have submitted to him any plan or given any idea as to what they believe would be adequate preparedness?

Mr. FULLER. I will. There is a great diversity of opinion, however, upon the question. My constituents do not believe, as a general proposition, that we are in any great danger, but they do believe we ought to make adequate preparation. What would be adequate preparation is a matter of detail, about which laymen are not usually well advised. So far as I can judge, from the letters I have received—more than a thousand of them, from all classes of people; from Republicans, Democrats, Progressives, Prohibitionists, and Socialists; from manufacturers, business men, professional men, farmers, and laborers—which I would be glad to submit to the gentlemen here, most of them say they believe that the first measure of defense is the Navy; that we ought to have a Navy equal to any in the world, that will protect us from any invasion from foreign shores, and maintain our right to the freedom of the seas, on equal terms with any other nation. They also believe we ought to have adequate coast defenses, and, as a general proposition, averaging the various opinions my constituents have expressed in their letters to me, I think they believe we ought to have a standing army of not less than 250,000 men [applause], trained and ready for duty at a moment's notice. That is the general proposition. As I say, there is a great diversity of opinion. Some believe that we are in less danger to-day than at any other time in our history. I think they are mistaken. Some of them believe we ought to make no provision for the protection of American coasts, American industries, and all of our institutions, but trust alone, with child-like confidence, to our peaceful desires as a sufficient protection. I do not agree with them. I am in favor, and I think I voice the sentiment of the great majority of the people of my district and of the district of the gentleman [Mr. McKENZIE] and of all the great districts in the interior of this country, that we ought to have adequate protection so that our institutions shall not be in danger from any possible invasion. [Applause.]

Mr. EMERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I do.

Mr. EMERSON. Speaking of our institutions, does not the gentleman think along this line of preparedness a little protective tariff would help us to be prepared after the war is over?

Mr. FULLER. I will talk just a moment on that. I asked in these letters what measure they would propose for raising the revenues necessary to pay the cost of preparedness. I come from a great Republican district, and nine-tenths of the letters I received say that the revenues ought principally to be raised by a protective tariff. [Applause on the Republican side.] However, most of them, if other revenues are needed, favor an increased tax on large incomes and on inheritances—and a heavy tax on munitions of war.

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I will yield.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FULLER. Can I have 10 minutes' more?

Mr. NORTON. I yield 10 minutes' additional to the gentleman.

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. I concur in what my colleague says. I have been in communication with the gentleman's constituents, and of my other colleagues from Illinois, and I find a very large per cent of those with whom I have corresponded; in fact, I would say 9 out of 10 are in favor of materially increasing our Navy, our coast defenses, and developing our aviation.

I find that sentiment true as to the Navy. I do not find it so true, though, as to the Army. There is this difference of opinion, as to whether we should increase our standing Army or have some kind of Infantry service that would compel all to drill and prepare for war. What can the gentleman say he finds the sentiment to be on that question in his district?

Mr. FULLER. I find it to be exactly as my colleague states. There is a great diversity of opinion as to the question of increasing the standing Army, and I will say in the communications that I have received, which number more than a thousand, I find not one who expresses himself in favor of the so-called "continental army." [Applause.] They are all in favor of increasing the Navy and the coast defenses. Most of them also declare in favor of some military training or education of the youth, from 18 to 21, in our public schools and in our universities, requiring compulsory military education of the youth of the land, so that we will have a reserve all the time of those who are fit to organize companies and regiments and be officers in case we need them.

Mr. WM. ELZA WILLIAMS. I will ask my colleague how this proposition would strike him—that we largely increase our National Guard or State militia, set apart, say, 30 days each year for drill, and that during that period they should become compensated reasonably by the Federal Government?

Mr. FULLER. As I understand the matter, the Federal Government has nothing to do with the State militia except in time of actual war. I wish it were possible that we could have a National Guard, in fact as well as in name, something different from the present State militia, that would be under the control of the War Department of the Government all the time. I understand that the War Department has now no control whatever over our State militia except in case of war. And I would like to see a National Guard that was a National Guard in reality, that was under the control of the War Department of the Government; that could be educated and trained and drilled by men sent out by the War Department; and that the State militia as it now exists might be relieved from strike duty or anything of that kind, and that there might be in the States a State constabulary that would have charge of riots and such matters. One thing now against our State militia is that the men who belong to the unions will not join it because it is used too often for strike purposes or in labor troubles. We ought to have a National Guard under the control of the General Government, and, what would be feasible and very proper, they should be exempted entirely from the strike duty that the members of the State militia in the States are now required to perform.

Mr. PLATT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. FULLER. I will.

Mr. PLATT. I agree very largely with what the gentleman has now said; but does not the gentleman believe that the continental army scheme gives the chance to do just that?

Mr. FULLER. I am not fully posted on the scheme for a proposed continental army. I am in favor, in some way, of having the National Guard under the control of the Federal authorities.

Mr. PLATT. Has the gentleman had letters from any National Guard officers in his district?

Mr. FULLER. I have.

Mr. PLATT. Against the continental army system?

Mr. FULLER. Not against it. I have not had any expression from any National Guard officers on that subject. None of them has said anything about it in their communication to me.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. May I say to the gentleman that I have been connected with the National Guard for 25 years, and that there is not a National Guardsman in the State of Illinois that favors a continental army.

Mr. FULLER. I have had no expression in favor of a continental army or anything of that kind.

Mr. SWEET. I do not wish to anticipate the gentleman, but I wish to ask him in regard to the answers he received in regard to an embargo.

Mr. FULLER. I am going to speak on that question. I find the people are not at all unanimous on the question of placing or not placing an embargo on the shipment of munitions of war to Europe. I do not know that what I say will be in accord with the views of a majority of my constituents. As a personal matter, I would not sell munitions of war to any country to be used for the purpose of war, or the taking of human life. I would not own any stock in any corporation that did that business. I may be perhaps overconscientious upon that question. Many of the answers I have received have said that it was legal, that it was not unneutral, and that therefore we should sell munitions of war to any country that wanted them and would come and get them and take them away at their own risk. I do not take that view. I would not sell or permit the sale of munitions to any of the warring nations. I would not do anything myself toward the taking of human life in this war, nor would I be in any way responsible for making one woman a widow or one child an orphan. I think it is a cruel, a brutal, a murderous business, and if I had my way I would prohibit the shipment of munitions of war to any of the belligerent nations of Europe. That is my personal view from a humanitarian standpoint.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. And if the sale could not be prohibited, if that could not be, I would, at least, do this: I would levy a tax on the manufacture of such munitions that would pay the extra expense that this Government is bound to be put to for the maintenance of peace. These manufacturers are making huge profits on war orders. The Government should at least take the profit out of the business, and that of itself would do much to stop the infernal traffic.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. FULLER. I will.

Mr. FESS. I think that your position would be the position of all of my people at home, in this far, that they would not ship munitions of war, but the question whether we as Congressmen should prevent an American citizen shipping munitions of war is an entirely different proposition with me, in view of the fact that we as a Nation urged that right in The Hague conference, which was adopted, and that is what troubles me in not being able to vote for an embargo, the Government forbidding an American citizen shipping munitions of war. I would do it if I were free to do it.

Mr. FULLER. Conceding that right, conceding that it is legal to manufacture and ship munitions of war, I do not think it is right. It is not necessary that a thing must be done because it is legal to do it.

Mr. PLATT. Does the gentleman know that the United States Government in every single one of its wars has bought a large portion of its arms and ammunition from abroad—in the Spanish-American War, in the Civil War, in the Mexican War, in the War of 1812, and in the Revolutionary War? We were absolutely dependent on what we could import from abroad.

Mr. FULLER. I do not dispute that proposition, but I dispute the proposition that it is right in this day and age and under existing conditions.

Mr. PLATT. If the gentleman sees two men about to fight and he can not stop the fight and he knows one has got a gun and the other has not and wants one, would he not be prompted to furnish a gun to the one who did not have one?

Mr. FULLER. If two men are trying to fight and one of them wants my gun with which to kill his opponent, he is not going to get it. [Laughter.]

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. EMERSON. Has the gentleman not overlooked one feature of this matter? In what shape would the Democratic Party be to-day if they were not able to refer to the sporadic prosperity that exists from the manufacture of munitions of war? [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. FULLER. Oh, I do not place my remarks upon a partisan basis. I am speaking not as a Republican or as a Democrat. This is a question that concerns the welfare of this Nation, and every Republican and every Democrat ought to put partisanship aside and all, as patriotic Americans, work together as one to insure the peace of the Nation and, if that might be, to at least not do anything or sanction anything that would prolong the awful war that is now madly raging——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I will give the gentleman five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FULLER] is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. FULLER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GORDON].

Mr. GORDON. Has the gentleman considered in his remarks—I just came into the Chamber—the question of the right of American citizens to prosecute a business that everybody concedes to be entirely legal and the power of this Government to put them out of business?

Mr. FULLER. Oh, I think this Government is for the people, and for all the people, and we ought to have higher ambitions than to encourage an industry that takes human life.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further there?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. To what extent and in what manner, if any, has this Government encouraged the people to manufacture arms and ammunition?

Mr. FULLER. To this extent it has not discouraged the business: Most of the letters I get show that those who sympathize with one side are in favor of shipping all the munitions of war they want and those in favor of the other side are against it. Now, I am neutral. I am not for one side or the other; and I want to say right here and now that I have no ambition for this country to dominate the world or to rule the sea like the British Empire, "whose morning drumbeat, following the sun in its course and keeping pace with the hours, encircles the globe with one continuous strain of the martial airs of England." I have no such ambition for America, but I do want to see the flag of this Union honored and respected around the world. I want it to be justly entitled to the respect of all people and of all nations, and I want to see behind it the power to compel the respect alike of a measly Mexican or an arrogant Briton. [Applause.]

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. FULLER. The gentleman from Texas desires to say something. I will yield first to him.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. I am interested in the gentleman's speech, and I was especially interested in the sentence the gentleman from Illinois uttered when he said he thought this ought to be a nonpartisan question—one in which all Americans should feel a common interest. I feel that way about it. But he had just stated, in a paragraph in front of that, that he was in favor of levying a protective tariff for covering the expenses of preparedness; and I stand unquestionably for an income tax, and an increase of the surtax on incomes, and a tax on inheritances, and a tax——

Mr. FULLER. All right. Make your speech a little later in your own time. [Laughter.]

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. And the difference between the Democrats and the Republicans is made absolutely manifest in the way in which they would impose the taxation.

Mr. FULLER. Oh, that is not the question.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will my colleague yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to his colleague?

Mr. FULLER. Yes; I will yield to my colleague from Illinois.

Mr. McKENZIE. I simply wish to call my colleague's attention to one statement that he has made, in which he has made the declaration that he does not believe that the selling of munitions to the belligerents is right. Now, if I understand my colleague he means that it is not right from the moral standpoint, and he is not discussing the legal phases of the question at all?

Mr. FULLER. Oh, that is true. It is against my principles. I would not do it. I concede that it is legal, and that if it must be indulged in I would like to see those fellows pay the tax that is necessary in order to prepare this country for what they are bringing about.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Of course, it goes without saying that the Government is not selling munitions.

Mr. FULLER. I understand that.

Mr. FESS. But individuals are selling to the people who can deliver. They are not denying the sale to Germany.

Mr. FULLER. Oh, no; but it is understood that one side can get the munitions and the other side can not; and in this country we are made up of all classes of people from all nations, and I would like to see this country absolutely neutral. That is the way I feel. I would not favor one side or the other.

Mr. FESS. Now, since it is a right under The Hague conference for a belligerent to buy of a neutral, if you and I vote to prevent that belligerent from exercising that right, would that be a neutral act on our part?

Mr. FULLER. I do not think it would be an unneutral act at all for this country to say that we will stand aloof, and that we will favor neither side. To my mind, to be strictly neutral is to favor neither side either by action or by nonaction.

Mr. FESS. What does the gentleman think would be the position of the United States in case we set that example, forbidding the sale of munitions to a belligerent, if we should get into trouble? Would not that necessitate our building up great munition plants here in America to supply all our needs?

Mr. FULLER. I am in favor of the building up of munition plants here. I am in favor of the United States Government preparing to manufacture in its own plants everything that is necessary for defense, and I will vote to take private profit out of the manufacture of war munitions and for everything of that kind. [Applause.]

By permitting the unlimited sale and shipment of munitions of war to Great Britain, we are aiding that nation as much as though we had actually joined the allies in the prosecution of the war. And yet that nation assumes control of the seas, as its own private property. It assumes the right to interfere with our commerce on the sea and even claims the right to rifle and censor our mails. We should stand for the freedom of the seas, for ourselves and for all other nations, and I hope to see this Government take that stand and I want a Navy sufficient to enforce the right. These munitions of war we are sending to them to aid them in controlling the seas may yet be used against us. Is it not time we adopt a purely American policy, and as its corner stone declare that the seas shall be open to the commerce of the world, and that no country shall assume to control the mastery of the seas, however great its navy may be. Our interest, and the interest of all other nations, except Great Britain, is for the freedom of the seas. Our every act should guard that interest.

I want to say just this much further on the question of preparedness and the provisions to be made to pay the cost thereof, and in this I know I voice the sentiment of the people of my district. The poorer people, those in the ordinary walks of life, the farmer, the small business man, the worker—these are all taxed now about all they can stand and all they should be required to pay. For the extraordinary expense now contemplated, and now necessary, those who have most at stake and those best able to bear the extra expense should be required to pay the greater part of the cost. For the ordinary expenses of the Government, the tariff and the internal-revenue tax on liquors and tobacco should afford ample revenue without any direct tax. The tariff on luxuries, imported goods, used only by the rich, and the like, should be materially increased. For the extraordinary expense now made necessary, the surtax on large incomes should be materially increased, and a graduated inheritance tax should be imposed, bearing very largely on great inheritances, so that no person should ever be permitted to inherit from one person more than a million dollars. Great fortunes have been accumulated under the protection and the benign laws of this country, and these should properly bear the expense of national defense. Odious stamp taxes hamper business and bear most heavily on those least able to pay, and should be repealed. Tax munitions of war to the limit. Let those best able bear the burdens of taxation, which will be no burden to them, and the great benefits of national preparedness is, to them, all important. In a word, I advocate a high protective tariff on all articles not in general use by the people of moderate means, a large surtax on great incomes, a large tax on great inheritances, and a tax on all munitions of war manufactured by private corporations, and a repeal of all direct Federal taxes affecting the great mass of people of limited means. We are here to legislate for the people and for the country. The path of duty and the way to perform it is clear. Let us do it, and do it now, and all the people will say, Amen!

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has again expired.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, how does the time stand?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas has used 46 minutes and the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] has used 1 hour and 45 minutes.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I will yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY].

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Chairman, in the discussion of the bill, which is merely the general Indian appropriation bill, I have observed that it is fashionable not to discuss the bill itself. The first gentleman this morning made a speech on rural credits, a subject that we all profess to favor, which a few of us understand, and all differ upon. [Laughter.] The second gentleman discussed the subject of "Why it is right to have prohibition of liquor for an Indian but not for a white man." Another gentleman, Mr. FULLER, the one who has just left the floor, discussed the question of preparedness, and my good friend from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] discussed, as well as I could understand it, the subject of "Bullet-mold prosperity."

So I may be pardoned for not discussing the bill itself. I shall attempt, however, to discuss what, in my opinion, ought to be in the bill, and I may say, as far as it was practicable, the committee put into the bill what ought to be there and where it did not, it was due to the fact that the things that were left out would be subject to points of order.

Ever since I have been in Congress the statement has been made in our committee and upon the floor of the House that pretty soon the Indian Bureau will be through with its work; but I say to you that under the present policy of the Government the Indian Bureau will never be through with its work, but if that policy continues it will grow larger. Why? Because you will observe in the history of the civilization of the Indian that he has progressed more often by the neglect of the Government than by the protection of the Government. I say that in all kindness to the conscientious gentlemen who fill positions in the Indian Bureau. The Indian is not suffering so much from graft—and God knows that it is great enough—as he is from ignorance of how to deal with him. I call your attention to the fact that the Five Civilized Tribes were civilized by the neglect of the Government. Up until the time that they moved west they had never had a Government public school. After they went west there never was a school in the Five Civilized Tribes, established, controlled, or even superintended by the United States Government until after the Atoka agreement in 1897. Those Indians became civilized because they were relieved from departmental red tape.

It is a regretable thing to know that the Government really has no policy. It started within our early history the policy of stirring up an insurrection among the Indians and then shooting them down, and that continued until Sam Houston came to the United States Senate. Then began the system of education. The first suggestion of the education of an Indian came from an Indian himself, by A-push-ma-to-ha, in the treaty of October 18, 1820. The first practical result came from the efforts of Sam Houston. Now, to determine what is best for the Indian requires a study of the past history of the Indian and of human nature itself, because human nature is the same, whether of an Indian or a white man. Mr. J. B. Thoburn, a historian who is now connected with the Oklahoma University in research work, has, in my opinion, solved certain Indian questions not heretofore understood. In my opinion there is no doubt that the Indians who were on this continent when it was discovered came from Mexico, where they had a dense population and a great civilization. Pressure of that population caused migration, just as pressure of population has caused the movement of humanity in all ages of the world, and just as to-day it has caused the war in Europe. The Indians began to drift along the shore of the Gulf and up the Mississippi River.

As there were from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 Indians on this continent when it was discovered, with the multitude of game and fish, there was no necessity for the Indian further to cultivate the fields, as the mound builders certainly did. The ambition of a "gentleman" of an Indian tribe became that of the huntsman, and that faculty, when well developed, enabled him to live without work, and so a knowledge of hunting was regarded as the accomplishment of a "gentleman." So after generations he ceased to work. You might put 5,000,000 white men on a continent like this, and in five generations they, too, would not work.

But we have reached a period when we must untrain the Indian and give him an ideal, which is apart from and the reverse of his former ideal—that is, in our congested civilization and under the pressure of population no race can progress until it learns industry. Industry is the first step in the progress of any race. The first step in that direction is the wage earner. Then when he learns how to manage a farm or an industry for himself he can take the next step. So, in my opinion, it follows if the Government desires to civilize the Indian it must teach him the work and not dole out a small amount now and then to feed him. [Applause.] He must be taught to work. The Government can not protect the full-blood Indian who is of age unless it has complete control of his property. Yet the Government maintains the same policy toward the mixed-blood Indian that it does toward the full blood and the minor children, when the three are distinct. There is one place where the Government can protect the Indian, and but one. That is in the matter of the minor children—to see that their lands are not sold wantonly and to see that they have an opportunity to become educated. But when they are of age the Government should give them their money and say to them: "Now, you have all coming to you, and you must go to work or starve." And then, if necessary, the Government ought to be paternalistic enought to supply the work, if work can not be found, until they have developed the faculty of industrial citizens, because it is only through an industrial course that the Indian will ever be enabled to be a full-fledged American citizen. I can call to mind now more men than I can count on the fingers of my hand who when I went to the old Indian country more than 20 years ago were self-sustaining and even wealthy. They lived around their capital, Tishomingo, where I now live, many of them having from 300 to 1,000 head of cattle. Those Indians to-day are paupers, and in a far worse condition than they were 20 years ago when they ran and operated a government of their own.

As I said a moment ago, I do not say this in criticism of the conscientious gentlemen in the Indian Bureau. The trouble has been that what has been done was without a definite policy.

Then, again, it seems that some gentlemen who have most to do with the question imagine that the right way to educate an Indian is to segregate him. When you segregate him into a school where no one except an Indian is allowed to attend you continue to make an Indian of him, and he will always be an Indian, misunderstanding the white man, not comprehending his ways, nor how to compete with him, and the white man will likewise misunderstand him. We have examples of that in my State.

The first institution established by the first Oklahoma Legislature was an agricultural and mechanical college in my home town, which bears my name. That school has been free to all the white and Indian pupils of the State. Two full-blood Indian boys living about 15 miles away, twins by the name of Greenwood, were the children of full bloods. I knew them when they were but Indian cubbies. Surrounded by full bloods, they knew no impulses except those of the full-blood Indian. They had gone to the Indian schools; but later, because the Government permitted the payment of their board out of certain Choctaw and Chickasaw funds, they went to this State institution. In the athletic sports it was found that these two boys were the best high jumpers and the best runners in the school. So when a contest came at the State agricultural and mechanical college, at Stillwater, where six district agricultural schools and 22 city high schools were represented, it was but natural that the pupils of the Murray State School of Agriculture, both white and Indian, contributed their mites and solicited funds from the citizens in order to send these two boys, the best of their class, to that contest. There they defeated all other contestants in the State. They returned and were graduated in course of time, and last year when I called upon a friend of mine for the name of the superintendent of Sunday schools of his church, to my astonishment I found that in a community where these two Indians were reared, and where there are not to exceed a dozen Indians of any blood in the community, one of these Greenwood boys was the superintendent of the white Sunday school in that neighborhood. He had learned by his college association the ways of the white man, understood his method of competition, understood his hope and his ambition, and in after life was enabled to use an education that became beneficial to him. If you segregate the Indians by continuing bureaucratic educational institutions, of that class in particular, who have become civilized, or nearly so, you continue to keep him an Indian.

I would not be understood to mean that there are not any Indians that deserve the protection of the Government as though they were children, but I am making the point that the Government fails to understand that they must be divided into different classes, the minors into one, the full bloods and helpless into another, and those self-sustaining into another. Then those that understand our civilization should have all the fetters taken off them, pay them their money, and give them an opportunity to compete with the white man. That will enable him to become an American citizen. I know also that in dealing with the minor Indians the Government should go the limit. It can see that the minor's property is not squandered; it can give him an opportunity to be educated where it is wisest to educate him. And when he is of age he will not look back and observe that his associates in childhood have a large farm while his is gone. He will not look back and say to himself "I once had a patrimony equal to my associates, but my great Government, my State, my guardian was permitted to sell and squander it, and now I am homeless and landless." That is enough to make an anarchist of him. With that class the Government ought to go the limit till they are of age, and when of age give them an opportunity to sink or swim, live or die, by their own efforts, and then they will prosper along with their white neighbors.

I grant you that there are certain classes of full bloods in the West that ought to have some paternal care, that there are tribes that ought not to be allotted, and there are other tribes that ought to be allotted and their property held in trust for them; but wherever there is an individual or the case of an individual being civilized, give him his property and give him an opportunity to use it. To remove his restrictions in part and keep a supervision over him in part, leaving him with the balance, is but to hamper the Government on the one hand and the Indian in his initiative on the other. He can never learn to manage his own affairs, a very important lesson in the life of any individual, white or Indian. Give him an opportunity, if you take them off, as a complete full-fledged citizen.

As far as the Indian Committee was enabled to follow that policy they have done so in this bill. They could go no further because it would be subject to a point of order, but wherever a treaty has stipulated and the conditions justified it we have put into this bill conditions for the payment of funds to the Indians from their funds properly belonging to them.

Before I conclude—and I observe that my time is flying—I do not think that it lies in the mouth of the Government in dealing with these Indians to say that their treaties in the past are but "scraps of paper." The promise of this Government to these Indians ought to be just as sacred—yes; more sacred—than a treaty with the British Government. Where the individual is but the ward of the Government there is something more than a treaty-making power involved. Where a treaty is between our Government and Great Britain, where they are equal, there are times when the treaty might be changed, and that is when it ceases to be profitable to both of them; but no so with the helpless wards of the Government.

In the beginning of the Government we started out, as I said a while ago, to exterminate the Indians. For that reason we created our military posts, not with a view of the best military preparedness, but scattered 50 or more posts over the West to fight the Indians; and we retain them there yet, although we found that it was not wise to continue that old policy.

We remember that in the Seminole insurrection we enlisted, as the war records show, a portion of the Regular Army and 43,000 volunteers to try to whip the Seminoles and make them move West; but that war ended without moving a single Indian. So the Government, after 20 years' warfare, discovered that it was wise to change; and I say to you that it is wiser to change still.

I was struck with the remark made by a learned gentleman from Boston, a great scholar, like the most of them are, who had been on a tour with the Rodman Wanamaker expedition through Arizona and New Mexico, and in his discussing the Pueblo and Navajo Indians he made this startling statement, but I must confess that he had much record to prove it. He said this Government enlisted nearly 3,000,000 men and lost the lives of more than one-half a million soldiers, wounded many more, paid out in pensions $4,000,000,000, to try to develop the negro, and had made one Booker T. Washington. That the Government, on the other hand, had from time to time enlisted over half a million soldiers and spent more than $3,000,000,000 trying to crush the Indian, but the Indian had survived in spite of that loss of treasure and the opposition of the Government.

The Indian may survive in spite of the red tape and wrongful policy of the Government; but I do not see how he can, because a white man could not survive under such conditions. Here is a multitudinous race, dwindled away to 275,000 members, as reported by the Indian Department, because of a governmental policy founded upon a misapprehension of what ought to be done, holding him down and prohibiting his taking the initiative; and an Indian, a white man, and the child of either, must first learn to walk and to run, and sooner or later the mother's apron string must be taken loose and the child enabled to march or run by its own efforts. The apron string of the Federal Government must be taken off every Indian of age who has an education and who has developed to that period or 20 years from now he will be poorer and more dependent than he has been in the past. I could enumerate instances to prove to you what I said in the beginning—that more Indians have developed at the neglect of the Government than have developed with the red tape of the Government. The conscience of the American people has at last been pricked about its Indian policy in the past, and we have many thousands of patriotic citizens all over the eastern part of the Republic who are willing to give their funds, to sacrifice their personal comforts, to redeem the past crimes; but the only question with these people is that, with their discussion with the department self-sufficiency, connected with their own lack of information on the matter, they do not understand the practical thing to do. I find them willing and anxious to do the right thing. All that they need is to understand; but how are we to wind up the Indian Bureau by multiplying the necessity for clerks handling individual property when we handle the tribal property in bulk? To-day there are more Indian officers in Oklahoma than there were, and they will continue to grow as the Indian gets poorer and more dependent; and there will never be any end, because another generation will usher in a generation not taught to work, but taught to believe the Government will feed them; and they will lack individual initiative, they will lack knowledge of industry, and have but a theoretical education; and so the department will grow, and there are those who desire a continuation of this. But it is unwise from the standpoint of the Government and from the standpoint of the best policy for the civilization and development of the Indian himself. [Applause.]

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER].

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, as this seems to be a general field day and the House having just listened to a number of luminous observations upon the theme of war and preparedness, I desire to call the attention of the membership to the fact that the opening gun of the guerilla warfare to be waged against appropriations for rivers and harbors at this session of Congress has been fired by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR] in the shape of a 43-page contribution to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and it might be well for those who believe that the improvements of our rivers and harbors are beneficial to the people and of importance to the Nation to also join this great propaganda for preparedness. The conglomeration of reckless assertion, distorted facts, and misrepresentation of motives which have actuated former Congressmen and the Congresses, to which I have just referred, can be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 13. As a compilation of irresponsible newspaper criticisms, hackneyed phrases, doggerel, and scurrility, I venture the assertion that it has not an equal in the annals of river and harbor discussion.

Toward the close of the gentleman's animadversions in which he had severely arraigned the Army engineers, composing the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, because of the action of the Secretary of War in his allotments under the authority given him by the last two river and harbor acts, and which were made, no doubt, upon the recommendation of these engineers, I interrupted the gentleman with the query of whether he believed these engineers should refuse to make allotments for projects merely because a handful of Congressmen had criticized such projects upon the floor of the House, and whether he believed they should disregard their honest judgment and just merely because of this criticism refuse to make any recommendation whatever, although their judgment in making such recommendations had been indorsed by the majority membership of both Houses of Congress. Instead of answering my question the gentleman seemed to become very much perturbed, and at once launched into a vociferous denunciation of the Ohio River project. He said, among other things, that it was the most wasteful one of them all, that it did not have a continuous—I suppose he meant annual—river traffic of 2,000,000 tons, and that the best and most profitable investment the Government could make would be to do away with the Ohio River project entirely, for he said it was on a river which already had $57,000,000 of a possible $100,000,000 investment.

These assertions were in full accord with similar remarks of the gentleman appearing in another portion of his speech, where he discusses the Ohio River project, and in which he further says that the Ohio canalization project fastens upon this country an annual interest burden of $3,000,000 and a further annual burden for maintenance and deterioration of at least $4,000,000 to maintain the 64 locks. A little later on he said, "Does this reduce the price of a ton of coal to a single consumer?" His wanton attack upon this project is such that it calls for some response from those who are interested to show why Congress has been making appropriations for the improvement of this river for the past 50 or 60 years. I desire to correct one error I think that the gentleman has fallen into, namely, that there are 53 locks and dams to be constructed on the Ohio River and not 64. This, of course, is not a serious matter, but for the sake of accuracy I will say that the reports of the engineers originally provided only for the construction of 54 and 1 of these has been subsequently eliminated.

The gentleman states that $57,000,000 has been appropriated for the Ohio River up to this time. While this is true there has only been about $40,000,000 appropriated for the present project. To arrive at $57,000,000 he starts with the first appropriation for the river in 1827 and includes everything appropriated up to the present hour. He would charge to the cost of construction of the present project all the appropriations heretofore expended for the maintenance of open-channel navigation, the building of ice piers, dredging and snagging, the expenditure for the acquisition and improvement of the Portland & Louisville Canal, all of which amounts to somewhere near $15,000,000 to $17,000,000; and he also includes as a part of the cost of the present slack-water construction $1,630,738, the total cost of the operation of the locks and dams which have already been completed. So it is evident to any fair-minded person that about $17,000,000 of his $57,000,000 should not be included in the cost of construction of the present slack-water scheme, but that it is a proper charge or offset against the open-channel traffic of the river for the past 45 years, an expenditure by the Government for the protection of river crafts, and those engaged in river traffic, and the passengers upon this stream during those long years, aggregating many millions of persons, and the cargoes transported aggregating hundreds of millions of tons of the value of billions of dollars.

The report of the Army Engineers show that it is proposed to provide slack-water navigation for the Ohio River from Pittsburgh to Cairo, a distance of 968 miles, to the depth of 9 feet, at a cost of $63,731,488, in addition to the appropriations made for slack-water navigation previous to 1907, which amounts to $16,555,225.48, making the entire cost something over $80,000,000. To this should be added, likely, six or seven millions for permanent open-channel improvement, making the total cost somewhere from eighty-five to ninety million dollars. He wants the people to understand that when this project is completed they will be for all time to come burdened with the annual payment of $3,000,000 of interest. Of course the gentleman knows better. He knows that no bonds have been issued, or will be issued, to construct this project and that its construction is being paid for out of the current revenues of the Government, and when completed it will be a fully paid-up proposition. The Government, through Congress, believing the canalization of the Ohio River to be important not only to the people of the Ohio Valley but to the Nation has concluded to donate sufficient money to construct this great improvement. It is remarkable what some people can lead themselves to believe. The new philosophy advanced by the gentleman teaches that when the Department of Agriculture disburses $25,000,000, which has been previously raised by some form of taxation, that the people thereafter will be continually burdened with a $750,000 annual interest charge, and so we could go through all the various appropriation bills passed annually by Congress, aggregating in the past billions and billions of dollars, and by the gentleman's process of reasoning we could pyramid interest burden upon interest burden until the annual interest charge on the billions and billions of dollars being borrowed by the combined belligerent powers of Europe to carry on the present war would pale into insignificance. So much for this chimercial interest octopus the gentleman professes to see sapping the vitals of the Nation's future prosperity. As the Government will pay no interest and the people no interest on the cost of the improvement, his annual three million scare goes up in smoke. He states that the maintenance and deterioration charge will amount to $4,000,000 annually, but the Army Engineers in their reports place the cost of maintenance of the system at $1,000,000 a year. So we find upon an investigation of the actual facts that the gentleman's $7,000,000 annual burden drops to practically $1,000,000. The gentleman states in effect that there is a diminishing annual tonnage traffic on the river. I contend that the Government statistics and investigations of the Army Engineers show it to be holding its own or to be slightly increasing.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SWITZER. Yes.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. For just a minute. I am interested in these river and harbor improvements, as I represent the State of Texas at large, which, as the gentleman knows, contains a number of rivers, and I believe in it. Now, it is my theory, and I want to know if the gentleman agrees with me, if the rivers were not there that the whole country and all its vast industries would be at the mercy of the inordinate greed of the railway traffic, and hence their very presence is worth millions of dollars to the industries of this country?

Mr. SWITZER. I think the gentleman is absolutely correct.

Mr. DAVIS of Texas. Yes, sir. Thank you.

Mr. SWITZER. I am rather of the opinion, while I have not the report at hand, that there was a lower tonnage traffic than usual for 1915 on the river. Like the traffic upon harbors and lakes, it fluctuates from year to year; various things have an effect upon them, like strikes; and especially upon the Ohio River, like great droughts, or in winter when there is a great amount of ice. All of those things cause the traffic to fluctuate more or less, but I desire to say that the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, having this, among other matters, under special investigation in 1906 and 1907, state that the statistical tonnage for the year 1905 of 13,955,918 tons contained many duplications; and after a thorough investigation by the engineers, Brig. Gen. Mackensie, Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, states in his report, to be found in House Document 492, Sixtieth Congress, first session, that the annual traffic on the river for this period was approximately 9,000,000 tons.

In 1912 a new method was adopted for taking and compiling tonnage statistics, which eliminates nearly all the duplications contained in the old method; and under this new system the annual tonnage for the streams for the years 1912, 1913, and 1914 approximates nine and one-half million tons. Just how the gentleman arrived at a diminishing commerce from the official reports I am at a loss to understand. Of course he usually deducts from the river tonnage as furnished by the engineers all ferriage tonnage, the coal, sand, gravel, lumber and timber, and other low-grade tonnage, and if anything remains he then divides this by some covenient factor, which will result in bringing about the figures he had in mind before he commenced his circuitous calculation. Now, if the gentleman wants to be fair in comparing the river tonnage of recent years with that of years long past, and he subjects the present official tonnage to the foregoing deductions and divisions, he should give the past tonnage the same treatment in making his comparisons, for there were ferries across the rivers then, and coal and sand and low-grade tonnage then existed and was counted the same as at present.

To his query as to whether the construction of locks and dams and canalization of the river reduces the price of a ton of coal to a single consumer, I will reply that the Jones & Laughlin Steel Co., by reason of the construction of the locks and dams in the Monongahela River and upper Ohio have been and are transporting an immense tonnage of coal by river at the cost of 4 cents per ton, whereas the rail rate from the same mines was 44 cents per ton.

The near completion of a dam across the Ohio River near Steubenville, making navigation dependable from that point to and up the Monongahela, I am informed, has caused a large corporation to procure a site on the West Virginia side below the Steubenville Dam upon which they propose to erect an immense coking plant which will consume 500,000 tons of coal yearly. This coal will be transported to this point from the Monongahela River at a cost from 30 to 35 cents per ton; the rate by rail for the same haul is 70 cents per ton. The saving of $175,000 a year on a freightage of 500,000 tons is certainly worthy of consideration. The Island Creek Coal Co., of West Virginia, has a river terminal at Huntington on the Ohio River and mine and railway facilities thereto to enable it to load 2,000 tons of coal a day into barges. The completion of the proposed locks and dams from this point to Cairo would be of immense benefit to this company, which is hindered and prevented from utilizing the expensive terminals by it constructed for long periods of the year on account of low water and uncertain water conditions. Of course, hundreds of instances of benefits derived directly from the partial improvement of the river could be given. The Ohio River in the past has been a great factor in reducing and keeping down freight rates on the railways paralleling the river from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati and Louisville and on down the Mississippi to the Gulf. The saving in this respect during the last 50 years has undoubtedly been enormous, and of itself would justify the expenditure of every dollar that has been spent upon the river up to this hour.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SWITZER. If the gentleman will wait until I read this, then I will yield. In this connection I desire to read a few excerpts from the report to which I have just referred as to whether the canalization of the river will have any effect to reduce present freight rates on the river as well as railway freight rates. This is from a statement in the report of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

> In the letter written by Capt. William L. Sibert, heretofore quoted, it is estimated that the cost of carrying 3,500,000 tons of coal from Pittsburgh to Louisville, in the present state of the Ohio, is 45.8 cents per ton, and that if the river were permanently deepened to 9 feet the cost would only be 24.1 cents per ton.
>
> He further estimated that with the improved river the rate per ton from Louisville to New Orleans would be only 53.38 cents, as against 89.2 cents at present. The saving would thus be 21.7 cents per ton from Pittsburgh to Louisville, and 35.82 cents more from Louisville to New Orleans.

Now I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. NORTON. The gentleman speaks as if he were familiar with the traffic on the Mississippi River below St. Louis. The gentleman, I take it, knows that the river from St. Louis to New Orleans passes through some of the most fertile and productive territory in this country, where there are great products of the farms and of the mines. Does the gentleman know that about 30 or 40 years ago there were hundreds—yes, thousands—of freight boats on the river between St. Louis and New Orleans, while to-day there are comparatively few? Is not the river open for traffic to-day as it was 30 or 40 years ago?

Mr. SWITZER. The Mississippi is in better condition than it was 40 or 50 years ago so far as navigation is concerned between those points, but I know nothing of traffic on the Mississippi further than what I glean from official statistics.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman explain why on a river like that, that is open for navigation, where the conditions are ideal, the watercourse is not used for transportation, but to-day, instead, the traffic is carried by the railroads that parallel this stream?

Mr. SWITZER. I have not the time to go into any lengthy discussion concerning the traffic upon the Mississippi River. The fact is, it has diminished from St. Louis to the mouth of the Ohio, and from there on down to New Orleans, but not to the extent that it has above.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield further? It occurs to ordinary laymen like myself, and one not as thoroughly acquainted with river traffic as the gentleman from Ohio appears to be, that it is a poor business proposition to expect that by the construction of a water route in some section of the country it is going to encourage traffic when the fact exists that where the waterway is already constructed and is suitable for traffic, where traffic lies along its banks, the traffic is not borne upon the watercourse.

Mr. SWITZER. I will say to the gentleman that my discussion is from the viewpoint of one who is on the Ohio River. I do not like to make any prediction, but I will say that I believe if the Ohio River is canalized you will see within a few years millions and millions more tons of freight going down the Mississippi annually from the mouth of the Ohio to the Gulf of Mexico than you see to-day.

Mr. NORTON. What experience or what condition in the past leads the gentleman to that conclusion?

Mr. SWITZER. Well, there are a great many things. For instance, in 1895 there were gathered in the harbor at Pittsburgh 2,500 barges on which had been loaded 1,200,000 tons of coal, and on account of the drought—no water in the Ohio River—it laid there from June until the last of November, entailing a cost—that is, when you count the interest charge on the money invested in the river craft, and the cost of holding those barges here—something like $450,000 to those people. I have no doubt on account of a coal shortage at Cincinnati and Louisville and other places in the South, especially at that time, the people paid anywhere from half a million to one million dollars more for the coal that they used. These inconveniences necessarily diminish the river traffic which will revive when they are eliminated by having a dependable channel.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SWITZER. I would like to have about 10 minutes more, anyway.

Mr. NORTON. I yield to the gentleman 10 minutes more.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, if I should ask the gentleman from Wisconsin whether the improvement of the Great Lakes and their connecting links had reduced the price of a ton of coal to a single consumer at Hancock, Houghton, and Calumet, in northern Michigan, and at Superior and Duluth, especially after a perusal of the Army Engineers' reports as to the commerce of the Great Lakes, he would undoubtedly think I was mentally defective. If it should suddenly appear that a large majority of the present membership of Congress was seriously considering a proposition to abandon further improvements upon the Great Lakes and their connecting links, and to contribute no further to their upkeep, and tear out the lake connections, the people of his State, especially at Superior, would go crazy, for when they would lose the through-water rate over the Great Lakes from the East to the West, they would realize that they would be absolutely at the mercy of the railways.

Now, we want the gentleman to understand that the people of the great Pittsburgh and Wheeling iron district, the East Liverpool pottery district, and of the great developed and developing coal industry of Tennessee, Kentucky, and West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the hundreds of manufacturing plants of varied character of the entire Ohio Valley are mightily interested in a through water rate from Pittsburgh down the Ohio River, the Mississippi, the Gulf of Mexico, through the Panama Canal, along the Pacific to points on our western coast. Can the gentleman comprehend what that would mean to the people of the States bordering on the Ohio River and to the people of the Pacific coast as well as to the people of those States bordering on the lower Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico? It is claimed that coal can be transported by the barge system on the Ohio River at 0.5 mill per ton-mile, and it is said that a tow consisting of 15,000 or 16,000 tons of coal has been towed from Pittsburgh to points on the lower Mississippi, a distance of nearly 2,000 miles, at a cost of 35 cents per ton. With a dependable water route, as I have suggested, can not the gentleman see that the transcontinental railway systems of our country will set up and take notice? With this great waterway facility between the Pacific coast and the city of Pittsburgh not only additional transportation facilities will have been provided, but millions of dollars will be saved to shippers in transcontinental railway freightage. The Ohio canalization project is not only a matter of national importance but a matter of the utmost importance to the people on our western coast and along the Gulf of Mexico and along the Mississippi River. It is a well-known fact to everyone who has made any investigation whatever that any two points of considerable distance apart, having a waterway connection as well as railway connection, that the freightage charges between these places is not only lower by water but much lower by rail than to places situated the same distance apart enjoying only a railway connection.

In a recent hearing before the Rivers and Harbors Committee we were informed that cotton shipped from Dallas to Galveston, Tex., by rail, there being no dependable waterway connection between these points, was burdened with a freightage charge of $2.62 per bale, while cotton shipped from points on the Mississippi River about the same distance to the Gulf cost only 75 cents per bale, and numerous instances of this kind can be cited in the States of Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, and Texas. The gentleman should also recollect that only about one-half of the work of constructing the present Ohio slack-water project has been done in dollars and cents, and that while some of the completed work has helped increase the river tonnage locally, the work now going on in other parts of the stream tends in many instances to hinder and obstruct navigation, and thereby diminish river traffic on those parts of the stream. He suggests that the Ohio River project should be abandoned, with more than $20,000,000 expended on 19 or 20 uncompleted dams scattered along the Ohio River from Wheeling to Cairo. He would refuse to make further appropriations for the completion of these dams and the project, and leave the river with these numerous and dangerous obstructions to navigation therein, and necessarily paralyze the eight or ten million tons of annual traffic, or he would make future appropriations to the amount of $15,000,000 at least for the removal of these deadly obstructions to navigation. There can be no accurate test made of the dependableness of this canalization and its helpfulness in developing an increased river traffic until the entire proposed improvement is completed. No one can predict just what the future annual commerce of this stream will be after the project is finished.

The scheme purposes taking care of an enormous commerce, and it is estimated that 20,000 tons can be locked from one pool to another in one and a half hours, or at the rate of about 100,000,000 tons in one direction per annum if the dams are not lowered. The utility of the locks and dams has been thoroughly tested out by the operation of those completed. It is also, I think, been fairly tried out on the Monongahela River, one of the streams forming the source of the Ohio, where there has been developed an annual river tonnage, on a 125-mile improved stream of more than 10,000,000 tons, being about treble its tonnage prior to its canalization and resulting in an enormous saving of freight rates along this stream. The Monongahela has certainly been a paying proposition. It is and will continue to be one of the great feeders of the Ohio River, and in the future it will contribute an enormous increased annual tonnage to the Ohio. It also must not be overlooked that, slack water once secured in the river, commerce will be moved up the stream at a cost but little exceeding that required to move it downstream. Nearly the whole of the present tonnage is a downstream one. Lumber is already being transported up the Mississippi River in large quantities to points on the lower part of the Ohio at a great saving in cost of freightage. Pittsburgh and the upper Ohio will need immense quantities of lumber in the future which will have to be transported long distances.

The canalized Ohio will enable the southern lumber producer and producers of numerous other products to avail themselves of the cheap water transportation up the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, and we believe that the completed Panama Canal, opening up the Pacific to our coal, iron, and innumerable manufactured products of the Ohio Valley, will enormously increase our river traffic. Its future possibilities as a great water highway are so believed in by the 4,000,000 people who inhabit the counties contiguous to the stream, the 5,000,000 people of Ohio, the 7,000,000 of Pennsylvania, and the 1,300,000 of West Virginia that the legislatures of these three great industrial States have authorized the counties of northeastern Ohio, southwestern Pennsylvania, and northwestern West Virginia to issue bonds to the extent of $60,000,000 for the purpose of constructing a canal 103 miles long, commencing at the confluence of the Beaver and Ohio Rivers, about 25 miles below Pittsburgh, up the Beaver River to its confluence with the Mahoning, thence up the Mahoning and across the portage to Lake Erie. When this canal is constructed it is claimed that coal can be transported thereover from the Ohio River to Lake Erie at a cost of 5 cents per ton; the cost of transportation a few years ago was about 90 cents to $1 per ton; and that iron ore can be brought from the lake to the Ohio for 25 cents per ton, if the canal is free, whereas the charge a few years ago was from $1 to $1.25 per ton. If this canal is constructed, it can not help but enormously increase the tonnage of the Ohio River. I take it the gentleman from Wisconsin will make no objection to the development of this waterway, which would probably result in a saving of 25 to 50 cents per ton to the consumers of coal in the northern part of his State, northern Minnesota, and Michigan, and which would probably save $1 per ton freightage on the iron ore from these States to the great Pittsburgh and Wheeling iron-manufacturing district, one of their largest consumers.

Mr. FESS. Would the gentleman yield there?

Mr. SWITZER. Yes; just for a question.

Mr. FESS. Do you refer to the Beaver River that enters into the Ohio there at Beaver Falls?

Mr. SWITZER. Yes.

Mr. FESS. What is the prospect for that canal?

Mr. SWITZER. It has been lying in a dormant state for three or four years, but the adjacent counties in that region have authority to issue bonds, and I have been given to understand that there is a revival of sentiment to build the canal.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. FESS. I wanted to ask the Member from Ohio whether there is any length of distance where it is possible to construct a water route, where the possibilities of such great commerce can be carried as on the routes you speak of, connecting the region of Cleveland and the Lakes with Pittsburgh and the inland water section?

Mr. SWITZER. I will say to my colleague that I can not now recall any other that has such great possibilities.

I have never heard the gentleman, Mr. FREAR, complain of the expenditure of a hundred million dollars in the past upon the harbors and rivers of the Great Lakes, which has enabled them to get a 30-cent per ton coal rate for a distance of 800 miles and which made it possible for them years ago to find a great market for their immense iron-ore deposits by reason of their having the advantage of this great low water freight rate.

The Government, when poor, you might say, as compared with the present, was exceedingly liberal to the Great Lakes region; and by making dependable for commerce its wonderful waterways it has contributed to the development of that region undoubtedly more than any other one factor. The gentleman continually complains that the statistics of river commerce contain duplications. If coal and sand, lumber and timber tonnage of the river should not be taken into consideration in estimating river traffic, then why should the coal, sand, lumber, and timber tonnage and other low-grade freights of the railway be taken into consideration in estimating the tonnage of railway traffic? I have no doubt but that the chief tonnage of railways is coal, stone, sand, railway ties, lumber, and timber. The gentleman in discussing duplications said nothing about duplications in the aggregate tonnage of the Great Lakes and their connecting links as shown by the statistics. He must recollect that every ton of the 75,000,000 annually passing through the Soo Canal originated in some harbor or on some river of the lake and was there counted as a part of the tonnage of that river or harbor, and again counted as it passed through this great canal, and again counted at the port of its final destination upon the Great Lakes; and while the Soo Canal at an expenditurue of $15,000,000 accommodates an immense annual commerce, this commerce would not now exist in such large volume if it were not for the $100,000,000 of Governmental expenditure on the Great Lakes that I have referred to. The gentleman can, of course, point to some wastage of public money which has heretofore been expended upon the Ohio River and other rivers of the country, but I have no doubt that it could be pointed out that millions of dollars have been wasted upon the Great Lakes.

Why, I was in Chicago last summer, and I found where a great wall had been erected there years ago, out in the lake, for the protection of vessels and for the protection of the harbor; and that the people had filled in practically all of the area between the city and that wall, and that now as a protection to the harbor it was an obsolete proposition. And so we could enumerate.

Mr. Chairman, how much time have I?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has one minute remaining.

Mr. SWITZER. I would ask, Mr. Chairman, leave to extend my remarks.

Mr. NORTON. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SWITZER. I was practically through. I wanted leave to extend my remarks in order to put in some observations concerning the Mississippi River.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Under leave granted to extend his remarks Mr. SWITZER inserted the following:

I have not time to call attention to all of the inaccurate statements made by the gentleman from Wisconsin, nor to reply to his unfounded charges and his attempts to cast suspicion and some ulterior motive on every movement of Congress to improve our rivers and harbors. So far as Congress being unduly influenced by lobbyists and dredging contractors, a matter to which the gentleman has paid much attention in his remarks, I wish to say that unfortunately we can not make the improvements on our rivers and harbors that we desire without giving employment to contractors and to thousands and thousands of laborers. I have no doubt that many contractors are looking forward in the hope of securing future work, as well as many thousands of laboring men; but I know of no waterway improvement ever having been undertaken by Congress merely to give some one employment, and if the gentleman knows of such an instance I would be pleased to have him bring it to my attention. It would seem to me that the great activity on the part of associations and communities in various parts of the country pleading and urging for Congress to make larger appropriations for waterway improvement, as shown by the gentleman's speech, is a conclusive argument of their inestimable value to the people. At any rate these great civic bodies have a right to petition Congress and to be heard. In the State of Ohio, which I have in part the honor to represent, the State and counties are spending millions of dollars for the improvement of our public roads, which necessarily gives employment to hundreds and thousands of contractors and laborers, many of whom I have no doubt are anxious to secure future work and likely, in many instances, urge increased appropriations for road building, but because of this activity on their part I know of no one who would suggest the discontinuance of future appropriations for highway improvement.

Many pages of the gentleman's speech, as it appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, are devoted to an argument designed to raise the old sectional feeling which once existed between the North and South. He cites statistics to show that the North pays 95 per cent of all taxes and Government revenues compared with the Southern States, and I suppose he therefore reasons that 95 per cent of all appropriations passed by Congress should be spent in the North. The South has a much larger navigable river mileage than the North, and many of the southern improvements are very expensive, especially that of the lower Mississippi. If any headway is to be made toward the completion of the lower Mississippi project, there must be an annual appropriation therefor for a number of years to come of $6,000,000 or $7,000,000. Unfortunately we can not move these rivers up North, and if we make any future appropriations for their improvement it will be necessary to spend the money in the South. But the argument of the gentleman is an old chestnut, which is being worked overtime at this session of Congress. For instance, the opponents of the good-roads bill advanced the same arguments in their opposition to that measure, and used practically the same tabulations and data as used by the gentleman from Wisconsin, and especially urged that the proposed $25,000,000 appropriation for good roads should not be distributed to the States in the proportion that the population of each bore to the population of all the States, and in proportion that the rural mail-route mileage in each State bore to the rural mail-route mileage of all the States, after arbitrarily giving each State $65,000, for the reason that the North paid 95 per cent of the taxes and therefore the Southern States and some few of the Western States were reaping an enormous advantage in the distribution. But the argument would not down. The attempt to revive the old, bitter sectional feeling met with dismal failure, and the good-roads bill passed the House by a vote of 282 for and 81 against. It seems to me that the gentleman is making a hopeless appeal.

The questions propounded by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] would indicate that he was unfavorable to making future appropriations for the lower Mississippi River because of some decrease in the commerce on this stream during the past few years. So far as the navigability of the lower Mississippi is concerned, it might be maintained for several years without an appropriation; but in order to bring about the present navigable condition of the river Congress, a number of years ago, began improving the stream by constructing levees on either side and revetment work along many of its wasting banks. The matter of flood control is a burning question in the Ohio and lower Mississippi Valleys, and I have no doubt that it is at this time at Los Angeles and San Diego. There is a great movement throughout the country to develop all possible flood control. The lower Mississippi receives the water from, I believe, 27 States of the Union. The devastation wrought by past floods has aroused the Nation to such an extent that all political parties have declared in their national platforms for legislation to control the flood waters of the Mississippi. Recollect that the levees now being constructed along the east and west sides of the Mississippi are something like 2 miles apart and about a thousand miles long. Here we have a great basin of 2,000 square miles, located where nature intended it, receiving the floods from the north and discharging them at the south.

When the Mississippi River Commission assumed charge of the river a flood having a discharge of 1,100,000 second-feet created disaster throughout the entire delta, but there has been constructed a levee line which can now successfully restrain a flood of 1,750,000 second-feet at the head of the levee system and one of over 1,400,000 second-feet at New Orleans. The maximum discharge of the floods of 1912 and 1913 was about 2,000,000 second-feet. A simple direct solution of the problem is to increase the size of the levees until they can safely pass 250,000 second-feet more than they do at present.

I quote the above from Col. Townsend's statement before the River and Harbor Committee, so we are making great progress toward controlling the Mississippi floods. Unless these floods are controlled it will be impossible to maintain the integrity of the channel of the river, for if the appropriations are discontinued and the floods allowed to run at random through these levees immense sandbars will soon appear in the channel.

The completion of these levees is of vital importance to the people of the Mississippi Delta. Of 20,000,000 acres of land in the Delta only three and a half million are under cultivation. When life and property are rendered absolutely secure by reason of the protection afforded by the levees 12,000,000 acres of what is now waste land in the Delta will be available for cultivation. Much of this land after it is reclaimed will produce two and three crops a year, and it is exceedingly fertile. This land, when made tillable, will be worth from $150 to $200 per acre, so this vast area of reclaimed land alone would add $2,000,000,000 to the developed wealth of the Nation. It seems to me that if this can be accomplished with the expenditure on the part of the Government of one hundred to one hundred and fifty million dollars that it would be a good investment, besides the protection it would afford for other forms of property and safety to human life in this district. It would develop a great agricultural region in the very heart of the country, readily accessible to many of our great cities and densely populated districts by water and rail, and while originally this feature was looked upon as one of the incidental benefits to be derived from the leveeing of the river, it is now looming up as not only of prime but of national importance.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER].

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] wished to be yielded five minutes; and if the gentleman in charge of the bill has no objection, I will yield five minutes to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the present Indian Committee is just rounding out twenty years of public service in the Congress of the United States. From the time of my earliest memory the then Territory of Oklahoma, having almost two-fifths of all the Indians in the United States within its borders, was in one form or another appealing to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] to be their helper and their friend in the Congress.

How dependent the Territory was. They had no titles to their lands that they could convey. The towns were on unpatented lands. The cemeteries were on unpatented lands. The school sites, what few there were, were likewise on unpatented lands. Everything had to come to Congress and be acted on here.

Always honest, always sympathetic, always just, always willing to help was the present chairman, the distinguished and beloved JOHN H. STEPHENS, of Vernon, Tex.

If the sparsely settled community needed even a cemetery lot in which to bury the dead they could not buy it or acquire it without the aid of Congress. Their first thought was their appeal to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS], who always held to them an attentive ear and always made a response to their appeal. This has been true every day during all these long and useful 20 years he has served in public life. During the time when our Statehood troubles came on it was then a question as to whether the big cattlemen in the State, who had pretty complete control of the State, should prevail or whether the settler, anxious to build for himself a home, should prevail. I am happy to-day to make grateful acknowledgment to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, who always took his side and his stand with the home builder and with the settler and helped develop our bright, new State; and I use this moment in passing to tell him, and to make public acknowledgment to him, that the result of his untiring labors has brought to us a new State with 1,650,000 people, has brought to us prosperous cities and towns, has brought to us paved streets and high schools and colleges, has brought to us all the blessings that any of the sister States have, and it has been done by means of the good work and good deeds of the gentleman from Texas.

It is not, my friends, so usual to find one's entire public life spent in such an arduous and unselfish task. There is scarcely an Indian, I think I may say there is not one, in his entire district; there are few, if any, Indians in his entire State. If he did little or much for the Indian or his problems it would make little difference to the people of his State. But here we find him to-day, as he has been throughout the entire 20 years of his activity here, serving faithfully the dependent people of the Republic, the Indians, and helping to solve the problems in our new State, along with other problems in other States, whenever they arise. Only a couple of Congresses ago, Mr. Chairman, a little incident occurred which is worthy of mention in this House. Some 60 years ago one of the Indian tribes of Oklahoma stole a little white girl and carried her away from the State of Texas and from the district now represented by the chairman of this committee. She was carried among the Comanche tribe of Indians in Oklahoma, then a wild, unsubdued band of Indians. As she reached young womanhood an Indian child was born, half Indian, half white. That child was Quanah Parker. That child became the chief of his tribe, half Indian and half white. About two Congresses ago he went away to another tribe of Indians and contracted pneumonia and died. The chairman of this committee got the Congress of the United States to appropriate a thousand dollars to remove the remains of his mother from Texas to the residence of the Comanche tribe up into Comanche County, my home county, in my district, and there caused a thousand-dollar monument to be erected to the old chief and to his mother, who had formerly been a resident of that State.

Mr. Chairman, if I asked the youngest Indian child in that tribe whom he loved most, he would name without a moment's hesitation the chairman of the Indian Committee. If I should ask the oldest Indian down there whom he cared for most in public life, he would name the chairman of this committee. [Applause.] And, Mr. Chairman, it is not too much as a Representative in Congress from that State, where we have to trouble and annoy Congress so much, to make, first, grateful acknowledgment to him, and then grateful acknowledgment to this Congress for the great help and assistance they have rendered our Indian people in our new State in its upbuilding. I yield back the remainder of my time. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request.

There was no objection.

[Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. DILL].

Mr. DILL. Mr. Chairman, the Indian question is almost as old as the establishment of white civilization on this continent. During the early years of our history the problem was largely how to protect the white man's life from the Indian. During the latter years of our history the problem has been largely how to protect the Indian's property from the white man. At the risk of being misunderstood, I dare to say that, in my opinion, the most important phase of the Indian problem to-day is how to prevent the Indians of the present, and especially the Indians of the future, from becoming permanent wards and dependents of the Federal Government. [Applause.] When I say the most important part of the Indian problem is to prevent his becoming permanently dependent on the Government, I make the statement advisedly. I have in mind the testimony of those who reside in practically all sections where the system of tutelage and guardianship is in full working effect. I have in mind the fact that where the Indians are kept confined to reservations they are more and more becoming dependent subjects of this Government instead of developing into independent citizens under this Government.

Nor do I think it particularly to the discredit of the Indians that this is so. I have sometimes thought that if a few hundred white men with their families were placed and kept on a wild undeveloped area of land, such as the Indian reservations are, without previous experience in making a livelihood from the soil, and their money, their property, almost their very activities were continually under the guardianship of Federal officers, I say I have sometimes thought that those white men, and certainly their descendants, would become even more dependent and helpless than the Indians are. No; the trouble is not with the Indian but with the system that keeps him in tutelage. Either that system must be changed or else the burden on the Government will grow greater year by year and the Indian problem become bigger and bigger as the Indian's condition grows more and more dependent.

As to the pending bill, let me say that I worked over it with the committee and joined in the favorable report made upon it. I think the appropriations are as low as is advisable to make them under the present system of administering Indian affairs, but I believe the system of financing the department should be changed. I desire therefore to discuss briefly what I believe to be at least one of the objections to the present system of financing the Indian Department.

In 1911 Congress provided, in section 27 of the act approved March 3 of that year, that the Secretary of the Interior should make reports to Congress of the fiscal affairs of all the Indian tribes on the first Monday of each December, showing the receipts and disbursements of all moneys for the preceding year. Five such annual reports have been made. From them I have made certain tables. These tables show some most striking facts. I desire to insert one of them here without reading the figures.

Total of money disbursed by Indian Department, 1912 to 1915, inclusive.

	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915	Total.
Receipts	10,384,131	7,998,315	9,917,602	8,494,217	7,057,014	43,851,279
Per capita payments	3,127,308	5,485,015	6,470,839	6,268,074	6,515,209	27,866,445
Credit of tribes	50,710,789	44,519,533	46,668,701	47,092,214	42,196,680	.....
Spent from tribal funds	.....	8,704,556	1,297,595	1,802,630	5,437,339	17,242,120
Salaries of employees	1,799,022	4,469,093	4,317,602	4,678,118	4,454,789	19,718,624
Support and civilization	3,402,660	4,442,154	5,227,202	6,951,347	7,234,303	27,257,666
Government funds spent	.....	206,691	8,247,209	9,826,835	6,251,753	24,532,488

What does this table show? In the first place it shows that vast amounts of actual money belonging to the Indians are being continually handled and much of it continually held by the Indian Bureau. In referring to amounts of money shown by this table I shall mention only the approximate sums.

During the last five years, 1911 to 1915, inclusive, the receipts of all the Indian tribes amounted to $44,000,000. The per capita payments to Indians during the same period was $27,000,000, but the amount to the credit of the Indians fell from $50,000,000 to $42,000,000. Thus, during the four years, 1912 to 1915, inclusive—and I am unable to go back of 1912, because the figures previous to 1911 were not accessible to me—the department spent more than $17,000,000 of Indian funds. This, of course, does not include the reimbursable amounts appropriated from the Treasury to be expended for the Indians. That amounts to several million dollars additional.

Now, just how does the Indian Department get the authority to spend this Indian money? Under the present laws this is what happens. The Indian Department submits certain estimates of necessary expenditures for the ensuing year, some of which is to be appropriated from the Federal Treasury and some from the Indian funds. The Committee on Indian Affairs then goes over the estimates carefully and generally cuts them down. We have cut more than a half million out of the $10,000,000 asked for in this bill. Then the House goes over the bill section by section and makes such changes as it deems wise. Then it goes to the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and the estimates are revised again, and then the Senate passes the bill. Then the conference committee agrees on the differences in the bill and the President signs it and the appropriations for the Indian Department are made for the fiscal year.

After all this work by Congress, cutting down and raising estimates for reservation or other purposes, one would naturally think the appropriations were somewhere near the proper sums the department should spend. What is the real practice? The Indian Department proceeds to spend not only the money appropriated by this bill, but such amounts from various tribal funds as, in the discretion of the Indian officials, seems proper for the benefit of the Indian. For instance, Congress appropriates, say, $100,000 for the expenditures of a certain tribe of Indians and that tribe has tribal funds also which are available for use by the Indian Bureau. What happens? The department uses the $100,000 and then appropriates and spends such amount from the tribal fund as the officials in their discretion think should be used, as they say, for the benefit of the Indians. Oh, I know the law which grants the authority used the language "in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior," but in practice the discretion which really controls is the discretion of some Indian agent, department inspector, or other subordinate official.

This authority was not given by a sweeping grant of power to the Secretary of the Interior by Congress over all these tribal funds at one time. I doubt if Congress could ever be induced to do that. So far as I know the officials of the Indian Department have never tried to secure such a grant. How was authority secured, then?

The answer is interesting. A few years ago a short provision was inserted in one of the Indian appropriation bills for that year granting this authority over certain of the tribal funds of one tribe, practically the same provision was inserted in another Indian bill another year as to another tribe, and the same provision in still another bill as to some other tribe, and so on year after year until now I think it is safe to say that this authority applies to certain tribal funds of most of the Indian tribes of the country. In the bill this year as submitted to the committee there was at least one such provision inserted, and I think two or three, and if I remember correctly the committee struck them all out. I know all that I noticed were struck out.

But the point I desire to make is this: This kind of piecemeal legislation extending over a period of years has resulted in a condition of the statutes which enables the Indian officials to appropriate and spend literally millions of dollars of money which belongs to the Indians. Of course they spend this money, as they say, for the benefit of the Indian, but the trouble is that they, the officials, are the judges of when, where, and how the Indians shall be benefited and of how much of his money shall be spent. The practical result has been that the expenditures for salaries and employees in the department have increased by leaps and bounds, and it seems they increased fastest on those Indian reservations where the Indians have tribal funds which can be so used. The general increase in expenditures for salaries and employees in the Indian Department in the last five years, 1911–1915, inclusive, has been 150 per cent, while on some of the reservations the increase has been 250 per cent to 300 per cent. New agencies, new hospitals, unauthorized by Congress and not desired by the Indians, but desired by department officials, as they say, for the benefit of the Indians, have been built by use of these tribal funds, and in the future Congress will be called upon to provide money for their support. In fact, Congress is already being called upon to do that very thing in the pending bill.

We can not go back or undo the past. I do not charge corruption, but I do say that in my judgment there has been abuse of discretion. I have no desire to try to remedy that now. What I desire now is to prevent the continuation of these practices. I believe the law should provide that the Indian Department shall do as all other departments of this Government are compelled to do, namely, to estimate all of its expenditures for the ensuing year and then be limited in making those expenditures to the actual amount Congress appropriates for that purpose.

Under present conditions the officials of the department appropriate and spend large sums of money each year. This is a violation of one of the basic principles of this Government. It combines the power to legislate and the power to administer in one body. It is to abolish this practice that I desire section 25 of this bill enacted into law. I introduced it in the committee meeting and it was adopted unanimously there. I most earnestly hope it will be adopted unanimously here. It reads as follows:

SEC. 26. That annually, on the first Monday in December, the Secretary of the Interior shall transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives estimates of the amounts of receipts to, and expenditures which the said Secretary recommends to be made for the benefit of the Indians from, all tribal funds of Indians for the ensuing fiscal year; and such statement shall show, first, the total amounts estimated to be received from any and all sources whatsoever, which will be placed to the credit of each tribe of Indians, in trust or otherwise, at the close of the ensuing fiscal year; second, an analysis showing the amounts which the Federal Government is directed and required by treaty stipulations and agreements to expend from each of said funds or from the Federal Treasury, giving references to the existing treaty or agreement or statute; third, the amounts which the Secretary recommends to be spent from each of the tribal funds held in trust or otherwise, and the purpose for which said amounts are to be expended, and said statement shall show the amounts which he recommends to be disbursed (a) for per capita payments in money to the Indians, (b) for salaries or compensation of officers and employees, (c) for compensation of counsel and attorney fees, and (d) for support and civilization: Provided, That from and after July 1, 1917, the Secretary of the Interior shall not expend any of the moneys which may be to the credit of any Indian tribe, whether received or held as a tribal fund or otherwise, except such amounts as are specifically authorized by Congress, and that all acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

I believe the adoption of this section will aid in systematizing the expenditures of the Indian Department, save millions of dollars to the American people and to the Indians in the years to come, and also be of real benefit to the Indians by causing Congress to cut down appropriations and free them from tutelage and guardianship much more rapidly than is the case under the present system.

Thus far I have spoken of the dangers and abuses of discretion under the present law in connection with all the Indian tribes as a whole, but I desire now to speak of some specific cases of the results of the misuse of this discretion in handling the affairs of the Indian tribes within the district of which I am the Representative in this House, the Colvilles and the Spokanes.

For many years the affairs of these tribes were administered from one agency, located near the Columbia River, which runs between the Colville and Spokane Reservations. The north half of the Colville Indian Reservation was opened to settlement a few years ago. I should say, rather, that the part of it which was not made into a national forest was opened to settlement. In 1906 Congress passed an act to open the south half of the Colville Indian Reservation. That act provided that each Indian should be given an allotment and the unallotted surplus lands opened to settlement and sold. Now, mark you, that was in 1906.

In 1914, eight years later, the old agency located on the Spokane Reservation side of the Columbia River was abandoned.

A new agency had been built near the town site of Nespelem, on the Colville Reservation, at an expense of more than $50,000. Was the location and building of this new agency authorized by Congress? Not at all. Congress had directed that this big reservation of more than a million acres should be opened to settlement, and in that way the Indians would be brought into contact with white settlers and their children developed into useful, responsible citizens as a result of their association with the whites. But the Indian Department seemed to take an entirely different view, for it caused to be built a most magnificent Indian agency plant 40 miles from a railroad and in the very part of the reservation where white settlers would be most likely to take up homesteads. If Congress did not authorize the building of this magnificent new agency, where did the Indian Department secure the money? From the tribal funds of the Colvilles, of course. They had authority to spend certain funds in their "discretion" for the benefit of the Indians.

Think of it, gentlemen. Congress in 1906 had directed that this great reservation should be opened. Allotment work was going on all the time at the expense of the Indians. Plans for the opening were being discussed, and yet the Indian Department erected this new agency 40 miles from a railroad, out on a dry, treeless area on one of those benches that rises along the west side of the mighty Columbia. Out there on the open range the Indian Department erected fine new dwellings for its employees, built a large administration building, and constructed a magnificent water system, finer than is possessed by many towns with hundreds of people—a water system which keeps the beautiful lawns green through the longest drought, keeps down the dust on the tennis courts on the driest evening, and makes a very oasis of civilization, all paid for by Indian money "for the benefit of the Indians."

Mr. Chairman, the establishment and creation of that new agency several years after Congress had directed the opening of that reservation can be explained only by one of two theories. Either the Indian Department intended to delay the opening until enough Indian children were born to take up all the valuable lands in the form of allotments and have the remainder set aside as a permanent tribal reserve, or else it intended to carry on a most elaborate system of tutelage and guardianship of the Indians who will live among white men after the reservation has been homesteaded by white men. In either case the Indian would be kept dependent, half captive and half protégé, under this Government. All of this was done under authority which section 25 of the pending bill will abolish.

It would seem that this abuse of discretion in the use of Indian funds was enough for a department to be guilty of in one congressional district, but let me tell you of what in my opinion was an even worse handling and spending of Indian moneys.

The Spokane Indians are few in number, 611 in all. They were always peaceful. They have always been poor. In 1911 they had $25,000 in tribal funds which were subject to expenditure by the Secretary of the Interior. They also received a few hundred dollars from pasturage and miscellaneous sources each year. Under a treaty agreement the Government appropriated $1,000 annually to their support. This with the small sums coming in made it possible for these Indians to be cared for with but slight burden on their available funds. Yet what has happened? Why, when the department built the new agency on the Colville Reservation at Nespelem, it also decided to build a new agency on the Spokane Reservation at a place called Wellpinit, although the old agency of both the Colvilles and Spokanes was located on the Spokane Reservation. At Nespelem they went out upon the dry, treeless land and created an oasis. At Wellpinit they went into the forest, hewed down the trees, pulled the stumps and made a clearing like the pioneers of old, and then paid for it out of Indian money. What is the result? The result is that the tribal fund of $25,000 together with the miscellaneous annual receipts are all gone, and for the first time the Indian Department has asked for an increase in the appropriation to care for the Spokane Indians. In expending the money of the Colville Indians to build the new agency at Nespelem although deserving of the severest criticism, the Colvilles were not seriously hurt because they have a large tribal fund and will yet receive large amounts for their lands. In the case of the Spokanes, however, it was using their money in a way which helps them not and makes them poor indeed.

I realize I have spent more time in explaining these mistakes of the department than would ordinarily be justified, but they are concrete examples of the use of the authority to which I object of which I know.

In the first part of this address I referred to increases in expenditures for salaries and employees during the past five years. In examining those same fiscal reports in regard to these Colville and Spokane Indians I find some interesting statistics. I desire to insert here a table made from the reports.

Money disbursed by Indian Department on Colville and Spokane Indian Reservations, 1911 to 1915, inclusive, State of Washington.

	1911	1912	1913	1914	1915	Total
Receipts of tribes	$330,746	$322,423	$15,849	{ $9,983 [1] 2,736	$12,461 [1] 1,310	$691,462 4,046
Per capita payments	None.	165,000	12,000	233,000	77,500	487,500
Tribal funds	772,541	822,386	852,363	{ 485,814 [1] 28,219	428,249 [1] 24,891	.....
Spent out of tribal funds	.....	107,578	[2] 26,028	117,929	[2] 2,836	196,643
Salaries and employees	20,439	87,461	81,761	{ 94,137 [1] 13,264	98,283 [1] 14,127	382,051 [1] 27,391
Support and civilization	35,916	33,622	61,871	{ 77,826 [1] 7,916	50,659 [1] 18,041	259,894 [1] 25,957
Government funds spent	.....	13,525	149,650	75,114	183,896	271,957

[1] Spokane. [2] To tribe.

In 1914 the two agencies were separated, the Colville Agency being removed to Nespelem and the Spokane to Wellpinit. The report for 1914 and 1915 on the Spokane Agency are here given:

	1914	1915	Total.
Receipts	$2,736	$1,310	$4,046
Per capita payment	None.	None.	.....
Tribe's fund	28,219	24,891	.....
Spent out of tribal fund	.....	4,628	.....
Salaries and employees	13,264	14,127	27,391
Support and civilization	7,916	18,041	25,957
Government funds	.....	27,540	.....

The $24,000 to the credit of the Spokane Indians is for money received for lands but can not be used by the department.

I desire to call attention to the fact that the rise of expenditures for salaries and employees is somewhat proportional to the increase in receipts of the Colvilles. The place where the proportion breaks down is where the receipts fall off, because the salaries continue. In 1911 the expenditures for salaries and employees were only $20,000, but the receipts of the tribe were $330,000, and in 1912 what happened? Why, the expenditures for employees and salaries rose from $20,000 to $87,000, although the amount spent for support and civilization fell from $35,000 to $32,000. In 1913, when the receipts fell from $322,000 in 1912 to $15,000, the expenditures for employees and salaries only fell from $87,000 to $81,000. In 1914, although the receipts were only $12,000, the amount for salaries and employees rose from $81,000 to $107,000 and in 1915 to $112,000. In short, the annual expenditures for employees and salaries increased in the five years—1911 to 1915, inclusive—from $20,000 to $112,000, or 450 per cent, while the amount spent for civilization and support increased during the same period from $35,000 to $68,000, or only 95 per cent. I realize that some of these expenditures were the result of the allotting and appraising work on the reservation, but the fact remains that the increase in expenditures for employees is out of all proportion to other expenditures there. Part of these increased expenditures are the result also of the new agency at Wellpinit.

But this tremendous increase in expenditures for employees and salaries is not peculiar to the reservations in my district. It is true of Indian reservations in many other districts. The tables above, taken from the fiscal report, show that in 1911 the expenditures for employees and salaries were $1,800,000 and that in 1915 they were $4,450,000, while the expenditures for support and civilization increased from $3,400,000 to $7,200,000. In these totals are included the figures of the Five Civilized Tribes, whose expenditures for employees and salaries are comparatively small and support and civilization unusually large.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DILL. Certainly.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. As a matter of fact, the bill being considered in committee contained several items to the effect that the department desired to sell certain property belonging to the Indians and then use that for the benefit of the Indians without reporting to Congress the amount of money the property was sold for or the purpose for which it was used, and did not the committee in every instance strike out these items?

Mr. DILL. That is exactly my remembrance and what I referred to in the parts of the bill of which I have spoken. It is by that method that they have built up a number of statutes which give them power to spend money from certain of the tribal funds of every Indian tribe in this country. The department not only spends the amounts appropriated, but reaches into the tribal funds and takes out what they see fit to spend for what they say is the benefit of the Indians.

But, Mr. Chairman, I do not mean to be understood as claiming that all of the troubles with expenditures by the Indian Department are due to the fact that the officials can appropriate and spend some of the tribal funds. I think the system is wrong. I believe it should be changed, and because I so believe I have introduced a bill authorizing the appointment of a commission to investigate, study, and report on the whole question, and, if possible, recommend some other system which will be more efficient, more economical, and more beneficial to the Indian than the one which we are now using.

How long shall we continue the reservation system? We began herding Indians on reservations about 100 years ago, and are keeping them there still. Shall it never end? Those who know the Indian best condemn it. The Indians themselves—that is, those who have once gotten away from it—object to it and urge its abolition and the others are wards and have no opportunity to know of any other system than the reservation system. I am informed that during the last 35 years we have appropriated $265,000,000 to carry on the present system. Are the Indians the better for it? No. Only those who have been able to get free from it have really profited by it.

Why do we not get rid of it? I'll tell you why. There are now in the Federal Treasury between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 of Indian trust funds. The Indian lands are worth more than a billion. As long as these funds and this property remain to be administered by Government officials, who make a living by the administering and Congress obeys the recommendations of these officials, we shall not get rid of it.

The system will end only when Congress acts in the true interests of the Indian regardless of the official recommendations which the Indian Department may make. [Applause.]

Let me add that I believe that the commission to which I have already referred should investigate conditions both in the Indian Office and on the reservations. It should gather information from whatever sources information can be secured. After a year of such work I believe such a commission will be able to recommend some plan by which this Indian problem can be solved. I want the Indian of the future to develop individual responsibility. If he is kept as a ward and dependent, this is impossible. The present system not only keeps him so, but the tendency is to make him even more dependent and more burdensome on the Government than in the past. [Applause.]

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 14 minutes remaining.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, before the gentleman from Oklahoma begins, I desire to yield the remainder of my time to a gentleman upon this side, if the gentleman from Oklahoma will yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. Certainly.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PLATT].

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Chairman, I am not going to speak on the subject of Indians, and perhaps owe an apology to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] for taking his time just now. This morning the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SHALLENBERGER] made a very interesting speech on rural credits, in the course of which he spoke of the Nebraska system of guaranteeing bank deposits, and in a very taking way set forth the advantages of that system. It seems to me that some things he said perhaps should be answered, not that I desire to go into the whole question of the guaranty of bank deposits at this time, for that is too large a question, but simply to call attention to a few striking things with regard to banking and bank deposits which have to do with that question of guaranteeing bank deposits. In the first place, we have sent to our offices every month this circulation statement, which tells how much money there is in the country. The same thing is to be found in the report of the Comptroller of the Currency as of the 30th of June, 1915. According to these reports, there is a little less than $4,000,000,000 of all kinds of money in the country. That includes gold, silver, greenbacks, Federal reserve notes, national-bank notes, and gold certificates—everything that we call currency or money.

Well, now, if you will turn to page 120 of the report of the Comptroller of the Currency, you will find on deposit in the banks of the country which make reports—not all of them do—about $20,000,000,000. In other words, there is five times as much money on deposit in the banks as there is money in the country, and that is something that people who believe in the guaranteeing of bank deposits ought to put in their pipes and smoke, and let it settle down in their minds in some way. There is five times as much money on deposit in the banks as there is in the country. Every cent of money—and you can prove a lot of interesting things from the report of the Comptroller of the Currency with reference to banking—all the money there is in the United States is on deposit in the mutual savings banks. Those banks have on deposit $3,950,000,000, which is about the same as the total amount of currency in the country. Now, the money that is put in the savings banks is put in by small depositors, the average deposit in the mutual savings banks being only $475. These small depositors in savings banks deposit cash in nearly every case. Now, if all the money in the United States is on deposit in mutual savings banks, without counting the stock savings banks, which also receive mostly cash deposits, what about the money on deposit in national banks and State banks, banks of discount deposit? Where do they get it from? What is it?

I have shown from the comptroller's report that all the real money, the currency of the country, is in the national savings banks. This proves conclusively, does it not, that people who make deposits in national banks and State banks, banks of discount deposit, must put in wind and not money? As a matter of fact, that is just about what they do. The deposits in the banks of discount deposit are not made up of cash, excepting a very small amount. Their deposits are created by borrowing. They are deposits of credit. If I go to a bank and borrow $10,000 and have it placed to my credit, I create a deposit of $10,000, but I have not put a cent of money in the bank. If you will look at the New York Clearing House bank statements published every Saturday in the New York evening papers or in the Sunday morning papers you will find that the deposits and loans go up and down together almost always. When the loans go up, deposits go up. Money that is borrowed goes on deposit. When loans are paid in large volume deposits come down.

But you may perhaps say that no man in his senses ever borrows $10,000 and puts it to his credit and leaves it simply for the purpose of increasing deposits. He wants it to use. So he does, but he does not take it out of the bank. He draws checks on it, and the checks go to somebody else, and the persons who receive the checks deposit them. They are credit just the same, and they are not money. The great mass of the deposits of the banks of the country are not created by putting money in the banks. They are created by credit, by borrowing money; and why in the name of common sense anybody wants the Government to guarantee the payment of deposits that are four-fifths wind or credit I can not see for the life of me. If you are going to guarantee all the bank deposits, you have to guarantee all these billions of dollars which were never put in the banks in the form of cash, but which are really credit. You have got to guarantee the loans on which they are based. And that is the great fallacy of the whole idea.

As I have said, I have no intention of discussing this subject fully at this time, but it seemed timely to suggest these few interesting facts with regard to banking as food for thought for those who think the United States Government, or some great association of banks under Government compulsion, ought to try to guarantee bank deposits. [Applause.]

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield the rest of my time to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS].

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I want to address myself to the paragraph in the bill providing for a per capita payment to the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in Oklahoma.

The question to which I invite your attention is not a difficult one, nor will it be necessary to consume much time in its discussion. It is proposed by this amendment to direct the Secretary of the Interior to pay to the enrolled members of the Choctaw Tribe, entitled under existing law, $300 per capita out of their own money and the Chickasaws $200 per capita out of their funds. There should be no objection to it, and it should receive the unanimous vote of this House.

The statement of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, found on pages 336 and 337 of the hearings before the committee in justification of the item under consideration, shows that there is to the credit of the Choctaws tribal funds aggregating $7,432,353.24 and that there is to the credit of the Chickasaws tribal funds amounting to $1,922,110.48, or a total of $9,354,463.72 in both funds. The justification further invites attention to the additional property owned by the Chickasaw and Choctaw people including unsold lands and other property. It is estimated that the entire value of their property approximates $31,503,954.95.

There are 20,799 enrolled members of the Choctaw Tribe entitled to share in this distribution and 6,304 Chickasaws. A per capita payment of $100 was made to the members of the Chickasaw Tribe a little more than a year ago, which is the reason for the payment to the Choctaws now of $100 more than to the Chickasaws.

The members of the two tribes have an undivided equal interest in and to the lands and funds of both tribes, being separated only for political purposes. A per capita payment of $300 to the Choctaws would aggregate $6,239,700 and $200 to the Chickasaws would amount to $1,260,800, and to both Choctaws and Chickasaws $7,500,500. Hence it will clearly be seen that $300 could be paid to the Choctaws and $200 to the Chickasaws, leaving a balance of $1,853,963.72 in the Treasury, in addition to more than $22,000,000 worth of property not converted into cash.

When the Dawes Commission was created by the act of March 3, 1893, the Choctaw people had their own government with about as much sovereignty as a State of the Union. They had their own constitution and laws, their own governor, their own courts, and their own legislature. They made, executed, and enforced their own laws, appropriated their own money, and conducted their own schools. Railroads were built through the Indian Territory, towns sprang up, and white people from almost every State in the Union came among them. Finally the Choctaws yielded to the pressure of the Government and signed a treaty at Atoka on April 23, 1897 (30 Stat., 495), providing in detail for the allotment of their lands among the enrolled members of the tribe, the making of the rolls, the disposition of town sites, and, in fact, an adjustment of all their relations with the Government of the United States. This agreement looked to the members of the Choctaw Nation becoming citizens of the United States and the creation of a State out of the lands held by the Five Civilized Tribes.

The act of March 3, 1893 (27 Stat., 612, sec. 16), creating the Dawes Commission stated that it was—

To enable the ultimate creation of a State or States of the Union which shall embrace the lands within said Indian Territory.

The members of the Choctaw Tribe accepted these promises and their lands were allotted. Almost 19 years have elapsed since this treaty was ratified. A very large percentage of the Choctaws have died, but with the exception of a small per capita payment of $50 none of their moneys have been disbursed. The members of the Choctaw Tribe were allotted large areas of land. They had to build houses upon their allotments, clear up their fields, place fences along section lines, and otherwise improve their farms. They are greatly in need of a distribution of their own money in order to accomplish these purposes. The Government can not justify itself in longer withholding a partial distribution.

The supplemental agreement ratified by the act of July 1, 1902, section 14, promises a distribution of the moneys per capita among the members of the tribe, when their allotments should be made and their property disposed of. They now have $9,354,463.72 to their credit, and certainly this amount should be distributed among their own members. There is really no argument whatever against the distribution of this money, but every argument in its favor. One-third of the entire membership of the tribe is now dead and never received any part of their money. In my judgment, it is a legislative crime against them to longer withhold it.

CITIZENSHIP QUESTION.

The only argument urged against the distribution of this money is that certain Mississippi Choctaw claimants to citizenship should be provided for, that the money hereinabove referred to as being Choctaw tribal funds is a trust fund, and that the claimants to citizenship have some legal right thereto. It is to this question that I desire to address myself.

Many Members of Congress and good lawyers throughout the United States do not understand the citizenship question among the Five Civilized Tribes. They think it is a question of inheritance. This is a mistake. It requires three things to constitute citizenship in any of the Five Civilized Tribes:

First. You must be an Indian of the tribe by blood.

Second. You must be a recognized enrolled member of the tribe.

Third. You must be a resident of the tribe.

A great many people think that it is only a question of blood. However, many people of Choctaw and Cherokee blood reside in numerous States throughout the Union, but they are not members of the tribe. They are not residents of the tribe, and even if they are of the full quantum of Indian blood they are not entitled to enrollment. This question has been decided by every court to which it has been presented.

THE PATENT.

The promise of a patent by article 2, treaty of 1830 (7 Stat. L., 335) to the Choctaws, provided that the lands granted the Choctaws should be theirs "as long as they exist as a nation and live on it":

ART. 2. The United States, under a grant specially to be made by the President of the United States, shall cause to be conveyed to the Choctaw Nation a tract of country west of the Mississippi River, in fee simple to them and their descendants, to inure to them while they shall exist as a nation and live on it. [Italics ours.]

And article 3 of said treaty is as follows:

In consideration of the provisions contained in the several articles of this treaty the Choctaw Nation of Indians consent and hereby cede to the United States the entire country they own and possess east of the Mississippi River; and they agree to remove beyond the Mississippi River as early as practicable, and will so arrange their removal that as many as possible of their people, not exceeding one-half of the whole number, shall depart during the falls of 1831 and 1832, the residue to follow during the succeeding fall of 1833; a better opportunity in this manner will be afforded the Government to extend to them the facilities and comforts which it is desirable should be extended in conveying them to their new homes. [Italics ours.]

The patent executed by President Tyler in 1842 contained a similar provision and is as follows:

That the United States of America, in consideration of the premises and in execution of the agreement and stipulation in the aforesaid treaty, have given and granted and by these presents do give and grant unto the said Choctaw Nation the aforesaid "tract of country west of the Mississippi" to have and to hold the same, with all the rights, privileges, immunities, and appurtenances of whatsoever nature thereunto belonging as intended "to be conveyed" by the aforesaid article, "in fee simple to them and their descendants, to inure to them, while they shall exist as a nation and live on it," liable to no transfer or alienations, except to the United States or with their consent. [Italics ours.]

Article 14 of the Choctaw treaty of 1830 (7 Stat. L., 335) gave the adult Choctaws who remained in Mississippi 640 acres of land, children over 10 years of age 320 acres, and children under 10 years of age 160 acres. They were made citizens of the United States and of the State of Mississippi. All could have accepted land and some did. They were recognized as citizens of the State under the laws of Mississippi. About 15,000 moved west under the treaty of 1830 and 4,180 remained. They could easily be identified up to 1842. Between 1838 and 1855, 3,400 moved to the Choctaw Nation and became members of the tribe.

Congress later provided for a payment to those Mississippi Choctaws who remained behind, and 3,585 received scrip entitling them to locate upon public lands in the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi. This scrip was transferable, and in lieu of the second half of the scrip Congress appropriated and paid these Mississippi Choctaws $872,000, conditioned upon their first removing to the Choctaw Nation in the Indian Territory. When they removed they could have remained there and have been identified as citizens of the Choctaw Nation; but with their removal from the Choctaw Nation they abandoned their citizenship, disconnected themselves from the tribe, and were no longer members of the tribe, and have no legal claim whatever to being enrolled as members of the tribe.

The Choctaw Nation has dealt generously with these people, and up to the time when the lands were finally allotted they voluntarily admitted all Indians of Choctaw blood as members of the tribe; but Congress insisted upon a termination of their tribal government and the allotment of their lands and a final settlement of their affairs. This could not be done without first settling the question as to who should be enrolled as members of the tribe.

CONGRESSIONAL LEGISLATION.

The act of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat., 495), section 21, empowered the Secretary of the Interior to make a final roll of the citizens of the Five Civilized Tribes; and another provision of this same section specifically authorized the commission to make a roll of those Mississippi Choctaws entitled to citizenship under the fourteenth article of the treaty of 1830.

A provision in the Indian appropriation bill approved May 31, 1900 (31 Stat., 221), provided for the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws if they made bona fide settlement in the Choctaw Nation prior to the final approval of the rolls.

Section 41 of the supplemental agreement with the Choctaws and Chickasaws approved July 1, 1902 (32 Stat., 641), provided for the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws at any time within six months after their identification as Mississippi Choctaws by making bona fide settlement within one year in the Choctaw Nation.

ROLLS FINAL AND CLOSED.

Section 21 of the act of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat., 495), contained a provision making the rolls final when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, as follows:

The rolls so made, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be final, and the persons whose names are found thereon, with their descendants thereafter born to them, with such persons as may intermarry according to tribal laws, shall alone constitute the several tribes which they represent.

The Indian appropriation bill approved March 3, 1901 (31 Stat., 1077), contained a provision making the rolls of the Dawes Commission of the Five Civilized Tribes final, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, as follows:

The rolls made by the commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, when approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be final, and the persons whose names are found thereon shall alone constitute the several tribes which they represent.

Section 2 of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat., 138), provided that the rolls of the tribe affected by this act shall be fully completed on or before the 4th day of March, 1907, and the Secretary of the Interior shall have no jurisdiction to approve the enrollment of any person after said date, as follows:

Provided, That the rolls of the tribes affected by this act shall be fully completed on or before the 4th day of March, 1907, and the Secretary of the Interior shall have no jurisdiction to approve the enrollment of any person after said date.

It will be seen that the first Choctaw agreement was made in 1897 and ratified by an act of Congress approved June 28, 1898, and that the enrollment proceeded from that time in 1898 until March 4, 1907, or a period of about nine years, and that provision was made for the identification and enrollment of such Mississippi Choctaws who chose to remove and permanently locate and become citizens of the Choctaw Nation, later to be admitted as a part of the State of Oklahoma. Such Indians as availed themselves of these provisions were enrolled to the number of 1,634. Those remaining in Mississippi were not enrolled.

MISSISSIPPI CHOCTAWS NOT ENTITLED TO ENROLLMENT.

Now, those opposing this item providing for a partial distribution of this money are attempting to assert that the Mississippi Choctaws and their descendants in the State of Mississippi are entitled to enrollment as members of the Choctaw Tribe and to participate in the distribution of the money. Their contention is not tenable. Every court, commission, Secretary, or committee investigating this question has decided against them.

1. The Supreme Court, in the Eastern Cherokee case (117 U. S., 288), held that the North Carolina Cherokees could not live apart from their tribe and share in the benefits of the funds and common property of the tribe. The court, after reviewing the treaties relating to the same, concluded by saying:

If Indians in that State [North Carolina] or in any other State east of the Mississippi wish to enjoy the benefits of the common property of the Cherokee Nation, in whatever form it may exist, they must, as held by the Court of Claims, comply with the constitution and laws of the Cherokee Nation and be readmitted to citizenship, as there provided. They can not live out of its territory, evade the obligations and burdens of citizenship, and at the same time enjoy the benefits of the funds and common property of the nation. Those funds and that property were dedicated by the constitution of the Cherokees and were intended by the treaties with the United States for the benefit of the united nation and not in any respect for those who had separated from it and become aliens to their nation. We can see no just ground on which the claim of the petitions can rest in either of the funds held by the United States in trust for the Cherokee Nation.

2. The Dawes Commission in the Jack Amos case held that the Choctaws residing in Mississippi were not entitled to enrollment without removal to the Choctaw Nation, as follows:

This historical review of the acquisition of this territory by the Choctaw Nation and its subsequent legal relations to it makes it clear in the opinion of this commission that the Mississippi Choctaws are not under their treaties entitled to all rights of Choctaw citizenship except an interest in the Choctaw annuities, and still continue their residence and citizenship in Mississippi. (H. Doc. 274, 55th Cong., 2d sess.)

3. The Federal court, through Judge Clayton, affirmed the decision of the Dawes Commission in the Jack Amos case and held that the Mississippi Choctaws residing out of the tribe were not entitled to be enrolled:

In the third article of the treaty the Choctaws agreed to move all of their people within three years, and the United States intended that they should go. But by the fourteenth article of the treaty provisions were made whereby those who should decide to remain and become citizens of the State of Mississippi, in the event that, because of the intolerance and persecutions of the whites, which they themselves had so bitterly experienced, or for any other cause, they might become dissatisfied with their altered conditions and their new citizenship and desire to follow them to their new homes, and thereafter exercise with them in their own country the privileges of citizenship, they could do so, except that they were not to participate with them in their annuities, the lands which they were to receive in Mississippi being deemed a compensation for that.

When the fourteenth article of the treaty was framed the negotiating parties understood that the policy of the United States was that the Choctaws were to be removed. The Choctaws, in article 3, had just agreed that they should all go. The ink was not yet dry in article 2 whereby the condition was placed in this grant to the lands that they were to live upon or they should be forfeited, and that no privilege of citizenship could be conferred or enjoyed outside of the territorial jurisdiction of their newly located nation. Understanding these conditions, the latter clause of article 14 was penned:

"Persons who claim under this article shall not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever removed—that is, if they ever placed themselves on the land and within the jurisdiction of the nation whereby those privileges may become operative—are not to be entitled to any portion of the Choctaw annuity."

In other words, if they ever remove, they are to enjoy all of the privileges of a Choctaw citizen except that of participating in their annuities. If this be not the meaning to be attached to the word "remove" as used in the clause of the treaty under consideration, it must be meaningless. But in the interpretation of statutes it is the duty of the court to so interpret them as to give to every word a meaning, and in doing so it must take into consideration the whole statute, its objects and purposes, the rights which are intended to be enforced, and the evils intended to be remedied; it may go to the history of the transaction about which the legislation is had and call to its aid all legitimate facts proven or of which the courts will take judicial notice in order to find the true meaning of the word as used in the statute. Of course, the same rule of interpretation applies to treaties. Adopting these rules in the interpretation of article 14 of the treaty of 1830, I arrive at the conclusion that the "privilege of a Choctaw citizen" therein reserved to those Choctaws who shall remain, thereby separating themselves, it may be forever, from their brethren and their nation, becoming citizens of another sovereignty and aliens of their own, situated so that it would be impossible, while in Mississippi, to receive or enjoy any of the rights of Choctaw citizenship, was the right to renounce his allegiance to the Commonwealth of Mississippi, move upon the lands conveyed to him and his people, and there, the only spot on earth where he could do so, renew his relations with his people and enjoy all of the privileges of a Choctaw citizen except to participate in the annuities.

As an evidence that the Choctaw people themselves took this view of the question, attention is called to the fact that their council has passed many acts and resolutions inviting these absent Choctaws to move into their country, and on one occasion appropriated a considerable sum of money to assist them on their journey, and until the past two or three years have always promptly placed those who did return on the rolls of citizenship, but never enrolled an absent Choctaw as a citizen.

4. An appeal was perfected to the Supreme Court of the United States and dismissed by the appellants. (190 U. S., 873.)

5. Congress by section 2 of the act of April 26, 1906 (34 Stat., 137), with all the information before it, ordered the rolls closed.

6. Secretary Ballinger on February 12, 1910, opposed the reopening of the rolls. Writing the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, he said:

In conclusion, I am constrained to believe, and therefore recommend, that the rolls be not opened up, but that proper legal authority be given the Secretary of the Interior to place upon the rolls those Indians—about 52 in number—whose applications were approved by the Commissioner to the Five Civilized Tribes and were transmitted to Washington before the 4th of March, 1907, but did not reach the department until after the rolls were closed; and, furthermore, that proper authority be given the Secretary of the Interior to examine and place upon the rolls the minor orphan children, incompetents, and Indians in incarceration whose claims were not presented in due time for adjudication. I am informed that this class numbers about 200. No one seems to have taken the responsibility of presenting the claims of this class for consideration. They could not look after their own interests. (See S. Doc. No. 1139, 62d Cong., 3d sess.)

Congress by the act of August 1, 1914, enrolled all of those recommended.

7. Assistant Secretary Samuel Adams on July 2, 1912, reported against the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws. After reviewing their case at length, he stated:

In fact, it may be urged by the tribes that responsibility, if any, rested upon the United States instead.

And concluded as follows:

In view of the fact stated above, I am of the opinion that the bill—

Referring to the Harrison bill to enroll the Mississippi Choctaws—should not be enacted into law.

8. The report of the subcommittee of the Indian Committee on January 2, 1915, reported against the reopening of the rolls in a lengthy report. (Report on H. R. 12586.)

9. Senator WILLIAMS on June 19, 1914, admitted on the floor of the Senate that the Mississippi Choctaws had no legal right to enrollment. On this date he said, as shown on page 10716 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

I am not contending here that the Mississippi Choctaws, in the face of all that legislation and in the face of these decisions, have any right here that is enforceable in a court of law, but I am trying to get the legislative branch of this Government to change that law which was enacted against them and construed against them.

Continuing, Senator WILLIAMS says:

So far as the construction of the court was concerned, I hardly see how the Supreme Court could have come to any other conclusion. * * * I am not talking now, however—and I can not be thrown off the right scent—about what are their rights in court to-day. I am talking about what their rights ought to be.

10. The present Secretary of the Interior, Hon. Franklin K. Lane, reported January 8, 1915, against the reopening of the rolls, and reviewed this entire question at length, concluding in the following language:

In view of the facts as presented to me, I am of the opinion that no legislation should be enacted for the reopening of the rolls of the Choctaw Nation for the benefit of the Mississippi Choctaw claimants.

11. Congress, by a provision in the Indian appropriation bill last year, after extended hearings before the committee, and after extended debate upon the floor of the House, provided for a partial distribution of this money in language similar to the provision in this bill.

12. The present Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs before the House Indian Committee—hearings on the Indian appropriation bill, pages 336 and 337—recommended the provision providing for a per capita payment to the Choctaws and Chickasaws.

The argument for the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws is based upon four grounds:

First. Upon the fourteenth article of the Treaty of 1830; and it has been shown that the Dawes Commission and the United States court in the Jack Amos case decided against their construction of this article.

Second. It is urged that Senator OWEN, while attorney for the Mississippi Choctaws, insisted that they should be enrolled. Senator OWEN, in extended hearings before the Senate Indian Committee (pp. 74–108, Jan. 18, 1915; and pp. 645–661, Feb. 5, 1915) stated that great generosity has been shown the Mississippi Choctaws, and that the rolls should now be closed, giving his reasons in detail why they should not be reopened. In other words, he makes the opposite contention. He shows that all differences were compromised by section 41 of the act of July 1, 1902.

Third. It is contended that the Eastern Cherokee case reported in Two hundred and second United States, 101, supports his contention. An examination of that case shows it does not support their contention, and that it was not a suit over the lands of the Cherokees west, or the proceeds thereof, nor for a division of their trust funds. On the other hand, the Cherokee case reported in One hundred and seventeenth United States, 288, is a case in point and is against their contention.

Fourth. It is urged that Judge Townsend, in an ex parte decision, held that the Mississippi Choctows were entitled to be enrolled without removing to the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma. This was when the Choctaw Nation was not represented, and later, in the case of Ikard against Minter, which was affirmed by the Indian Territory court of appeals, in an opinion written by Judge Gill (4 Ind. Ter. Repts., 214), after a full hearing and after the matter had been argued and briefed on both sides, Judge Townsend held that the Mississippi Choctaws were not entitled to be enrolled.

EVERY DECISION AGAINST MISSISSIPPI CHOCTAWS.

Judge Clayton, in the Amos case, decided against them; Judge Townsend decided against them in the case of Ikard against Minter, supra, and the court of appeals, speaking through Judge Gill, in the case of Ikard against Minter, affirmed the decision of Judge Townsend. All three of the Federal judges in the Indian Territory held against the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws.

Hence, it will be seen that the law is against the Mississippi Choctaws, the decision of every court is against them, and the report of every committee of Congress is against them, as well as the report of every Secretary of the Interior. They ask now to have the matter again referred to the courts, when for 20 years every court, committee, commission, or Secretary of the Interior to which this question was presented has decided against them.

Thus you will see that the Choctaw people are asking not for money from the Government but to have their own money paid them. Certainly this is a reasonable request. The Government promised it to them. It is theirs. They are in very great need of it. Many of them have long ago gone to their reward. Others are old and decrepit and diseased. Congress should do justice to them and give them this money.

Now, every person making an argument before the Indian Committee and before Congress in favor of the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws makes it admitting that the Mississippi Choctaws have no legal rights, makes it admitting that they did not remove to the Choctaw Nation, and makes it admitting that they are residents of the State of Mississippi, are citizens of that State and of the United States.

Everyone must admit that the Choctaw Nation has been more than generous with them, and all must admit that all the Choctaws who removed to the Choctaw Nation and became bona fide settlers there before the rolls were closed and remained there were enrolled.

Everyone making an argument in their behalf makes it admitting that their enrollment was provided for by section 21 of the act of June 28, 1898, and provided for by the act of May 31, 1900, conditioned only upon their removing to the Choctaw Nation and permanently locating there, and provided for by the act of July 1, 1902, similarly conditioned.

FINAL SETTLEMENT URGED.

Surely Congress will not longer delay the final settlement of Choctaw tribal affairs. It has now been too long delayed. This money should not only be paid but Congress should at once provide for the disposition of the coal lands and other tribal property belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw people, and all their money should be prorated among them.

It is generally known and it appears in the records that a great lobby has been organized to secure the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws and that contracts have been secured aggregating millions of dollars. Interested attorneys have made all sorts of speeches and arguments looking to a delay in the payment of the Choctaw money and urging the reopening of the rolls. Surely Congress will follow the decisions of the courts, the Dawes Commission, the Secretaries of the Interior, and the committees of Congress, who have given extensive hearings to this question, rather than the pleadings of interested attorneys, who will be enriched by the reopening of the rolls.

Almost 19 years have elapsed since the first Choctaw agreement was entered into in 1897. If the question of citizenship is again reopened, a settlement of it will not be reached within the next quarter of a century.

As a final word, I beg the Members of Congress to at least give a small measure of justice to the Choctaw and Chickasaw people and provide for a partial distribution of their funds now. [Applause.]

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Dakota asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I believe the time for general debate has expired, and I would ask that the bill be read under the five-minute rule.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that, as debate is closed, it is not necessary to commence the reading now.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. FOSTER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 10385, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent Mr. SLEMP was given leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies thereof, the papers in the following cases, no adverse reports having been made thereon:

James D. Cox (63d Cong.);
Thomas Swallow (63d Cong.); and
Mrs. Noble C. Burkhart (63d Cong.).

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. LAZARO, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8235. An act to provide for the maintenance of the United States section of the International High Commission.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, to meet to-morrow, Tuesday, February 1, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of Pugsley Creek, N. Y. (H. Doc. No. 635), was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with illustrations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. BURNETT, from the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10384) to regulate the immigration of aliens to, and the residence of aliens in, the United States, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 95), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. POU, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3654) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to audit and adjust certain claims of the State of North Carolina, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 96), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. EDMONDS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6180) for the relief of Lillie B. Randell, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 97), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PETERS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3896) for the relief of John H. Janssen, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 98), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2209) for the relief of W. W. Blood, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 99), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. EDMONDS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6181) for the relief of Letitia W. Garrison, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 100), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6758) for the relief of the legal heirs of Hector M. McDonald, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 101), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

